NOTIFICATION OF CONFIRMATION OF CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSIONERS

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, on Monday, May 8, the nominations of Mrs. Lucille F. McMillin and Mr. Harry B. Mitchell to be members of the Civil Service Commission were confirmed. The Senate has taken recesses from time to time since then, and two legislative days have not as yet expired. As in executive session, I ask unanimous consent that the President may be notified of the confirmation of these two nominations.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the Senator well knows that I have objected to that procedure for some time, because many Senators have complained to me about it. I will have to object to the request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of South Carolina, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor:

A concurrent resolution (introduced by Senator Nash) requesting the Members of the Federal Congress from South Carolina to use their influence to retain in South Carolina the services of the conservation corps allotted to South Carolina

Whereas the Federal Government has established conservation camps; and

Whereas South Carolina's allotment is 3,500 members of such conservation corps; and

Whereas it will be for the best interest of South Carolina that these men be employed in such work in South Carolina: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate (the house of representatives concurring), That the South Carolina Senators and Representatives in Congress be, and they hereby are, requested to use their efforts to have all of the South Carolina members of the Conservation Corps retained and employed within this State or that a camp or camps of equal number from other States be established in this State, so that South Carolina may thereby be benefited in the conservation of her timber and forests and so that the funds paid to such conservation corps may be spent within this State; be it further Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be mailed by the clerk of the senate to each member of the South Carolina delegation in the Federal Congress.

Adopted May 4, 1933.

A true copy.

[SEAL]

JAS. H. FOWLES,
Clerk of South Carolina Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Texas, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency:

Senate Concurrent Resolution 56 (by Duggan)

Whereas the Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds available for the Texas Relief Commission may be used only for one of three purposes: Reforestation, flood prevention, soil erosion; and

Whereas there is no reforestation or flood prevention in west Texas and very little benefit can be derived from soil-erosion work, all of which practically deprives the entire western part of Texas from any benefit to be derived from these relief funds; and

Whereas all of west Texas is badly in need of improved roads, and if the portion of said funds belonging to west Texas could be used also in the betterment of roads in that section of the State it would not only give employment to those needing the same but would greatly add to the betterment of that section of the State as a whole: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Texas (the house of representatives concurring), That the Legislature of the State of Texas memorialize the National Congress to so amend the Wagner bill that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds to be appropriated to the Texas Relief Commission may be used for the building of good roads in any section of the State which cannot use them more profitably in the work of reforestation, flood prevention, or soil erosion.

EDGAR E. WITT,
President of the Senate.

I hereby certify that Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 56 was read and adopted by the senate May 5, 1933, by a viva voce vote.

BOB BARKER,
Secretary of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency:

STATE OF WISCONSIN.

Joint resolution relating to the bill of President Roosevelt for refinancing home mortgages

Whereas President Roosevelt on April 13 sent a special message to Congress recommending the enactment of legislation to refinance home-mortgage indebtedness and a bill was immediately introduced to carry out this recommendation of the President; and

Whereas this bill provides machinery through which existing mortgage debts on small homes may be adjusted to a sound basis of values without injustices to investors, at substantially lower interest rates and with provisions for postponing both interest and principal payments in cases of extreme need; and

Whereas this bill, if enacted into law, will protect many small-home owners from foreclosures and relieve them from a portion of the burden of excessive interest and principal payments incurred during the period of higher values and higher earning power; and

Whereas this proposed legislation is the best possible safeguard that can be thrown around home ownership at this time and is a guarantee of social and economic stability: Therefore be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That the Legislature of Wisconsin commends President Roosevelt for the action he has taken to solve the very pressing problem of the heavy mortgage indebtedness on homes and urges the Congress of the United States to promptly enact the legislation recommended by the President; be it further

Resolved, That properly attested copies of this resolution be transmitted to both Houses of the Congress of the United States and to each Wisconsin Member thereof.

THOMAS J. O'MALLEY,
President of the Senate.
R. A. COBBAN,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.
C. T. YOUNG,
Speaker of the Assembly.
JOHN J. SLOCUM,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

STATE OF WISCONSIN.

Joint resolution relating to allotment to the States of a part of the Federal excise tax on beer

Whereas the Congress of the United States has imposed an excise tax of $5 per barrel on the manufacture of beer; and

Whereas the finances of all States are in such a condition that it is almost imperative that they also derive some revenue from a tax on beer; and

Whereas varying State taxes on beer not only result in duplicate taxation but also in unfair competition between brewers located in different States; and

Whereas all such difficulties can be avoided if the only tax on beer is imposed by the Federal Government and the Congress of the United States will assign to the States a definite percentage of all the revenue derived from such tax on beer: Therefore be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That the Legislature of Wisconsin hereby respectfully memorializes the Congress of the United States to amend the law imposing an excise tax on beer to assign not less than 20 percent of the proceeds of such tax to the States in which the revenue is collected; be it further

Resolved, That properly attested copies of this resolution be sent to the presiding officers of both Houses of the Congress of the United States and to each Wisconsin Member thereof.

THOMAS J. O'MALLEY,
President of the Senate.
R. A. COBBAN,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.
C. T. YOUNG,
Speaker of the Assembly.
JOHN J. SLOCUM,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a petition of sundry citizens of the State of Louisiana, praying for a senatorial investigation relative to alleged acts and conduct of Hon. HUEY P. LONG, a Senator from the State of Louisiana, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a memorial from T. D. Pollard, of New Iberia, La., endorsing Hon. HUEY P. LONG, a Senator from the State of Louisiana, condemning attacks made upon him and remonstrating against a senatorial investigation of his alleged acts and conduct, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the Commissioners' Court of McLennan County, Tex., endorsing the program of President Roosevelt and urging the inauguration of a public-works program to provide highway construction in the State of Texas, which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by members of the Unemployed Workers' League of Mineral County, assembled at Keyser, W. Va., complaining of relief conditions and the distribution of groceries; also protesting against the recent reduction of the wage scale from 30 cents to 22½ cents per hour, and stating that the allotted allowances or payments only provide 5½ cents per meal for each individual in a family of three, etc., and favoring an investigation of such conditions, which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. BULKLEY presented a petition signed by 431 citizens of Columbus, Ohio, and vicinity, praying for the adoption of the so-called "Long plan" for the redistribution of wealth, which was ordered to lie on the table.

PENSION RELIEF OF SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR VETERANS

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. President, I have received copy of a resolution adopted by members of George Vawter Camp, No. 73, Department of Indiana, United Spanish War Veterans, which I ask may be incorporated in the RECORD and appropriately referred.

There being no objection, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Pensions and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

GEORGE VAWTER CAMP, 73, DEPARTMENT OF INDIANA, UNITED SPANISH WAR VETERANS.

Whereas recent legislation will take away from the veterans of the Spanish-American War the pensions they have enjoyed in the past; and

Whereas these pensions have practically been the only support of these veterans; and

Whereas the withdrawal of these pensions will probably cause many of them to become public charges on account of old age and their inability to secure employment: Be it

Resolved, That we, members of George Vawter Camp, 73, Indiana, veterans of the Spanish-American War, urge and plead and petition Congress to recognize and give a decent and respectable relief in way of legislation which will enable these veterans to live the remaining days of their lives in a moderate, comfortable manner; and

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Congressman of this district, and the Senators representing the State of Indiana.

J. W. RUSSELL, Commander.
H. S. MATTHEWS, Adjutant.

PETITION OF WIDOWS OF OFFICERS AND ENLISTED MEN OF THE NAVY WHO PERISHED IN "AKRON" DISASTER

Mr. TRAMMELL presented the petition of the widows of officers and enlisted men of the Navy who lost their lives in the wreck of the U.S.S. Akron and the U.S.S. J-3 on April 4, 1933, praying for the passage of legislation restoring in their case the double pension which widows of flight officers and men were entitled to receive prior to the passage of the so-called "Economy Act", which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PETITION TO THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

UNITED STATES NAVAL AIR STATION,
Lakehurst, N.J.

We, the undersigned widows of officers and enlisted men of the United States Navy who lost their lives in the wreck of the U.S.S. Akron and the U.S.S. J-3 on April 4, 1933, respectfully represent as follows:

1. That our husbands lost their lives in the line of duty.
2. That there are many cases of great distress among us, involving not only us but our children.
3. That because of the hazardous character of their duty it was impossible for our husbands to carry adequate insurance on account of the high premiums charged, and, therefore, they relied for our protection, in the event they lost their lives in the flying service, upon the provision of law awarding double pension to their widows and dependents.

4. That there was such provision of law until the passage of the economy law approved March 20, 1933, which, a few days before the Akron disaster, repealed the prior law on the subject, leaving no time for our husbands, even if they had been financially able, to procure a proportionate amount of insurance.

5. That we are informed that under existing law the maximum pension any of us may hope to receive is $22 a month, with such additional allowances as may be provided in the case of minor children.

We, therefore, respectfully petition your honorable body that a law be enacted restoring in our case the double pension which widows of flight officers and men were entitled to receive prior to the passage of the said Economy Act.

And we will ever humbly pray.

The motion was agreed to.

INVESTIGATION RELATIVE TO RECEIVERSHIPS AND BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, I desire to submit a resolution providing for the appointment of a special committee of the Senate to investigate the administration of receiverships and bankruptcy proceedings in the Federal courts. I ask that it may lie on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION LOAN TO CHICAGO BANK

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I beg to tender an article from the Chicago Herald and Examiner of May 11, and, at the request of Members of the House of Representatives, as the article touches pending legislation, I ask unanimous consent that it may be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Chicago Herald and Examiner, May 11, 1933]

UNITED STATES SHOULD PROBE THOSE MIDNIGHT MILLIONS—CHICAGO SECURITIES AGAINST INSULL "SECURITIES"

Chicago tax warrants still don't seem to have enough value in the eyes of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to be security for a loan unless they are first endorsed by some bank.

Therefore Chicago's school teachers and other city employees are still unpaid.

Now, if the Reconstruction Finance Corporation won't lend on these Chicago tax warrants unless the banks endorse and if the banks won't endorse, just how can it be expected that the government and subgovernments of Chicago are to continue in existence? The United States Treasury and the international bankers have not hesitated to step in and send billions of good American money to "save democracy" in other countries. However, nobody seems interested in "saving democracy" in an American city like Chicago. The policemen, firemen, and other city employees are paid in random fashion and are always behind in their incomes.

The unpaid school teachers of Chicago, while appealing for help recently, heard the ex-Vice President of the United States, Charles G. Dawes, who is now chairman of a new bank, announce his brilliant policy of "to hell with trouble makers." Now, if the city and the State government can't seem to help the local situation, it is about time the heads of the Federal Government in Washington stepped in to see what's happening to "democracy" in this community—and, of course, we don't mean political Democracy.

Political Democracy—that is, the rank and file of the Democratic Party of this community—voted unmistakably for a "new deal", and they want it. They want all the public employees, including the school teachers, paid. They don't want their educational system wrecked.

The people of this community would like to know why a bank endorsement is necessary for the Federal Government to lend money on the official, legal securities of this community.

Do all bank endorsements on securities accepted by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation make those securities good? If the new Federal administration wants to see how much value some banks' endorsement adds to doubtful securities, accepted by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Chicago Herald and Examiner urges that the Secretary of the Treasury and Attorney General of the United States begin an immediate inquiry into how much good the endorsement of General Dawes' old Central Republic Bank did on some of the securities that were given the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in payment for the famous $90,000,000 Dawes' bank loan.

This is a procedure that should be undertaken at once, and some way should be found to lay bare all the facts.

Now, when the Reconstruction Finance Corporation passes out money to "save a bank", but in reality to save a banker, whose money do you think it is passing out? Do you think it draws this money out of the air through some alchemy, or do you think these millions came from some foreign nation which has our money? No, friends and fellow citizens; the money which it passes over to a banker like General Dawes is your money, because the national credit, which means your credit, is back of that loan. Any part of the loan that is not recovered by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will be paid for ultimately by you out of taxes that the United States Government will collect to make good any losses the Reconstruction Finance Corporation suffers. The only place the United States Government has to get money is out of its citizens, and whether it be through tariff, taxation, or license, the citizens of this country pay for everything the Government does.

So this little deal, made mysteriously at midnight between the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and General Dawes' bank, means that everything the citizens of this community own and can earn is pledged back of that $90,000,000 loan to a favored group.

It seems funny, friends—doesn't it?—to think that you helped lend $90,000,000 to General Dawes' Central Republic Bank and that that bank's pledge to pay will be made good by you if it isn't made good by the bank. Doesn't that interest you to the extent of wanting to know just what securities General Dawes' bank put up—securities that were so hurriedly accepted at midnight by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation?

Doesn't it interest you doubly when you know that sooner or later all the tax warrants of Chicago will be made good and that you will make them good through taxation?

What moral right has a little group like the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to lend $90,000,000 of our money to the bankers in control of a single bank when they tell us they can't take Chicago's securities, which are in reality backed by the wealth of a city which, despite its taxation problems, is one of the wealthiest cities in the world? It possesses enormous wealth, and while in possession of such holdings as its water system, its many public buildings, parks, school buildings, and enormous other assets, it can never fail to make good on its tax warrants.

Now compare this with what the Reconstruction Finance Corporation took from General Dawes' Central Republic Bank. Of course you can't compare it, because the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, for reasons best known to itself, has made a great secret of what it took as security from the Dawes bank.

However, the Herald and Examiner, which now urges a complete investigation of this loan, can tell you that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation did accept about $11,000,000 in notes and securities of Insull companies and Insull employees. What other securities it accepted for the balance of the $90,000,000 only the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or General Dawes and his associates can tell us. And all Chicagoans would really like to know. In fact, American citizens in various parts of the country would like to know. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has fought against publicity as to its loans and later, when forced by an act of Congress to submit some publicity, limited the publicity to a few figures that mean nothing to the public.

Now, to deal with the $11,000,000 item of Insull security in the Dawes loan, it would be interesting to know how much they were really worth, if anything. We know a few facts about them from the outside.

And while we are on the subject, would it not have been better for all concerned if instead of Mr. Dawes' bank having $11,000,000 in Insull securities to turn over to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Mr. Dawes' bank had had as a substitute $11,000,000 worth of Chicago tax warrants? These are still quoted almost at par.

On the witness stand General Dawes admitted to United States Senator COUZENS, of Michigan, that all of the bank's Insull loans, and the collateral therefor, had been passed on to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation—which means to the American people.

Many of these loans were made by the bank shortly before the time of the Insull receivership date in April of last year. The famous Dawes midnight loan was made on June 27, 1932, and we in Chicago have a pretty good idea of what value there was in Insull securities at the latter date. Similar securities had broken the backs of everybody who owned them. Any Chicago school child can tell you how much an $11,000,000 loan to Insull interests prior to the receivership was worth on June 27, 1932.

The people of Chicago who feel that the Federal Government should loan some of the public money on paper backed by the security of this city would like to know exactly what value existed in each of the Dawes securities, including the Insull securities, accepted by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and what their market value was at the time.

Now, of course, it may have been thought that if utility rates could be held up while utility costs went down, during which time the integrity of these securities was maintained by the credit of the United States, they would eventually come back to some substantial value. But what does the Reconstruction Finance Corporation think would be happening to Chicago in the meantime? Did it think that Chicago, America's second largest city, might possibly go into bankruptcy while the Insull companies went on building up the bank roll to make good for all of the rottenness of Insullism?

It is about 10½ months since the $90,000,000 loan was made, and after converting as many of the assets as have thus far been convertible, Mr. Dawes' old bank still owes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation $66,423,761.49.

Now, if General Dawes and his associates had, after getting the $90,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, kept the bank going, those who believe in secrecy for the sake of saving a bank might spell out some reason for continuing to keep the details of this loan a secret. There is a school of secret finance. General Dawes, himself, was head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation just about 6 weeks before his bank got the big midnight loan, and at that time the Reconstruction Finance Corporation believed strongly in secrecy, and we heard a lot about the necessity of maintaining bank integrity.

General Dawes, however, with the $90,000,000 once in the cash drawer of his bank, decided, with his associates, to liquidate the bank. General Dawes did not continue devoting all his time to the continuation or even the liquidation of the old bank. The stockholders of that bank were left with a fine mess on their hands, as a result of which they will face assessment for any deficiencies, allowing General Dawes and his associates to set up a new bank right on the same old premises.

Within a short time he then transferred the remaining deposit accounts of the old bank to the new bank and took with him enough of the unexpended balance of the $90,000,000 to equal the transferred deposits.

So it is no longer a question of protecting a going bank. It is merely a question of learning the full truth about a defunct bank and what the United States Government got in return for $90,000,000 of your money.

If you have any idea that General Dawes' old bank should still be protected from publicity, please take into account that a week before it got the loan from the Federal Government its stock was selling at $52.50 a share and is now offered at 75 cents a share with practically no takers.

By the time the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury get through investigating this transaction, perhaps they will decide that it is the Insulls and those who ran the Dawes bank and those who ran the Stevens' Illinois Life Insurance Co. who are the real makers of the present-day troubles in Chicago. Perhaps it is financing of the kind that was done by these gentlemen which has caused most of the trouble for the people of the United States.

Perhaps a Federal grand jury or Senate investigation of the Dawes loan under the direction of the Attorney General might convince the Reconstruction Finance Corporation that Chicago tax warrants are infinitely better security without a bank endorsement than some of the Insull "securities" were with bank endorsement.

Every merchant and manufacturer, big and little, in Chicago, is vitally interested in the standing of Chicago tax warrants. Their value and acceptance as a type of currency are vital to the community. Therefore the business men of this community will join heartily with the Herald and Examiner in urging that there be a Federal probe of the $90,000,000 Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan to the Dawes bank and that this probe begin at once.

By all means, Uncle Sam, investigate those midnight millions.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H.R. 5389) making appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

EXTENSION OF GASOLINE TAX

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HATFIELD].

Mr. LONG. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, on page 3245, first column, in the amendment submitted by me in section 6 the word "not" has been omitted before the words "produced in the United States." The word "not" should be added to the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will inform the Senator from West Virginia that, while the amendment as printed in the RECORD does not contain the word "not", the amendment as printed and at the desk has that word in it.

Mr. HATFIELD. I thank the Chair.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, may I ask the attention of the Senator from West Virginia with respect to his amendment? The amendment is highly technical in form, and I venture to ask the Senator whether he will explain how high a level of tariff rates is permissible under his amendment for the purpose of offsetting depreciated foreign currencies?

Mr. HATFIELD. Upon the recommendation of the Tariff Commission, anywhere from 25 to 100 percent.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Is that in addition to other rates levied by the tariff law?

Mr. HATFIELD. No; it is not.

Mr. COSTIGAN. May I ask the Senator from West Virginia whether there were any hearings upon his amendment? It has not been considered by a committee of the Senate, I understand.

Mr. HATFIELD. There were no hearings, I may say to the distinguished Senator, upon my amendment, save and except the hearings which were held during the second session of the Seventy-second Congress, which are designated: "Hearings before a subcommittee of the Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives, Seventy-second Congress, second session, H.R. 1399, January 26, 27, 28, 30", and so forth.

Mr. COSTIGAN. It is true, is it not, that in the hearings to which the Senator refers, the chairman of the United States Tariff Commission, Mr. O'Brien, a Massachusetts Republican, also the vice chairman of the Commission, Dr. Thomas Walker Page, a Virginia Democrat and former chairman of that Commission, testified?

Mr. HATFIELD. That is true, Mr. President.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Those witnesses, I believe, testified, in substance, one corroborating the other, that any commercial disadvantages to an importing country arising out of depreciated foreign currencies are either temporary or illusory. Chairman O'Brien, I believe, quoted the Finance Minister of Holland as saying, in effect, that those disadvantages which are not temporary are illusory, and those that are not illusory are temporary.

Mr. HATFIELD. That is true, but I may say to the distinguished Senator that Mr. O'Brien took the position in an interview, as I remember, that the tariff should be increased horizontally 15 percent, and then when he appeared before the Committee on Ways and Means, or at least a subcommittee of that committee, he took the position which the Senator now indicates. However, the attitude taken by the chairman of the Tariff Commission and by those associated with him, or at least by the vice chairman, was contradicted by outstanding industrialists and economists, who took the position that the depreciation of currencies in European and Asiatic countries had been very destructive to the industries of the United States, and had prevented those industries from operating, or at least had such an effect they could only operate when they had sealed and signed orders properly underwritten to insure that they would be accepted and paid for, thus preventing our industries, in a general way, from accumulating a surplus which ordinarily they would have on their shelves, thereby giving work almost constantly throughout the year to a great number of workmen who would otherwise be out of employment.

Mr. COSTIGAN. If I am not mistaken, both representatives of the United States Tariff Commission expressed the opinion at the House committee hearing that there is no necessity for the type of amendment offered by the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. HATFIELD. I have the conviction that that is the attitude expressed by those gentlemen. I think the Senator is correct in arriving at that conclusion.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Has the able Senator from West Virginia examined since last evening certain statistics with respect to imports from gold-standard countries and from those countries which have gone off the gold standard?

Mr. HATFIELD. I have made a brief summary which I shall be glad to quote to the Senator. The point was made by the distinguished Senator from Colorado that there are relatively the same exports and imports now that there were before the abandonment of the gold standard. That is the point the Senator makes, is it not?

Mr. COSTIGAN. I had not intended to make that point. I really planned to ask the Senator whether he has considered the relation between imports from gold-standard countries and imports from those countries which have gone off the gold standard.

Mr. HATFIELD. I have made a study of imports for the first 10 months of 1931 and compared them with the imports of the first 10 months of 1932 for 20 different countries whose currencies have depreciated 5 percent or more; and I find the following results:

For these 20 countries the actual value of the imports from January to October 1931 amounted to $947,874,000, and for the same period in 1932 the actual value was $582,347,000. However, since the currencies of these countries had depreciated 38.6 percent, I have made an adjustment of the total value of the imports for 1932 to show the value if these countries had maintained their currencies at par; therefore I have raised the value of the imports for 10 months of 1932 to $836,422,000 in order to compare them on the same basis of their standard currency with the 10 months of 1931. If this comparison is made, it will show that those 20 countries that have depreciated their currency more than 5 percent suffered a loss of exportations to the United States of 11.8 percent.

If the imports for the first 10 months of 1931 are compared with the same period in 1932 for 16 countries whose currencies have depreciated less than 5 percent and the same adjustment is made for the slight depreciation of currency of the 16 countries, we find their imports into the United States decreased 39 percent. It is thus self-evident that while the countries on and off the gold standard have suffered a reduction in their imports into the United States, it is nevertheless evident that the reduction has been only 11 percent for those countries off the gold standard, but the reduction has amounted to 39 percent for those remaining on the gold standard. In other words, the gold-standard nations have suffered more than those nations which went off the gold standard and are now operating under currency depreciation.

This conclusion has been reached by a comparison of the value of imports for the first 10 months of 1931 and 1932; but if the volume of the imports for a like period was compared, it would show that in practically all cases where a country has abandoned the gold standard the volume of their exports to the United States has increased. By either method of comparison the advantage remains with the countries which have depreciated their currency more than 5 percent, and that, too, to the detriment of the worker in those lands paid in cheap money, as well as to the disadvantage of the American wage earner who lost a large opportunity for steady employment.

As an illustration of the advantage even foreign nations which have remained on the gold standard have gained in the American market owing to the depreciation of currencies of other nations, I may cite the case of Holland, who with her gold money buys iron ore in Spain, a country operating under a depreciated currency, then smelts the ore in Holland, and sells the pig iron in the American market cheaper than our cost of production.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, may I say to the Senator from West Virginia that while in the aggregate the data may appear mildly to support the conclusion that there has been at times relatively less loss in United States imports from countries off the gold standard, yet the figures are for the most part unimportant and inconclusive, and on careful examination of imports from particular countries it will be found that such a conclusion is not without important exceptions. For example, I have here a tabulation of imports in the first 9 months of the years referred to by the Senator, 1931 and 1932.

The table discloses that Brazil, a country off the gold standard, suffered in the later period a decline in exports of about 30 percent. In other words, Brazil's exports to the United States were in the later period about 70 percent of those of the corresponding 9 months of the preceding year.

On the other hand, certain countries, which were still on the gold standard, suffered a decline in the later period in excess of that. Taking Switzerland and Estonia—as shown by the table—imports from Switzerland in the later period declined to 63 percent and those from Estonia to 58 percent of the respective earlier records.

The data as to the weights of cargoes shipped from certain foreign countries to the United States in the same respective periods indicate that in the gold-standard countries—Italy, Germany, Netherlands, and Belgium—there were better export showings made than for Australia, India, Japan, and Brazil, respectively, which were off the gold standard.

These data are brought to the attention of the Senator from West Virginia for his comment and in support of the conclusions expressed by the representatives of the United States Tariff Commission who appeared before the subcommittee of the House of Representatives.

May I, before I close, also ask the Senator if he has considered the effect of the recent depreciation of our own currency upon the amendment which he now offers to the Senate?

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, in response to the Senator from Colorado, first I may remind him or call his attention to the fact that the point he has made deals with individual cases and not with the proposition as a whole, in that the volume in many instances has gone up while the price has gone down. Also, I wish to remind the distinguished Senator that while the price of coffee has been reduced one would be impressed with the fact that less coffee is coming into this country, if we base it on the price; but when we measure it from the quantity point of view it has increased.

Regarding the second question as to what effect the depreciation of our currency would have upon my amendment, I desire to state that, of course, my amendment would be unnecessary, if we were to depreciate our currency 60 percent or more in order to meet the low levels of foreign currencies; but such a course would place American labor on the low-level wage of the European and Asiatic, which condition I fervently hope will never be experienced by the wage earners of this land.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. HATFIELD. Certainly.

Mr. HALE. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] and the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] have raised objections to the Senator's amendment on the ground that imports have not increased from countries whose currencies have depreciated. Is it not true that this is not the absolute controlling factor in the matter, and that when a certain amount of products come into this country from a country whose currency has depreciated and those products can be sold at a lower price than the market price in this country, it evidently brings down the market price of our own goods in this country?

Mr. HATFIELD. To the point of extermination.

Mr. HALE. To the point of extermination; and, although they have not sent over a great many imports, yet they have broken our prices.

Now I should like to ask the Senator another question. Is it not also true that the countries of the world that have depreciated their currencies expect material advantages from this Congress in changes that they expect will be made in our tariff laws, and it would be no part of their policy to dump as many goods as they could into this country before we have made those changes, and thus rouse a feeling against lowering the tariff? Is not that a fact to be considered?

Mr. HATFIELD. There is no question whatever about that, Mr. President.

In final response to the interrogation of the distinguished Senator from Colorado dealing with the subject of depreciation of our own currency, Mr. President, I have had a good many heartaches to think that it is necessary for America to resort to the cheapening of our dollar to meet the situation in world trade. In fact, I am not convinced that that is necessary. If we measure the amount of gold that we have in the control of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve System today as compared with the amount of gold that we controlled in the period from 1912 to 1920—and the conditions then were almost as distressing, especially in Europe, as they are at the present time—our gold reserve in that period as compared with this period could be multiplied by three. So what I have been interested in doing was to give the President, through the Tariff Commission, power to deal with the subject of our imports, and deal with it in such a way that he would have more influence, more power in making suggestions to the stable-minded representatives of industry in America when they proved to the Tariff Commission that they were entitled to additional protection.

If they could receive or be assured of that protection, as has been repeatedly stated to me by men representing the rubber-specialty industry, the great steel industry, the great pottery and china industry, the pulp and paper industry, the canning industry, and many other industries that it is not necessary for me to mention, but of record here in Congress, I am impressed with the conviction that we can solve our economic difficulties better by remaining on a basis of stable, sound money than we can by embarking upon the sea of inflation without a compass and without any assurance of returning to financial stability, if we are to go to war for a larger world market than we have heretofore enjoyed, which is only one tenth in the peak of our world trade of the entire amount of our domestic commerce.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I shall speak but briefly on the pending amendment. The subject is one which previously, during the past year, was drawn to the attention of the Senate. It has also received consideration from the Tariff Commission, not only recently but also in earlier years. An investigation of the subject was made in the days of the unparalleled depreciation of the German mark.

If there was ever an hour in which depreciated foreign currencies might have endangered American prosperity through excessive imports—assuming for immediate purposes some soundness in the contention of the Senator from West Virginia—it was when the value of the depreciated currency of Germany was sinking lower and lower until it became approximately zero.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. COSTIGAN. With pleasure.

Mr. HATFIELD. Has the Senator the imports from Germany for the years beginning with 1919?

Mr. COSTIGAN. I have not the figures before me but am generally familiar with them.

Mr. HATFIELD. May I give them to the Senator?

Mr. COSTIGAN. I shall be glad to have the Senator present them.

Mr. HATFIELD. In 1919 the imports from Germany were $10,608,000.

In 1920 they had increased to $88,836,000.

In 1921 they had decreased to $80,280,000.

Mr. COSTIGAN. In what year did the decrease occur?

Mr. HATFIELD. Nineteen hundred and twenty-one—just a small decrease; about $8,600,000.

Mr. COSTIGAN. That, however, was a period in which the German mark was rapidly falling in value.

Mr. HATFIELD. That is right.

Then, in 1922, the imports increased to $117,498,000.

In 1923 they were $161,193,000.

In 1924 they were $139,258,000.

From the figures given above it will be noted that in the year 1923, when the German mark had reached its greatest depreciation, German exports to the United States reached their greatest height. And just as soon as Germany stabilized her mark in the latter half of 1923 and in 1924, the German exports to the United States immediately decreased. If the German exports to this country for the years 1921 and 1923 are compared we note an increase of 100 percent during the very time when the mark was sinking most rapidly, and when one could buy a million marks for a few cents in American currency.

Mr. COSTIGAN. The Senator from West Virginia has referred to certain exports from Germany. It is assumed that in presenting those data he concludes that German exports are attributable solely to depreciated currency.

Mr. HATFIELD. No, Mr. President; I do not arrive at that conclusion.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I shall be glad to have the Senator's explanation of the reason for substantial exports from Germany to the United States.

Mr. HATFIELD. They were trying to recover from the destructive effects of the war, limited as they had been because of their defeat, deprived as they had been of their colonial possessions and a part of their territorial integrity on the Continent of Europe. They were striving to get back to the economic condition which existed before the war, when they traded with us to an extent far beyond any imports that they sent to this country during the period I have just enumerated. They had lost their merchant marine. They had lost their economic stability. They were almost in a state of subjection.

That was the condition of the German people. It is, I may say to the distinguished Senator, the condition of the German people at this time. It will continue to be the condition of the German people, in my candid judgment, as long as the Treaty of Versailles is in effect; and I want to make this one observation:

The situation which confronts the world today is largely the result of the inequities which were brought about at Versailles, and subsequent treaties flowing therefrom, in the dislocation and dismemberment of two of the greatest nations on the European Continent. As long as that injustice is permitted to remain, in my judgment, just so long will we suffer more in the way of an economic condition which is unsolvable; just so long will Europe, England, and Asia suffer from the economic dislocation brought about by this inequitable distribution of territorial possessions, in which America shares in this grief and loss.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I submit that the Senator from West Virginia is now in retreat. His amendment does not purport to provide against the consequences of the Versailles Treaty. No one here doubts that other factors than depreciated exchanges have resulted in the unimportant showing of the ebb and flow of international commerce he has made today. The balance of trade, the changing debt situation, the obligations of one country and its citizens to another country and its citizens, the numerous elements that make up the competitive strength or weakness of industries in various countries, are all involved in the figures the Senator has given.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COSTIGAN. I yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. HATFIELD. Referring to the points that the distinguished Senator makes, the element of purchasing power, of course, enters materially into the proposition; but that is aside from the view that I take of this question. My view is this:

In 1917 we undertook to stabilize Europe by entering into the war. We understood that when we helped the Allies to win we would have a greater democracy in the world than we had at that time; but when, by retrospection, we review the history and the geography of Europe, we find that we have less democracy today than at any period in modern times.

That is the picture today; and I will say, for the information of the distinguished Senator from Colorado, that my amendment, my thought, my conviction, is that our experience from 1917 to the close of the World War, our mingling and meshing with the affairs of Europe, ought at least to teach us the lesson that we should stay at home, and that we should build our own affairs, and build them in such a way that we could be more or less independent of Europe and of Asia at least until they become stabilized in the conduct of their own internal affairs, until they are willing at least to give to us the same consideration that we gave to our allies by whose side we fought and whom we saved from humiliation and defeat. They needed our support; we gave it and financed them, without which assistance they would have been, no doubt, defeated by the Central Powers. We remember their appeal to us: "We are fighting with our backs to the wall."

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, the Senator from West Virginia has already sufficiently answered his own argument. It is manifest from the statistics assembled by competent experts that the business of the United States is not at this hour in danger of inundation in the form of imports from abroad. Indeed, our experience in 1921 and the succeeding years ought to afford a satisfactory answer to immediate fears. In those years, as a result of extremely careful consideration of the problem, following an investigation of the subject by the Tariff Commission, the Congress, acting under Republican leadership, undertook nothing so radical as the amendment now offered by the Senator from West Virginia. The solution, tendered in those days by the leaders of the party to which the Senator from West Virginia adheres, was the flexible tariff. The then Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Hoover, later President; the then Senator from Utah, Mr. Smoot; and members of the Tariff Commission met President Harding late in 1921 to consider the similar problems then presented by depreciated currencies. In some respects that time was more dramatic than the present, and then, as now, fancies often reluctantly yielded to facts.

The final conclusion of Republican leaders in those days was that the flexible-tariff provisions would be adequate to deal with the assumed emergency. As a result, as part of the Tariff Act of 1922, the flexible-tariff provisions we still retain substantially unchanged were adopted, the threatened dumping did not develop, and from then on, through years of unsettled economic and financial difficulties abroad, the country proceeded on its way unhampered by unwarranted apprehensions.

Today, in another period of depression and depreciated currencies, the Senator from West Virginia asks us to take, without any showing of present necessity, an unprecedented and, on the whole, an indefensible course, namely, to add to the higher and higher tariff barriers already strangling world commerce and prosperity and embittering international relations.

Expert judgment now points in the other direction. If an emergency existed, as pictured by the Senator from West Virginia, Senators on both sides of this Chamber would rally to the support of some remedial legislation; but there is nothing in the record of the years since the World War which supports such present action.

I shall content myself at this time by calling attention to some data which ought perhaps to be incorporated in the RECORD.

In January of this year I had certain statistics assembled, apparently somewhat similar to those offered the Senate by the Senator from West Virginia. They relate, however, to the first 9 months of the years 1931 and 1932; not the first 10 months summarized by the Senator from West Virginia.

I ask that these figures, with brief textual comment on them, be incorporated with my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TYDINGS in the chair). Is there objection?

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EFFECT OF DEPRECIATED CURRENCY UPON VOLUME OF TRADE

The following table gives the quantity of exports of a number of countries for a period before they abandoned the gold standard and after they abandoned the gold standard. The percentage of exports of the later period to the exports of the former period is also given. The same data are also shown for several countries that remained on the gold standard. It is noteworthy that the period was one, on the whole, of diminishing, not expanding, exports.

The next table shows the weight of cargoes shipped to the United States from several countries, part of which remained on the gold standard and part of which have abandoned the gold standard. A period of time when the countries were on a gold standard is compared with a period during which some of them were off the gold standard. The percentage that the shipments of the later period were of the shipments of the former period is given.

The figures show a tendency toward some relative advantage of the countries off the gold standard, but the advantage is not without our exceptions. For example, the gold-standard countries—Italy, Germany, Netherlands, and Belgium—made a better showing than Australia, India, Japan, or Brazil.

Germany's shipments to the United States held up as well as those of Argentina, and those from Belgium and the Netherlands held up better than those from Argentina.

The increase in shipments from Finland, Norway, and Sweden is explained in part by the relative improvement of the position of those countries in the production of wood pulp.

Mr. COSTIGAN. The Senate will also recall that the Tariff Commission in 1932 issued a rather elaborate report on depreciated exchange. Generally speaking, the results indicated in that report were inconclusive and not alarming.

An editorial of the New York Tribune apparently fairly summarizes that report and refers to other experiences. The editorial was printed on January 14, 1933, and I request that, in part, it may be incorporated in my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Tribune, Jan. 14, 1933]

DEBTS AND STERLING EXCHANGE

* * * So far as actual trade figures go, it is still difficult to find the evidence of that large-scale "exchange dumping" which is supposed to give nongold countries so great an advantage in foreign trade against those remaining on the gold standard.

It will be remembered that when the Tariff Commission investigated the question of "exchange dumping" for Congress last spring its results were mainly negative. Great Britain and the "sterling group" had gone off gold in September 1931 and Japan in December. The Tariff Commission had the trade returns through the month of April; generally speaking, they failed to show that up to that time our imports from nongold countries were decreasing any less rapidly than those from the gold countries, or that our exports to the nongold countries were decreasing any more rapidly than those to the gold countries. The Commission felt that the late figures might indicate that depreciation was checking our exports, but there was no conclusive proof.

There have now been published the complete British trade statistics for 1932. They show that during the year the British have been able to check the decline in their exports without checking the decline in imports. Before assuming, however, that this proves the influence of exchange depreciation, one should glance at the American statistics. In our case, also, imports continued to decline during 1932, while exports declined less rapidly than in the preceding period. As between the depreciated pound and the undepreciated dollar there was no striking difference. It is true that the check in the decline of British exports seems a little more marked than the corresponding movement of American exports, but many other factors besides exchange depreciation may have assisted in that result.

The effect of currency instability upon all trade is quite another matter. It is unquestionably harmful. The uncertainty, dislocations, and countervailing restrictions flowing from exchange depreciation can do widespread damage. Moreover, the depreciation may injure specific activities with serious results, even though the injury does not appear in general statistics. There is every reason for hoping that Great Britain will return to the gold standard at the earliest possible moment. But her own gains therefrom might well be as great as any other country's.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I ask that portions of an article of the United States Daily of January 19, 1933, be likewise included. The article directs attention to the definite, well-recognized recession in world commerce, and gives comments of the then Secretary of Commerce on the relation of that recession to depreciated currencies. I submit that the official views there presented justify the position which I trust the Senate will affirm—that there is no present persuasive reason for supporting the amendment of the Senator from West Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Colorado?

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

VALUE OF TRADE ABROAD RECESSES TO 1905 LEVELS—EXPORTS SHOWED DECLINE OF ONE THIRD LAST YEAR, SAYS DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE IN PRELIMINARY ANALYSIS—DROP OF $767,000,000 RECORDED FOR IMPORTS—EFFECT OF FOREIGN COMPETITION ON DOMESTIC INDUSTRIES DUE TO CURRENCY DEPRECIATION DISCUSSED BY MR. CHAPIN

The foreign trade of the United States totaled approximately $3,000,000,000 in 1932, the lowest dollar valuation since 1905, according to preliminary figures for 1932 issued January 18 by the Department of Commerce. The total of exports was $1,617,877,000.

Exports during 1932 were $806,412,000 less than in 1931, and imports were $767,900,000 less, according to the Department. In spite of this large decrease in value of both exports and imports, it is incorrect to form the opinion that the foreign business of the United States has now reached negligible proportions, Secretary of Commerce Roy D. Chapin said in a prepared statement commenting on the trade figures.

DEPRECIATED CURRENCY

Mr. Chapin stated orally also in commenting on the import figures for 1932 that thus far only certain industries appear to be in danger of losing certain of their domestic markets to foreign competitors because of conditions of depreciated currency. "We will find out this year," said Mr. Chapin, "whether the lines along which the Tariff Commission operates will take care of extreme cases of foreign competition with domestic producers."

Exports fell from $139,382,000 in November to $136,000,000 in December, according to the Department. Imports decreased from $104,466,000 in November to $97,000,000.

COMMERCE IN GOLD

Exports of gold for 1932 were $809,528,000, as compared with $466,794,000 in 1931, according to the Department's figures. Imports of gold were $364,315,000 during 1932, as compared with $612,119,000 worth of gold imported in 1931.

Exports of silver for 1932 were $13,850,000, as compared with exports in 1931 of $26,485,000, according to the Department. Imports of silver decreased from $28,664,000 in 1931 to $19,650,000 in 1932.

The statement issued by Secretary Chapin concerning the foreign trade of the United States for 1932 follows in full text:

SIGNIFICANCE OF TRADE

"Our monthly statement for December shows the values of our imports and exports for December and for the calendar year 1932. These figures seem worthy of special comment.

"There is a generally mistaken impression about the significance of our commercial relations with foreign countries because of the steady decline in foreign trade due to the world-wide depression. For this reason I have gathered a few facts and figures which I believe to be of considerable importance at this time in analyzing our foreign trade for the year from the standpoint of what it means to the average citizen at its present very low level.

"At a figure approximating $3,000,000,000, the total foreign trade of the United States during 1932 records the lowest dollar valuation since 1905. The figures covering exports only, namely $1,617,877,000, are also the lowest on record since 1905.

"Statistical evidence of this kind emphasizing greatly diminished foreign shipments, unless balanced by other factors, is likely to create distorted opinion and to add to the impression which seems to be prevalent in some circles that our foreign business has now reached the point of negligible consequence.

"One of the most important things we need in the United States today is more jobs for more people, and above all else we need to keep the jobs we now have.

PRESENT VOLUME OF TRADE OF CONSIDERABLE IMPORTANCE

"Exports of $1,617,877,000 may appear small compared with the figures of 1928 and 1929, but after all something over $1,500,000,000 worth of business, particularly during these times, is not to be ignored.

"Let us see what this means in actual jobs for our people.

"According to conservative estimates our exports in 1932 provided at least 2,000,000 American workers with employment, out of a total of approximately 18,000,000 persons at work last year producing goods capable of being exported.

"In addition there were about 1,250,000 persons engaged in activities supplying the daily needs of those directly employed.

"The two foregoing estimates do not include the number engaged in the clerical and mercantile phases of the export business proper in warehousing, ocean shipping, banking, insurance, and related industries.

"Reviewing the export status during 1932 of a few prominent industries, it is rather surprising to note that the proportion of our total lumber production which was exported last year is the highest since records were first compiled in 1869. Last year the lumber industry exported approximately 1,300,000,000 board feet.

LARGE SHIPMENTS ABROAD OF MOTOR OILS

"Despite the severe curtailment of purchasing power abroad our automobile industry exported about $80,000,000 worth of cars and parts last year, or about 11½ percent of its total output.

"Over 50 percent of our entire cotton crop was exported last year, representing about 9,000,000 bales.

"We also exported during 1932, 27 percent of our leaf tobacco, and about 9 percent of our apples. We sold to foreign countries 15 percent of our wheat crop, 24 percent of our lard production, and about 7½ percent of our salmon pack.

"Exports of motor fuel accounted for 9 percent of production and exports of lubricating oils 30 percent of production.

"As recently as last summer, export for machine tools represented 58 percent of the total orders on hand.

DISTRIBUTION OF BENEFITS OF FOREIGN COMMERCE

"The records of the Department show that every State in the Union contributed substantially to the foreign trade total of the Nation, and that export business means jobs to practically every community in this country.

"A review of the foreign trade of the United States with that of other leading countries indicates that the foreign business of all nations has fared much the same. Comparing the first 9 months of 1932 with the corresponding period of 1931, total exports from the United Kingdom declined 33 percent; exports from Germany, 39 percent; France, 38 percent; Denmark, 39 percent; Sweden, 42 percent; Japan, 35 percent; Canada, 30 percent; Netherlands, 39 percent; Italy, 35 percent. Between the two periods, the value of United States exports fell off 36 percent.

PROSPERITY TIED UP WITH VOLUME OF EXPORTS

"If we can ship more goods abroad, it means much to American employment and prosperity.

"In spite of curtailed appropriations, the American business man still has at his disposal the best equipped and most effective foreign trade promotion service in the world.

"The policies that our Government adopts should take into consideration proper protection of home markets, and, at the same time, a consideration of the vital importance to us of our exports which mean so much in employment and well-being for our workers.

"Total values (in thousands of dollars) of exports and imports of the United States (preliminary figures for 1932 corrected to January 17, 1933)":

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, the argument presented by the able Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], of course, is that of one who is convinced that the United States should operate upon a low-tariff basis, upon a tariff for revenue, if you please. I would welcome the day when we could, with justice to American labor, with justice to American industry, operate upon that kind of a basis, but that is not possible until Europe and Asia are willing to bring the standard of living, the standard of wage, and the standard of opportunity up to a parity and maintain them there with the ever-increasing standards of the wage earners in America.

In the world, as constituted today, there are now four great self-sufficing economic areas. One of these is the 3,000,000 square miles comprising the Republic of the United States of America, to us the fairest land on earth; the second is that vast domain stretching across the roof of the world from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the 8,000,000 square miles occupied by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; the third is the great British Empire, occupying 13,000,000 square miles, or one fourth of the habitable area of the whole terrestrial globe; the fourth great trade area, and by far the greatest in civilized population, is continental Europe.

With the single exception of Europe, each one of these huge self-sufficing economic and political areas now is dedicated to the policy of free trade within and tariff protection from without.

What an object lesson was the recent imperial trade conference in Ottawa, when the duly designated delegates of the British Commonwealth of Nations scuttled their historic policy and embraced "imperial preference", which is but another name for free trade within and protection from without.

Upon what does the great Empire of Soviet Russia, groping her way to industrial freedom, stake her destiny? Free trade within and protection from without.

What single thing was it which enabled our own great Nation to rise in the short space of 150 years to a position of industrial supremacy that has amazed the world? That wise provision, placed by our forefathers in the very bedrock of the Constitution, namely, that there shall be no tariffs between the States.

One is naturally reluctant to advance or approve a step which essentially must spring from the initiative of governments other than his own.

But the light of these illustrious and time-tried examples I make bold to suggest to the harried statesmen of continental Europe that they do now adopt and take up as their own the selfsame principle that has made us great, the selfsame principle to which the British Empire now turns in her hour of need, the selfsame principle to which Russia intrusts her future, namely, free trade within and protection, where needful, from without.

Let us see the picture whole. The organization and the establishment of a continental tariff union in no wise need impair the sovereignty of a single member. When the Thirteen Original Colonies of this Nation, under the pressure of dire necessity, sought to federate, they were a group of thoroughly independent little sovereigns—with a background of conflicting social, political, religious, and economic ambitions that they had brought over here from Europe.

Napoleon undertook to make it possible for the Continent of Europe to be controlled under one flag, with one coin running the length and breadth of that great Continent, but he failed upon the field at Waterloo and passed into history. From that time down to the present we have a conglomeration of little nations—before the World War numbering 18, now some 30—with tariff walls surrounding them, so that none can exist with a feeling of contentment, but there is wrangling almost every day at their back and front doors. We wonder why this conglomeration of humanity, numbering something over 400,000,000 people, cannot see the error of their way and commit themselves to the principles of free trade within and protection from without.

The greatest trade center of the world today is the United States of America, because of free trade within the 48 States and ample protection from without, when we do not have depreciated currency in other nations to contend with. If the same condition could be brought about on the Continent of Europe with their 400,000,000 people, they would even outstrip in progress, in social achievement, in economic advantages the United States of America because of their population.

Mr. President, I present this amendment, not because I believe in an embargo, but due to the fact that there exist in Europe turmoil and distress, and any understanding or tariff agreement we may enter upon with her she will not accept until she has the advantage. A "reciprocal" tariff means the barter and exchange of goods with foreign nations on a basis of reciprocity. It means the surrender of our economic sovereignty. It means giving to other nations the right to say what we shall buy and sell. It could well mean prosperity in one section and destruction in another. For that reason I find myself in harmony, as I have said at least twice from this desk, with Dean Donham, of the Harvard Business School. I think that we should begin at home. I think that we should extend a helping hand to Europe, economically and otherwise, when it does not infringe on or conflict with our own best interests and the interests of the wage workers in the United States, but I believe that charity should begin at home; and I say to this body that the greatest trade center in the world, which is the envy of all the nations of the world, which is sought by all the nations of the world, is in the United States of America, and I say to this body that our average tariff rate is 16.4 percent and the depreciation of the world currency is 39 percent. That distinguished American who hailed from the Lone Star State and who graced this body many years, Senator Bailey, said he considered that when any tariff rate was lower than 20 percent, that it was a tariff for revenue only.

Mr. President, my convictions today, because of the conditions which exist in Europe, because of the conditions which exist in Asia, are that our industries whose products are on the free list are practically destroyed, and the 33 1/3 percent which receive protection are operating only 20 to 30 percent of the time. The easiest way, the quickest way, the surest way to bring relief is to give to the Tariff Commission and, through the recommendations of that Commission, to the Chief Executive of this Nation power again to bring to American industry that confidence and that protection which it does not possess today.

We can hardly find responsible industrial owners of property who will not say, on their oath, that if they had this protection, that if they had this assurance that the depreciation of cheap money would not operate against them, they could start up the mills and the mines of the United States; they could go forward and employ labor; and they could store in the empty supply houses supplies which would enable them to sell when the demand was made, instead of living from hand to mouth and manufacturing from day to day, running anywhere from 15 to 20 percent of the time.

The purpose of my amendment, as I have repeatedly said on this floor, is not to increase a single tariff rate; it is simply to lodge with the Tariff Commission the power and the privilege of protecting American labor and American industry when we take our leave and go home, where we will remain for at least 6 months unless called back by some exigency that will be tremendously important, to deal with some problem which may develop between the time of adjournment and the time of our natural and lawful return to this body.

I have said all I feel I should say. I addressed the Senate a few days ago upon this subject, and I have addressed it again, giving my convictions. They are from the heart. They stand for Americanism, they stand for the American wage earner, they stand for giving preference or protection and assurance to American industry.

Mr. President, I offer the amendment. If it is accepted I shall feel glad. If it is defeated it will not be my fault.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HATFIELD].

Mr. HATFIELD. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. KING. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following

Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Dickinson	Logan	Schall
Ashurst	Dieterich	Loneragan	Sheppard
Austin	Dill	Long	Shipstead
Bachman	Duffy	McAdoo	Smith

Couzens	Kendrick	Robinson, Ark.
Cuttings	Keyes	Robinson, Ind.
Dale	King	Russell

Mr. LEWIS. I desire to state that the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE] is necessarily detained on official business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I have received appeals from a number of industries which seek the protection which the adoption of my amendment would afford. I have a list of these industries before me and ask that it may be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Paper; pulp; lumber; plywood; canning; packing; steel; shoe; brick; wool; rubber; rubber footwear; glass; pig iron; wire; fiber brush; zinc; portland cement; electric-light bulbs; toys; water-color paints; oil and fat producers; fish industry—tuna, salmon, sardine, halibut; agricultural and forest products; pottery; raw glass blanks; textiles; chemicals; dairy.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from West Virginia offering this amendment a question. As I understand, the amendment has for its objective protecting industries of the United States against the advantages which are supposed to be given to foreign nations which are now operating on a cheap-currency basis. The question which presents itself to me is this: How can we remedy that situation by tariff legislation? How can we accommodate the tariff schedules to the constant change which may take place in cheap-currency countries with reference to the currency which they are using?

Mr. HATFIELD. We may do so by placing on imported commodities a surtax, representing the difference in cost of production at home and abroad. That would be the policy which is provided for under my amendment.

Mr. BORAH. Exactly; but we establish a certain tariff rate, which is supposed to be in harmony with the situation as we see it now, and a week from today or a month from today the currency basis is entirely changed and the situation is altered, so that we may be at the same disadvantage, so far as tariff rates are concerned, as we were before the rates were increased.

Mr. HATFIELD. That is very true, Mr. President, but if the able Senator from Idaho can suggest a more stable method than the one which I have suggested I shall wholeheartedly support it.

Mr. BORAH. I am in entire sympathy with what the Senator from West Virginia seeks to accomplish—that is, to protect our industries against the effect of the cheap currencies in foreign countries—but I do not see how it is possible to do that except by arranging a stabilization of the currency itself through an agreement between nations. If I could see any hope of accomplishing it through the tariff, I certainly would want to accomplish it in that way. I readily concede the advantage in trade which the cheap-currency countries have. I cannot agree with those who insist the advantage is of little consequence. But I do not believe we can meet the situation through tariff legislation.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, in the absence of being able to bring about a stabilization of currencies, of course some other method will necessarily have to be adopted if we are to continue to exist as a nation. I agree with the able Senator that if we could bring about a stabilization of monetary systems throughout the world that would be the solution; it would be a basis upon which we could figure the cost of production at home and abroad, based upon the standard of wage paid to labor in other countries; but as we have no such basis upon which to compute the difference, then, of course, we simply delve in the field of speculation more or less trying to find a remedy to meet the symptoms of the condition instead of applying a direct remedy to cure the basic ills, and the only one that is available is the one that I have suggested, which has been adopted in principle by every other nation on and off the gold standard, our own United States standing alone receiving the onslaughts from all nations since September 1931.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator from West Virginia permit a question?

Mr. HATFIELD. I have not the floor.

Mr. BORAH. I yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. REED. I should like to ask the Senator from Idaho whether it is not a fact that at the present time most of the countries competing with us have adopted just this method of protecting themselves against depreciated currencies?

Mr. BORAH. I do not know to what extent they have adopted this practice, but what I am saying is that, whether they have adopted it or not, I do not see how it is possible to work effectively in this manner to accomplish that which we desire to accomplish. A month from now the currency situation may be so changed that the tariff rates will be no more effective for our protection than they were before we increased them.

Mr. REED. I grant all that, and I agree with the Senator that the stabilization of the money of the world is the best cure for the condition which we desire to correct, but all other countries are using the method now suggested by the Senator from West Virginia. Only this week France put in effect a special tariff against us because we had gone off the gold standard.

Mr. BORAH. And only last week Great Britain increased her exchange fund about treble, the purpose of which is to enable Great Britain to beat down the pound, if necessary, and to increase the price of the dollar, if necessary, in order to take advantage of the situation which we are trying to cure by a tariff; and she could effectuate her purpose a month from now just as effectively on the basis which we would establish today as she does upon the basis which now exists.

Mr. REED. That is true; but the Senator from West Virginia is offering us a weapon to meet Great Britain, whereas we are now defenseless against such tactics.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. HATFIELD. I may say, for the information of the Senator, that of course I recognize that the amendment which I offer is only temporary, but if vigorously, enthusiastically, and patriotically used it will be tremendously effective as it has been in the hands of the European and Asiatic countries. However, I feel that we should do something that would at least give us a weapon that would put us on a parity as against the policy that has long since been adopted by countries of Europe and Asia; that we ought not to deprive American industry and the American laboring man of whatever protection this kind of legislation would give to them and which at the same time would stabilize industry and establish a confidence that is not possessed at the present time.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, we are within less than a month, or about a month, of the convening of the World Economic Conference which is to deal with the subject of the stabilization of currencies and also with the subject of tariffs. It occurs to me that a very unfortunate preparation is being made for that conference. Great Britain has been completing tariff treaties just as rapidly as possible, and those tariff treaties do not seem to be subject to change by the World Economic Conference. If we proceed along the same line, Mr. President, I can see no possible result from the Economic Conference except a complete breakdown so far as the stabilization of currencies and of tariffs is concerned. In other words, up to the very hour when the Conference is called, we are doing that which makes it impossible to work out a solution of either one of these problems at the Economic Conference.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. HATFIELD. I may say to the Senator that this proposal, if adopted, will not be compulsory, but it will simply be left in the hands of the Tariff Commission, so that they may invoke it in case they find no other remedy for the condition in the absence of Congress, which will extend over a 6-month period.

Mr. BORAH. Well, Mr. President, that is another phase of the controversy which I did not intend to discuss; but the granting of power to the Tariff Commission to exercise its judgment not only with reference to world conditions but with reference to the legislation which is necessary in order to meet such conditions seems to me a delegation of power which we ought to hesitate before we give. It is true that we have been rather liberal in granting power during the last few weeks, but I myself have not accepted the doctrine that we ought to delegate our legislative power with reference to the making of tariffs. I do not want to be committed to such doctrine. I would not grant legislative power to the Tariff Commission or any other executive or administrative agency.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. KEAN. I should like to ask the Senator whether it is not true that Great Britain, Belgium, France, and other foreign countries have put up and are putting up their tariffs and are levying extra tariffs against America, so that when it comes to the international conference they may say, "We will sacrifice this; we will sacrifice that; and we will sacrifice the other thing", whereas in reality it will be only taking off what they have just added.

Mr. BORAH. And we are putting on something so that we may be able to say, "We will sacrifice that."

Mr. KEAN. We should like to be even with them when it comes to trading.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs upon the amendment offered by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HATFIELD], on which the yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. AUSTIN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], who is necessarily detained from the Senate. I therefore withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. BULOW (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT], who is necessarily absent. In his absence I withhold my vote. If the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT] were present, he would vote "yea." If I were permitted to vote, I would vote "nay."

Mr. DALE (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from California [Mr. McADOO]. Having been informed that he would vote as I shall vote, I am at liberty to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. LOGAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr.

DAVIS], who is necessarily absent. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] and vote "nay."

Mr. PATTERSON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], who is temporarily absent from the Chamber. I am informed that if he were present he would vote "nay." If permitted to vote, I would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. FESS. I was requested to announce that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS] is paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], and that the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT] is paired with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS]. I am advised that if present Senators HASTINGS and HEBERT would vote "yea", and Senators COPELAND and LEWIS would vote "nay."

Mr. KENDRICK. I desire to announce that the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] are necessarily detained on official business.

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 51, as follows:

So Mr. HATFIELD's amendment was rejected.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I gave notice on yesterday that I would offer an amendment, which I then asked to have printed and lie on the table. I now offer the amendment and ask for its adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. The Senator from Oklahoma proposes at the proper place in the bill to insert the following language:

That it shall be unlawful for any person to ship or transport, or to deliver to another for shipment or transportation, or to receive for shipment or transportation, by rail, pipe line, truck, or any other means of conveyance from any State, Territory, or District of the United States to any other State, Territory, or District of the United States, or to a foreign country, any crude petroleum, or to purchase or receive any shipment of crude petroleum in any State, Territory, or District of the United States from any other State, Territory, or District of the United States, with the knowledge that such crude petroleum was produced in violation of any law, or any regulation or order of any board, commission, officer, or other duly authorized agency, of the State, Territory, or District of its production.

SEC. 2. No person shall receive any crude petroleum for shipment or transportation from a State, Territory, or District in the United States in which there is a law or laws pertaining to the conservation of crude petroleum or the prevention of waste in the production thereof, to any other State, Territory, or District of the United States, unless the shipper shall furnish an affidavit to the effect that no part of such crude petroleum was produced in violation of any law or any regulation or order of any board, commission, officer, or other duly authorized agency, of the State, Territory, or District of its production. Such affidavit shall otherwise be in such form as may be prescribed by authority of the State in which such petroleum is produced or tendered for transportation and shall be subject to inspection upon request of such State authority: Provided, however, That common carriers by railroad may receive from other common carriers by railroad for such transportation and may transport any crude petroleum without requiring such affidavit.

SEC. 3. Any individual who violates any of the provisions of this act, or who makes any false statement in any affidavit required by section 2 of this act, and any officer or agent of a corporation who participates in any violation of this act by such corporation, shall be fined not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000, and imprisoned not less than 1 year nor more than 5 years. Any corporation which violates any of the provisions of this act shall be subject to a fine of not less than $1,000 and not more than $10,000. Each violation of this act shall constitute a separate offense.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, it is my hope that the amendment may be agreed to and at least go to conference.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, this is an amendment that seems to be of a great deal of importance and one around which much controversy has raged. I do not know whether it presents the united views of those interested in the matter. I know that I have given no study to the question. I really do not know much about it except as I gathered its import from hearing it read at the desk. I think the Senator from Oklahoma ought to make some explanation of the proposal. I know Senators from various States have been very much interested in it. I had been in hope that any matter of such importance might be considered by the committee. However, the committee has not given any consideration to it. I ask the Senator from Oklahoma if he will make a brief explanation of the purpose of the amendment?

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I will submit one or two observations in regard to the purpose and object of the amendment. I do not think it in itself is controversial. It is true that a number of controversies exist in the oil fraternities, as to the best solution of their various problems, but it has been my understanding that practically all groups of the industry are agreed upon this particular proposal. They are willing to go this far, as I understand their sentiments. Some desire to go further. Some are not willing to go further. This appeared to me to be a sort of locus of points where there might be an agreement of views and possibility of action.

The amendment is substantially in the form of House bill 5010. That bill was introduced in the Congress by Representative MARLAND, of my State. Perhaps no man in Congress or out is more familiar with the oil industry and with its problems, or better fitted to aid in a solution of these difficult problems. The House Committee on Interstate Commerce had hearings on the Marland bill. I will have one sentence read from the hearings, from the statement of Mr. Russell Brown, who is secretary of the Independent Oil Producers' Association. He speaks for that group authoritatively, and it happens that other groups, according to my understanding, share his views upon this point and with reference to this proposal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will read, as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

We believe the enactment of the measure before this committee is right, proper, and of vital necessity not merely to the petroleum industry, but also to the general economic well-being of the whole Nation.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, Mr. Brown, who gave expression to those views, is the secretary of the Independent Oil Producers' Association. The bill to which he referred was the Marland bill, to which I have just made reference. I will say to the Senate that the pending amendment proposes to do one thing, and one thing only: It proposes to prohibit the shipment in interstate commerce of contraband oil, or of bootleg oil.

As everybody knows, the oil industry is distressed. Like all other industries it is in deep distress. It has been making a strenuous effort to solve its own problems and to save its own life. In order to do that, a number of the leading oil States have enacted laws to prorate production, to restrict and control the production of crude petroleum. This amendment provides that when oil is produced in Oklahoma in violation of the laws of that State, it shall not be shipped in interstate commerce.

That is what this amendment proposes. That is all this amendment proposes. It simply reinforces the police laws of Oklahoma and of Texas and of other oil States—laws passed in an effort to conserve for the future this wasting resource, and to give the industry itself a chance to catch its breath, to revive, and to ride out this storm. It simply prohibits the interstate shipment of contraband oil—merely that and nothing more.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MURPHY in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. GORE. Yes, sir.

Mr. KING. I have been interested during the past 2 or 3 years in noticing the very strong movements now and then originated, and carried forward with more or less success, to establish monopoly in the oil industry. A meeting was held a year or so ago at Denver, Colo., to which Mr. Hoover sent a representative, to try to effectuate an agreement among all the oil producers and, as it was called, "to stabilize prices"; but the object was, as I interpreted the meeting and interpreted the statements made regarding it, to weld the oil producers into a compact mass, to fix prices, to give them monopolistic control not only of the crude oil but of all of the commodities or products that flow from the utilization of the oil in all of its elements. Is not this amendment in harmony with that movement, and will it not tend to establish an oil monopoly in the United States?

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I remember the meeting to which the Senator refers. I do not think this amendment would contribute to the accomplishment of the result which he describes, assuming that such was the object of that meeting. On the other hand, Mr. President, something of this kind is essential to protect the independent oil producers against the power of the oil monopoly, or what once constituted an oil monopoly, and to revive which, may be the purpose of some of the oil companies today.

The independent oil concerns which are not integrated, to use the trade phrase—that is, those who are engaged in production alone, do not own refineries and do not own pipe lines—have, as everybody knows, been in a desperate struggle for existence against the larger concerns which not only own production but own refineries, own pipe lines, and own filling stations. Anyone, even those not familiar with the industry, can see the unfair competition that would exist between companies so differently situated as I have described.

The testimony read a moment ago was from Mr. Russell Brown, the secretary of the Independent Oil Producers' Association. He expresses the view that this legislation is essential to the survival of the industry itself, and particularly, I will say, the independent branch of the industry. This amendment is intended as a sort of storm cellar to enable the independent concerns and the smaller concerns to have some sort of refuge and protection while the storm is raging, and to protect them afterward against the stronger concerns which are integrated.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma further yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. GORE. Yes, sir.

Mr. KING. The Senator, as I understood him, stated a moment ago that there was, or had been, an oil monopoly.

Mr. GORE. It was dissolved. I referred then to the Standard Oil Co., which was dissolved by the Supreme Court. I have often said it made me think of one of the fabulous "joint snakes", in that it seemed to have found ways and means to reunite itself, or at least to unite its power, if not its corporate existence,

Mr. KING. I will ask the Senator if it is not a fact that the independent oil operators and producers in nearly every State have associated themselves with the so-called "big interests", the Standard Oil Co. and those other large interests, and charge the same prices either for the crude product or for the finished product, if I may use that expression, as is charged by the so-called "big companies." It seems to me they have gone hand in hand, and that there has been an oil monopoly; but, of course, the big producers as well as the small producers have found a limited market in view of the depression, just as all industries have experienced a limited market in the sale of the commodities which they were producing.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I may say that there are two groups of independent oil concerns. One of the groups does not own refineries or pipe lines. Its members are not in the market for the purchase of crude petroleum. Therefore they do not compete either with the Standard or monopolistic group or with the other group of independents; and not owning refineries, they have no finished product to market. There are a few independent concerns which own refineries and have striven to maintain a more or less hazardous existence in competition with the old or so-called "Standard" concerns. I think the Senator is right. I think as a rule they pay the same price as the Standard for crude petroleum.

For instance, in the olden days the Prairie Oil & Gas Co. posted the price in Oklahoma, and all the other concerns, Standard and independent, as a rule followed that price. They could not obtain the crude petroleum for less than the Prairie Oil & Gas Co. was paying, and there was no reason why they should pay more if they could obtain it at that price. I think that is no reflection on the independents. They were more or less helpless in the matter of price making. They did follow the price fixed and posted by the Prairie Oil & Gas Co.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. GORE. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. This amendment proposes to deny the channels of interstate commerce to any oil produced in any State in violation of any law, regulation, or order issued by any commission, board, or officer of the State. What are some of the regulations, violation of which would deny to this oil the right to enter interstate commerce?

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, referring to the oil industry in Oklahoma, for instance, various companies own producing acreage in what is known as the "Oklahoma City oil field." Part of that field is embraced in the corporate limits of Oklahoma City. It is one of the greatest oil fields ever brought in in any State; perhaps, next to the east Texas field, the greatest. The oil concerns, themselves, in an effort to protect their lives, have acquiesced in the proration of oil in that field, in the curtailment of output, and at times the output has been as low as 1 percent of the potential production. Those rules and regulations have been sanctioned by the Oklahoma Corporation Commission.

Mr. BARKLEY. Have they been passed on by any court?

Mr. GORE. Yes, sir. The matter came to the Supreme Court of the United States in the Champlin case, and the Supreme Court sustained the power of the State.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have not read that case. Was it based in part upon the voluntary agreement of all those interested to abide by certain conditions; or did the case decide that without regard to the voluntary consent of anybody the State could impose those rules and regulations?

Mr. GORE. It did not turn on the question of consent, because Mr. Champlin challenged the power of the Commission to adopt and enforce such orders. The Supreme Court sustained that power. There has been what is known as "hot oil", however; there have been bootleg concerns which have violated those orders; and they have resorted to tactics which I would not even care to describe in violation of the rules and regulations, the lawless concerns producing oil, the law-abiding companies obeying the rules and regulations, and the bootleggers obtaining an unfair advantage in that respect.

When a bootlegging oil company produces oil in violation of the laws or the rules and regulations of the State, under this amendment that oil is to be treated as contraband, and is not to be received in interstate shipment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. GORE. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. I recall that a year or so ago the Governor of Texas or some other State issued an order attempting, by executive ukase, to restrict the production of oil. I may be mistaken as to the terms, and I may be mistaken as to the State; but some governor did that. Whether he was doing it in pursuance of a law enacted by the legislature, or by virtue of his power as governor, I do not recall; but, in either case, that order by the governor affecting the production of oil in that State would operate to prevent any oil produced in violation of that order from entering into interstate commerce under this amendment?

Mr. GORE. Yes, sir; that is true, if it was a valid order. As I recall—the Senator from Texas can correct me—the orders were issued by the Railway Commission of Texas, and most of those orders issued by the Texas Railway Commission were held invalid. That is my recollection.

Mr. BARKLEY. The oil not being within itself deleterious or injurious, under what decision of the Supreme Court does the Senator contend that this amendment would be constitutional?

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, this proposal—and I go as far as the Senator in safeguarding the freedom of interstate commerce—merely prohibits the interstate shipment of outlaw oil, of contraband oil, of oil that was produced by lawless companies in violation of the laws of the State which protect those concerns.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not quite get the force of the word "contraband" in the production of oil.

Mr. GORE. I use it in a figurative sense.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is a figurative expression, of course.

Mr. GORE. I mean oil that is produced in violation of the law of the State.

Mr. BARKLEY. This amendment also says that before anybody except a railroad company can receive a shipment of oil in interstate commerce he must be furnished by the shipper with an affidavit that it has not been produced in violation of the law.

Mr. GORE. Yes, sir.

Mr. BARKLEY. Why exempt railroad companies? Will not the effect of that be to have all oil transported on railroads?

Mr. GORE. As I recall, what the Senator has in mind is the receiving of this oil by one railroad from another railroad.

Mr. BARKLEY. No; it does not seem to be limited.

Mr. GORE. That is the way I read it; the assumption being that in the first instance the privilege of the oil to enter interstate commerce was determined before the first railroad received it.

Mr. BARKLEY. It may be delimited to receiving it from another common carrier.

Mr. GORE. That is the point, it being assumed, and I think properly, that when the first railroad received the oil, it was privileged to enter interstate commerce and go outside the State.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, a lot of this oil is presented to companies for shipment, not by the producer, but by somebody who has bought it from the producer. Suppose I am engaged in the purchasing of oil from oil wells, to be shipped to all parts of the country. Of course, I have no personal knowledge about who it was who produced it, or whether there was any more produced than was allowed under any State quota for any company. I would be unable then to put that oil on the railroad, or on any other transportation facility, without making affidavit myself that it had not been produced in violation of law.

Mr. GORE. I think that is so. I think the Senator would be put on notice to ascertain whether or not it was outlawed oil or innocent oil.

Mr. BARKLEY. Could any man, or any group of men, not actually producing it, make affidavit that it was not so produced? Could any man make affidavit merely on the information or advice of somebody else?

Mr. GORE. I think so.

Mr. BARKLEY. Would he not have to state that, so far as he knew, it had not been produced in violation of law?

Mr. GORE. It is possible that the affidavit might be made upon information and belief; but the way oil is handled, through pipe lines, I think the Senator could ascertain, because he would either buy from the pipe line, or from some company which had used the pipe line, which had been under surveillance. Of course, the law would not entirely enforce itself. A citizen would be put on notice that it was the law of the land, and would be required to exercise at least reasonable diligence in the purchase and transportation of oil.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator knows that I am ordinarily sympathetic with his viewpoint on a lot of things. This is a rather sudden situation injected here by this amendment. Would the Senator have any objection to having it referred to the Committee on Finance, in order that that committee might give it consideration?

Mr. GORE. My purpose was to see if it could not go to conference. It has been a subject of extensive hearings in the House, and I thought it might facilitate some sort of action or that action might otherwise be delayed. As I understand, practically every phase of the oil industry is favorable to this legislation. There is one group of independents who desire to go further than this amendment goes, who desire an embargo against the importation of foreign oil.

Mr. BARKLEY. Aside from all that, I think the broad question of the policy of the Government undertaking to deny interstate-commerce rights to a commodity because it may be produced in violation of some State law is something to which Congress ought to give very serious consideration before embarking upon it, because if we start out on that course it means that we will not stop with oil; we will have to go the whole length and deny the channels of interstate commerce to any product anywhere produced in violation of any law of any State.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I am inclined to think that the Federal Government is justified in reinforcing a State in the application of its police laws; and when a State says that a thing shall not be produced within its borders, of course the Government does not transcend the limits of the Constitution when it joins with the State in an effort to enforce that law. The cases which are in the Senator's mind are just the reverse. Where a State law declares an article to be innocent and permits its production, if Congress stepped in and attempted, through the exercise of the taxing power or some other power, to prohibit the interstate shipment of commodities and articles which under State law were produced entirely innocently, that would transcend the Constitution. The Supreme Court passed upon that point in the Child Labor cases. I sympathize entirely with the Senator's view in that matter, and I share his disposition to exercise great care in intermeddling with interstate commerce. So far as I am concerned, it is only the outlaw that I would forbid; an outlaw under the laws of a State.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate the Senator's situation. This is a terrifically important problem. It involves a question of constitutional law; it involves a question of policy, which Congress has once or twice attempted to embark upon, but which the Supreme Court denied it the power to do.

Mr. GORE. I think it was the reverse.

Mr. BARKLEY. It seems to me the question is too important to justify us in adopting this amendment on the floor, without the consideration of a committee. I was wondering whether the Senator would not be willing to withdraw his amendment and let the Finance Committee take it up, or let the Committee on Interstate Commerce take it up, and give it the consideration to which it is entitled.

Mr. GORE. As the Senator knows, the pending bill extends the 1-cent Federal tax on gasoline. It levies a tribute upon the oil industry of about $165,000,000. I think the tax is unequal; therefore unjust. It seemed to me that if the industry was to be obliged to bear that burden, it was not unfair that it should receive some consideration and some benefits under this measure. It was to secure such advantages to the industry that I offered the amendment. Since it was a matter of unanimous agreement, substantially, among the oil people, I did not suppose there would be any serious objection to it.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GORE. I yield.

Mr. HARRISON. I may say that the purposes of the amendment appeal to me. I have thought for a very long time that the oil people ought to get together upon some kind of fair arrangement. One of the troubles with the oil business is that the producers are not willing or are not able to agree. I had thought, when the Senator first approached me on this matter, that the industry was in complete agreement on it. But I am advised that this amendment will precipitate quite a discussion, that at least one other Senator will offer an amendment to it, to broaden the scope of it. I think it is a very good policy in the Senate that these matters should be considered, especially where they are controversial, first by a committee; but in view of the fact that a Senator is ready to offer another amendment, and to talk on the matter, and oppose the adoption of this amendment unless it is broadened, I had hoped that the Senator would let the amendment go to the Committee on Interstate Commerce for consideration.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, we have all heard of the petitioner who asked for an egg and got a scorpion. I think the oil industry may find itself in that situation if it does not accept what is proposed in this amendment. I shall merely allow the matter to go to a viva-voce vote, and not insist upon a yea-and-nay vote. I have done my duty.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, may I say just a word to the Senator from Oklahoma? California, as all know, is deeply interested in the oil question. It is one of the great oil-producing States of the Union. I may say that there is a wide difference of opinion among those interested in the oil industry in California about this measure. I hope sincerely that the Senator will not press the amendment, because I think it ought to go to a committee and be thoroughly considered.

I wanted to say that much, in view of the thought expressed by the Senator from Oklahoma that all the oil people are willing to accept the amendment. They are not, so far as a large part of the California industry is concerned.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, as I stated before, it was my understanding that they were. I talked to Mr. Marland yesterday, and he said this was one thing on which all the oil people agreed. Of course, the Senator from California proves that he was in error. There are those who desire to go further than this amendment would. One independent group desires an embargo, and perhaps some are unwilling to go this far unless an embargo can be attached. I count that out of the realm of possibility at this time. There is another group who desire a dictatorship, and are insisting upon it. That is probably what will come in the place of what I propose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 1, beginning with line 7, the Senator from Iowa moves to strike out all of section 2 and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

That subsections (a) and (c) of section 1001 of title 8 of the Revenue Act of 1932 be and are hereby repealed.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment is to take out of the bill the provision delegating power to the President to do anything he wants to with postal rates, and to repeal the section of the revenue act which increased the rate from 2 cents to 3 cents in 1932. In other words, this would reestablish the old postal rates.

Subsection (a) is as follows:

(a) On and after the thirtieth day after the date of the enactment of this act and until July 1, 1934, the rate of postage on all mail matter of the first class (except postal cards and private mailing or post cards, and except other first-class matter on which the rate of postage under existing law is 1 cent for each ounce or fraction thereof) shall be 1 cent for each ounce or fraction thereof in addition to the rate provided by existing law.

In other words, it simply permits the old law to come back into effect.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DICKINSON. I yield.

Mr. HARRISON. As I understand the Senator's amendment, what he seeks to do is to repeal the drop-letter rate from 3 cents to 2 cents?

Mr. DICKINSON. That is right.

Mr. HARRISON. And to take away the discretionary power that is given to the President herein to increase or lower rates?

Mr. DICKINSON. That is right. Under the provisions of the pending bill, section 2 provides:

Sec. 2. The President is authorized during the period ending June 30, 1934, to proclaim such modifications of postage rates on mail matter (except that in the case of first-class matter the rate shall not be reduced to less than 2 cents an ounce or fraction thereof) as, after a survey by him, he may deem advisable by reason of increase in business, the interests of the public, or the needs of the Postal Service—

And so forth.

In other words, this is a complete delegation of power to the President to do anything he wants to do with practically any class of mail matter, and the only restriction in the bill is that he cannot reduce the rate below 2 cents on first-class mail matter.

As a matter of fact, I think we have gone too far in the delegation of power. About every bill that comes before us provides for a new delegation of power to the President. I was greatly interested in the new independent offices appropriation bill, which has just come over from the House, and to all Senators who have any friends in the Army I want to suggest that they read section 10, on page 56, of House bill 5389, which has just been sent to us. Section 10 reads as follows:

The President is authorized to place on furlough such officers of the Army, Marine Corps, Public Health Service, Coast Guard, or Coast and Geodetic Survey as he, in his discretion, shall deem desirable. While on furlough, officers shall receive one half the pay to which they would otherwise have been entitled, but shall not be entitled to any allowance except for travel to their homes.

As a matter of fact, there has been one delegation of power after another since the 4th of March. I was very much interested in an observation made by Frank Kent in his column in the Baltimore Sun. He said that a good, old-fashioned Democrat told him that the delegations of power to the President reminded him of Christopher Columbus when he came to America, that when he started he did not know where he was going, that when he got here he did not know where he was, and that when he got back home he did not know where he had been. That is about where we are going legislatively in the transfer of legislative power to the Executive.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. DICKINSON. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON. I heard an answer, by a distinguished Senator, to the remark the Senator has just repeated, that Columbus did not know where he was going, and that when he got back he did not know where he had been. The answer of the Senator was, "What has time written of Columbus?"

Mr. DICKINSON. That is very true, but it does not take out of the atmosphere the uncertainty which surrounded him at that time.

Next I want to suggest some of the things we have been doing here recently. In the New York Times of yesterday Arthur Krock made these observations:

HALF OF BILLS TRANSFER POWER

A survey of major legislation passed, passed and signed, or awaiting passage at this session discloses an even division in the number of legislative items which may be classified as either direct lawmaking or transfers to the Executive of the lawmaking power. Of measures passed and signed, or about to be signed, by the President, these were in the form of laws made by Congress itself and for administration without large discretion:

The Copeland bill abolishing the liquor-prescription limitation for doctors.

The Wagner-Robinson bill authorizing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make direct loans to States and municipalities for public works to relieve unemployment.

The Cullen bill legalizing and taxing 3.2 beer, and the companion measure to include the District of Columbia in the privileged area.

The Robinson bill directing Reserve banks to make loans to State banks and trust companies.

The crop loans appropriation bill.

The farm mortgage refinancing provision in the Farm Relief Act.

The Wagner bill providing for a $500,000,000 dole.

MANDATORY MEASURES

Measures still in committee, or not otherwise through the legislative hopper, which are mandatory in character, are these:

The securities bill for the protection of investors.

The Glass banking reform bill.

The Home Mortgage Refinancing Act.

Legislation either passed or certain to be and conferring powers on the President to use or withhold in his discretion, and assigning to him authority usually resident in Congress, follow:

The Emergency Banking Act.

The farm relief bill.

The Thomas amendment to the farm relief bill.

The Economy Act, permitting vast reductions in Government pay and gratuities, and the organization and abolition of Government agencies.

The bill creating the "conservation corps."

The arms embargo.

Measures of the same general character as these, which put virtual legislative authority in the President's hands and are yet awaiting passage, are the following:

The bill to regulate the railroad systems.

The Tennessee Valley Improvement Act.

The bill to mobilize, stimulate, and regulate private industry, including the hours and pay of its labor, and to provide for billions in public works.

WIDE CONTROL IN FOUR PROPOSALS

In the same group with these, but not yet officially sought by the President, can be placed the expected requests for powers to adjust tariffs, make trade agreements with other nations, and to negotiate adjustments of the war debts.

Except for a limited number of private bills, the above is a summary of the legislation of all kinds which has engaged the attention of this session of Congress. The gross score, assuming that all the measures will come to the President and receive his signature, is 11 grants of wide discretionary power and 11 complete and mandatory in themselves. But the delegated authority in 4 measures alone—the farm relief bill, the inflation rider, the Emergency Banking and Economy Acts—far overshadows in the control they give the President over the lives and property of the people all the rest of the acts of this session rolled into one. The delegated authority exceeds also more than Congress has asserted for itself in many sessions.

We are proceeding again in the pending bill to delegate power. Frank Kent in today's issue of the Baltimore Sun writes as follows:

It is not only that the President has planted a professor squarely behind the more important Secretaries, but the Roosevelt program has—or will create a group of Federal officials who constitute a new Cabinet with more power and importance than the combined constitutional Cabinet.

This unofficial cabinet created by Mr. Roosevelt is worth listing again. Here it is:

Farm Administrator.

Industrial Planner.

Railroad Coordinator.

Budget Director.

Public Works Director.

Dole Administrator.

They do not outrank the constitutional Cabinet at the dinner table, but they do in every other way. In a year's time it is going to be hard to remember who really is in the constitutional Cabinet.

In the provision of the bill regarding postal rates we are simply following the same line of giving additional authority to the President. Section 1001 (a) of the existing law I have already shown the Senate simply increased the postal rates on first-class mail matter by 1 cent an ounce. As a matter of fact, what it is proposed to do by this bill—

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Iowa yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. DICKINSON. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. As I understand the Senator's amendment, it not only reduces to 2 cents the postage on drop letters but on all first-class mail?

Mr. DICKINSON. It reduces the postage on all first-class mail.

Mr. BARKLEY. In answer to the Senator from Mississippi I think the Senator was not quite accurate as to the effect of the amendment.

Mr. DICKINSON. As a matter of fact, this amendment, if adopted, would reduce postage on first-class mail matter and put the rate back to its original status of 2 cents an ounce.

Now, I want to suggest to the Senate that the Finance Committee held hearings on this matter, and was shown, as I understand, that the revenues of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year 1932 will be about $588,000,000, and that it is estimated that if the 3-cent rate had not been in effect the revenues would probably have been not in excess of $500,000,000. Some $17,000,000 of that revenue is derived from drop letters, referred to by the Senator from Kentucky, leaving a balance of approximately $17,000,000 to do with first-class mail transported as such. That character of mail, of course, has been the revenue-producing item of the Post Office Service. First-class mail produces a real profit.

As a matter of fact, I know nothing that will be a greater stimulus to business than to go back to the old 2-cent postage rate. We find that in many cases business concerns are no longer using the first-class mail, and they are no longer using it for the reason that, under existing conditions, with labor cheap, they are able to deliver many of the different types of notices which they send out for less money than they can actually deliver them through the mails.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DICKINSON. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. They are still doing business, though. They have simply changed the method of delivery of their messages; they have not curtailed production on account of the 1-cent increase in postage rates. They may not be sending their letters through the mail or delivering whatever it is they deliver through the mail, but they are still engaged in business and employing some other method of delivery. Is that true?

Mr. DICKINSON. They are engaged in business, but I do not know of a single, solitary business in which there is not a curtailment of turnover. I do not ascribe that curtailment to the increase in postage.

Mr. BARKLEY. No.

Mr. DICKINSON. But it is simply one of the items of overhead which every business concern has to take into consideration.

There are two phases of this question that I think should be considered. In the first place, there is no reason why we should delegate power to the President to adjust postal rates. If the rates are too high, we ought to know enough about the matter to lower them. If they are not too high, we ought not to have this provision in the bill at all; the rates ought to be permitted to stay where they are. There is no reason why the Congress should not make such survey as may be necessary to reach a conclusion in this matter and then to reach a conclusion in its own right.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DICKINSON. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the rate shall not be reduced, either on first-class postage entirely or on drop letters, as has been suggested, until Congress makes a survey to determine whether the Post Office Department can stand the reduction, the chances are there will be no reduction in the near future, certainly not until the next session of Congress. Does not the Senator think if the President by making a survey can ascertain that at any time between now and the reassembling of Congress there can be a reduction and that he ought to have the power to bring it about?

Mr. DICKINSON. I do not agree with that at all.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is not contemplated that there will be any increase; it is contemplated only that there will be a decrease.

Mr. DICKINSON. But by the testimony taken by the Finance Committee it was shown that the President would have the right to increase particularly second-class matter.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course he would have the right to do it.

Mr. DICKINSON. He could increase rates or he could decrease them, the only limitation being that he may not decrease first-class mail rates below 2 cents an ounce.

What I have in mind is this: All the data and all the experience under the 3-cent rate are available and there is no reason why Congress should say that somebody else shall review this situation. We ourselves have a right to review it, and the proper legislation could be presented here. There is no reason why this power should be delegated. I believe that our experience under the 3-cent rate has been the reverse of what was expected. It was estimated that the increase in revenues would approximately be $135,000,000, but, as a matter of fact, there has been a slump in the Post Office Department in practically every avenue of income. That is due to a curtailment of business. Now, we are reaching the place where we ought to do those things which will encourage business. I believe that now is the proper time; that we can just as well repeal the present rate and restore the original rate, and that, by so doing, at the end of the fiscal year 1934, which is the limitation of the act, we will be far ahead, so far as revenues are concerned, than if we permit to remain in force the rate provided by existing law.

That is the reason why I have presented this amendment. I believe that it is in line with the action which should be taken in order to encourage business; and I know that the mail item is one of the real important items in many of the business concerns of this country. For that reason I believe that we ought to adopt the old rate and face the adjustments that may be necessary. In that way, if you please, we will, I think, be able to put the Government in a position where additional revenues will come in.

I find that many concerns have quit using the mails for certain types of circularizing; they have quit using the mails on account of the extra 1 cent per ounce postage. That being the case, I believe we should afford an encouragement to those who are using the mails, and for that reason I have offered the amendment.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator from Iowa has offered an amendment to substitute certain language for section 2. Would it be in order, before his amendment is considered, to offer an amendment to perfect the language of section 2?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Such an amendment would be in order.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Then I want to submit an amendment. It seems to me that the vice of the postal section is that it permits the President to increase rates as well as decrease them, although it is persistently said that there is no intention to increase rates. Therefore, Mr. President, I am asking the Senator from Mississippi for his reaction to the suggestion that in line 8, page 1, the word "modifications" be stricken out and the word "reductions" inserted, so that it will read:

The President is authorized during the period ending June 30, 1934, to proclaim such reductions of postage rates.

And so forth.

If it is not the purpose, Mr. President, to use a power to increase rates, the power to increase them should certainly not be created.

Mr. HARRISON. I have not said that the power is not granted by the bill to increase as well as to reduce postal rates. It may be that on certain class matter there should be an increase of rates. That is why the word "modifications", instead of the word "reductions", was placed in the provision. There is no denying the fact that the power is given to the President during the time specified to increase or reduce these rates, the only two limitations being those which I pointed out yesterday.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator was absent from the Chamber when the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] said a moment ago, without any reservation or equivocation, that there is no intention to use any power under this amendment to increase any rates.

Mr. HARRISON. Probably it is true that there is no such intention at this time, but the power is granted here to increase rates on certain matter.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is what I am objecting to.

Mr. HARRISON. Some of us have voted for increased rates on certain classes of mail matter in the past, but the proposal was not adopted. I can imagine certain mail matter that ought to bear a little increase in rates.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I would be quite happy in some instances to vote for increased postage rates where justified, but it occurs to me that to give any one man the power to increase second-class mail rates in the United States, those rates being so directly related to the existence in many instances of the press of the Nation, would virtually be a circumscription of the free press, for it would put the power in the hands of one man to dictate the destiny of the press. I am perfectly sure that such a proposition is not defensible.

Furthermore, it seems to me, if the power to increase rates is eliminated, that all objection to the delegation of power disappears, because there can be no objection to the delegation of a power which is to be exercised to the advantage and in behalf of a reduced charge upon the people.

Mr. President, I move to substitute the word "reductions" for the word "modifications" in line 8, on page 1.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President, before a vote is taken on the amendment I want to invite attention to subsection (c) which I also include in my amendment. Subsection (c) provides that 85 percent of the gross postal receipts during the period of the increased rate of postage provided in subsection (a) shall be counted for the purpose of determining the classes of postmasters and their compensation. As a matter of fact, it was expected that the increase in rates would result in an increase in revenue. It has been disappointing all along the line in that respect, and many of the postmasters have found that instead of getting only the usual percentage reduction they have had the regular percentage of reduction as provided in the Economy Act and on top of that there has been taken off 15 percent of their revenues before the computation was begun to determine what their salaries would be.

My amendment would correct that situation, which is wholly due to the fact that there has been no increase in revenues in practically any of the post offices of the country. In other words, 1932 as compared to 1931 has shown a decrease in revenues, so that the average postmaster not only had his revenue cut under the Economy Act, but found that 15 percent of the gross returns of his office were deducted before the Department began computing his salary. That is the reason for including subsection (c).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Michigan. [Putting the question.] The "noes" seem to have it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum before the vote is announced.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	Hayden	Reynolds
Ashurst	Coolidge	Johnson	Robinson, Ark.
Austin	Costigan	Kean	Robinson, Ind.
Bachman	Couzens	Kendrick	Russell
Ballley	Cutting	Keyes	Schall
Bankhead	Dale	King	Sheppard
Barbour	Dickinson	La Follette	Shipstead
Barkley	Dieterich	Logan	Steiwer
Black	Dill	Loneragan	Stephens
Bone	Duffy	Long	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Erickson	McCarran	Thomas, Utah
Bratton	Fess	McGill	Townsend
Brown	Fletcher	McKellar	Trammell
Buikley	Frazier	McNary	Tydings
Bulow	George	Metcalf	Vandenberg
Byrd	Glass	Murphy	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Goldsbrough	Neely	Walsh
Capper	Gore	Nye	Wheeler
Caraway	Hale	Overton	White
Carey	Harrison	Pope
Clark	Hatfield	Reed

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair). Eighty-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I want briefly to restate the issue. Section 2 of the pending bill proposes to delegate to the President the power to increase or decrease postage rates. The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] stated a few moments ago upon the floor that there is absolutely no intention or purpose to use the power to increase postage rates.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. My remark was made in connection with the amendment of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON] with reference to postage rates on first-class matter. I have no way of knowing what may be done with reference to the entire mail situation, but I do understand that it is not contemplated by anyone that there will be any increase over the present rates on first-class mail matter. I do not know what will happen as to the other classes of mail. I have no information one way or the other on that question.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Very well. That further limits and identifies the menace in the language as it exists.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, what the Senator from Michigan is trying to do is to give authority to the President only to decrease rates, is it not?

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is all the amendment would permit him to do.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I want to suggest to the Senator that in my judgment, after many years of service on the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, the present rate of 3 cents on first-class mail matter is bringing in less revenue than the 2-cent rate did, notwithstanding the reports from the Department. If that is so, it is perfectly clear that the President will never increase that rate.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Of course there is no question about that, but if it is not intended to increase rates I submit that when we create a delegation of power we should not include a power which it is not contemplated shall be used. This power, we are now told, might be used to increase second-class rates. Perhaps second-class rates ought to be raised, but if they should be raised they ought to be raised by order of the Congress of the United States, because second-class rates are directly and specifically related to the existence of a free press in the United States, and the power to control the postage rates in respect to publications and newspapers in the United States may well be a complete control over their very existence.

I submit that no matter how much other power we may delegate in this strange hour that has fallen upon us, there can never be any excuse for delegating a power which relates specifically to the existence of a free constitutional press in the United States. We are now told, I repeat, that there is little or no expectation that this power will be used to increase rates. Therefore I have moved, on page 1, line 8, to substitute the word "reductions" for the word "modifications" so that we are permitting the President to reduce the postal schedule in any fashion that he concludes the conditions shall warrant, but declining to permit him, without any survey, without any check on the part of Congress, to increase postage rates, which are the very essence of a tax, and therefore which would be the subletting of a power to increase taxation of the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG].

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I merely desire to say that this whole matter was considered by the committee; and the committee thought it was wise to give this power for this year to the President, so that he might increase the rate on second-class matter if he wanted to, or on first-class matter if he desired to, as well as to reduce it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment, Mr. President.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BULOW (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. McKELLAR (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND] to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. METCALF (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], and therefore withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LOGAN. I have a pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS], who is absent. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. DALE. I have a pair with the junior Senator from California [Mr. McADOO], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I desire to announce that the Senator from Iowa [Mr. MURPHY] and the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK] are detained from the Senate on official business.

Mr. FESS. I desire to announce that the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT] and the Senators from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS and Mr. TOWNSEND], if present, would vote "yea" on this question.

I also desire to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS] with the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND];

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT] with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS]; and

The roll call resulted—yeas 37, nays 37, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On the amendment of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] the yeas are 37, and the nays are 37. The amendment is lost.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Where is the Vice President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair cannot inform the Senator.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the Vice President is at a Cabinet meeting, attending to his duties.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I desire to observe that the conduct of the Senator from Pennsylvania is rather remarkable. Evidently his remark could only have been intended to cast some reflection upon the absence of the Vice President. For my own part, I wish to express my hearty resentment at the conduct of the Senator from Pennsylvania.

I recall what I suppose he has in mind—the conduct of the Vice President of his own party some years ago when the Senate was passing on a very important nomination, that of an Attorney General, and Vice President Dawes not only was not in the chair but was down in the Willard Hotel asleep. It was never known why he chose that particular hour for his slumber.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator will remember that that sleep enabled the Democrats and Progressives to defeat the nominee for Attorney General.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am very glad, indeed, for my part, that the Vice President was asleep, because his conduct assisted the Senator from Idaho and a number of other Senators to defeat a nomination which ought to have been defeated and which was defeated.

Mr. DALE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield to the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. DALE. The Senator will also recall that that sleep enabled Vermont to get an Attorney General.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am very happy to know that Vermont was able to get an Attorney General. Mr. Sargent was a vast improvement over the man whose name was pending before the Senate at the time, and whose confirmation was being considered.

I desire to take this occasion, however, to say that the Senator from Pennsylvania ought to know that the Vice President is frequently in the chair; that he gives his attention to the public business; that he is a wise and able counselor of the administration; that he attends Cabinet meetings; and, as suggested by the Senator from Mississippi, that he is probably now in a Cabinet meeting endeavoring to bring this country out of the doldrums.

For my part, I want to express my hearty disapproval of the apparent effort of the Senator from Pennsylvania to cast some slur upon or make some insinuation regarding the Vice President by reason of the fact that he is temporarily not in the chair.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, perhaps too much note should not be taken of the very unusual, and I think unethical, conduct of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] in making the inquiry as to where the Vice President now is. It is a species of humor that the Senator from Pennsylvania does himself no credit when he indulges.

Senators themselves frequently find it necessary to be absent from the Chamber during the proceedings of the Senate. The Senator from Pennsylvania, with all his remarkable powers and abilities, finds himself in that situation. I cannot recall that any of his colleagues ever implied neglect of duty on his part when he failed to present himself during the meetings of the Senate.

The matter has an amusing aspect, however—that the Senator from Pennsylvania should assume to dictate to the Vice President as to the manner in which the Vice President shall perform his duties.

With that remark, Mr. President, I conclude, with the suggestion that perhaps the Senator from Pennsylvania would not like always to have it disclosed where he is when he happens to be absent from the Chamber. [Laughter.] The Vice President of the United States is engaged in the performance of his duties; and he, not the Senator from Pennsylvania, is the judge of when and how he shall perform his duties.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, not to prolong this unhappy subject—because I realize that I have caused great pain to a number of my friends—I only want to recall to our minds the fact that it was considered extremely amusing when poems were put in the RECORD regarding the efforts of Vice President Dawes to get here in time for a vote. There was not a face on the other side of the aisle that did not show the utmost happiness. As a matter of taste, it seemed to be unanimously thought there that it was in the best of taste to ridicule the Vice President to his face, to put in the poem about "Dawes' Ride", written after the fashion of "Paul Revere's Ride", because that Vice President was trying to get here to vote.

Perhaps at this moment traffic is being tied up on Pennsylvania Avenue by the efforts of the present Vice President to get here to cast his vote. I do not know. If so, it is very much to the credit of the Vice President.

In matters of taste I am a stupid person, and I must confess that I have merely followed the lead of my distinguished friends on the other side of the aisle when I have called attention to the fact that the vote on this amendment was a tie, and under the Constitution the Vice President had power to vote. He has never had it before since he took office. This is the first time the vote in the Senate has been a tie, the first time the Vice President was qualified under the Constitution to cast his vote and show the American people how he felt. If I have transgressed good taste in calling attention to his absence, I am very sorry; but, as I say, I have merely followed the example set by my friends on the other side.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, when the Senator from Pennsylvania with pride confesses his own stupidity in making the suggestion which he did make I am entirely content to let the matter rest. [Laughter.]

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I want to make a very remarkable statement: that the Senator from Pennsylvania for once is inaccurate in an assertion. The parliamentary clerk advises me that this is not the first time a tie vote has occurred since the present Vice President has been the Presiding Officer of this body. On a former occasion that situation occurred, and we heard no outburst from the Senator from Pennsylvania. Probably he was absent on that occasion.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. CONNALLY. Certainly.

Mr. REED. I think perhaps I was inaccurate. As I recall it, there was another time, and the Vice President was here and did not vote. Is that correct?

Mr. CONNALLY. I assume that is correct. I accept the statement of the Senator from Pennsylvania. I do not know how the Vice President voted. The parliamentary clerk advises me, however, that this is not the first incident, and that is why I was challenging the statement of the Senator from Pennsylvania. He now amends his statement, and says there was another time, about which he now knows, and that the Vice President did not vote.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. GLASS. If my recollection is accurate, there was a tie vote on the roll call on the Thomas amendment, and the Vice President did vote. The Senator from California [Mr. McAdoo] undertook to change his vote in order to prevent the Vice President from deciding the question, but the Vice President would not let him do it. [Laughter.]

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

Mr. CONNALLY. I want to say to Senators on the other side who are crying "vote!", that I regard it as not in keeping with the practice or as showing courtesy due Senators, to interrupt a Senator without getting permission of the Chair. I do not expect to consume much of the time of the Senate, but while I am on this subject I want to say a few more things.

I thank the Senator from Virginia for contributing the information that he has given with reference to the vote which was a tie. The Senator from Pennsylvania simply thought he saw an opportunity to make some unfavorable comment upon the Vice President, veiled under a pleasantry or humor. The Vice President knows his duty and performs his duty. The only difference between the cases was that the Senator's Vice President was asleep. Our Vice President was on the job, doing his duty. The Senator from Pennsylvania now infers that probably the Vice President is in a traffic jam and cannot get here. Neither the Vice President nor the Senator from Pennsylvania himself probably knew an hour ago that the amendment of the Senator from Michigan was to be offered. Few Senators knew half an hour ago that there was to be a roll call on it. So I think the Senator from Pennsylvania is wholly unwarranted in bringing about the inferences and the deductions which he seems intent upon making here at this time.

The Senator from Arkansas referred to the effort of the Senator from Pennsylvania as "humor." I think the Senator from Arkansas was extremely generous in his appraisal of the conduct and of the language of the Senator from Pennsylvania by that designation.

Mr. President, I think it ill behooves a Senator to criticize the discharge of duty by the Presiding Officer of this body. Senators have enough duties of their own, if they will give proper attention to them, and I commend that rule to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I move that the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Michigan was rejected be reconsidered.

Mr. HARRISON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] moves to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] to reconsider the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] was rejected.

Mr. LONG. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BULOW (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as on the previous roll call, I withhold my vote.

Mr. LEWIS (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT]. Not knowing how he would vote, I merely announce the pair.

Mr. LOGAN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and vote "yea."

Mr. McKELLAR (when his name was called). On this vote I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND], and withhold my vote.

Mr. METCALF (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. KENDRICK. Mr. President, I wish to announce the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS] and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] are detained on official business.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I wish to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS] with the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND];

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT] with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS]; and

The result was—yeas 39, nays 38, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote the yeas are 39 and the nays are 38, so the motion of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] is agreed to.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, merely for the sake of the accuracy of the RECORD, I want to call attention to the fact that the vote mentioned by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] a little while ago is recorded at page 1943 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. On reference to that page one sees at once that there was a tie vote; that the Vice President was here, and that he did not vote.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, in fact he did vote, because the Senator from California mistakenly voted on the wrong side of the question and tried to right himself, but the Vice President would not permit him to do so, and actually the action of the Vice President in not permitting him to do it decided the question.

SUBSTITUTION OF CONFEREES ON SECURITIES BILL

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, conferees were appointed on House bill No. 5480, which is known as "the securities bill." The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK], who was one of the conferees designated, has been compelled to leave the city, and informed me that he would be away for some days. So I ask the Presiding Officer to name another conferee in his place.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered; and the Chair designates the Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND] to serve as a conferee in the place of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK].

PLAN FOR THE RELIEF OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, several weeks ago the junior Senator from the State of Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] delivered a very able address and presented an unusually splendid argument in favor of stamp money. I have just observed in the columns of the magazine Liberty of the issue of May 13 an editorial interesting itself in that particular subject, and at this time I ask unanimous consent that it may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From Liberty, May 13, 1933]

A PLAN TO PUT MILLIONS TO WORK WITHOUT COST TO THE GOVERNMENT

Governmental improvements can be made with the help of literally millions of workers without expense to the Government if the plan presented by Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale is approved by the Washington legislators.

Already Professor Fisher's plan has the enthusiastic support of Representative PETTENGILL, of Indiana, and Senator BANKHEAD, of Alabama. They have introduced a bill in the Senate to make this idea work to the advantage of the host of unemployed. The plan has been presented in detail in Senate bill 5674 and House bill 14757, authorizing the United States Government to issue up to $1,000,000,000 in stamped money certificates of $1 denomination.

Every Wednesday for 52 consecutive weeks a 2-cent postage stamp must be affixed by the holder on the back of the certificate. When fully stamped this certificate is to be redeemable by the Treasury with other lawful money of the United States. This makes the entire issue fully self-liquidating within 1 year, with a profit to the Government of $40,000,000 on a billion-dollar issue.

Stamps to the value of $1.04 in 52 weeks would have to be affixed to each certificate. Therefore, on every bill there would be a gross profit of 4 cents to the Government.

The special advantage of this plan is that hoarding becomes expensive. A dollar's value is reduced by 2 cents every week it is retained.

This money could be furnished to the various States pro rata in accordance with their population for only one purpose, and that is public improvements of various kinds. It could not be used in competitive trade except when it had been spent by workers who had secured it in the form of wages.

As a means of lowering taxes and furnishing employment for millions of unemployed it offers interesting possibilities. Everywhere throughout the country there are public improvements which have been delayed because of the lack of funds. This money could be furnished to the various States without cost, and paid out to the workers, who would have to spend it promptly to secure its full value.

It would be valid for every purpose if the stamps due at the time have been affixed thereon. If these bills were deposited in banks, 2 cents would be assessed for each dollar deposited.

Two weeks after this money had been issued by the Federal Government the weekly payment of 2 cents would begin. To make the affixing of stamps convenient, ordinary postage could be used.

This is indeed a revolutionary idea—but these are revolutionary times. We have not given the plan sufficient study to support it in every detail, but it is certainly worth careful consideration.

The plans for the "peace army" which our President is now forming need not be held up for the lack of funds if this plan is adopted. In every town and city in the United States millions of the unemployed could be put to work without cost to the taxpayers.

Relief organizations everywhere are bitterly complaining about the financial shortage. The various sources which they have previously used for replenishing their treasuries have in many instances been entirely exhausted. Such a plan would provide employment for all those whom they are now supporting in idleness.

Some people might term this a sales tax, as it represents a 2-percent payment for each week the money is retained; but these bills would probably change hands several times a week, and on Tuesdays there would doubtless be an orgy of spending on the part of holders.

At this time, when spending is so greatly restricted, there would be no complaint on that score. This money would simply be a temporary measure; it would have to be used during one year. It might furnish relief that is appallingly needed at this time and help us over the hard places that we have inherited from the depression.

If you think this plan is worthy of support, do your part. Write the Senator from your district, urging him to support this bill. Or a letter to Representative PETTENGILL or Senator BANKHEAD commending them for their interest in this legislation would be helpful.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the bill (S. 7) providing for the suspension of annual assessment work on mining claims held by location in the United States and Alaska.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5390) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1933, and June 30, 1934, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. BUCHANAN, Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, Mr. AYRES of Kansas, Mr. TABER, and Mr. BACON were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

EXTENSION OF GASOLINE TAX

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President, the pending amendment simply provides, instead of giving the President the power to modify postal rates, that we repeal the provision of law increasing postal rates and go back to the old 2-cent rate. It is my hope we may have the yeas and nays on the amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. I merely desire to say that, while the amendment takes away this power, at the same time it will take away from the Government $80,000,000 in revenue which will be lost in postage on first-class mail matter, and the Treasury cannot stand that reduction.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON].

Mr. DICKINSON. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LOGAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. McKELLAR (when his name was called). On this vote I am paired with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. METCALF (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], and therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LEWIS. I wish to announce my general pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT].

I also desire to announce the general pair of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BULOW] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT].

I also desire to announce the following general pair on this question, the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. PATTERSON].

Mr. FESS. I desire to announce the general pair of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS] with the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND].

I also desire to state that I am advised that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND], and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT], if present, would vote "yea" on the pending amendment.

The result was—yeas 30, nays 46, as follows:

So Mr. DICKINSON's amendment was rejected.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I inquire whether, upon recapitulation, it is not disclosed at the desk that the vote upon the motion to table the motion to reconsider was 39 to 39, instead of 39 to 38?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that through a mistake upon the part of the tally clerk the vote should have been announced as 39 to 39, and the motion to table was, therefore, lost.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In other words, it was another tie vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question, therefore, recurs upon the motion of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] to reconsider the vote whereby the amendment of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] was rejected.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask for the yeas and nays on that motion.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. FESS. Is this vote on the motion to reconsider?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The vote is on the motion of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] to reconsider the vote whereby the amendment of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] was rejected.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. METCALF (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS]. Therefore I withhold my vote.

Mr. METCALF. I find that I can transfer my pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] to the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK], which I do, and vote "yea."

Mr. LEWIS. I desire to announce that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BULOW] has a general pair with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT].

I also desire to announce the following pair on this question, the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. PATTERSON].

Mr. FESS. I desire to announce the following general pairs:

So the motion to reconsider the vote whereby Mr. VANDENBERG's amendment was rejected was not agreed to.

THIRD DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair) laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5390) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1933, and June 30, 1934, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. BRATTON. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, that it agree to the conference asked for by the other House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER appointed Mr. BRATTON, Mr. GLASS, Mr. McKELLAR, Mr. HALE, and Mr. KEYES conferees on the part of the Senate.

EXTENSION OF GASOLINE TAX

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes.

Mr. LONG obtained the floor.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment which brings squarely before the Senate the question of whether we want a 2-cent rate or a 3-cent rate on first-class mail matter. I do not think it will take very much time to dispose of it. Will the Senator from Louisiana yield to me for that purpose?

Mr. LONG. I suggest to the Senator from Florida that we have had 2 or 3 pretty definite votes on that question.

Mr. TRAMMELL. We have not had any votes on the definite question as to whether the first-class rate shall be 2 cents or 3 cents. There has been no direct and definite vote on it. I am willing to submit it without any argument whatever if it is agreeable at this time.

Mr. LONG. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, there has been a vote taken that related, I believe, directly to that question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Florida proposes, on page 1, line 10, to strike out the words "not to be reduced to less than" and insert in lieu thereof the word "be", so as to read, "except that in the case of first-class matter the rate shall be 2 cents an ounce or fraction thereof."

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, the amendment provides that it is the view of the Senate and of the Congress that the rate on first-class matter shall be fixed at 2 cents an ounce instead of leaving it to the discretion of the President to change the rate as he may see fit. I mean no reflection on the President, but I think it is generally conceded among Senators and Representatives that the rate should be reduced. The Postmaster General has said that it should be reduced, so why should not Congress take definite action in the matter and specify in this bill that it shall be reduced to 2 cents an ounce?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Postmaster General has not stated that the rate ought to be reduced at this time, but merely as soon as increased revenues will permit. I do not think the Senator meant to convey that impression. Of course, we all know that the rates ought to be reduced as soon as possible, but the Postmaster General has not advocated a reduction in this rate at this moment.

Mr. TRAMMELL. According to the publicity given the matter, that would seem to be his opinion. There have been many stories or statements in the newspapers and the moving pictures have depicted him in favor of this reduction.

Mr. BARKLEY. We have had representatives of the Post Office Department and the Postmaster General before us, and they made statements with reference to the matter. I do not know what newspaper stories have been carried about it, but I have seen no stories that indicate that the President and the Postmaster General feel that the reduction should be made now. We all hope it may be reduced as soon as the revenues will permit.

Mr. TRAMMELL. It was stated in the newspapers why it should be done, and I see no reason why it should not be done. The stories I read would seem to indicate the approval of the Postmaster General. He was portrayed in the movies in favor of making this order and was shown having the transformation made from a 3-cent stamp to a 2-cent stamp. In that way I got the distinct impression that he is willing it should be done. But whether he is convinced or not on that subject, I am convinced that the rate should be reduced from 3 cents to 2 cents, and therefore I should like to have the Senate vote definitely on the question.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I shall delay the Senate but a moment. The Postmaster General has never made the statement that he is in favor of reducing the first-class postage rate from 3 cents to 2 cents. He has recommended and is in favor of reducing the rate on drop letters from 3 cents to 2 cents, and expressed the hope that when we have a revival of business we may reduce the rate on first-class mail matter the country over, but he has never recommended a reduction from 3 cents to 2 cents on all first-class matter at this time.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, is it not a fact that the testimony was that even by reducing the postage on drop letters we would lose $17,000,000 of revenue?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes. Unless there is a tremendous revival of business, we will lose $17,000,000 by this reduction of the postage on drop letters, according to Mr. Graves. According to Mr. Woods, who was before the Ways and Means Committee, we will lose $9,000,000. If the amendment of the Senator from Florida should be adopted, reducing the general first-class rate from 3 cents to 2 cents, the Government would lose $80,000,000 of revenue. We cannot stand that loss at this time, and I hope sincerely the amendment will be rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I now offer for consideration the amendment which I asked on yesterday to have printed and lie on the table. I suggest that the amendment need not be read. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment may be printed in the RECORD in lieu of being read at this time and that we may proceed to its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DUFFY in the chair). Is there objection?

Mr. COUZENS. I object.

Mr. LONG. Then I ask that the amendment be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the amendment for the information of the Senate.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read the amendment.

During the reading—

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, I objected to the unanimous-consent request of the Senator from Louisiana that his amendment be printed in the RECORD without reading. I did not know the nature of the amendment at the time. I withdraw any objection I had to waiving the reading of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment will be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. LONG's amendment is to add, at the proper place, the following new sections:

LIMITATION OF FORTUNES—SPREADING WEALTH AMONG THE MASSES

MR. LONG. Mr. President, I have prepared for the Senate's ready observation some charts undertaking to detail by hieroglyphics and symbols the present situation that has developed, requiring legislation such as I have offered by this amendment.

I have here a chart, Mr. President and gentlemen of the Senate, purporting to show the condition of the wealth of America year by year, particularly as accentuated since the year 1907. I have drawn here two triangles, one standing on the angle and the other on the base. The word "prosperity" here should read "property." That is an error by the printer. I am showing by this illustration that year by year a smaller percentage of the people of the United States have come into the ownership of a larger percentage of the property.

In other words, back in 1907 the plutocratic element of America, the concentrated owning class, comprised, we will say, 7 or 8 or, perhaps, 9 percent, owning something like 50 percent of the wealth. That was in 1907.

In 1916 that plutocratic class had concentrated to a point where 2 percent of the people owned 60 percent of the wealth.

In 1930 that had concentrated to such an extent that the same percentage of the wealth—around 60 percent—was owned by 1 percent of the people.

In 1931 and 1932 our present President, Franklin Roosevelt, analyzed these figures as to the growing concentration of wealth.

MR. BORAH. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator what authority he has for those figures?

MR. LONG. I am going to give the authority. For the figures of 1916 I have the authority of the Industrial Relations Committee report.

MR. BORAH. The reason I ask the question is because there has been so much dispute about the figures.

MR. LONG. I will give the authority, then, before I proceed further.

There are very meager figures for the year 1907. We know that in 1907 President Theodore Roosevelt summed up in a general way a particular estimate that he had at that time, and deplored the condition in about these words—that there had arisen a condition of concentration of wealth in America that was gradually becoming so alarming that the Congress of America would have to provide by law against any one person's being allowed to transfer an immense fortune to an heir in the years to come, to prevent that calamity of concentration from destroying America and its institutions.

Answering the Senator from Idaho, in 1916 a report was made by the Industrial Relations Committee, based upon statistics at that time, reporting that the wealth of America was owned as follows:

Two percent of the people owned 60 percent of the wealth.

Thirty-three percent of the people owned 35 percent of the wealth.

Sixty-five percent of the people owned 5 percent of the wealth.

They concluded with the warning that a little city with a population less than that of Chicago owned more of the wealth of the Nation than the other 108,000,000 people, or as the census was at that time.

In 1931 I produced here in the Senate the report of the Federal Trade Commission in which they showed from such estimates as they had been able to make of the decedents, that 59 percent of the wealth was in the hands of 1 percent of the people. I fortified that by another review.

In the year 1916—September 23, 1916—the Saturday Evening Post undertook to make an editorial survey based upon the statistics obtainable from the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and estimated that this country had finally worked itself into "a bloated plutocracy comprising, it said, 1 percent of the population lording it over a starveling horde, with a very thin margin of well-to-do in between"; but in 1930, according to the Federal Trade Commission's statistics, 1 percent of the people in the United States owned 59 percent of the wealth.

We have the statistics furnished us by President Roosevelt, before he had been nominated in Chicago and after he had been nominated in Chicago, in which he pointed to the striking fact that some six hundred and odd corporations in America were in absolute control of the economic and industrial lives and fortunes of this country.

I have submitted in the RECORD here, in the course of several speeches I have made on this and kindred subjects, the statistics of various and sundry concerns, showing the monopoly that has gradually progressed in controlling such industries as rubber, automobiles, banking, copper, telephones, steel, and all such industries of major importance, to the point that there is practically an entire control of the industries of this country today in the hands of relatively few men.

Mr. President, our calculations, based upon such figures as the American Federation of Labor has been able to assemble, and based upon such figures as our departments have been able to reach, and upon such as have been reported by the rating agencies, are these:

That beginning in the year 1927 there were 435 business institutions closing their doors every day. In other words, the chain grocery stores, chain banks, and chain drug stores had reached such a point of control that beginning with the year 1927 and the year 1928 an average of 435 independent business places went out of existence every day until the crash finally came on in the year 1929. There was not any doubt that we were on our way to a crash sometime around 1929 or before that time. We had reached a point where no such thing as an independent business could survive under the concentrated fortunes existing at that time; so much so that it became a well-known, undisputed fact that no such thing was possible as an independent business that could be organized with any reasonable chance of thriving under the economic concentration existing at that time.

Inasmuch as the Senator from Michigan [Mr. COUZENS] has withdrawn his demand for the reading in full of the amendment which I have proposed, I wish to state, before proceeding further, just what the amendment provides.

I take the existing schedules applying on income taxes and, beginning with the tax on incomes amounting to $300,000, I gradually scale them up until, when we reach a net income of $1,000,000, exclusive of taxes and of interest, there is no such thing allowed to any one man as an earning in excess of $1,000,000 a year. I take the income taxes from a net income of $300,000 and scale them up to the point that when an income of $1,000,000 net is realized in 1 year by one man he is not allowed any further income, but the balance goes to the Treasury of the United States. That is the first provision.

The second provision of the amendment is this: I take the present inheritance taxes and I scale them up to the point that when a man has inherited $5,000,000, or has received that much in gifts, no one heir, no one child, no one person is allowed to inherit more than $5,000,000 that he never did a lick of work to earn in his lifetime.

I allow one man to earn $1,000,000 a year. I allow one child to inherit $5,000,000 without doing a lick of work to get it. Then all that is in excess of $1,000,000 a year in income goes to the United States Government, and all that is in excess of $5,000,000 in inheritances, goes to the United States Government.

Now I come to the last part of this bill which I have offered as an amendment to the pending revenue bill.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. BORAH. I understand that the Senator's amendment first proposes to put a limit upon incomes of $1,000,000 a year.

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir; a very drastic provision of the law.

Mr. BORAH. Secondly, he proposes, however, that a person may inherit $5,000,000.

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir.

Mr. BORAH. With all due deference to the Senator's proposal, it seems to me that ought to be turned around; that a man ought not to be permitted to inherit five times as much as he may earn by his efforts.

Mr. LONG. No; in 1 year. He is allowed to earn $1,000,000 in 1 year.

Mr. BORAH. He inherits in 1 year.

Mr. LONG. Well, it might be said that he inherits it in a minute, if you restrict it to that time. I allow him total inheritances of $5,000,000 in a lifetime.

I want to say to the Senator that I think these figures are too high in both brackets. I do not think any one man ought to be allowed to inherit $5,000,000. I do not think any one man ought to be allowed to earn, exclusive of all interest, taxes, and costs, that much, or to inherit $5,000,000; but this is more or less in line with the policy of the law. We have not been so heavy on the inheritances as we should have been; and I may say to the Senator that to some extent I am following the Napoleonic law on that subject. I come from a State where that is the law. I am to some extent following in the path of the Napoleonic Code, and I am further undertaking to give to the Congress a scale of rates that will cause sufficient distribution of wealth without crippling the initiative of any one particular person.

In other words, take Mr. Morgan and Mr. Vanderbilt and Mr. Mellon. They will leave at their death, we will say, fortunes of several hundred million dollars; it might be $300,000,000; it might be a billion dollars. It has been estimated in good times that some of these men owned amounts reaching up to a billion dollars or more. If Mr. Mellon, for instance, should die today, and we will say that he had five children, and left a billion dollars in wealth, he could give to each one of those children $5,000,000 at his death. That would mean that $25,000,000 would be inherited by the five Mellon children, if there were that many. That would then mean that $975,000,000 would go into the Treasury of the United States Government. That would mean that we would not have restricted the fortunes or the lives or the activities of the sons and daughters of the well-to-do. We would have allowed them more money than they could spend in their lifetime or reasonably use in their lifetime. We would not deprive them of a luxury on the face of the earth. We would not stifle them in any ambition, regardless of what might be the particular glory or satisfaction they were undertaking to accomplish; but we would put into the Treasury of the United States, when a billion-dollar fortune fell to inheritance, $975,000,000, and allow inheritances not to exceed $5,000,000 to each child.

Mr. President, this is not a revolutionary matter. It is nothing new. We have known, if we know anything at all, that this country cannot survive with the present set-up, by which concentration is not only encouraged but is practically forced under the present system of laws. We not only should have known—we could not have known to the contrary—that we cannot continue to allow a smaller percentage of the people to own a greater percentage of the wealth without reaching the exact condition which President Roosevelt says the country will reach; that is to say, in the language of President Roosevelt, that we are only a few years away from the time when less than 100 men will own and control and dictate everything in the United States.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. I understood, from the figures read by the Senator, that his figures disclose the startling fact that 1 percent of the people of the United States own 59 percent of its wealth.

Mr. LONG. From the best figures the Federal Trade Commission could supply.

Mr. BORAH. What the Senator has in view is a redistribution of the wealth of the United States?

Mr. LONG. Yes.

Mr. BORAH. But if the Senator takes the illustration of the Mellon estate, of which he was speaking, and distributes $25,000,000 among the children, and the balance of it goes into the Treasury of the United States, how is it going to reach that 59 percent which we want to distribute?

Mr. LONG. It is very easy to reach. I am glad the Senator asked that question. I will come to it. It is so simple that I think before I answer it, the Senator will not require an answer.

We will relieve 99 percent of the people from having to contribute the $975,000,000 that will be contributed by the plutocracy. That is one way. We will build up the country, the rivers and harbors, pay off debts for the wars, or what not, all will be supported, and the money thus gathered into the Treasury will naturally be diffused for the various purposes of Government and out to all the people.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. President, we would have funds, then, too, to provide for the national defense.

Mr. LONG. Yes; we not only would have funds to provide for the national defense, but the soldiers' bonus would not have to be delayed, we would not have to enact an economy bill, we would not have to be talking about a sales tax, we would be gathering the money into the United States Treasury and diffusing it for roads, for schools, for farm relief, for hospitals, for rivers and harbors, for soldiers and for sailors, for pensions, for the unemployed, for every kind of activity, the guaranty-of-bank deposits, including, if we might say so, sufficient funds to enable the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to finance the railroads, anything we needed to do; so much so that, according to the estimates which I have made, we would have enough money contributed by the 1 percent of the population of this country in a period of 15 years, at the most, so that it is probable that something like one third of the national wealth would find its way back through the United States Treasury for redistribution, and for expenditure on the part of the Government.

Why are we delaying the work of developing the Mississippi River? It is a big matter. Why are we waiting to provide a Navy? Because of lack of funds. Why are we not paying off the debt we owe to the soldiers? Because, the Senator from Mississippi tells us, the Treasury is bankrupt. Why are we not discharging $27,000,000,000 of debt which we owe for the last war? The United States Government is today in debt $27,000,000,000; $20,000,000,000 for bonds which are outstanding for a certain length of time and $7,000,000,000 floating indebtedness, which has been issued by the Treasury since the depression started and a short time before. We find that the United States Government will be needing within a certain length of time not only to raise funds for rivers and harbors, for navies, and for soldiers, but actually to raise money to pay off $27,000,000,000 of public debts.

From what source is this money to come? If this money comes out of those who have accumulated the resources of this country at the top, the money will gradually come into the United States Treasury and be filtered out to the workman who is on the levee; it will be filtered out to the rural mail carrier; it will be given to the soldier; it will be given to the sailor; it will be given to the creditor; and gradually, as this country relieves the man at the bottom of the burden of taxes and gives him the benefit of wealth at the top, in reducing his hours of work, in increasing his pay, in giving such relief as may be necessary to banks, to farms, and to labor, everyone in America will share in the distribution of public funds made by the Government. In fact, there is no such thing as public money spent that does not inure to the population almost as a whole.

Mr. President, I stepped somewhat aside from explaining the bill in answering the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH]. Let me illustrate the last provision of the bill. If we had started in time, we would not have to be so very drastic with this legislation at this time. Had we heard the voice of Theodore Roosevelt in 1907, we would not have had 10,000 banks closing in 1930 and 1931. If we had heard the voice of Woodrow Wilson in 1916, we would not have had the calamity in 1929. If we had heard the voice of such magazines as the Saturday Evening Post in 1916 and 1919, we would not have needed this legislation. If we had harkened back to the days of Daniel Webster when, in that speech which he made at Plymouth, he warned that this country had to set up a system of laws to prevent the wealth of this country from being concentrated in the hands of a few if we expected the country to last; if we had taken the advice of Abraham Lincoln; if we had heard the voice of Jefferson; if we had heard the voice of every leading man this country had of that day and time, and practically of all days and times, even down to the present day and time; if we had gone back in time, we would not today be required to be so drastic in the legislation that is necessary to relieve this country of the concentration of wealth in the hands of the few which now faces it. But we have waited until the house is nearly burned down; we have waited until there is no such thing as a flowing wealth in the United States. It is concentrated in the hands of the few, and the few have become as cannibals.

The ruling plutocratic class that started at 5 percent gradually shrank until it became 4 percent. In 1916 that same class dwindled down to 2 percent, and in 1930 it dwindled down to 1 percent. They are cannibals among themselves. They not only had begun to take the wealth that was in the hands of the little man and in the hands of the middle man, but they became financial cannibals, eating up the financial existence of one another, until the plutocratic element that was 5 and 4 and 3 and 2 percent as late as 1916, had become a plutocratic element of 1 percent in 1930.

Mr. President, that does not tell the story. In 1916, when 2 percent of the people owned 60 percent of the wealth, there was a middle class, 33 percent who owned 35 percent of the wealth. That was the condition in 1916. But where is the middle class today? Where is the corner groceryman, about whom President Roosevelt speaks? He is gone or going. Where is the corner druggist? He is gone or going. Where is the banker of moderate means? He is vanishing. The middle class, 33 percent of the people, who owned 35 percent of the wealth in 1916, has disappeared; and, according to the most conservative estimates, which are not even disputed, the middle class today cannot pay the debts they owe and come out alive. In other words, the middle class is no more. There is no middle class. The middle-class individual has either made his way up into the plutocracy of 1 percent of the population, or he has fallen into the general class of the masses of 99 percent of the people who own a very small, dwindled, and restricted percentage of the wealth. There is no middle class.

Mr. President, we cannot wait for all these rich men to die. They are not going to die fast enough for the Government to secure their money through an inheritance tax. Some of them are good men, and we do not want them to die. They are men whom we can use, and they are no different from anyone else.

Mr. President, I have proposed a capital-levy tax, within the Constitution of the United States. I have proposed by legislative and congressional action that on a net capital of $1,000,000 there will be no capital tax, but upon all that is in excess of $1,000,000 up to $2,000,000 the Government will take 1 percent. That means that if my friend the Senator from Ohio has a fortune of $2,000,000, the Government will require him to pay $20,000 of capital-levy tax.

I then propose that on a fortune of from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 we will take 2 percent of the next million, 3 percent of the next million, from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000, 4 percent of the next million. I propose that we gradually increase the tax 1 percent on the million dollars of wealth until the point of $100,000,000, and when we reach $100,000,000, the United States Government will take 100 percent of all over the $100,000,000. [Laughter.]

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LEWIS. I suggest that there be order in the galleries. A Senator is occupying the floor debating an important question, and the occupants of the galleries should be informed that it is not a matter of amusement, and that this is not a movie theater.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair admonishes the occupants of the galleries that they are here as the guests of the Senate, and the Senate rules strictly prohibit demonstrations of any kind. The rules of the Senate must be lived up to.

Mr. LONG. I do not object to interruptions, although I thank my friend, the Senator from Illinois. I want to say, however, that in stating that under my amendment a man would be allowed to own up to fifty or a hundred million dollars, I probably excited mirth. I know that in that particular this amendment seems ridiculous. It seems absurd for us to be trying to limit fortunes to fifty, fifty-five, or a hundred million dollars. It seems almost preposterous that in this day, when from thirteen to fifteen million people are unemployed; in this day, when somewhere in the neighborhood of 60,000,000 people are on the verge of starvation; that in this day of too much to eat and too much to wear, a Member of the United States Senate would be on the floor of the Senate urging such a preposterous proposition as allowing any one man to make a million dollars in a year, or to allow any one child to inherit $5,000,000 without working for it, or to allow any one man to own from fifty to a hundred million dollars. It seems almost absurd that in this land of plenty and of too much anyone would be urging in the Senate, or be called upon to urge before the lawmakers of the United States, that in order that there might be such a thing as people eating what is here and wearing what is here, we would try to fix the absurd limitation on fortunes of fifty to a hundred million dollars. Yet that has even been referred to as being drastic and radical, a type and order of legislation that might beset the country with evils and destroy its initiative.

Mr. President, there is no sound-thinking man today who need expect to see this country emerge from the present chaos unless there shall be a redistribution of wealth. We need an expansion of the currency; we need more money; that is necessary for two purposes: First, because it is one of the means that will help us accomplish a decentralization of wealth and a redistribution in the hands of the masses; second, in order to allow intercourse in trade domestically and with foreign nations. But even though we do expand the currency, that is not going to accomplish anything like the necessary fundamental reform of redistributing the wealth of the country so that it may be shared among the people.

In order that I may illustrate that idea and to prove that what I am saying is in accord with modern thought, let me say that I am undertaking to carry out and to write into law the policy of the present President of the United States.

Mr. President, I saw the President before he made some of these important announcements. I knew how he felt about these matters probably in advance of many others of the American people. I was glad to ascertain, even before he had become a candidate for President of the United States, how he felt along such lines when he was formulating public utterances that later fell from his lips as important messages to the people. It was in his speech at Atlanta, Ga., where he said that the trouble with America was not the lack of anything; that it was not the lack of foodstuffs that kept people from eating; that it was not the lack of clothing that kept people from having enough to wear; that it was not the lack of houses that kept people from having homes; but it was the pronouncement of the President of the United States that the trouble, in his own words, was an insufficient distribution of the things that this country had; the lack in the hands of the people of those things which they needed in order to give them purchasing power and enable them to live.

I have excerpted these few remarks from his campaign utterances; they are fair excerpts, Mr. President, although the Senate will understand that it has been necessary to eliminate much in order to give just a few utterances that are pertinent.

Says our President:

We find concentrated power in a few hands; the opportunity in business has narrowed; the independent business man is running a losing race. He is squeezed out by highly organized corporate competition, as your corner groceryman can tell you.

That is the language of our President. He further says:

Our economic life is dominated by six hundred and odd corporations. We shall have all American industry controlled by a dozen corporations and run by perhaps a hundred men.

Those are the words of our President, showing, Mr. President, that in the language of our President there is no such thing as a living or a livelihood for the independent business or independent institution in this country; that we are running a losing race, and that if we are not already, in other words which he used—I did not have the space to display all the quotations on this one placard—that if we are not already in the midst of industrial absolutism, we are on the way there and bound to reach it unless we retrace our steps and go in the opposite direction; and, says our President, our basic trouble is not a lack of things but a lack of a proper distribution of them.

Having made myself modern, I go back to the year 1907, when Theodore Roosevelt was considering this question. I display in abbreviated form on this placard on the wall [indicating] the words of Theodore Roosevelt along about 1907:

We shall have to adopt—

some progressive tax on all fortunes, so as to put it out of the power of one to hand down more than a certain amount.

Those are the words of Theodore Roosevelt; and yet, Mr. President, we have waited for 26 years after Theodore Roosevelt had uttered that warning, and we now see that plutocracy of about 5 percent that owned half the wealth grow to a plutocracy of 1 percent that owns about 60 percent of the wealth. We have waited until that plutocracy have put the independent bank out of business; until they have put the independent drug store out of business; until they have shriveled up the dry-goods store, the hardware store, and the grocery store; we have waited until they have depressed the farmer to a point where he cannot earn the cost of producing a crop. We have waited, Mr. President, until we have had foodstuffs and wearing apparel piled so high that one cannot see the sun for them, and yet we let one half the people of the United States starve and go naked and homeless in a land of too much because we have not heard the words of Theodore Roosevelt in 1907; we have not heard the words of Franklin D. Roosevelt, and we have not transformed our promises and platitudes into law, as the people of America were entitled to expect, when we conducted the late successful campaign.

Mr. President, in order that I may go back further and perhaps to even greater authority, I will refer to the words of a commission appointed by Woodrow Wilson. There are Senators in this body who were here in 1916—I think my friend the Senator from Arizona was here then—and they will recall that President Woodrow Wilson appointed an industrial relations committee, which conducted a thorough survey all over the United States. It took several months, and in the course of that survey they called in the leading economists of this country, including Mr. Basil Manley, Judge Walter Clark, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Judge Gary. There were called before the Industrial Relations Committee the leading economists, the leading industrialists, the leading labor-union men who were to be found in that day and time.

It was the purpose of that committee, appointed and created under the administration of President Woodrow Wilson, to find out what was the trouble with the United States. What did they report? I give you the first finding of the Industrial Relations Committee. They said, Mr. President, that the cause of the industrial unrest and the poverty and misery in America prevailing in the year 1916 was first as found in the words on the placard on the wall—

Unjust distribution of wealth and income.

They showed, Mr. President, by the tables of that day and time, that it was a physical impossibility for a country to live and thrive and for its laborers and farmers ever to have an opportunity to educate their children and live in respectability with the wealth of the country concentrated to a point where 2 percent of the people owned 60 percent of the wealth. At that time the Industrial Relations Committee showed that 33 percent of the people owned 35 percent of the wealth. Are we that well off now? We were supposed to correct the conditions that prevailed in 1916; but instead of having done that, instead of having provided against a condition which at that time allowed 33 percent of the people to own 35 percent of the wealth, we have let the middle class that owned 35 percent, be wiped out, obliterated altogether. We have left the plutocratic class of 2 percent dwindle to where 1 percent have as much wealth as 2 percent had when they owned 60 percent of the wealth, and the 65 percent of the people who owned 5 percent of the wealth of the United States in 1916 do not own enough to pay their debts, and most of them are at the point of starvation.

Now, I get back, Mr. President, to the fundamental law. I am going back very briefly and succinctly, if I can, to the fundamental law that has been proved by time and by experience. At the conclusion of the Napoleonic wars, or some of them, the French people found that France had gone through such a constant scourge of war that it was impossible, except through a redistribution of income, for that country to live and survive. Therefore the law of France was arranged upon a basis providing, to some extent, for the redistribution of its wealth. That was done in this way: If a man with five children died, he was compelled to divide his wealth more or less equally among his heirs. He was not allowed to set up a trust or a fideicommissum. He was required to bequeath to his children his wealth, more or less, in equal parts. They were allowed to take the money at once and dispose of it in such way as they saw fit, except idiots and minors, who were placed under guardians and tutors. Under the law of France—and there were other laws which I have not the time to enumerate—the wealth of France was gradually thrown back into the treasury and diffused into the hands of the people. That was the French law.

That law was written into the law of the State of Louisiana. Strange as it may seem, following war after war which France had gone through, following scourge and pestilence, France has always been able to emerge from every calamity simply because she kept her wealth more or less equally distributed. She is better off today than any other country of which we know. It is because under the Napoleonic code France has provided for a more or less equitable distribution of wealth that she survives today. Why did we not survive? For the opposite reason, if I may say so.

Another proof is that the State of Louisiana, which provided to some extent the same law which France enacted, has, as a State, had a fair share of this Nation's wealth, regardless of adversities under which its people have struggled; and today, Mr. President, it may be pointed to as having one of the best systems for distributing wealth among its people, because back far enough the law was so framed as to compel fortunes to be distributed equally among heirs with certain portions to be paid to the State. But Louisiana suffers now because the Nation is collapsing.

That has not been done elsewhere in America. We have allowed a man to go along until he accumulated a million dollars and then to die and hand that fortune down to his most proficient son, and that son has taken the fortune of a million dollars and has rolled the snowball down hill and died and picked out his most proficient son and handed him a fortune of $10,000,000; and then we have allowed someone else to take the fortune of $10,000,000 and roll it through another generation and die with a fortune of $100,000,000, until greed and grasping faculties and monopoly have enabled a few men to get together and squeeze the lifeblood out of every independent business of every kind and character, and practically to make themselves masters of fortune, of finance, and of Government and life in the United States.

Are we going to let that condition continue? I do not know how the President would feel; but in view of what President Roosevelt has said, I do not see how he can feel other than that his principles had received a stab in the back at the hands of everybody in Congress who would not vote today to carry out those policies and those pronouncements to the people.

If I were President of the United States—and I have only the human impulses that I think any ordinary human being like myself would have—if I were President of the United States and I had gone before the people of the United States pleading against this unjust distribution of wealth; if I had gone before my countrymen complaining of this bloated plutocracy of 1 percent existing in the land of plenty, existing in superluxury, and to the misery of the masses; if I were the President of the United States today who had warned the American people about this terrible calamity and growing canker; if I sat in the White House after having pointed out these difficulties and after having promised a relief and a deliverance from such aggravated and accentuated concentration and disaster; if I were in the shoes of the President of the United States, having pointed out these conditions with the results that are here to prove it; if I were the President of the United States and saw Members of the House and Members of the Senate voting against the redistribution of wealth, to which I had dedicated my political lifetime, I would feel that not only had the Congress failed to catch the spirit of the time but had failed to stand by my platform and to aid me in the work I had undertaken.

I know some may feel that it might have been well to have urged upon the President further to consider the logic of the situation. I have not done so. I have taken our great President at his word. That he says nothing now for these things does not detract from what he has said. I have come here to help him carry out his promises to the people. I have come here to help him because of his oft-repeated pronouncements in public and in private conversations, because in both I have heard him say these things to the American people. I have come here undertaking by an amendment to a revenue act to give to the Congress of the United States an opportunity to decentralize the wealth of the country.

What I have proposed is what I advocated in the last Presidential campaign. What I said in the last Presidential campaign, Mr. President, was stated at the request of and with the knowledge and upon the advice and consent of the great man who now occupies the position of Chief Executive. Nothing that I said at this time or at that time is any different in spirit or in letter from what the President has himself announced to the people of the United States before and after his nomination, and before and after his inauguration as President of the United States.

There may be some who think the calculations should be different. There may be some who think that instead of a man being allowed to earn a million dollars a year he should be allowed to earn only $500,000 a year. There may be some who think instead of a man being allowed to earn a million dollars a year he ought to be allowed to earn $1,500,000 a year. I have undertaken to set a figure that is approved by practically all men who have discussed the question, a figure at which no man can say his earning has been restricted in any way that will cripple his business, dwarf his initiative in business, or deprive him of a possible luxury.

With reference to the $5,000,000 of inheritance, I agree with some of the critics that $5,000,000 is too much for any one child to inherit. There may be some who think most likely, as the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] indicated, that probably $5,000,000 is out of order and out of proportion with the other provisions of my amendment. But be that as it may, I have undertaken to allow an inheritance in the millions sufficient so that there can be no such thing as a crippling of initiative and so there may be no such thing as luxury denied to the possessor of or the person inheriting that kind of fortune.

There may be some who figure that the capital-tax levy ought not to allow $100,000,000 before taking all of a man's money, but I have undertaken to set a figure which I feel will be sufficient to allow us a revenue to the Government sufficient to care for its needs and to accomplish decentralization.

I should like to give the Senate the estimates which I have made, based upon normal circumstances, and after that I have nothing further to say in support of the amendment. Here is my calculation. No; it is not my calculation. Here is the calculation which has been supplied to me. I have been told that within 10 years possibly, but certainly within 15 years, under this decentralization plan the Treasury of the United States would have an income of around $150,000,000,000. Not less than $10,000,000,000 and most probably as much as $15,000,000,000 average per year would come to the Treasury of the United States Government as the result of the amendment which I have offered.

Why do we wait for money to carry on public works and improvements? Why do we wait for money to pay the soldiers' bonus? Why do we wait for money to clear up deficits in the Treasury? Why do we wait for money to pay the $27,000,000,000 of bonded indebtedness of the United States? Why do we wait here, having to go and take the crippled, the aged and the injured soldier who has fought in defense of his country, and throw him out of the hospital and leave him at the mercy of the world, without a home to occupy, without clothes for his back and without food to eat? Why do we wait in this stifled condition with a land overflowing with milk and honey, flour and meal, potatoes and cream—everything on the living earth here in abundance and superabundance that mankind might desire to consume? Why do we wait in this country with people starving to death by the millions, when we have so much here that they could not eat it if everybody was given everything he wanted to eat to start with?

Why? It is because we have taken the purchasing power out of the hands of the masses, because we have allowed the greed and avarice of the little bloated plutocracy of less than 1 percent of the people of the country to reach the point that they have amassed all the gold, all the wealth, all the silver, and all the property of America into so few hands that they actually have more satisfaction in owning that concentrated fortune and in the starvation of half the population of the country than they would have even though their fortunes allowed everybody to have plenty and themselves to enjoy whatever luxury could be supplied.

Why talk about a farm problem when nobody has money enough to buy cotton goods to wear? No one need go around trying to find the source of the trouble. If anyone wants to find out why we cannot sell any more cotton, I will tell him why. It is because the women have not any money with which to buy calico. That is why we cannot sell any more cotton. Does anyone want to know why we cannot sell any more silk? The first reason is because 99 percent of the people have not any money with which to buy silk. Does anyone want to know why we cannot sell shoes in the shoe stores, groceries in the grocery stores, and dairy products? It is simply because 1 percent of the people controlling 99 percent of the wealth cannot eat any more than any other 1,000,000 people can eat and consume.

When we have taken the purchasing power away from the people, when we have not fed and clothed 99 percent of the people living in a land of too much to eat and too much to wear, and when they do not have anything to buy, anything to eat, or anything to wear, how does anyone expect to sell the wheat crop and the cotton crop, the corn crop, and whatever else is planted by the farmers of the country?

Our factories are idle; certainly they are. How could they be anything else? Take the statistics as shown by the income-tax returns and it will be found that there is such a small percentage of the people earning anything like a livable income in this country that it would be impossible today to have any such thing as busy factories.

Let us return our country to reason and equity.

Therefore, Mr. President, I submit my amendment, and ask that we may have the yeas and nays.

FOREIGN DEBT PROPAGANDA

THE MISCONCEPTION OR MISREPRESENTATION BY EUROPEAN DEBTOR LANDS DELEGATES OF CONVERSATIONS WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND HIS AIDES ON DEBT SUSPENSION

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I trust I do not impose too far upon the patience of the Senate at this rather uninviting hour, when I arise to meet the invasion the news from the press placed on our table at this hour alarms our confidences. The report, as I catch it at a glance, is of very impending weight upon the United States of America.

Mr. President, the afternoon cables support the statements made in the morning press by two premiers of European countries, these being the official spokesmen of two of the great debtor countries of Europe, both of whom being of the large debtors to the United States of America. Each of these master guides, being honorable representatives of their nations, have in the late weeks only departed from us, following what we assumed to have been a conference looking to readjustment of what is designated as the tariff, and conducting conversations formulating something of international economic trade arrangement. And we now have it stated as from these higher sources that as a preliminary essential to that meeting, which is shaped and framed to be held in the month of June either at London, or Geneva, Switzerland, that there must be by the United States of America accepted and agreed that a disposition of the debts due by the foreign lands to the United States, war and commercial debts, shall first be disposed of.

That in this first move some form of a reduction of the war debts which are due now or the wiping out of certain of the charges laid by the United States against the debtors; as commercial obligations must be agreed and arranged as a paid or adjusted debt preliminary and as a necessary step precedent to any undertaking looking to the adjustment of tariffs or the arrangement of an economic conference. It is now stated in the announcements, carrying out what is assumed to have been the object of the mission of these honorable gentlemen who came as the avowed and the acknowledged delegates of their countries, that first, and above all, is the abolishment of all obligation now existing to pay the debt.

Mr. President, I speak to what I charge to be the hypocrisy of the drama. I rise to charge upon the proceeding in the foreign parliament the farce of the pretense. I assert in my place that the intimation is now given to the world through speech of each premier addressed to his land that there was an understanding between this, our United States of America, through its representatives, and they who were envoys of other countries of the world, the principal debtors to this Republic, that before we, the United States, should be permitted to enter upon the specific schedules of any tariff truce, as it is termed, or the program of any economic adjustment touching trade between these lands, there must first be a concession on the part of the United States to take up the adjustment of the debts due the United States by these foreign lands, and that that question must be taken up in such manner as shall result in a conclusion of reduction, postponement, or cancelation satisfactory to the debtors.

Mr. President, it is very evident to my mind—I am sure it cannot be otherwise to the minds of those about us—that these expressions are sent throughout the whole world, all nations, for the purpose of increasing in European and Asiatic spheres the credit of these lands who are debtors to the United States. The object of the play is to give the appearance that the visits of their delegates here to our land resulted in an agreement at the instance of the debtor or at the initiation of the creditor to take up these international debts and as a first move to concede the debt as now due as either of immediate effacement or, sirs, as necessarily calling in their behalf for a large reduction, if not complete cancelation. With this false premise being circulated to the world, it enables our competitor nations to start out with the other countries of the world with the presumption that they are now to be enriched in their treasuries by the amount that they will be able to force us to concede in the reduction or effacement of the debt. This likewise will give to our debtors a form of credit from the other nations of the world upon the theory that the proportion of that credit advanced is sustained and secured by what is to be the amount surrendered by the United States of America.

Mr. President, the statement on the part of these honorable representatives, made in the parliaments of our debtors, that there is now compacted with arrangement concurrent with the economic conference a surrender by the United States of its debt as it is now adjusted is wholly without foundation. It was specifically stated here at the meetings in the city of Washington by the representatives of the United States of America at the State Department and at such other meetings as were concurrent with those gatherings that there was to be a fixed understanding that nothing whatever as to the debts between these debtor countries and the United States was to be taken up at the meeting looking to the economic conference. That only with that specific understanding, Mr. President, I am authorized to say that only at some later occasion is the subject to be entered upon, if at all; and upon my own information I do assert, that is now the compact, that in the economic conference nothing be entered upon in the form of a conference between our country and her debtors as to amounts of reduction nor payment is to be intruded in the program for the economic conference, the adjustment of tariffs, or the entering upon any form of arrangement touching the economy of trade throughout the world.

As to that specific agreement I summon you, sirs, to the statement of Professor Tugwell, representing the State Department of the United States, published as his utterance in the Sunday New York Herald, and one from his pen, and then that of the other aide of the State Department, Professor Moley, all these expressions spoke to the world that as a preliminary arrangement, if one may be termed an arrangement which is sent out as a prefatory and preceding understanding, the question of these foreign debts was not to be taken up, in anywise whatever negotiated, at the conference now being arranged on the basis of an economic trade.

Mr. President, I protest against this policy of misleading the United States on the part of these honorable foreign representatives, who, speaking from the parliaments of their high ascendancy, send out their message with a strange consistency in almost the exact verbiage—though they are contesting lands as between themselves—asserting that there was an understanding, and as such that it is now to be executed, executing the new agreed policy of effacing the debts by surrender or canceling them by a form of reduction that will leave to us the attitude of defeated debtor instead of victorious creditor.

I here say, sir, that the whole policy of sending out these statements in parliamentary-involved declarations is with the complete knowledge that they have no foundation in truth; but that these assertions are sent out in what are termed, in the parliamentary language of varying diplomacy, as “feelers.” From such it is presumed that it might be ascertained how far the American people will go in generous gesture, for the seventh time, to further reduction of these debts far past the reduction we have subscribed to—far exceeding the reduction which even mercy, charity, and fairness would have justified. These “feelers”—a creeping poison which, like writhing vines, are twisted about the feet of those who move ahead in gloom and darkness, where they may be tripped to where they fall. And the object of these misrepresentative announcements are as two insidious things:

First, to educate the American citizen to the thought that his Government has already surrendered him in a private understanding here at Washington, and done in obedience to the demand of the ambassadors, premiers, and consultants of these honorable countries, our distinguished war debtors. I, as a humble representative of my distinguished State and as one of the colleagues of my honorable confreres in this gathering, the Senate of the United States, have reasons to deny, and upon these reasons specifically deny, that there ever was a conversation between these honorable representatives and the representatives of the United States upon the point of quantity or quality of further reduction of debts, the cancelation of them, or the readjustment of them to the surrender of the obligation.

Second, sir, the further purpose of the false dissemination was to give to the countries abroad the conclusion that without these delegates having an agreement for the surrender of a part of the debt, or a cancelation of its obligation, there would not have been an entrance by them into an understanding as to the surrendering of any of the trade advantages of their lands. It is that there be offered as a justification as against the assault of their own people for threatening to surrender the advantages and privileges they are enjoying in trade over the United States, they brought in turn the possibility of the abatement of these payments now due and to be paid this year.

Finally, Mr. President, the other and cruel purpose is to say to the American people, in such insidious propaganda as is now being scattered in the straining dew of gentle and facile declamation, that if they—our Americans—will yield now, despite their protests, to the form of a surrender of the amount of their debt, and place that obligation on the citizens of the United States, then the United States may expect some balance in losses in the surrender by us, your debtors, of our privileges of international trade, that America may enjoy the benefits of our present superiority, which is now yielded up. Sirs, all this concentrated effort of the parliamentary masters is to seduce the American mind into some form of yielding and some nature of concessions as against these debts.

True, sirs, with these murky movements we have nothing that gives light of method or detail. It is enough that through the press the mere statement of something of a “tariff truce”, of a “tariff concession”, of a “trade arrangement” be uttered. But from whence come these intimated assurances and in what description? I challenge my honorable colleagues upon both sides of the Chamber to note that in all these coagulated agitations of oratorical multiplication there is never a figure stated; never is a quantity defined as to what is offered. Nowhere is the specific declaration made clear. Never is the material or the basis of profit to the United States of the new trade stated. Everything is being brought to us now upon the theory we can assume as saying to us, “Dear friends of America, whatever you think you ought to have in trade, whatever you dream to enjoy in finance, whatever you hope to experience in any wise whatever, in new rejuvenation of our admiration and friendship, will depend on the amount you will yield to us on the debts you say we owe you.” Here, as the Scripture hath it, we exclaim “Selah.”

This very clever, this very artful insinuation, carrying nothing with it of newness, is multiplied in its form with a view of further seducing the credulity of our country, and imposing upon the confidence of our countrymen to believe that there may again be perpetrated the same fraud which we have had to endure under similar pretenses in five previous gatherings. Sirs, all this replay and artifice after we had given notice that under no circumstances shall the matter of the reduction of the debts or even a discussion of the debts by our war debtors be considered in connection with this economic meeting—sirs, it is here that there still goes forth every day from the press, which is compelled to publish the news as it obtains it, that constant, repeated, and ever-flowing indulgence to the American public proclaiming, "If you will but persuade your public representatives to surrender you and your interests, to abase your country, to our superiority, and further loot your Treasury by concession and cancellation, you will be rewarded by us in some form of trade which may make up just now the losses you experience and that which you feel is hourly deepening its multiplication." What these national spokesmen of our debtor nations assume to offer they do not express. What we are to expect them to give us they do not say. We, they say, but tell you to trust us, and in this allurements trust and believe that for all you will lose—as we expect you to lose, for we are not meaning to have you gain—you may hope to be requited by something by which in some form, in the haggling terms of economic arrangement, you may, out of this mist and mystery, draw the varying light of some consolation.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEWIS. I yield.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I presume, from the Senator's statement, that he does not care to let them know exactly what we might do, that we are to let them wander along in darkness on that subject. Does he not think a better policy would be not to give any encouragement to this idea of a reduction of the indebtedness or a cancellation of the indebtedness? I believe that if we give any encouragement to people who are expecting to get something from us which we do not think they should have, that policy is detrimental in any future negotiation. I would rather be frank from the beginning, and state that we do not expect to have the matter of adjustment or the matter of the cancellation control or dominate this conference. Of course, the Senator has talked along that line, but I have just talked a little plainer.

I happened to drop into a movie a few nights ago where the subject was "Gabriel Over the White House", and Mr. Hammond, who took the part of the President, when they were clamoring for debt reduction, and some wise statesmen thought there ought to be reduction, said, "There is to be no reduction." When they wanted cancellation he said, "There is to be no cancellation of the debt." I think we need some plain talking.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I was stating, in what I felt was explicit language, that it was these our debtors who are leaving in this more or less confused state any proposition they were making; it is not ourselves. I had stated, evidently previous to the Senator coming to his seat, how we had in nowise made an agreement or an understanding looking to any cancellation or any form of interruption of the just course of the debt as it has now been placed by the previous understandings and agreements of our country and our debtors and now fixed as closed contract.

I answer the Senator from Florida to say the trouble is not the want of frankness on the part of his country. His country has made it public everywhere, wherever voice with dignity and manner with propriety could leave it, that there should be no entrance in this economic conference upon the question of the cancellation of the debts or a disturbance of the pleasant relations, and that there was no foundation at any time for the assumption by their statesmen that the matter of the debts, either their cancellation or their reduction, was to be entered upon at the time of these understandings we are about to launch respecting the economic affairs of these nations in commerce.

Mr. President, I was concluding, when I yielded to the distinguished Senator from Florida, to say that I regard it dangerous to the friendship between this Nation and her debtors for these debtors to continue making public the statement that there should be a preliminary entrance upon these international debts looking to their readjustment or effacement before we enter into the fulfillment of the program of the Economic Conference which they sought and proposed as an illustration of new commercial friendship.

Mr. President, I find much in what the Senator from Louisiana has to say respecting the prospects of great losses to the people of the United States, and if the loss is to be accelerated by our yielding up the debts which are due us, and we are to be first trapped and then tricked out of the results because of the constant amalgamation and multiplication of the falsehoods, saying that we had a preliminary understanding that we were to enter upon the cancellation for the effacement of the debt before we concluded the Economic Conference, then we should not enter upon any conference or gathering of delegates under the false assumption.

Mr. President, if the United States—and I speak of its people—shall conceive seriously that there has been really a secret understanding by the representatives of this administration that we are to enter upon the question of the reduction of the debts which are honestly due us, the effacing of these obligations from the foreign lands, despite our statement to the United States through our representatives that such has never been the basis of any treatment on the part of the State Department or the foreign delegates—I say, sir, that if they, the spokesmen from Europe, shall continue with these statements as now published as their declaration, all to the contrary of what truly has transpired, these double-dealing delegates in their evasive speeches misrepresenting the history of the proceedings—these spokesmen will arouse a spirit of retaliation and resentment, I fear; and if the time should thereafter come when later the question as of the debts in any form of a suggested new adjustment could be appropriately revived, the temper of our people would not allow it to be approached. They would fear the spirit of delusion and deception. They would have been so convinced by the previous falseness that another scheme was set deliberately to entrap us that, whatever might be the proposition, all anew it should be at once repudiated by the spirit of the American people, too long and too often seduced by fair promises and betrayed by false deeds.

Mr. President, I rose merely to call attention, in this desultory manner, as I have, to the fact that we now warn the representatives of these debtors that they cannot continue these statements, which are directly in opposition to what is the truth of the arrangements between the United States and their representatives, without incurring a spirit of animosity on the part of the United States, and from this they will render their whole trade prospects nugatory; they will cause any concessions offered in that respect wholly void; they will remove from the American mind all confidence in the proposed undertaking at the outset; they will characterize it by the shadow of fraud; they will surround it in the gloom of suspicion. Sirs, they will enter upon it with doubt in all directions and with accusations so encircling it that, instead of it being an advance on the part of friendship through the delegates of those who are trusted, it will be an entrance again into the spirit charging falsehood and trickery and culminating in bitterness—perhaps hatred.

I therefore rise here to say that it is time these statements shall cease being sent out on the part of these honorable representatives and their parliaments of the world. These debtor nations and their representatives must know there never has been, at the meetings which they have lately attended here in Washington, one single, solitary agreement of any nature whatever that these foreign debts are to be made the basis of discussion or agreement at the economic conference.

The Economic Conference, if to be entered upon, must be entered upon with the knowledge that its only spirit is one looking to the exchange of trade between these nations in friendship and in confidence, and if it shall not be entered into in that way, better, sir, that we withdraw at once than to enter that which is cursed with defeat through hypocrisy and held up to the world as a sham and as a device for tricking the American public either out of its rights in commerce, or its rights as a creditor.

Mr. President, no act on the part of these honorable debtors can benefit them if they continue misrepresenting the United States to its own people, and my object in rising at this moment is again to warn the United States that these plans of propaganda are, first, to take from the United States citizen his confidence in his own administration; second, it is to invest in the minds of foreigners the idea that there has been a secret understanding here by which, for some arrangement or surrender on the part of the United States, the economic trade conference about to be entered upon is to be entered upon with the theory that for all they give they are to be profited by the large sums of the surrender and loss of debts by the United States.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEWIS. I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. I tuned in on the radio one evening, some months since, and although I missed the announcement, I knew at once, from the mellifluousness of the voice, from the beauty of the diction, the correctness of the rhetoric, and the accuracy of the historical references, that the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] was speaking. He reviewed with accuracy the history of past transactions on the collection of loans made by one government to another. The Senator pointed out how baleful and unjust it would be for the United States to cancel or remit any part of the foreign debt, and he concluded his brilliant radio address—I am sure it was heard by 10,000,000 persons—by an argument that appealed to me with force, pointing out not only the injustice to our own people in canceling the foreign debt, but made the superlatively important argument that it would be injurious to the debtor nations themselves to petition for or to accept such a humiliation as the cancellation of their own debts; that it would paralyze for a hundred years their efforts to attempt to secure credit; that each and every nation accepting a cancellation or a remission of its indebtedness would thereby suffer in its own self-esteem and would lose that which when a man or a nation loses is grievously hurt—its own self-respect.

The Senator has rendered a service in suggesting that this administration has never, directly or indirectly, intimated to anyone that there will be any cancellation, remission, or reduction of any part of the foreign debt due to the United States. Nothing would cause more feeling amongst our people, nothing would produce so much loss of confidence in the Congress and in the administration as to cancel, remit, or forgive any part of the foreign debt due to the United States.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I acknowledge the contribution of the able Senator from Arizona, the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee. I am flattered that he recalls an address of mine made at any time and approves it. I have from time to time, perchance at the expense of friendship and patience on the part of the Senate, invited their consideration to the thought that this, as I now charge, was the plan, and that behind the euphemistic expression "economic conference" was an underground and subterranean method of again reaching the point of driving the American public to a point where they would feel they must make some surrender of their rights to those who now seek to impose upon them.

Mr. President, as I conclude, I repeat I am anxious to hold the confidence of the American public to the administration. I shall not allow those outside of my land to be constantly presenting to my countrymen that there have been transactions secretly conducted which are deceiving the citizen and leaving him to conclude that he is being delivered by his public servants, and that under some secret allusion that the proposal is only one of mutual business touching economic conditions really and truthfully they are laying first the groundwork, the network, the trap, to be followed by the surrender of the American people and their right to payment of honest debts due them.

Mr. President, we get from the great bard the famous line impugning the record of men saying:

Half a truth is worse than a whole lie.

It is against this half truth which is being heralded throughout the public press from the agencies of European debtors to our own countrymen at home, who write in their press that which will undermine the confidence of our countrymen in their country and rob them of the enjoyment of trust in the administration, that I protest. There shall not be a moment, so far as I may protest, sir, when over the gateways of our tomorrow in dealing with foreign lands there shall be inscribed by our engraving in cowardice at surrender—the proclamation of Dante:

Abandon hope, all ye who enter here.

Mr. President, having uttered the expression of my protest, and that which I firmly believe is the duty of an American to repeat as often as possible—a warning to his countrymen not to be further imposed upon, I submit my views as they have been expressed, with my sense of gratitude for the patience and kindness of the Senate. I call forth again, America, be on guard, beware; and as against all alluring approaches seducing her trust, O America, be true.

NOTIFICATION OF CONFIRMATION OF CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSIONERS

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, earlier in the day I asked unanimous consent, as in executive session, that the President be notified of the confirmations of the nominations of Mrs. McMillan and Mr. Mitchell as members of the Civil Service Commission. Those two officials were sworn in this morning. I find that the time required by the rule has not yet elapsed; but I hope the Senate will agree to my request for unanimous consent, which is that the President may be notified of the confirmation of these nominations.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, for obvious reasons I have uniformly followed the practice of dissociating confirmations and notices to the President. The Senator from Tennessee conferred with me earlier in the day. The situation is rather an embarrassing one, due to a misunderstanding, and therefore, so far as I am personally concerned, I am willing to make an exception in this case.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee? The Chair hears none, and the President will be notified of the confirmations of the nominations.

EXTENSION OF GASOLINE TAX

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the hour is now so late and the Senate has been so patient in the consideration of the tax bill that I am not going to impose on the body at this time any remarks with reference to the pending amendment. I may say that if we can dispose of this amendment I think we may get through with the bill this afternoon; and it is the intention, as I understand, of the leader on this side in that case to move an adjournment over until Monday. So I hope we may expedite the matter and get through with it quickly.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG].

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I desire to express myself briefly on the pending amendment offered by the Senator from Louisiana. I am numbered among those who are urging at this time that there can be hope for little or no recovery for America until we have accomplished, in some manner or other, a decentralization of wealth that has grown by such leaps and bounds in recent years. While the inflationary features of the farm bill were pending before the Senate, I offered an amendment which, had it been accepted, would have increased the income-tax rates on incomes in excess of $100,000 a year.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. NYE. I am glad to yield.

Mr. LONG. I want to ask the Senator to let me suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. NYE. I am not going to yield for that purpose at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Dakota declines to yield.

Mr. NYE. The scale of taxation upon incomes under my amendment would range from 55 percent on incomes of $100,000 or more to 75 percent on incomes of a million dollars or more per year. I was prevailed upon at the time of its offering to have it referred to the Committee on Finance, which was then considering the pending tax bill. So the amendment went to that committee.

I now understand, of course, that the amendment did not receive favorable consideration at the hands of the committee, but I intend to move that amendment to the pending bill in the event the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana shall be defeated. Yet I hope I am not going to have occasion to offer my amendment; in other words, I hope that the amendment offered by the Senator from Louisiana is going to prevail, and because I so much want that it shall prevail, I am going to plead with the Senator from Louisiana to do a thing which I am certain will enlarge the chance for the adoption of his amendment by the Senate.

His amendment deals with income taxes, with inheritance taxes, with gift taxes, and with the so-called "capital tax." I wonder if the Senator, in view of the largeness of the contract involved in his amendment, will not consider and finally consent to the elimination from his amendment of that portion of it dealing alone with the capital tax?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, as I understand, the Senator is suggesting the elimination of the capital-tax-levy feature of the amendment, leaving the income-tax and inheritance-tax provisions as they are. Is that what the Senator suggests?

Mr. NYE. That is all. I suggest only that the Senator strike from his amendment all the language beginning in line 15, on page 4, striking out all on pages 5, 6, 7, and 8, and down to line 13 on page 9.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have been urged so to change my amendment, and I am willing to modify the amendment. Accordingly, I accept the suggestion of the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. NYE. I am sure the Senator will thereby improve the chance for his amendment in a large way.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Louisiana modifies his amendment. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as modified.

Mr. LONG. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Couzens	Kendrick	Pope
Ashurst	Cutting	Keyes	Reed
Austin	Dickinson	King	Reynolds
Bachman	Dieterich	La Follette	Robinson, Ark.
Bailey	Dill	Lewis	Robinson, Ind.

Capper	Harrison	Neely	Walsh
Carey	Hayden	Norris	Wheeler
Clark	Johnson	Nye	White
Connally	Kean	Overton

The VICE PRESIDENT. Seventy-one Senators have answered to their names; a quorum is present.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I want to take just long enough to say to Members of the Senate who have come in recently that I have modified my amendment by striking out the capital-tax-levy feature of it, leaving it to apply only as to inheritance and gift taxes and income taxes, limiting the incomes to $1,000,000 and inheritances and gifts to $5,000,000. I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. LONG. Certainly.

Mr. TRAMMELL. The Senator provides for an increase of income taxes on incomes of $300,000 and upward?

Mr. LONG. Yes.

Mr. TRAMMELL. The increase does not begin until the incomes reach $300,000?

Mr. LONG. That is correct.

Mr. TRAMMELL. And, with reference to inheritances, what is the minimum from which the amendment proposes to start?

Mr. LONG. I have just scaled them from whatever they are now on up to $5,000,000. I do not propose to affect them to any extent whatever in any of the lower brackets.

Mr. TRAMMELL. That is the impression I gathered from reading the Senator's amendment; that it does not affect the lower brackets in any of the taxes.

Mr. LONG. That is true. I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE (when his name was called). On this vote I have a special pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I understand if he were present he would vote "nay." If I were at liberty to vote, I would vote "yea."

Mr. LEWIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. LOGAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS], who is absent. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] and vote "nay."

Mr. McKELLAR (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. COOLIDGE] and vote "nay."

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS]. In his absence I withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. VANDENBERG (when his name was called). On this vote I am paired with the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. FRAZIER (after having voted in the affirmative). On this amendment I have a special pair with the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS]. Therefore I withdraw my vote. I understand if the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] were present he would vote "nay." If I were at liberty to vote, I would vote "yea."

Mr. FESS. The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HATFIELD] is necessarily detained on official business. He is paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY].

Mr. LEWIS. I desire to announce that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BULKLEY], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] are necessarily detained from the Senate on official business.

I also wish to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND] with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS];

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BULOW] with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WILCOTT];

The Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. PATTERSON]; and

The Senator from California [Mr. McABOOL] with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE].

I wish further to announce that if the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY] were present, she would vote "aye."

I wish further to announce that if the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY] were present, she would vote "aye."

The result was announced—yeas 14, nays 50, as follows:

So Mr. LONG's amendment was rejected.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I offer.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read for the information of the Senate.

SEC. 7. Section 604 of the Revenue Act of 1932 is hereby repealed on articles selling for less than $40.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I shall take but a moment to explain the purpose of the amendment. In the Revenue Act of 1932 fur clothing was the only wearing apparel taxed. In that act it was taxed at 10 percent of its sale price as sold by the manufacturer. I assume the tax on fur clothing was adopted by the Congress on the assumption that furs are a luxury. As a matter of fact, in a considerable portion of the country furs are a necessity of life on account of the cold weather in the wintertime. A farmer who buys a sheep-lined fur coat must pay a 10-percent tax on that coat. Men and women, and children going to school in the wintertime, wading through the snow, must have whatever fur clothing they can buy. For that reason I have offered the amendment to exempt from this tax any fur garment selling for less than $40. That is about the maximum that poor people pay for fur clothing. I am sure it was not the intention of the Congress in enacting this law to put a tax upon the winter clothing of people who pay less than $40 for fur garments.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, this tax on fur was levied to raise revenue. There are many very objectionable nuisance taxes that we wish we could repeal, but if we start on that we will lose the revenue. Under the present law, goods containing furs are not taxed unless the fur is the chief component.

I hope this amendment will be voted down.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I offer the amendment, which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Dakota offers an amendment, which will be stated.

Mr. NYE's amendment is to insert at the proper place the following new section:

SEC. —. (a) Subsection (a) of section 12 of the Revenue Act of 1932 is amended by striking out the last eight paragraphs thereof and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"$22,460 upon net incomes of $100,000; and upon net incomes in excess of $100,000 and not in excess of $200,000, 50 percent in addition of such excess.

"$72,460 upon net incomes of $200,000; and upon net incomes in excess of $200,000 and not in excess of $300,000, 52½ percent in addition of such excess.

"$124,956 upon net incomes of $300,000; and upon net incomes in excess of $300,000 and not in excess of $400,000, 55 percent in addition of such excess.

"$179,960 upon net incomes of $400,000; and upon net incomes in excess of $400,000 and not in excess of $500,000, 57½ percent in addition of such excess.

"$237,460 upon net incomes of $500,000; and upon net incomes in excess of $500,000 and not in excess of $600,000, 60 percent in addition of such excess.

"$297,460 upon net incomes of $600,000; and upon net incomes in excess of $600,000 and not in excess of $700,000, 62½ percent in addition of such excess.

"$359,960 upon net incomes of $700,000; and upon net incomes in excess of $700,000 and not in excess of $800,000, 65 percent in addition of such excess.

"$424,960 upon net incomes of $800,000; and upon net incomes in excess of $800,000 and not in excess of $900,000, 67½ percent in addition of such excess.

"$492,460 upon net incomes of $900,000; and upon net incomes in excess of $900,000 and not in excess of $1,000,000, 70 percent in addition of such excess.

"$562,460 upon net incomes of $1,000,000; and upon net incomes in excess of $1,000,000, 75 percent in addition of such excess."

(b) This section shall take effect as of January 1, 1933.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I am offering this amendment because I cannot help but be convinced that the vote recently recorded on the amendment offered by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG] brought some adverse votes by reason of the presence in that amendment of provisions dealing with inheritance taxes and gift taxes. The amendment which I have offered deals alone with income taxes; deals alone with incomes in excess of $100,000 a year and graduates the scale of taxation from 55 percent on incomes of $100,000 up to 75 percent on incomes of a million dollars or more per year.

Without taking any of the time of the Senate, I hope the Senate will accord the privilege of a record vote upon this amendment; and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota, upon which the yeas and nays are requested.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator a question. Is this amendment offered as a substitute?

Mr. NYE. No; it is offered as an amendment to the pending bill.

Mr. BLACK. It is offered in addition to the other taxes?

Mr. NYE. It is.

Mr. BLACK. And provides an increase up to 75 percent?

Mr. NYE. It increases rates that now range from 48 to 55 percent to a range from 55 percent to 75 percent on incomes from $100,000 up to $1,000,000 a year.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk. If there is any objection to this amendment, I do not want to urge it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Louisiana offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed to insert at the proper place in the bill the following:

That all articles and commodities for sale or merchandise transported into any State or Territory wherein a tax is levied by such State or Territory upon the use, sale, consumption, storage, handling, or distribution within such State or Territory of any such commodity or commodities, or remaining therein for use, consumption, sale, storage, handling, or distribution within such State or Territory, shall upon arrival in such State or Territory be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such State or Territory enacted in the exercise of its police power or otherwise, to the extent and in the same manner as though such commodity or commodities had been produced, distilled, refined, or manufactured in such State or Territory, and shall not be exempt therefrom by reason of being introduced therein in original packages or containers or otherwise.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, at a national meeting of all the supervisors and tax collectors of the States they asked to have prepared and introduced a measure similar to the amendment which I have sent to the desk and asked to have put on this bill, because it is very relevant. It will take me only a moment to explain it.

Many of the States have taxes on certain articles—as examples, tobacco and gasoline. In Louisiana, as an example, there is a tax on tobacco, and in Texas there is a tax on tobacco, and in Mississippi there is a tax on tobacco. If, however, one should go to Texarkana and ship the tobacco into Shreveport, then there is no tax, on the ground that that is interstate commerce; or if it is shipped from Shreveport, La., or New Orleans, La., over to Gulfport, Miss., they avoid paying either Mississippi or Louisiana the tax. So that interstate commerce is being used as a fraud to cheat the 48 States of their taxes.

The unanimous request of all of the tax-collecting agencies of the States was that we simply provide that the interstate-commerce clause shall not be used to defraud the States of their taxes but that when these commodities are shipped across State lines they shall be liable to pay the tax in the State the same as though they had been bought in the State.

I hope there will be no opposition to this amendment. I have discussed it with many of the Members of the Senate, particularly members of the Interstate Commerce Committee; and I hope the Senator from Mississippi will accept the amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I am in sympathy with the purpose of this amendment, because I think the States that have adopted a sales tax must be protected from the contiguous States that have no sales tax. This matter, however, is now before the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate. They are giving some consideration to the proposal; and I hope it will not be included in this bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I have a short amendment which I desire to present.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Florida offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 1 it is proposed to strike out lines 3 to 6, inclusive, in the following words:

That section 629 of the Revenue Act of 1932 is amended by striking out the following: "or after June 30, 1933, in the case of articles taxable under section 617, relating to the tax on gasoline."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, this amendment merely involves the question of striking out the gasoline tax of 1 cent a gallon. The present law runs only to June 30 of this year, I think; and the provision which I seek to strike out extends the tax for a period of 1 year.

Mr. HARRISON. Yes; it extends the tax for a year. In other words, if the amendment of the Senator from Florida is adopted, we will lose $137,000,000.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, the States and the people who are contributing this money will be relieved of a very onerous and a very unjust tax, in many instances, if my amendment is adopted. We had quite a controversy over this matter a year ago. Prior to the enactment of this law levying a 1-cent tax, a great many of the States had not only practically preempted the field of taxation on gasoline and other fuels but they had already levied taxes that were almost prohibitive and certainly were exceedingly unreasonable and excessive. That was true in my own State and true in many other States.

In Florida we have to pay, under State exactions, 7½ cents per gallon on gasoline, as I understand, exclusive of the Federal tax of 1 cent a gallon. In addition to that, we have to contribute whatever the duty and the protection clause brings into the Treasury on account of the tariff which is written into this bill of 2½ cents a gallon on gasoline. We have a gasoline tax of 2½ cents a gallon in the nature of a tariff. Of course, that applies only to importations; but if it has any virtue, and is accomplishing any purpose that it is intended to accomplish, it necessarily helps to increase the price of gasoline to the consumer.

I notice that the committee states that this tax should be abandoned next year to the States. I think the time has already arrived for abandoning the tax. That is an acknowledgment on the part of the committee, found in its report, that the tax should be levied only for this one year, and then should be abandoned to the States. The only difference between the committee and myself is that I think the time has already arrived to discontinue this tax of 1 cent a gallon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL].

The amendment was rejected.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, on behalf of the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], I desire to have the statement appear in the RECORD that he has been detained during the entire day in the preparation of the emergency public-works and industrial-control legislation, and for that reason has been unable to be present and vote.

NATIONAL MARITIME DAY

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I ask that a joint resolution favorably reported today by the Committee on Commerce be laid before the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the joint resolution (S.J.Res. 50) designating May 22 as National Maritime Day, as follows:

Whereas on May 22, 1819, the steamship The Savannah set sail from Savannah, Ga., on the first successful transoceanic voyage under steam propulsion, thus making a material contribution to the advancement of ocean transportation: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That May 22 of each year shall hereafter be designated and known as "National Maritime Day", and the President is authorized and requested annually to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe such National Maritime Day by displaying the flag at their homes or other suitable places and Government officials to display the flag on all Government buildings on May 22 of each year.

Mr. GEORGE. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the joint resolution was considered by the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY—LETTER FROM J. ADAM BEDE

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President, I am just in receipt of a letter from former Congressman J. Adam Bede, who was, while in the House, a member of the Rivers and Harbors Committee, and who has for many years past been an ardent advocate of the St. Lawrence seaway.

This letter contains many points that those who, through lack of information, are against this waterway, should read.

I ask unanimous consent that this letter may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HON. THOMAS D. SCHALL,

United States Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR: I am writing you as to one sitting in darkness who may lead a nation into light.

There is pending in the Senate a proposed treaty with Canada for the completion of the St. Lawrence seaway, a self-liquidating project which need not take a dollar out of the Federal Treasury. A nominal toll on the tonnage of the Great Lakes will cover the maintenance and interest and also amortize the capital cost. This is believed to be the President's plan.

Why should anyone object to such a project? Why should even a Cape Cod Yankee complain, though his ancestry be Scotch? The seaway would cost him nothing and would bring ocean ships up a water stairway to Lake Superior, 602 feet above the ocean, and into the very heart of the continent, where the transportation troubles begin.

Through such a seaway the ores and agricultural products of the West would be exchanged for the industrial products of the East. What harm could come from unloading a few million barrels of flour in the harbors of New York, Boston, Baltimore, and Philadelphia? Vegetables cannot bear the long rail haul, but they would move by water. What is there wrong about it in morals or economics? If New England is afraid to trade with the West—with her own, for we are very largely of her stock—she should tear down Fanuel Hall and join the Irish Free State. I once asserted that the Pilgrims never would have landed in New England if they hadn't been seasick, but they had to get off somewhere. So they huddled in the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. They are a good but parochial people who think in counties instead of continents. They ought to use their home State for a post-office address and be Americans for a while. New England is blind to her own interests if she does not support the seaway; and why did the West come into the Union if not that she might trade with her own? Free trade among the States is a cardinal principle of our Government, and yet the East is eager to maintain barriers against it. She should reread the Constitution before she refuses us the right to buy our own freedom.

RAILROAD OPPOSITION

Then, too, the railroads oppose the seaway, although it will prove to be a feeder for them. We gave them their property through land grants, bonuses, Government contracts, gifts of terminals, town sites, and in other ways, but they have made a failure of their undertaking. They have gambled in Wall Street, wrecked their own properties, robbed the public, and now stand in the bread line asking dole under the pauper's oath, while in the same breath they tell their benefactors how to run the world.

"Everybody knows that the railroads are up against new conditions which for years they refused to recognize, and no sane person wishes them any harm. But why should the railroads strike at the waterways which are really their helper and handmaid? The interlakes waterway has made it possible to move more than a billion tons of iron ore from the Minnesota mines which otherwise would still be lying buried in our hills. The railroads carried this vast tonnage from the mines to Lake Superior, and from Lake Erie to Pittsburgh, and then distributed the finished product. They have received several billion dollars in freight charges, and that isn't all. Our ores have reduced the cost of their locomotives, rails, and all other equipment. And still, backed by sordid wealth without a soul, they fight the seaway. They have kept experts, economic prostitutes, who will gladly predict ruin while you wait and endeavor to turn back the hands of time for a price."

The present depression will not always endure, and the railroads will be in hell or on high before the seaway can function. So they are only borrowing unnecessary trouble. In another decade the country will be crying for transportation that it can't buy unless not only the seaway but, also, our internal waterways are pushed to an early completion.

And notwithstanding all the railroad propaganda against competing automotive vehicles, airways, waterways, and pipe lines, the freight and passenger revenues of the railroads have both greatly increased during the period of these innovations.

For the 5 years 1911 to 1915, inclusive, the passenger revenues of all the roads were $3,268,113,000; and for the 5 years 1927 to 1931 they had increased to $4,027,174,000, though including 2 years of the depression.

In the same 5-year periods the freight revenues were: 1911 to 1915, $9,932,105,000; and 1927 to 1931, $21,452,677,000.

The truth is that the auto, truck, and bus have helped the railroads by the vast increase of traffic their manufacture has created, and by the unprofitable short-haul freight and passenger business of which they have relieved the rails. The railroads have carried fewer passengers, but they have carried them farther, and the all-night Pullman passengers, often on special-fare trains, are the cream of the trade. The profitable through freight also moves by rail.

If the railroad companies cannot successfully manage the properties which the public gave them, they should not penalize their benefactors for their own shortcomings. Every step of progress they have made has been forced on them—the prohibition of rebates and passes, the adoption of safety brakes and couplings, installation of safety devices, the use of refrigerated cars, and many more. In the heyday of their power they were as ruthless as any feudal lord that ever oppressed a bewildered tenant, and they cared no more for the statutes of a State than a tomcat cares for a marriage license. Their slogan was: "L'état, c'est moi."

They pay no debts but liquidate one stock or bond issue with another, and gamble in their own securities on inside information. If they would run Wall Street through a wringer they would have a waterway of their own.

The modern railroad manager is merely a thing in the hands of a big banker, a sort of "jimmy" with which high finance breaks into the treasure box of the people. And all of these "things" are against the St. Lawrence seaway which will have no stock to gamble in.

FEDERAL AID TO COMMERCE

It is illuminating to know how much the Government has appropriated for rivers and harbors and where it has been spent. The following table shows that those who are now complaining loudest have received the most:

EASTERN CITIES OPPOSE SEAWAY

Having received vast subsidies themselves, the Atlantic seaboard cities and industries now turn against the Midwest in its distress. The lower Mississippi valley and the Gulf cities have been the beneficiaries of Federal munificence, not only in river and harbor improvements but in flood control as well, and in the Panama Canal which gives them the commerce of the Pacific Coast from two continents and has opened up a large Oriental trade. These facts, when properly presented, receive a favorable response and there is almost universal support for the seaway in the South. The Coastal Canal from Boston to Corpus Christi, now more than half completed, is another factor which moves the Dixie Democrats to a reciprocal friendship for the marooned millions in the landlocked West.

We helped to build the canal that has made Houston the metropolis of Texas, the jetties in the Mississippi that put New Orleans forever on the map, and the channels that brought the ocean to Mobile. Their people should certainly be responsive to our appeals.

While a member of the Rivers and Harbors Committee long ago I personally urged the deepening of the Delaware River to take Philadelphia off the Schuylkill and put her on the ocean. And now she bitterly fights the claims of the Great Lakes cities that merely ask permission to build, at the expense of their own commerce, a channel which will give them access to the sea.

New York City is perhaps the worst of the seaboard babies crying out so lustily against the rights of the inland empire. It is boastfully asserted that she pays 30 percent of our national taxes, and that we must not burden her people with the seaway. We do not ask her for a dollar. We helped to build her harbor and take Hell Gate out of the East River channel, and now if she has stolen herself into bankruptcy we merely ask her permission that we may build a channel of our own.

But does New York pay 30 percent of our national taxes? Is she not merely the keeper of the national tollgate, taking her rake-off as our commerce passes by? We make no complaint, for great cities in so great a country must needs be, but let no such huddle of humanity forget its creator or its redeemer. Only for the hinterland Manhattan Island would be nothing but a fishing village and would have to send to Jersey for bait.

SOME PERTINENT FACTS

The Midwest is farther from deep-water navigation than any other agricultural area in the world.

The Panama Canal has aggrandized the seaboard cities and penalized the prairie States, causing them to lose both commerce and Congressmen.

We need lower freight rates, lower interest rates, and lower taxes. The last we can secure for ourselves; for the others we must look to the Government.

The Seaway would put the immediate Northwest in the garden area of the Atlantic cities and would give back to us what the Panama Canal has taken away.

No coast city will be robbed of its commerce but have it quickened instead. The chief use of the seaway will be for coastwise trade.

The internal commerce of the United States is greater than the commerce of all the rest of the world combined, and we merely ask permission to increase its volume by trading with our own.

We have gladly helped to build a hundred harbors on every shore and now seek only economic emancipation to be bought and paid for by ourselves.

New York gets the power and pays for it. The world gets the seaway and pays for it from the commerce that uses it. So nobody gets hurt.

The certain coming of the seaway would allay much of the spirit of revolt in the West. It would immediately cause large private investments for harbor facilities, thus employing thousands of laborers who have long been in distress. The mere announcement that the treaty has been ratified would change the psychology of many millions of people.

There are some sincere friends of the seaway who are opposed to the treaty because of its provisions affecting the flow of water from Lake Michigan for the use of the barge canal to the Gulf, but some satisfactory understanding with them can undoubtedly be reached.

It is a stock argument to say that the canal will be frozen half the year and will therefore be useless. The average open-navigation season for a long period of years on the Great Lakes has been more than 7½ months, and more tonnage passes through the channels at Detroit than transits any other point on the globe.

The cost of the project is not of great importance so long as we pay it ourselves. But it may be well to say that at present prices of materials and labor the work in the International section, which is the real seaway, will not be far either way from $100,000,000. The engineer estimates are based on 1926 prices and are probably 25 percent above present cost. Most of the other work provided for in the treaty would be done sometime whether the seaway is constructed or not, and much of the work in the estimates is already done, for which each Government is properly credited.

Canada has a friendly premier with a parliament still held in session awaiting the treaty. Now is our time to act. A delay till next winter might mean for several years if in the meantime there should come any change in the Canadian Government.

For half a century the people of the West have been looking and longing for the sea. Hope deferred maketh the heart sick. So last year the worm turned, and although Minnesota had never voted Democratic for President before, Roosevelt carried 86 of its 87 counties, and the one that failed him is up on the north shore of Lake Superior, where a moratorium is considered merely an extension of the hunting season.

It was a real political revolution and demonstrates that the people want action. If Roosevelt gives us the seaway we shall hark back to the War of the Roses and declare that "Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious summer by this son of York."

I hope you will use your great influence to the utmost in our behalf in this crisis, which to us is a supreme occasion.

Sincerely,

J. ADAM BEDE.

GUARANTY OF DEPOSITS IN TEXAS STATE BANKS

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I present for publication in the RECORD a statement entitled "Sixteen Years of Guaranty of Deposits in Texas State Banks, January 1, 1910, to January 1, 1926", by Hon. Thomas B. Love, former Commissioner of Insurance and Banking for Texas, and former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SIXTEEN YEARS OF GUARANTY OF DEPOSITS IN TEXAS STATE BANKS, JANUARY 1, 1910, TO JANUARY 1, 1926

(A statement based on official records compiled by Thomas B. Love, of Dallas, Tex., former commissioner of insurance and banking for Texas, and former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.)

During the panic of 1907 nearly all of the banks of Texas were forced to impose upon themselves the limit of paying to their depositors only $10 in any one day; and, as a result, there was much agitation for some system of safe and adequate protection of the depositors in the Texas State banks.

In the fall of 1907 the Dallas News opened and led for more than a year a brilliant fight for a depositors' guaranty fund law. Hon. Thomas Mitchell Campbell was Governor of Texas then, and I was commissioner of insurance and banking, and both of us did everything possible to promote such legislation. Hon. C. M. Cureton, then a member of the Texas House of Representatives and now chief justice of the supreme court, was the author of the depositors' guaranty fund law which was enacted by the legislature of 1909 and was put into operation January 1, 1910.

It has been repeatedly stated that the guaranty of bank deposits in Texas "proved a failure"; and in 1932 Mr. J. W. Pole, then Comptroller of the Currency, testified before the House Banking and Currency Committee that the Texas guaranty of deposits law resulted in a "deficit of $16,000,000." Mr. Pole was mistaken. Every depositor in every guaranty-fund bank in Texas was paid in full. There was no deficit, but a substantial surplus was distributed among the banks when the fund was wound up.

This law remained in effective operation for exactly 16 years, or until January 1, 1926; and the undeniable official records show that during the 16 years of its operation it protected absolutely, without the loss of a penny to any depositor, all of the deposits in several hundred Texas State banks (averaging more than 800 throughout the period), and that the cost of the guaranty to the banks averaged about fifty-five one hundredths of 1 percent on their deposits for each year, or about $900 per year per bank; and the records prove that these 800 and more State banks, during these 16 years when their depositors were absolutely guaranteed against loss, yielded larger profits to their stockholders than did the hundreds of national banks of Texas, which provided no such guaranty for their depositors during the same period.

Nominally, this law remained on the statute books until it was repealed in 1927; but it was effectually wrecked and rendered nugatory by the legislature of 1925, which passed an act providing that any of the banks in the system, all of which had voluntarily agreed to mutually guarantee the depositors of all, might be released from its obligation and quit the guaranty-fund system by giving an indemnity bond for the protection of its depositors.

The question is asked: "Why was the law repealed?" The answer is that some of the larger banks in the system, which were called upon to pay substantial assessments during the early years of the 1920's, became convinced that the guaranty fund, which had built up their deposits and business, would be unnecessary to maintain their deposits in the future; and that by getting out of the system they could save the cost of the guaranty and add that much to the substantial profits they were earning after paying the cost of the guaranty. Consequently they maneuvered the passage of the bill referred to, permitting banks to quit the system, and immediately following the passage of this act, the number of guaranty-fund banks was reduced from 829 at the beginning of 1925 to 104 in 1926 and to 34 in 1927.

It is significant that the State bankers, who led the movement to dissolve the Texas guaranty fund system in 1925, are today heartily supporting the proposal to provide for a system of Federal indemnity of depositors in all banks.

GROWTH IN NUMBERS OF THE TEXAS GUARANTY FUND BANKS

The records of the State banking department at Austin show that the number of banks whose deposits were guaranteed by the bank guaranty law, at the beginning of each of the 16 years that the law operated were as follows:

1911.....	627
1912.....	698
1913.....	744
1914.....	849
1915.....	849
1916.....	778
1917.....	785
1918.....	821
1919.....	838
1920.....	907
1921.....	984
1922.....	864
1923.....	915
1924.....	911
1925.....	889

Thus the guaranty-fund banks increased from 515 at the beginning in 1910 to 889 in 1925, a gain of over 72 percent.

It will be found by striking an average that the deposits in 818 Texas banks were guaranteed under the law for each of the 16 years.

GRWTH IN DEPOSITS OF THE TEXAS GUARANTY-FUND BANKS

The amount of deposits in these guaranty-fund banks protected by the law at the beginning of each of the 16 years was as follows:

1910.....	$37,857,732
1911.....	47,058,812
1912.....	49,835,246
1913.....	78,153,412
1914.....	73,837,993
1915.....	55,059,627
1916.....	74,747,432
1917.....	123,011,538
1918.....	167,868,140
1919.....	126,386,933
1920.....	268,970,780
1921.....	218,185,710
1922.....	179,145,391
1923.....	201,303,939
1925.....	241,377,754

It will be noted that these figures grew from $37,857,732 in 1910 to $241,377,754 in 1925, a gain of more than 500 percent. It will likewise be noted that the average deposits per bank increased during the period from $73,510 at the beginning to $166,430 at the end of the 16-year period, a gain of more than 125 percent, notwithstanding a gain during the same period of over 72 percent in the number of banks.

GROWTH OF DEPOSITORS' GUARANTY FUND

The banking department records show that the amount of cash in the Texas bank-guaranty fund at the end of each of the 16 years involved was as follows:

1910.....	$50,032.58
1911.....	121,442.76
1912.....	135,238.31
1913.....	176,986.31
1914.....	239,544.52
1915.....	260,335.32
1916.....	247,228.61

1917	$217,824.60
1918	295,891.04
1919	403,403.70
1920	463,246.28
1921	445,738.08
1922	347,212.17
1923	654,848.37
1924	441,106.82
1925	746,039.78

The average amount remaining in the fund was $384,972 at the end of each of the 16 years. The records also significantly show that after the guaranty fund law had been practically destroyed by the legislature of 1925, the guaranty fund, as a result of recoveries from liquidations of failed banks, continued to grow for several years, mounting to $928,434.57 for 1926, $1,041,562.79 for 1927, and $1,421,578.49 for 1928.

But the amount in the guaranty fund at the end of each year reflected only a minor proportion of the relief afforded to depositors during the year, for during these 16 years the records show that there was paid to depositors in failed guaranty-fund banks in Texas a total of $17,670,520, or an average per year of $1,104,408, being an average of $1,350 for each bank in the system per year. These figures include payments made after 1925 on account of liabilities which accrued while the system was in operation.

THE COST OF DEPOSIT GUARANTY IN TEXAS

The amount of money paid to depositors in failed banks each year is shown by the records to be as follows:

1914	(¹)
1915	$35,982.93
1916	83,018.35
1918	(¹)
1919	123,606.90
1920	227,114.54
1921	4,450,425.58
1922	2,726,532.22
1923	1,522,735.77
1924	2,159,424.81
1925	3,797,021.73
1926	974,060.54
1930	255,677.71

It will be noted that there were no losses and that nothing was paid out for the first 5 years of the period of the fund's existence, or until 1915; and also that nothing was paid out during the years 1917 or 1918.

But we are told that this system of protecting depositors in Texas State banks imposed an impossible cost burden upon the banks in the system, and that the legislature of 1925 was justified in wrecking the system by statute in order to relieve the banks of this great burden, and recently I heard a Dallas business man tell a legislative committee at Austin that if this bank guaranty law had not been repealed it would have forced every bank in Texas to close before now.

Let us see what this protection to depositors did cost the banks in the system.

It is not difficult to ascertain precisely what it cost. The banking department records show that the total gross amount contributed by all the banks to the Texas depositors' guaranty fund from first to last was $18,038,060.22, or an average of $1,127,379 per year for the 16-year period, or an average gross cost per bank per year of $1,378.

But these figures show the gross cost from which must be deducted the refunds—the amount of the guaranty fund distributed back to the banks as the liquidation of failed banks progressed, which the records show were approximately $6,000,000, first and last. Deducting this approximately $6,000,000 refunded to the banks from the approximately $18,000,000 contributed in gross by them, leaves as the net cost to the banks for the protection of the depositors in guaranty-fund banks for the 16-year period approximately $12,000,000, or an average net cost per year for all the banks of approximately $914, or a little over $75 per month.

It will be found that this cost averaged for the period a little more than one half of 1 percent of the deposits guaranteed, or, to be exact, fifty-five one hundredths of 1 percent plus.

GROWTH IN PROFITS AND SURPLUS OF TEXAS GUARANTY-FUND BANKS

During this 16-year period the capital surplus and undivided profits of the guaranty-fund banks of Texas are shown by the following table:

	Capital	Surplus	Profits
1910	$13,612,500.00	$1,306,688.53	$1,193,094.21
1911	16,519,000.00	1,904,444.35	1,536,759.14
1912	19,174,500.00	2,498,935.46	2,176,218.21
1913	21,882,500.00	4,270,499.57	2,209,735.39
1914	26,345,500.00	5,684,027.83	2,812,296.91

1926	11,959,000.00	2,582,202.81	901,210.32

GROWTH IN PROFITS COMPARED WITH THAT OF TEXAS NATIONAL BANKS

During the 16-year period the average surplus (including undivided profits) of the guaranty-fund banks of Texas, averaging more than 800 in number, increased by more than 210 percent, in addition to the dividends paid to their stockholders during the period; and the percentage of surplus (including undivided profits) to capital stock of the average guaranty-fund bank increased during the same period from 18.3 percent at the beginning to 38.5 percent at the end, being more than doubled.

During the same 16-year period the records of the Comptroller of the Currency show that the average surplus (including undivided profits) of the national banks of Texas, averaging more than 500 in number for each year of the period, was increased by only 47 percent, aside from the dividends paid to stockholders during the period and the percentage of surplus (including undivided profits) to capital stock of the average Texas national bank decreased during the same period from 68 percent at the beginning to 62 percent at the end.

THE RECORDS PROVE SUCCESS, NOT FAILURE

The above figures have been furnished me by the State Banking Department of Texas and are undoubtedly authentic.

The depositors' guaranty-fund system in Texas was in no sense a failure but a striking success. It made the banks safe for the depositors and at the same time profitable for their stockholders.

The legislative clerk announced Executive C (72d Cong., 2d sess.), a treaty between the United States and the Dominion of Canada for the completion of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep waterway, signed on July 18, 1932, as first in order on the calendar.

Mr. McNARY. I ask that the treaty go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The treaty will be passed over.

UNDER SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Dean G. Acheson, of Maryland, to be Under Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, it will take considerable time to discuss this nomination, and I note that the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] is not here. For that reason I think the nomination ought to go over.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may I say that I have conferred just today with the Secretary of the Treasury. He is very anxious that this matter should be disposed of. On several prior days the nomination has come up and been put over. I have never heard any objection to this gentleman. I am sure the Senator from Maryland will be very glad if the nomination is taken up and disposed of, and I hope we can dispose of it this afternoon.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, I have considerable to say about the nomination as a result of the hearings held by the Finance Committee. If the Senator from Mississippi desires to proceed with it, I will not delay the matter, but as long as the nominee was proposed by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] I thought he ought to be here to respond to the complaints that I am going to make. I am willing to take up the nomination at this time, if the Senator desires.

Mr. HARRISON. I should like to have the Senate take it up now and dispose of it.

Mr. COUZENS. If the Senator wishes to go ahead with the matter tonight, very well.

Mr. HARRISON. I should like to have us go ahead with it tonight.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, on May 5 Mr. Acheson appeared before the Finance Committee. I am not very well prepared to discuss the matter, because I did not expect to go ahead with it at this late hour. What I am going to say has more to do with the policy of appointing Mr. Acheson than with anything that pertains to him personally. I do not know him personally, and therefore have no objection to him as a man; but the facts are that the Treasury Department is now being manned with men whom I believe to be unable because of their former connections to serve the public properly.

When the nomination of Secretary Woodin was before the Senate, I raised the question of his former connections, and expressed some doubt as to the wisdom of his confirmation. During my term in the Senate I have protested against filling the Treasury with officials who are in a position to obtain benefits for themselves, to favor their former clients, and to do favors for special groups.

There is no department of the Government where such secrecy is maintained; there is no department of the Government where the records are so inaccessible. Every Senator who has been here during the consideration of a tax bill knows that repeated efforts have been made to make income-tax returns public records. Every Senator who has been here for some time knows that at one time we enacted a law making the amount of the income taxes payable by citizens a matter of public record. That law was made a kind of a joke of by the administration, and when I say that I say it entirely as a nonpartisan, because the Republicans were then in power. What happened was that literally thousands, and hundreds of thousands, and, if I am not mistaken, millions of names were printed in the newspapers, showing the amount of taxes each individual had paid, when it was well known that that was not the intent of the Congress. What Congress intended, so far as I could interpret the intention, was that these records might be open so that the public might examine them to the same extent that assessments in municipalities are open records, where one citizen may look at the records to see the extent of the assessment on his neighbor's property.

Mr. President, for years Congress has endeavored to enact legislation so that the Government would not be defrauded by the filing of false returns, and in cases where the examiners or the administrative officers were not able to protect fraudulent or erroneous income-tax returns, then the public might advise the administrative officials of the opportunities of omissions from income-tax returns.

Some years back the Senate appointed a special committee, made up of the former Senator from Indiana, Mr. Watson, the late Senator from New Mexico, Mr. Jones, the former Senator from Kentucky, Mr. Ernst, the Senator from Utah, Mr. King, and myself. We spent a great deal of time and Government money investigating the operations of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

During the progress of the examination thousands of income tax returns were examined. Many memoranda were found in the records indicating that special consideration was to be given certain taxpayers. While I am on that subject, I may say that we have now pending before the Finance Committee a nomination for Commissioner of Internal Revenue, which, by the way, is in my judgment a much more important appointment than the appointment of the Under Secretary of the Treasury. The two, considered together, indicate clearly to me, after the confirmation of Mr. Woodin, that there is to be an administration of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and perhaps of the Treasury Department as a whole, by men who have specific and definite interests in being there. I am not going far enough to charge that these men are going to be dishonest, I am not going far enough to say that they are dishonest, or that they have ever been so, but I submit that it is not human for the administrators in the Treasury Department thoroughly and honestly to administer the income tax section in particular without a recognition of their former clients and a recognition of their friend in arriving at tax assessments.

Mr. President, that in itself does not necessarily mean favoritism or dishonesty, because there are hundreds of thousands of close cases, cases where the Bureau might decide one way or the other and the decision would be considered as honest. There are thousands and thousands of rulings in the Bureau of Internal Revenue today which have never been published. There are thousands of rulings which have been rendered favoring one taxpayer when another taxpayer with a like set of circumstances has not been able to receive the benefit.

Hundreds of millions of dollars of taxes have been lost to the Federal Government because of the secrecy maintained in the Bureau of Internal Revenue with respect to income taxes. The evidence the special committee took clearly showed that questions involving matters like oil discoveries, the depletion of oil wells, depreciation, obsolescence, matters of that kind, were decided in dozens of different ways, dependent upon who the taxpayer was or who handled the case in the Bureau.

Not only that, but thousands of employees who were in the Bureau during a large part of the period of the administration of the income-tax law have left the Bureau and have gone out into private practice and solicited cases which they knew were under consideration in the Bureau. The senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], who was once a famed Secretary of the Treasury, has told the Senate of cases where officials or employees of the Bureau of Internal Revenue have deliberately overassessed citizens, and at the same time notified their coconspirators or colleagues outside of the Bureau that the overassessments were being made.

There are dozens of cases where a taxpayer receives a notice from the Bureau of Internal Revenue that an additional assessment has been made, and at the very moment the taxpayer receives the special assessment notice a tax expert appears at his office and offers to take the claim.

Cases are of record where a taxpayer would ask the tax expert, or accountant, or lawyer, or engineer, "How did you know that I received this extra assessment?" And the solicitor has said, "Well, I had information from the Treasury Department that they were about to make the assessment, and I wanted to get here promptly in order to be retained."

There is evidence now before the Finance Committee just along that line. There is evidence now pending before the committee concerning the nomination of one man for the Treasury Department where, immediately upon a taxpayer receiving notice of a special assessment, this man or his associates appeared and asked for the business. There is evidence in volumes to that effect. Notes were found in the Treasury Department to this effect, "This is a Mellon institution", and no tax was to be assessed.

Mr. President, this clearly shows how important it is to have men administering the income tax laws who have had no outside affiliations or former connections with persons who might influence them or persons who might be benefited by their decisions.

Mr. Acheson appeared before the committee, I think on the 5th of May, and I read from the record. The senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] was presiding, and he said:

Mr. Acheson, you have been nominated as Under Secretary of the Treasury, and the committee felt they wanted to look you over and might want to ask you some questions.

STATEMENT OF DEAN G. ACHESON

Mr. ACHESON. I am delighted to come up, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. You are from Maryland, are you not?

Mr. ACHESON. Yes, sir; I have a place at Sandy Springs, Md.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you lived there?

Mr. ACHESON. I moved out there in the spring of 1925.

The CHAIRMAN. Where did you come from to there? Where did you live before then?

Mr. ACHESON. I have a house in Washington. Perhaps if I begin at the beginning it would be better.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. ACHESON. I was born in Connecticut and lived there until after the war. Then I came down to Washington as secretary for Mr. Justice Brandeis and intended to stay only a short time with him, and I stayed 2 years, and then went into Judge Covington's law firm and practiced law ever since. I have lived in Georgetown and have a house there. Then I bought this place in Sandy Springs, and we live there a little more than half the year.

Senator COUZENS. What was your practice when you were with Judge Covington?

Mr. President, I want to point out that Judge Covington is a well-known Washingtonian, who, I understand, served in Congress at one time, and has made a great deal of money in practicing before the departments in Washington, and particularly before the Bureau of Internal Revenue. If I have made any error in that statement I stand willing to be corrected, because I am trusting somewhat to my memory.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator might state that he has served as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the District.

Mr. COUZENS. Chief Justice of the District of Columbia; yes. I was making reference more particularly to how he had made his money.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I think it ought to be said also that Judge Covington is engaged in the general practice of the law. He has not specialized, I think, in cases before the Treasury. He is recognized as a lawyer of ability, a former Member of Congress from Maryland, a former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the District, and he is engaged in general practice here.

Mr. COUZENS. I am not saying otherwise. I was coming to the fact that he represents many large corporations that have to do with legislation, and, if I remember correctly, represented Charles Mitchell when he was before the Banking and Currency Committee under investigation in the National City Bank case.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COUZENS. I yield.

Mr. LONG. I have been out of the Chamber, and I inquire who else particularly besides Charles E. Mitchell has he represented—some other big corporations?

Mr. COUZENS. A great many.

Mr. LONG. Is he interested in the Morgan chain of banks or anything like that?

Mr. COUZENS. Not that I know of. I want to be perfectly frank. I have known Judge Covington for a long time; I know he was here during the Wilson administration; I know that he has a very large office and a great many clients. I am going to take up the question of his clients later on.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit a further interruption, it must be admitted that Judge Covington's is one of the largest law firms here, and that it has many clients, some of whom are very large concerns. I do not think there is any denying that fact.

Mr. COUZENS. I am not denying it. I am not trying to hide anything, nor am I trying to make an improper case.

Mr. HARRISON. I understand.

Mr. COUZENS. I want to point out, before I get through, the connection that will inevitably exist between Judge Covington's office and the Treasury Department and other departments of the Government as the result of the appointment of Mr. Acheson. I am not saying there will be anything dishonest about it, but I am saying that the temptation is too great to have public offices filled with men with such previous connections.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair). Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. COUZENS. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES. I merely want to ask the Senator a question, and I think the same thought prompted the Senator from Mississippi. The Senator from Michigan would not want to create the impression that Judge Covington's firm was engaged solely in business of representing clients before the departments, but would admit that the firm has been one of the prominent law firms of this city engaged in the general practice as trial lawyers in the courts, not specializing merely in representing clients before the departments of the Government? I think the Senator will agree to that.

Mr. COUZENS. I think that is a correct statement. I am going to relate later on some connections of Judge Covington's office. I mention that not as a reflection upon Judge Covington himself, but I merely mention it because it was testified by Mr. Acheson that he had been connected with Judge Covington's office, and I think it is generally known as "the Covington firm."

Mr. BYRNES. Will the Senator yield further?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield further to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. COUZENS. Certainly.

Mr. BYRNES. And did it not appear in the testimony that Mr. Acheson was formerly the clerk of Mr. Justice Brandeis?

Mr. COUZENS. I just read that.

Mr. BYRNES. I did not hear the Senator do so.

Mr. COUZENS. I quote further from the testimony of Mr. Acheson:

I have been almost everything, Senator. I think we have a considerable tax practice. I myself have done most of the international law work. I went with the firm for that purpose in 1922. Our firm was representing the Norwegian Government in an arbitration with the United States that took place under the old Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague, and I prepared that case, which took a little over a year, and went to The Hague and presented it to the court with Mr. Burling, the senior partner.

Senator COUZENS. Have you practiced before the Bureau of Internal Revenue?

Mr. ACHESON. Yes, sir; I have been frequently before the Bureau.

Senator COUZENS. Can you name offhand some of your clients?

Mr. ACHESON. It is hard to think of them now. Going backward—I am now representing Mr. James E. Davidson, of Bay City, Mich. That is my most recent thing. I was doing that up to a few days ago. Before that I represented Mr. Polk, publisher of the—

Senator COUZENS. Polk's Directory?

Mr. ACHESON. Polk's Directory. I represented the Bethlehem Steel Corporation in a case which originated—no, that did not originate in the Bureau. That was in the Court of Claims. These things have completely gone out of my mind.

Senator COUZENS. Perhaps you could get a list and give it to us later on, if it is more convenient?

Mr. ACHESON. That will be a very simple thing to do. They are largely individual taxpayers. There are some corporate taxpayers, but not very many.

Senator COUZENS. Are the cases still open or closed?

Mr. ACHESON. I think there are about three that are still open.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you recall those cases that are still open?

Mr. ACHESON. Yes; there may be more than three. The ones that are still open are Mr. James Davidson, an estate tax case. There is the case of one of the partners of Price Waterhouse, a comparatively small one, which is still open. There is the case of an individual, Daniel Altland, of Detroit, which is still open.

Senator COUZENS. How did you come to get all of these Detroit cases? Most of everything seems to come from Michigan.

Mr. ACHESON. Mr. Bonchroon, who is a partner of Price Waterhouse has been a friend of mine for a long time, and almost all the things he has here he sends to me.

The CHAIRMAN. Judge Covington, your law partner, was on the bench of the Supreme Court of the District here, was he not? He was chief justice?

Mr. ACHESON. Chief justice; yes, sir.

Senator BARKLEY. And a former Member of the House?

Mr. ACHESON. Yes.

Senator CONNALLY. Was the case you had in Norway these shipping claims?

Mr. ACHESON. Yes.

Senator BARKLEY. These tax cases—are they for refund or are they protesting against increased assessments?

Mr. ACHESON. I think there is only one case for a refund that I recall now. That is the case of what was the First National Bank of Detroit, in regard to its 1929 and 1930 tax. That has now left the Bureau and there will be suit in the district court of the United States. The Bureau has assessed the tax finally, the tax has been paid, and the next step is a suit for refund.

Senator KING. Are any of these dealings that you had, or your relations, with the tax department of the Government such that they would prove embarrassing to you in the duties of this office?

Mr. ACHESON. I do not think they would in any way, Senator.

Mr. President, I am speaking off the record now, but it is that kind of thing that has been coming up all the years during which I have been in Congress; it is this question of whether or not public officials who are administering billions of dollars of tax income are to be embarrassed by favors that they may be asked to accord to their former clients or to their business associates or to firms of which they have previously been officers.

The record is perfectly plain that during the administration of Mr. Mellon hundreds of millions of dollars were either refunded, canceled, or credited to the account of firms through secret rulings within the Department.

Mr. President, I am not even saying that those rulings were wrong; I am not saying that they were dishonest; I am trying to prove the opportunities within the Department to do favors at the expense of the Federal Government. My contention has always been, Mr. President, that men should not occupy these places who will be subjected to such temptations or who would be subject to embarrassment because of their former connections.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. COUZENS. I yield.

Mr. FLETCHER. What has the Under Secretary of the Treasury to do with these matters? Are they involved in the Under Secretary's functions?

Mr. COUZENS. The Under Secretary, in the absence of the Secretary, has complete control of the Department; he has complete control of the Bureau of Internal Revenue and every Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. It was quite evident from the examination we made over a period of years that one could not go into any department or any bureau or any division of the Treasury Department where the influence of the superior officers did not permeate.

I read again from the record:

Senator COUZENS. You would have to pass upon the decisions, I suppose, that the Bureau might render, since I notice the law requires the Treasury to approve those matters, and I suppose the Under Secretary, you, as Under Secretary, would have that responsibility?

Mr. ACHESON. I suppose I would in respect to any of the refunds. Cases of additional taxes would not, as I understand it, come before me at all.

Senator REED. Mr. Acheson, what financial experience have you had?

Mr. ACHESON. I have had practically none, Senator.

Senator REED. Have you made any study of public finances at all?

Mr. ACHESON. None at all.

The CHAIRMAN. Where did you attend school, Mr. Acheson?

Mr. ACHESON. I went to Groton School, in Massachusetts, and I went to Yale University and the Harvard Law School.

Senator BARKLEY. Were you an applicant for this place?

Mr. ACHESON. No, sir; I was not.

Senator COUZENS. Who was your sponsor—Senator Tydings?

Senator TYDINGS, who was present, said:

Of course, of course.

The CHAIRMAN. You said you were not an applicant for it, Mr. Acheson?

Mr. ACHESON. Not at all.

The CHAIRMAN. The suggestion came from without?

Mr. ACHESON. I had absolutely no knowledge of this at all until the Secretary asked me to come over and see him; and when I went over, he asked me if I would do this job for him.

Senator COUZENS. Is your firm also a representative of the International Telephone & Telegraph Co.?

Mr. ACHESON. Yes; they are.

Senator COUZENS. And Mr. John Marshall is also a member of your firm?

Mr. ACHESON. He is associated with our firm. He is not a member of our firm.

Senator COUZENS. Do you represent in any way the Radio Corporation of America?

Mr. ACHESON. I believe that we do. Whether we represent them generally, or in specific litigation, I don't know. I, myself, have never had anything to do with those general retainers, and I don't know what goes on exactly.

There is a suit, I believe, in the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, and I understand that our firm is representing the Radio Corporation there.

Mr. President, Mr. Acheson is perfectly frank; I do not charge him with being otherwise. Mr. Acheson has been a member of this firm that represents big corporations, such as the Radio Corporation of America, the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., and many others, to which I will refer later on when I come to read the list of clients he had before the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

I quote further from Mr. Acheson's testimony:

Senator COUZENS. Do you represent the Van Sweringens in any cases?

Mr. ACHESON. Mr. Marshall does. That is his own retainer. My firm has nothing to do with that and is not connected with it in any way, either sharing in the fees paid or participating in any advice. We have no knowledge at all of what is done in that.

Senator COUZENS. You have quite a lot of corporate affiliations, do you not?

Mr. ACHESON. My firm does.

Senator BARKLEY. Do you represent any New York banks that are known as "international bankers"?

Mr. ACHESON. In these recent hearings Judge Covington represented the National City Bank. Whether that is an international bank or not, I do not know.

Senator COUZENS. I would say it is a very decided international bank, according to the testimony before the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Senator BARKLEY. Does your firm represent J. P. Morgan in any way?

Mr. ACHESON. Mr. John Davis represents J. P. Morgan & Co., and he occasionally asks Judge Covington for his advice on specific questions. We have no general retainer or any specific employment by them.

Mr. President, story after story has come orally, that does not appear in the record, of Mr. Acheson's affiliation. Not only he and his firm have been affiliated with J. P. Morgan & Co., but with the International Telephone & Telegraph Co. and the Radio Corporation of America, and yet he and Mr. Woodin, who has been a close affiliate of the New York group for years, are to have complete charge of the Treasury Department of the United States.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. COUZENS. I yield.

Mr. LONG. It is clear that the Senator has qualified Mr. Acheson because he has now proved that he is connected with the house of Morgan. Does not that put him in line with our policy here? It seems to have been the policy of the Treasury that Morgan's hand must be there. When we get that down to where we know it, it seems we ought to wind up the matter and go along according to the accepted rules.

Mr. COUZENS. I do not care to indulge in humor in this connection. I am conscious of the fact of affiliations of the house of Morgan with the Treasury Department over a great number of years, in fact ever since I have been a Member of Congress. But I do not willingly stand here and see a man confirmed for the position to which Mr. Acheson is named without the Senate and the public knowing of the connection.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COUZENS. Certainly.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator referred to rumors floating around, not a part of the record, that Mr. Acheson represents Morgan & Co. It seems to me that the committee had a fair chance to inquire of Mr. Acheson. He was asked about it, and unequivocally stated that he did not represent Mr. Morgan, that Mr. Covington was sometimes adviser to John W. Davis, who represented them. The Senator, I know, does not want to do Mr. Acheson an injustice. If there are any rumors about him representing Morgan & Co., it seems to me the committee ought to have gone farther into them after he denied that he did represent them.

Mr. COUZENS. Perhaps I used an unfortunate word when I said "rumors." I should have said it is general knowledge. Statements have come to me that it is well known that the Covington firm, of which Acheson was a member, was affiliated with the Morgan house.

Mr. BARKLEY. I thought the Senator was referring specifically to Mr. Acheson.

Mr. COUZENS. I was referring to his firm. Of course, Mr. Acheson was a member of the firm and he does not deny it. He was perfectly frank. He was a partner of Judge Covington and said that Judge Covington represented the Morgan house through John W. Davis.

I only want to make a record. I know Mr. Acheson is going to be confirmed. I know that Mr. Acheson and Mr. Woodin are going to be just as much the agents of the Morgan house as anybody we could possibly put in the Treasury Department. I do not believe that President Roosevelt understands or knows all these things. I do not believe that President Roosevelt knows the record behind Mr. Acheson or behind Mr. Helvering, the nominee for the Bureau of Internal Revenue. I want to say frankly that I am a great admirer of President Roosevelt, I want to help in every human way to make his administration a success. Partisanship has never been any part of my make-up. Democrats who have been here since I have been here will recall that I have never cast a partisan vote nor taken a partisan position with respect to any confirmation of anybody for public office, nor have I taken a partisan position with reference to votes on legislation.

Mr. President, I plead that the administration will not fill these important offices with men having the connection that these men had in the past and who will undoubtedly in the future be under the influence of those connections.

Remember, Mr. President, I am not saying, when I use the word "influence", that it is dishonest influence. I am not charging these men with receiving any monetary reward for what they may do for those people whom they have formerly represented. But, Mr. President, I have contacted with men and have associated with men for 50 years, and I know the motives of men and I know what influences men. I know what association does. I know what former connections do and how they influence the judgment of men's minds. I know it can be done in a perfectly honest way and yet not be in the public interest. So I am making this record for history and I hope in the interest of President Roosevelt, and not because I expect to stand here at this late hour and defeat the confirmation.

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], I think, has been unduly urgent in his efforts to secure confirmation at this hour of the day when I was ill prepared to proceed, and yet I did not want to be placed in the position of trying to unnecessarily delay confirmation.

I want to go back and repeat just briefly, in reading from the record:

Senator BARKLEY. Does your firm represent J. P. Morgan in any way?

Mr. ACHESON. Mr. John Davis represents J. P. Morgan & Co., and he occasionally asks Judge Covington for his advice on specific questions. We have no general retainer or any specific employment by them.

Senator CONNALLY. In addition to the duties of the Under Secretary, as the first assistant to the Secretary, does he have supervision over any particular departments over there?

Mr. ACHESON. I understand, Senator, the things that are directly under him are those bureaus that have to do with the public debt. I have a very vague idea of what are the duties of an Under Secretary, but I believe the financing of the Government and anything to do with the public debt comes directly under him.

Senator McADOO. The fiscal bureaus come under the Under Secretary, do they not?

Mr. ACHESON. I think there is one Assistant Secretary, Senator McADOO, who has charge of the internal revenue and another who has the customs.

Senator McADOO. I know that; but when I was Secretary of the Treasury the technical division was the fiscal bureaus, so called, and they were particularly in charge of one of the Assistant Secretaries. But since then I think the Department has been reorganized to some extent, and the Under Secretary having been created, I think he is considered as the right arm of the Secretary, and he acts generally with reference to all bureaus on all questions that arise in the Department.

That is what former Secretary of the Treasury McADOO said:

Mr. ACHESON. That is my understanding.

Senator McADOO. And he is practically the Secretary in his absence; isn't that the jurisdiction you will exercise?

Mr. ACHESON. I think that is about it.

Senator KING. With your understanding of the technic and the modus operandi in and of the Treasury Department, would you say your duties would be similar to those which were performed by Ogden Mills?

Mr. ACHESON. When he was Under Secretary?

Senator KING. Yes.

Mr. ACHESON. I presume they would be.

Senator COUZENS. Have you ever represented the Insulls in any case?

Mr. ACHESON. I don't think we have ever had anything to do with the Insulls.

Senator COUZENS. None of your firm has?

Mr. ACHESON. That is my understanding.

Senator COUZENS. Have you ever represented any of the Kruegers' companies?

Mr. ACHESON. Not at all. We have represented the Swedish Government.

Senator COUZENS. As against the Kruegers?

Mr. ACHESON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any other questions? We thank you very much for coming up, Mr. Acheson.

Senator TYDINGS. Apart from the fact that Mr. Acheson comes from Maryland, I believe you gentlemen will find he will be a pleasant surprise in the office. He has great ability and great industry, and holds high conception of any governmental responsibility, and it is a real pleasure for me to endorse him. I am satisfied the committee will have no regrets if they endorse him.

Senator KING. Mr. Woodin, then, did not initiate the movement to bring him into the Treasury; it came from you; is that it?

Senator TYDINGS. Partly, he did. He wanted a man who had not too much financial connections with banks and so on, yet who had enough general background and industry and general understanding to act in that office, so he told me over the telephone.

Senator KING. He didn't know Mr. Acheson?

Senator TYDINGS. He knew him, but not well. But he investigated him, he told me, very thoroughly and he seemed to be the very character of man he wanted.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much.

Mr. ACHESON. Do I understand you would like me to furnish a list of those cases?

Senator COUZENS. I should like to have a list of those cases that were mentioned, if you do not mind.

Senator KING. The ones he has been engaged in personally or his firm?

Senator COUZENS. His firm, going back for the last 2 or 3 years.

Senator WALKOTT. I might say that Mr. Acheson really comes from Connecticut. His father was formerly Episcopal bishop up in our diocese, and he attended Yale and Harvard.

That ended the giving of testimony by Mr. Acheson. Then afterward there was forwarded to the clerk of the clerk of the committee a letter from Covington, Burling & Rublee, Union Trust Building, Washington, D.C., addressed to Hon. PAT HARRISON, Senate Office Building, and reading:

DEAR SENATOR HARRISON: I am enclosing a list of cases which my partners and I have had before the Bureau of Internal Revenue during the past 2 years, as I was requested to do this morning by the committee.

The letter was signed by Mr. Acheson.

Then there follows a list of firms that were represented, and so as to be perfectly fair I want to put in the classification of the firms as Mr. Acheson presented them to the committee. In the report Mr. Acheson stated:

The firm of Covington, Burling & Rublee has seven partners. In addition, there are seven lawyers who assist the members of the firm.

Of the partners, Mr. Shorb, with two assistants, has for many years devoted himself practically exclusively to tax matters. The cases that have been pending in the office since May 1, 1931, handled exclusively by Mr. Shorb and his assistants, are shown on the list marked "List A." The cases with a star opposite them have been concluded in the Bureau since May 1, 1931.

On "List B" are shown the cases before the Bureau which Mr. Acheson has had charge of since May 1, 1931. The cases marked with a star on this "List B" are those which have been concluded in the Bureau since May 1, 1931.

On "List C" are shown those cases which have been pending before the Bureau since May 1, 1931, in charge of other members of the firm. The cases on "List C" marked with a star have been concluded in the Bureau since May 1, 1931.

I am going to have these lists put in the RECORD completely. I will not take the time of the Senate to read them all. I am going to read a few of the names that appear on list B, which Mr. Acheson says are the ones of which he has had charge. In this connection, I desire to point out that while I am going to read only the names of those of which he has had charge, the list contains the names of his partners' cases, in the success of which I assume he, of course, had a financial interest.

List B, which Mr. Acheson furnished, is as follows:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, MAY 12, 1933

The House met at 11 o'clock a.m., and was called to order by the Speaker.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called children of God! In Thy holy name we would draw apart this quiet moment and acknowledge Thy abounding mercy and find the kingdom of heaven which lies within us. We thank Thee, blessed Lord, that Thou dost measure Thy justice by love rather than Thy love by justice. As time passes on may we lay up for ourselves the rich treasures of friendships, of sweet experiences, and lasting affections; at the last they shall be our chief and abiding fruits of comfort and satisfaction. Each succeeding day, our Heavenly Father, let us see our whole duty, always standing for the rights, honors, and dignities of our fellow men, and in all things do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with Thee. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

OUR PROGRESS TOWARD ECONOMIC RECOVERY

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I had the privilege of being present at a banquet of the American Association of Advertising Agencies at the Mayflower Hotel in this city last night and listened to a splendid and inspiring address delivered over the radio from Pittsburgh by Hon. HENRY T. RAINEY,

Speaker of this House. Mr. RAINEY had expected to be present in person, but was unavoidably detained at Pittsburgh. His address, which dealt with the progress of America toward recovery, is of great interest to the entire Nation, and I ask unanimous consent to have it printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I had the privilege of being present at a banquet of the American Association of Advertising Agencies at the Mayflower Hotel in this city last night and listened to a splendid and inspiring address delivered over the radio from Pittsburgh by Hon. HENRY T. RAINEY, Speaker of this House. Mr. RAINEY had expected to be present in person, but was unavoidably detained at Pittsburgh. His address, which dealt with the progress of America toward recovery, is of great interest to the entire Nation, and I ask unanimous consent to have it printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The address is as follows:

Mr. Toastmaster, ladies, and gentlemen, I regret exceedingly that I cannot personally be with you tonight. I have been engaged in a speaking tour covering three cities yesterday and today, making my dates by airplane. Today, however, I find myself stranded in Pittsburgh on account of the storm, and, therefore, I am compelled to resort to this method of keeping my Washington engagement. In this progressive era through which we are passing I find that the air lines are putting out of business the passenger trains, and then weather conditions, including what are technically called low ceilings, put the airplanes out of business, and I find myself tonight unable to get anywhere, but fortunately the radio furnishes a method of meeting this condition. Perhaps also my audience is fortunate. It will only be compelled to listen to me for 30 minutes of time; otherwise I might have spoken much longer.

In its swing through the centuries this old world of ours has entered an era absolutely new; new conditions confront us everywhere, and new methods must be discovered to meet the new economic problems which are now presented with such force. And that is what we are trying to do in Washington. On the 4th day of March the very structure of this Government of ours seemed to be in danger of collapse. We had entered upon a period of deflation most destructive in its character. We had been told for a long period of time that prosperity was "just around the corner", and that the depression would end in 60 days, that brokers' loans were not too high, and that it was all right to invest in foreign bonds, and this sort of advice continued even after the stock-market crash of the late months of 1929. From every direction came the noise of the crash of failing banks. The buying power of people had been in a large measure destroyed; industry, to an alarming extent, had ceased to operate; factories were closed; 12,000,000 men walked the streets of our cities and roamed our countryside out of employment; and the affairs of this great Government were being permitted to drift upon the theory that there were certain economic laws which were as unchangeable as the laws of gravitation, and the thing to do, they said, was to let everything alone—not to attempt remedial measures but to wait until the processes of deflation were over, and then look forward at some indefinite future time for a recovery.

I deny that there are economic laws as unchangeable as the laws of gravitation. I deny that we must permit the destruction of the accumulated capital of our citizens. This is a world of men and nations, and economic laws can be changed by man-made laws, and so we are forgetting now that such economists as Malthus, Ricardo, and Mills ever lived. At any rate we are disregarding the things they taught. We decline to lie quietly down and permit the great juggernaut of destruction we have built up to roll over us and crush us. We are doing what we can to divert its course. Our constructive program of legislation will be completed early in June, and Congress will adjourn and go home. Already you may notice the effect of what we are doing in rising prices of basic farm products; stocks which have a real value are already registering price increase in our markets; unemployment has perceptibly decreased. The great structure we are building has commenced to operate, but we must complete it all before we adjourn, and this Congress will not adjourn until our program of constructive legislation is finished.

We are building a bridge over a chasm, and we have been pushed now to the very brink of that chasm. Every constructive piece of legislation is simply a section in the bridge we are building, and we must complete the bridge—the bridge which leads from the uncertainties, and the depression, and the fear and suffering of the present time across the chasm to the land where we think the sun is still shining.

Revenues from beer are already larger than we anticipated, and it is not too much to hope that from this source alone there will pour into the Treasury of the United States, during the next fiscal year, $150,000,000. The induced revenue from related industries started in motion from the manufacture of beer will soon be in evidence. The bottling industries of the country are running now with larger forces than they have employed for many months of time; industries which manufacture metal caps are running full blast throughout the country; industries which manufacture barrels are operating, some of them overtime. In the white oak forests of Arkansas, 7,000 sawmills now are operating, and 70,000 men are working there, receiving an average of $8 per day. All through the length and breadth of the land people are regaining their courage; they are looking forward again hopefully to the future; confidence is being restored; fears of people are being dispelled, and back of the constructive leadership which comes now from the White House, Republicans and Democrats are marching hopefully shoulder to shoulder, looking again toward the sunrise.

Our program of reconstruction will succeed; it must succeed. Back in their districts Members of Congress who support the administration program are being applauded. Scores of letters reach the desks of Congressmen and Senators each week urging them to support the program of the administration.

A superman is in the White House—a man who fits into the emergencies of the present, an inspired leader. I often wonder at his powers of physical endurance. Those who work with him in this program, many of them are tired out, and only the enthusiasm which comes from an inspired leadership keeps them moving onward discharging the tasks which are allotted to them.

Fifty thousand young men taken from the ranks of the unemployed in our great cities are now working in the great forest army that we are creating, not under military discipline but under the kind of discipline that develops them physically and brings back to them courage and self-respect. Every one of them is subject to discharge—discharge when he can get a better job—and the work they are doing is adding to the intrinsic value of our national forests. Soon a quarter of a million young men will be working in this great army.

The Muscle Shoals project, upon which the Government has spent so many millions of dollars, has now been rescued from the Water Power Trust and will soon be in operation under Government supervision. The entire Tennessee Valley will soon commence the development which has been planned for it, and this means additional employment for thousands of men. The farm relief bill, fixing living prices for farmers, will be in operation in a day or two under the direction of skilled economists, and in the immediate future we expect to restore the buying power of 7,000,000 farmers and those who are directly dependent upon them in the villages throughout the rural sections of our country, and this means that we are restoring the buying power of a fourth of our population, and in order to advance we must first of all restore buying power to the people of the United States. Farmers all need replacements, and restoration of their buying power will mean the employment of thousands of men in our factories, and the restoration of the buying power of those men will make possible the restoration of the buying power of still other thousands of men. Already the measure which provides for mortgage relief for farmers is about to operate. Moratoriums, payments of past-due interest and taxes, and lower interest rates are all provided in this particular legislation. But while we are restoring economic conditions to normal we cannot afford to permit people to suffer, and a bill providing millions of dollars for direct relief for States will also soon be in operation.

There will soon be in operation a program of public works amounting to $3,000,000,000. Work on roads, work on rivers and harbors, possibly also some naval construction, and probably some public buildings, requiring the kind of appropriation which is expended in a major part in the wages we pay to men. The railroad-relief bill will soon be in operation. The destructive paralleling of railroad lines will soon end. A proper movement of freight and passengers under the direction of a competent administrator will soon bring a much-needed measure of relief to the railroads of the country.

We have put into the hands of the President the power to meet the economic war now being waged against us by foreign nations which has for its evident object the depreciation of the pound sterling in the 31 nations which have gone off the gold standard and the appreciation in value of our own dollar. The object of this economic war has become apparent. With the depreciated pound they can produce cheaper than we can, but they sell to us for gold. They are able with their cheaper production to get over our high tariff walls, and the gold they receive will be earmarked and held by them for exploitation. Our high tariffs and the retaliatory tariffs, running always higher until recently, are compelling our capitalists to invest in branch plants abroad. They are becoming mechanized at our expense, and if their mechanization had reached the point they expected it to reach, it will be easy for them to call back the gold and to leave us with a minimum of that metal and reduce us to the position of a third- or fourth-class power. It has been said, and correctly said of us, that we never lose a war and we never win a convention. In the field of diplomacy we have always been defeated until 3 weeks ago, when the emissaries of foreign governments were on their way, there came the order embargoing gold and we went off the gold standard to the evident chagrin and discomfiture of our commercial competitors among the nations, and we have just passed a bill which places in the hands of the President of the United States a battery or three great 16-inch guns and we have authorized him to fire one or all of them in the economic battle which is now on.

He can revalue the gold ounce. He can authorize the nations which owe us money to pay us a considerable part of what they owe us now in silver bullion which they can purchase at 50 cents an ounce, but when it gets here it becomes dollars. This is free coinage of silver to a limited extent, but I predict it will be popular if it is adopted and that it will not be long until we take decided steps in the direction of a free coinage of this metal at an appropriate ratio which may even eventually reach the historic ratio of 16 to 1, and we have authorized the President through the Reserve banks to issue bonds redeemable in currency which may reach the amount of $3,000,000,000. The revaluation of gold may mean that the debtor classes can pay their debts in the kind of dollars in contemplation when these debts accrued. In giving to the President these powers we will have provided relief for the debtor classes of the country, the kind of relief they were demanding and the kind of relief to which they are entitled.

We will find early in the next fiscal year, I predict, that we have balanced our Budget, that we are no longer borrowing money in order to pay the running expenses of the Government. Better times are just ahead, but too much must not be expected too soon. Recovery from conditions which oppress us now will not be instantaneous; it will be gradual, but from now on every day will be a better day. When we have completed the bridge we are now constructing across the chasm which yawns ahead of us, and when we have safely crossed, we may find ourselves entering with lighter hearts the new era which comes now to this old world of ours, and we may find ourselves standing on the very highlands of the morning, witnessing the dawning of a new day. Already there is appearing across the chasm and over the land to which we are journeying a rainbow of hope. In this brief address I have been able only to outline a part of the reconstruction program of the administration.

INDEPENDENT OFFICES APPROPRIATION BILL

The SPEAKER. The unfinished business is the passage of the bill H.R. 5389, the independent offices appropriation bill. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. WOODRUM) there were 87 ayes and 33 noes.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is no quorum present. The roll call is automatic. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—ayes 250, nays 117, not voting 65, as follows:

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, I am requested to make the following announcements. The following Members were unavoidably absent, but if present would vote "aye": Mr. WILLIAMS, Mr. DRIVER—

Mr. PARKER of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, is it permissible under the rule for a gentleman to make an announcement of that kind?

The SPEAKER. It requires unanimous consent.

Mr. PARKER of Georgia. Then I object.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, I had the floor and had started to announce the names.

Mr. PARKER of Georgia. I think if a Member of the House desires to be recorded he should be here and vote.

Mr. CULLEN. If the gentleman will yield, these men are not able to be present; they are ill. If they were not ill, they would be here.

Mr. PARKER of Georgia. If these Members have communicated with the gentleman from New York and made known to him that they cannot be present and how they would vote if present, and if the gentleman will state that on his own responsibility, I will not object. I do seriously object to the gentleman from New York or any other Member calling the roll of absent Democratic Members of the House and stating how they would vote on certain legislation if present when the announcer does not have personal knowledge that his statements are correct in fact and that he has been authorized to make them.

Mr. CULLEN. I so state. I take the responsibility on my shoulders that they have communicated with me in that regard.

Mr. PARKER of Georgia. I withdraw my objection.

Mr. CULLEN. I now state that the following Members, if present, would vote "aye": Mr. TRUAX, Mr. FIESINGER, Mr. LAMNECK, Mr. DUFFY, Mr. HARLAN, Mr. UNDERWOOD, Mr. HORNOR, Mr. BROOKS, Mr. BRAND, and Mr. MONTAGUE.

Mr. ELLZEY of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, my colleague, Mr. DOXEY, of Mississippi, is unavoidably detained, having been called to one of the departments for a very important conference. If present, he would vote "aye."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

On motion of Mr. WOODRUM, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members of the House may have 5 legislative days within which to extend their own remarks in the RECORD on the independent offices appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the clerk to the Committee on Appropriations be permitted to correct the totals and the section numbers in the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CARPENTER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, before becoming a Member of this body I conducted a campaign in which I set forth certain declarations of what my policy would be if elected. No doubt every Member here did the same thing. No one is more interested in governmental economy than I am, but I think Congress has erred many times in its definition of economy. More than that, I think a great number of the Members have either forgotten or ignored their campaign pledges.

The cost of Federal Government is borne largely by the rich. Income taxes, tariff duties, internal revenues, and other taxes, collected from large corporations and from wealthy individuals, are used entirely for Federal Government expenditures. Now, these taxes and revenues are not borne directly by the people of my district in Nebraska, nor are Federal taxes an immediate problem out there. The pressure from local taxes, however, is particularly acute, and the burden of high interest on money they owe is heavy. Of course, the Federal Government cannot reduce local taxes; and the passage of the farm mortgage bill should relieve the interest burden to some extent. Also, the inflationary measures adopted by this body should raise the price of farm commodities. Thus, insofar as these measures go, this Congress has materially assisted the people of the State of Nebraska.

But there is another problem confronting many individuals in my district, and this Congress has not only failed to help these men but it has actually hurt them. I am referring to the veterans of the World War and the Spanish War. I do not come here to shed tears about "those who gave their all on the battlefields", and grow maudlin in anguish as I pay tribute to those "defenders of the flag." There have been too many such speeches made here entirely for effect and not from sincerity of heart or purpose. Nor am I here to plead for continued pensions and benefits for those who were not injured in service and who are not entitled to Government help.

There are thousands of disabled and deserving veterans in Nebraska, and all of them have been hard hit by the drastic cuts in benefits. There is a regional office at Lincoln where these veterans may appeal for aid, and I want that office continued. I think the veterans of my State are entitled to it. There has been money appropriated by this Congress for almost every purpose known to politicians. We have appropriated here $50,000 to dig up bones of prehistoric animals. Sometime ago Congress voted $3,000,000 to eradicate the fruit fly from the orange groves of Florida. Another Congress spent $5,000 to hang Cal Coolidge's picture in a gallery. There is not enough money appropriated in this bill, however, to carry on the work of this regional office in Nebraska and of similar offices in other parts of the United States.

We have taken pensions and benefits away from the veterans in the name of economy, but we have not provided jobs for them. It is an economic error to reduce wages and disability allowances before bringing a restoration of employment or opportunity otherwise to provide jobs and wages for these men. Now, I ask you why we should continue to advance economy at the expense of the ex-soldiers. Why should we take more crutches away from disabled and crippled veterans?

We have reduced wages affecting the little man. We have taken away pensions from veterans and their dependents. We have been trying to balance the Budget by taking all we can from the little man. Why have we not thought of taking something from the rich? When wages were reduced 15 percent, why did we not reduce the rate of interest we are paying the rich men who hold Government bonds? But instead of that we issued more bonds for the wealthy to buy and hold and collect interest thereon. If we are going to take all we can from the poor man and the veteran, let us take also from those who have the money. I have advocated that we issue ten billions of currency and pay it to the holders of callable Government bonds now drawing interest. The Government is back of both currency and bonds. Both are equally good, except that currency draws no interest while bonds continue to enrich those already wealthy. If we saved this interest on bond issues, we would not have to balance the Budget at the expense of the veteran.

Money paid to veterans of Nebraska is money collected by the Federal Government principally from the rich. That is why the big interests are opposed to any assistance being given to ex-soldiers. When money is paid to Nebraska veterans or Michigan veterans it helps the State. By cutting down benefits to veterans the Government has actually hurt business in Nebraska. It is universally agreed that the depression is being prolonged by a continued failure to improve the buying power of the people. We cannot come out of the depression by taking money from veterans and their families. Rather, I think, the full payment of the adjusted-compensation certificates should be one of the greatest things that could be done now to bring a new prosperity.

Destruction of buying power of the masses has wrought havoc to Nebraska farmers. Lowering wages and cutting veterans' compensations mean that those people cannot buy products from Nebraska farms. We are working backwards on this thing, gentlemen. We are not improving conditions by stripping the veteran of his pittance and then giving it to big business. If the Government has money for railroads, for banks, for insurance companies, and for everything else in the world of big business, it has money to send to the needy veterans of the State of Nebraska or anywhere else.

Let us not be false to our promises. We have double-crossed the veterans long enough this session. We have thrown out all presumptive tuberculosis cases, we have discredited nervous cases, and we have made it almost necessary for a veteran to bring eyewitnesses to prove that he ever saw service. Gentlemen, no one can say what the after-effects of poison gas and shell shock may be. Medical science cannot say how long after a war is over the damage of shock is no longer felt on the nervous system. Spanish War veterans, whose records are lost or misplaced, can no longer expect any mercy from the Government it once defended. You know and I know that many deserving men are not going to get even a hearing on their cases. But Congress can go back and say that it has been "saving money."

Let us have economy, but let us not take everything from the common classes and let the wealthy retain their riches. Their laps are still full of luxury and their incomes are untouched. If we are going to take the livelihood from the small man, for God's sake let us take from the rich man as well. Let us keep our campaign pledges. We were elected by the common people, among whom are the veterans of all wars—for it is always the common people who fight on the field of battle when there is a war. We should legislate for the common people and not for the rich.

Mr. Speaker, in my opinion the Veterans' Administration will be curtailed entirely too much by this bill, the so-called "independent offices bill." I am opposed to its passage. I want the veterans of my State to have regional offices, so they can appeal their claims, and there is not enough money appropriated for it in this bill. I am for economy, but a dollar is less valuable in my sight than the health and welfare of the ex-soldier.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I am whole-heartedly in favor of balancing the Budget. I believe that our national credit must be maintained, else all veterans' compensation, all regional offices, all hospitalization will be but the details of a story of national disaster. But is it necessary to abolish the regional offices to maintain the credit of the United States? Let us take all of the pathos out of this discussion and look at the problem as it actually exists before us in concrete form.

Everyone knows that into the administration of the compensation and pension laws entered graft and fraud. Case after case could be cited of fingers shot off, toes injured, minor difficulties and diseases construed into war-time and peace-time disabilities, entitling the possessor of such troubles to compensation from the Government. Indeed, a member of the present bonus army encamping on a vacant lot back of the House Office Building voluntarily told me today in my office of several cases of the grossest frauds of this kind. I know myself of a practicing attorney at law, making far more money than the average attorney today, who was drawing compensation of this character just a few weeks ago. But, Mr. Speaker, in our enthusiasm to purge ourselves of frauds and deceits let us not in turn become oppressors of the honest veteran who is fairly entitled to care by his Government, for whom he made needed sacrifice.

In my own district in West Virginia veterans residing in the three eastern counties of the State are within the radius of the Washington office. It takes only 2 hours to travel to Washington and in 1 day the examination by the Veterans' Administration and the trip to and from this city is history. Veterans residing in other counties of my district must apply for compensation through the regional office located at Charleston, W. Va. Even then from most parts of my district the Washington office is as easily accessible as the Charleston office. Therefore, my own district would not be greatly affected by the abolishment of the Charleston office and the handling of all claims through the Washington office. Yet, Mr. Speaker, I am enthusiastically in favor of the McCormack amendment. A rate table furnished by any one of the trunk-line railroads will at a glance reveal the hardship which would be worked upon the thousands of honest veterans in all parts of the country who, in many cases, have little enough money for food—far less money for traveling to Washington for examination and presentation of their claims.

It is the least we can do to furnish the truly sick and disabled veteran an opportunity to prove his claim close to home. If the particular claim be false, diligent examining officials may protect the United States Treasury; but at least let us give him his day in court. Let us not add to the despairing outlook of the unemployed veteran the hopelessness of spirit of the thwarted sick veteran.

On April 27 I wrote to the White House the following:

While I voted for the Economy Act in the interest of the American people as a whole, I do not believe it is necessary to work such a hardship upon the veterans by taking away from them these regional offices. It is impossible for the majority of the veterans to travel to Washington on matters pertaining to their disability, etc., and consequently many worthy cases will be neglected.

I am glad of an opportunity to speak in behalf of the McCormack amendment, and I am glad that President Roosevelt has called for a liberalization of veterans' administration. I voted for the Economy Act when it was before the House of Representatives. It was an act to maintain the credit of the United States. It was necessary to the elimination of fraudulent drains on our Treasury. It was necessary to the balancing of the Budget and the restoration of confidence.

As President Roosevelt said in his message to Congress, in order to remedy the grave situation facing the country at that time it was necessary for that legislation to go into effect at once. The President asked for delegation of authority to himself to effect economies "in justice to all" and "with sympathy for those who were in need." I felt that he would be sympathetic to the veterans. I feel now that I did not misplace my trust nor did the American people misplace their trust in delegating such authority to him.

If the measures inaugurated by the President and this Congress in the last few months result in restored confidence, in better business conditions, in lessening of unemployment, they will more effectively alleviate the veterans' distress than all of the allowances ever made in the form of disability claims. In the midst of this business revival the honest disabled veteran asks for retention of the regional offices. He does not ask for approval of his claim without investigation. He asks only for the right to a prompt and sympathetic hearing. Because of his lack of money or unemployment he cannot come to Washington, and to abolish his nearest regional office is, therefore, to deny him a right to such hearing. The $3,000,000 needed for maintenance of these offices is a small sum to pay for the confidence of thousands of citizens in our Government, because we have provided a court in which they may present their claims.

CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE—BOWLES V. DINGELL

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Elections No. 3:

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 9, 1933.
HON. HENRY T. RAINEY,
Speaker of the House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR MR. SPEAKER: There is herewith transmitted petition and accompanying letter relating to the election in the Fifteenth Congressional District of the State of Michigan, held on the 8th day of November 1932, for the election of a Representative in Congress from that district.

Very truly yours,

SOUTH TRIMBLE,
Clerk of the House of Representatives.

COMMITTEE TO VISIT PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following communication:

MAY 10, 1933.
HON. HENRY T. RAINEY,
Speaker House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR MR. SPEAKER: On April 29 Senator Quezon, Senator Osmena, and Speaker Roxas, of the Philippine Legislative Mission, directed a letter to the Vice President requesting that a committee of Congress visit the Philippines soon after the Philippine Legislature has acted upon the Philippine Independence Act, which will be submitted to it at its next regular session in July.

I join in this suggestion, believing that such a visit would be mutually beneficial to the Philippines and the United States.

There is herewith transmitted a copy of the letter to the Vice President, which I respectfully request be laid before the House.

Very sincerely yours,

PEDRO GUEVARA.

SOME PROBLEMS OF TRANSPORTATION

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by placing therein some remarks made by myself to the transportation division of the United States Chamber of Commerce, which met in Washington a few days ago.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, with progress in invention, first one form of transportation and then another appears to be most important. At present, the railroad is the dominant mode. When we inquire as to the relative importance of one agency as compared with others, the answer depends upon the basis for the comparison.

If present capital investment be the basis, the railroad represents the largest investment. The highways, though, are rapidly approaching the railroads in that regard, and within a few years will, no doubt, represent a larger sum of capital. In the amount of freight carried the railroad is of transcendent importance. The ton-miles by rail are about three times the ton-miles by inland waterways. No competitor of the railroad for tonnage shows a definite and steady increase except the trucks. If the basis for comparison be the number of passengers carried, then the privately owned motor car is far and away in the lead. If the number of people to whom employment is furnished be taken as a basis for comparison, then motor vehicles are more than twice as important as their nearest competitor, the railroads. The railroads formerly gave employment to about 2,000,000 people. Today they employ approximately 1,000,000. Motor transportation furnishes employment for about two and one half million.

These illustrations are sufficient to indicate that the American people are not definitely committed to any one particular vehicle, but prefer to choose the vehicle best suited to the needs of the moment. Obviously there is a demand for pipe lines or they would not be operated profitably, as they are. There is a demand for water transportation for certain types of commodities, a promise of permanent accepted service by the airways, and great demand for railway and motor services.

When the railroad first appeared its use was resisted by the owners of steamboats on the rivers, by those interested in canals and toll roads. During the course of two generations the railroad almost achieved a monopoly in transportation. When the railroad was struggling, novel, and still in the experimental stage of its development, it received large subsidies from the Government and all manner of encouragement, because it was recognized as a competitor of the steamboat, the canal boat, the stagecoach, and the freight wagons on the highways. When it was seen that the railroad was about to achieve a monopoly by reason of its advantages the subsidies were withdrawn and the people, through their State and Federal Governments, set up regulatory machinery as a protection against a monopoly. The people have never been quite satisfied that they could get as good results from a regulated monopoly as they could under competitive conditions. For that reason the American people have encouraged the waterways and have welcomed the development of motor transportation as a competitor of the railroads. A proposal to put all of these means of transportation under one company leaves the average American citizen cold, because he sees in such a proposal the substitution of monopoly for competitive conditions.

At present there are two trends in public opinion, as public opinion registers before congressional committees. One trend is toward further regulation and the inclusion of all means of transportation within the jurisdiction which Congress would exercise over transportation. Those making this contention claim that it is unfair to subject the railroads to strict regulation and leave the competitors of the railroads with less regulation. The other trend is toward less regulation of the railroads and is opposed to the exercise of Federal control over the newer modes of transportation.

Those in line with this trend oppose the exercise of Federal control of interstate commerce by motor bus or by airway and favor the repeal of some of the regulation now exercised by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the theory that the railroad has now ceased to have a monopoly, and that no agency at present promises to achieve a monopoly, and that the results of competition between the different means of transportation will give to the public benefits which are fully as acceptable, if not more so, than would follow from regulation. Opinion has not yet fully crystallized, the country has not yet made up its mind which of these alternatives to choose. In the meantime there are those who are earnest in their endeavors to make up the mind of the country. For example, a certain group of security owners have been quite active in arguing for a further extension of the powers of the Federal Government, for consolidations, and for the so-called "coordination of the agencies of transportation." I gather that what they mean by coordination is to place the different agencies of transportation in the hands of a single corporation. That particular group seems to think that such a corporation should be either a railroad company or a company dominated by railway interests.

If all possible inventions could be made at once and the practical and desirable ones could be wisely selected, society might become static and the risks incident to investing money might be reduced to a minimum. It appears that human beings take their time about making discoveries and when they are made it is frequently without warning to those who would be most affected. Consequently, there are inevitable risks in putting money into fixed capital designed to bring to people the benefits of a newly discovered and economical device. The greatest risk is that something more economical and more generally acceptable may be found out. Within a hundred years the owners of turnpikes charging tolls have lost their investments. Canals have become largely obsolete. Electric interurbans brought great wealth to stockholders, and within the past few years have been unable to meet interest on their fixed charges. The owners of livery stables have had to go out of business. The wagon yard has been replaced by the garage. Now the railroads manifest some signs of incipient obsolescence, and the owners of junior securities and of first mortgages on some lines from which the traffic has flown are tactfully suggesting that Government ownership of railroads may be the way out.

In this discussion over the form that regulation should take, whether it shall be more or less, we are being constantly reminded of the numerous agencies for regulating transportation that have been set up by Congress in addition to the State regulatory bodies. It is pointed out that the Interstate Commerce Commission exercises jurisdiction over the railroads, express service, pipe lines, and somewhat over inland waterways, while the Bureau of Public Roads over in the Department of Agriculture was called upon to look after the highways, largely in a promotional way. When we turn to waterways and shipping, in addition to some jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, we have other jurisdiction exercised by the Corps of Engineers of the War Department and the Bureau of Lighthouses and the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection in the Department of Commerce. The Panama Canal is looked after by the President of the United States. The harbors are regulated by the War Department, the Department of Commerce, and the Coast Guard of the Treasury Department. Our inland, coastwise, and intercoastal shipping is fostered by the Department of Commerce, the Treasury Department, and the Shipping Board. And, finally, the Mississippi River Barge System has been committed to the Inland Waterways Corporation, located in the War Department. The youngest and most spectacular means of transportation, the airways, are encouraged and permitted by the Aeronautics Branch in the Department of Commerce, and occasionally have their wrists slapped by the Post Office Department.

Those who believe that the hope of the railroads is to regulate everything else with equal severity point to all these promotional and regulatory activities of Congress in the field of transportation and demand that there be substituted therefor one dominant board or commission which will swing the big stick of Federal authority as heavily against the infant airways as against the giant railways, as lustily on the old and limping water transport as on the new and bumptious motor transport. They call for what they describe as a national system of transportation, under the firm guidance of the Congress and with the inference that all would then be lovely for investors. The other group who want less of Federal regulation point to these varied promotional and regulatory activities of the Congress and say that the changes that should be made are to lessen the authority of some of the commissions and perhaps to abolish some of the activities merely leaving sufficient control to make competition fair and to prevent its becoming unduly destructive. It will perhaps be a long time before we settle down in this country to one unchanging method of promoting and regulating transportation. So long as there are novel, new, and promising modes, there will be subsidies and encouragement by the Government. So long as there are threats of monopoly and the exercise of power by corporations analogous to that of the Government itself, there will be a public fear of such companies and a demand that they be restrained by Federal authority. So long as there are some modes like the railways, devoted almost entirely to interstate commerce, their regulation will, in a large measure, be by the Federal Government. So long as there are other modes, which, like the motor vehicle until recently, are largely intrastate, insofar as corporate activity is concerned, their regulation will be left in the main to the wisdom of the legislatures in the respective States. So long as there are invention, progress, and change, there will be hazards in making investments and losses through obsolescence. So long as there are shippers, security owners, and employees, their respective interest will from time to time appear to be in conflict and the Government will have to provide machinery for arbitration and procedure for orderly adjustment of their differences. Whether the action be by the State or the Federal Government will depend upon the character of the difficulty.

The present plight of the railroads is due only in part to the appearance of the new and competing forms of transport. The railroads have one thing to sell, and that is transportation. It matters not how much the people want to buy this commodity; they are unable to do it. The greatest immediate difficulty has been the present financial depression. That is more serious than it first appeared, because it has turned out to be the result of a mistaken policy on the part of our Government. Unwise tariff laws, complete neglect of markets for agricultural products, a deliberate and conscious diversion of the savings of the people into expanding industrial plants for foreign markets which were artificially created by lending our people's money abroad—all has resulted in a dislocation of the factors of production in this country, which will require time to readjust. As a consequence, carloadings in the railroads are the lowest in many years. Farmers are getting only 7 percent of the value of the national income instead of 15 percent of a few years ago, though they are producing about the same quantity of goods as ever before. That has destroyed their purchasing power to such an extent that many of our factories have had to close down. For example, manufacturers of farm machinery have been running in recent months only 15 percent normal capacity. With more wisdom in national affairs, the railroads will find themselves with increasing business.

It is not sufficient for the Government merely to lend money to the railroads. The taxpayers in this country cannot be expected indefinitely to carry the deficits of those corporations. Yet to permit the railroads to go into receiverships will affect the insurance companies and the savings banks to such an extent as to bring to our country a major disaster.

The mere lending of money by the Government is a palliative; it is treating the symptoms. Something more fundamental must be done.

We must win back our foreign markets for agricultural products, and readjust our production and distribution on a basis which will enable our manufacturers and farmers to prosper together. Second, in regulating the means of interstate commerce we must recognize that the railroads have ceased to have a monopoly in transportation. Our interest in wage earners must include those who work in the new and competing agencies of transport. As a Government, we must not limit our interest in the workers to any one group. We must insist upon reasonable hours, decent working conditions, devices for safety of person, and fair wages for workers in the new and developing lines of transportation along with those on the railroads. Our views as to consolidation will have to be revised in the light of changed conditions. The weak lines of railroad which we hoped to save through consolidating them with strong lines under the act of 1920 have in many instances already been scrapped. In some instances the consolidations which we desired have been effected. In many other cases a hard-surface road with trucks and busses has reached out to the communities which 10 or 12 years ago were wholly dependent upon a weak railroad. The consolidations should not merely call for preserving service on weak railroads, but should enable the transportation companies to experiment in coordinating the various agencies of transportation so as to sell the shippers and passengers the transportation they want at the time they want it at the lowest rate which would be fair to all interests. That does not mean that the railroads should be given a monopoly of transportation with a view to strangling the new and competing forms.

The holding company, properly regulated, will be a device for effecting such experimentation until its success is demonstrated, when complete amalgamation and consolidation would logically follow. The holding company, heretofore, has been used not only for such purposes, but we have found upon inquiry that it has also been utilized to get around the law, to inflate capitalization, and to thwart the policies of the Government. The people of this country want such abuses stopped and they want the opportunity for irresponsible exploitation to be taken away from men who think more of their own power than they do of the public welfare.

Now for some things which I think should be done—the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce has reported a bill to regulate railroad holding companies. It is now on the calendar of the House of Representatives, and it is my expectation that this bill will pass during this session. When Congress permitted railroads to consolidate with the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission it was not contemplated that one financial interest should acquire two or more railroads through the device of a holding company without saying anything to the Interstate Commerce Commission about it. To permit that sort of thing is to render ineffective the attempt of Congress to regulate the consolidation of railroads in the public interest. The railroad holding company bill is designed to correct this evil and to force holding companies that own two or more railroad companies to make public through the Interstate Commerce Commission their accounts and to get the authorization of the Commission before they issue securities based on their ownership of railroads.

When we looked upon the railroads as complete monopolies, we understood that rates which would be reasonable for all of them would permit some of them to make more than a reasonable return. Congress therefore provided for recapture of what were termed "excess earnings." This money, as received, was to be loaned to the weaker railroads. This provision has become obsolete: First, because the railroads are no longer in the position of complete monopoly; second, because experience has shown that the Interstate Commerce Commission, with all the moneys and facilities furnished by Congress, cannot evaluate the railroads, compute the earnings, and collect the excess within a reasonable time. Again, the recapture of these earnings which were enjoyed before 1929 by particular railroads, if enforced, would put most of such roads into receivership. The Government of the United States is loaning large sums of money to some of these very roads or affiliated systems to keep them out of bankruptcy. Would not it be the height of folly to loan them money from the Treasury of the United States to prevent bankruptcy and then to ask the Attorney General to institute legal proceedings based upon earnings for a particular year before 1929 which would result in receivership, if the Attorney General should succeed in his effort?

I am therefore in favor of repealing the recapture provision of section 15 (a) of the act of 1920, and a revision of the rate-making section thereof. Recapture can be accomplished only after long, bitter, and expensive lawsuits in which the railroads could assert that the sum they had earned was far less than claimed by the Commission. Why go through all that expense and futile litigation when we know that if the Government was successful, it would merely force the railroads into receivership? The railroads do not have that money in cash; they spent it for terminals, new locomotives, grade crossings, and the like, which are not now being used to their capacity.

The Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House reported a bill to repeal the recapture provision of section 15 (a) and to rewrite the rate-making provision of that section. This bill is now on the calendar of the House of Representatives and it will no doubt receive careful consideration of the Congress at this session.

Legislation for the control of busses and trucks doing business in interstate commerce should be enacted. I do not belong to the school of thought that believes that this competing form of transportation should be unregulated. On the other hand, I do not belong to the other extreme school that desires to see this competing system of transportation put out of business. The power of government should never be used to destroy a competitor but the Government should see that the competitor is put under reasonable regulation.

In this, chambers of commerce, leading shippers, railroad companies, automobile manufacturers, highway-construction companies, those interested in airways, waterways, pipe lines, all find a common program on which they can agree and all cooperate in promoting the general prosperity of the country. May these larger interests dominate the minds of leaders in American industry? If so, the calls upon the Government for interference and for regulation will be fewer, less insistent, and properly subordinate, and there will not be the danger that such calls for action and interference by the Government will be exaggerated as of paramount importance. Prosperity will come to this country as a result of the activity of individuals and of business concerns. While well-considered legislation may help or ill-considered legislation may hinder, legislation in itself is powerless to produce prosperity.

After all, abundance of money, easy gains, hectic commercial activity, are not essential to social and political well-being. A recognition that there are ups and downs in the industrial progress of a nation, just as there are ups and downs in the fortunes of an individual, should enable us to bear with patience many of the inconveniences and afflictions of a depression and should sober our judgment during a time of exceptional business activity. In the field of transportation no one group should have the advantage. Shippers should pay a fair charge. Security owners should receive a customary return. Wage earners should be secure in good working conditions and fair wages. Any improvement should go to the benefit of all three groups. The aim of regulation by government is to encourage fair dealing, punish wrong, to remove temptation to arrogance by the strong, and to protect the weak from injustice. If the Government can achieve these ends in the field of transportation, it can do so in every other sphere of its activities. If the Government succeeds in performing its functions, it will be because such men as the Members of this Chamber can work together and be fair in competition with one another.

CRIME IN HIGH PLACES

Mr. OLIVER of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by placing therein the speech recently made over the radio by the Attorney General.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. OLIVER of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a speech delivered Monday, April 24, 1933, by the Honorable Homer S. Cummings, Attorney General of the United States, and broadcast over the Nation-wide network of the National Broadcasting Co. The speech not only gives a splendid sketch of the Department of Justice from the date it was organized but traces its development through the years and makes a most informing statement of large savings to be effected during the next fiscal year, which total more than $8,000,000.

There being no objection, the speech was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

When Edmund Randolph, of Virginia, was appointed Attorney General by President Washington, pursuant to an act of the First Congress, adopted on September 24, 1789, a Department of Law, subsequently designated as the Department of Justice, had its origin. From a very modest beginning it has developed to its present rather overwhelming proportions.

The Attorney General of the United States, it has frequently been remarked, is at the head of the largest law office in the world. About 9,000 employees and officials fall within its direct supervision. It is a complicated mechanism, dealing with questions affecting hundreds of millions of dollars and the most sacred of human rights. Its functions have never been more important or more vital than they are today.

On a later occasion I shall discuss the wider purposes and the special activities of the Department. Tonight let me draw your attention to the field occupied by it and the general duties it has to perform.

In times of great prosperity, when things appear to run themselves, our people are inclined to take our Government for granted. When trouble develops, we appreciate more acutely the extent to which our welfare is dependent upon the proper functioning and economical administration of the various departments of our Government. Such periods result in a sharp awakening of public interest. We are passing through such a period at the present time. Clearly there should be a thorough overhauling of every department of our Government. This is a process which cannot be accomplished by a wave of the hand. It is going to require persistent, intelligent, and unrelenting effort over a very considerable period of time.

When this administration came into power on the 4th of March, public affairs were in a deplorable and, let me add, well-nigh desperate condition. The incoming administration and all the departments thereof were, therefore, under necessity of dealing not only with an immediate crisis calling for the utmost swiftness and precision in action, both administrative and legislative, but they were required also to meet the imperative problem of departmental economy, so that the National Budget might be balanced. In other words, each and every department had to undertake a cleansing process and had to bring itself into efficient coordination with the National Government as a whole. Moreover, each department was required to extend its activities and at the same time cut its expenditures by substantially 25 percent. Difficult as this program may seem and as impossible as it appeared to many people before it was undertaken, it has now advanced to a stage which enables us to say that the results aimed at will be achieved. It is a source of gratification to realize that the people of this country, without respect to partisanship, are thoroughly in accord with this program of regeneration.

There seems to be an impression in many quarters that the chief duty of the Department of Justice is to detect and punish violators of the Federal criminal laws. This, of course, is one of its essential functions, but there are others of great importance. For instance, the Department defends all civil claims against the Government. This involves the consideration of an endless number of cases dealing with suits based on contracts, claims made for the refund of taxes asserted to have been overpaid, and various other matters of a similar nature. In addition to this the Department represents the United States in innumerable civil suits to recover moneys claimed to be due to the Government; it proceeds in matters of land condemnations and in other types of litigation too multifarious to mention.

Moreover, the Attorney General acts as adviser to the President and to the heads of the various executive departments in matters involving questions of law, and is frequently called upon for both written and oral opinions. In addition to this the services of the Department are invoked in connection with the drafting of new legislation, especially with reference to matters involving novel and difficult problems. In a word, the Attorney General, together with the available machinery of the Department of Justice, is at the disposal of the Government of the United States in performing the functions of attorney and counselor at law. The client is the United States of America, and this client is advised from time to time and, when necessary, represented in the courts of the land.

For purposes of convenience the work of the Department of Justice is allocated to sundry subdivisions. There are many of these, and 12 of them are of outstanding significance. One of these great subdivisions is under the direction of an official known as the Solicitor General. It is a post of very great importance and one which has consistently been held by lawyers of the first rank. There is a department presided over by an official known as the Assistant to the Attorney General, who has charge of anti-trust matters. There are seven Assistant Attorneys General, amongst whom there are allocated matters dealing with the United States custom laws, suits in the Court of Claims, matters dealing with admiralty questions, finance, taxation, prohibition, commerce, public lands, administrative functions, civil litigation, and criminal prosecutions. In addition to all the foregoing there are three remaining departments of very great consequence. One of these deals with the matters affecting the enforcement of prohibition, and the official in charge is known as the Director of Prohibition. Another large department is known as the Bureau of Investigation, and is in charge of the director of the Bureau of Investigation. Last, but far from being least, is the official known as the Director of the Bureau of Prisons. To his care all Federal prisoners are committed. He has charge of the management of the Federal prisons, and he must deal intimately with one of the most difficult and perplexing of administrative and social problems.

During the year ended June 30, 1932, there were commenced in the United States district courts alone 126,363 cases to which the Government was a party, as compared with 22,541 in the fiscal year of 1914. While the prohibition law has undoubtedly brought about the greatest proportion of this increase, other factors have contributed in no small degree. New penal statutes, the enforcement of which devolves upon the Department of Justice, are constantly being enacted. The revenue laws are frequently changed, thereby resulting in the raising of new questions for judicial determination. The questions which can arise in the customs department seem to be without end. Literally the suits there are legion. The engineering and construction projects of the Government have multiplied enormously in recent years. Thus there has been an inevitable enlargement of the functions of the Department of Justice. It has grown as the Nation has grown. The new legislation enacted by the present Congress will undoubtedly in due course bring new responsibilities and duties to the Department of Justice. Moreover—and I say this advisedly—financial crimes which have been committed in high places, growing out of banking irregularities and income-tax evasions, will require unexampled activity upon the part of the Department of Justice. Conditions too long concealed, some of which lie at the very heart of our present difficulties, must be brought to light and corrected. We have reached a stage where we want to know the worst and must know it before the remedy can be applied. Already extensive investigations are under way along the lines indicated, and their developments will be made known in due course.

I have said before, and I say again, that those who have considered it legitimate to gamble with other people's money must abdicate their leadership, and those who have thought that the center of government is located in the financial district must learn that its proper seat is at Washington. This is not a program of partisanship; it is a program of patriotism, which I am confident the people of America, without respect to previous party affiliation, will welcome with glad hearts.

I would not be frank if I did not say that I am amazed at the extent of the deadwood in the Department of Justice. An amount in excess of $200,000 has already been saved by the elimination of a large number of totally unnecessary employees both in Washington and in the field. This process of elimination I expect to continue. Substantial savings can also be made in the offices of practically every United States district attorney. These savings will have to do with the number and compensation of assistant United States attorneys and employees in the offices of United States marshals, as well as in the limitation of fees paid to jurors and witnesses. Those who remain in the service will have to work a little harder and at a lower remuneration; but, if they are made of the right stuff, they will realize that they are taking part in a constructive and honorable way in a great regenerative national program; and I shall confidently expect their hearty cooperation and support.

The appropriations for the Department of Justice for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, total $45,966,000. From present indications there is every reason to believe that when June 30 next is reached there will remain about a million dollars of these appropriations unexpended. This in itself is no mean achievement. The Congress has appropriated $41,550,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934. There would be no difficulty, I am sure, in living within the amount allowed; but under the drastic plans of economy inaugurated by the administration and steadfastly carried forward by the very efficient Director of the Budget, Mr. Douglas, the Department of Justice has been requested to reduce this amount by about eight and one-half million dollars. This goal it will be our purpose to reach. It will require careful management, strict economy, limited expenditures, reduced personnel, and savings in many directions. We have set our hands to this plow, and we shall not turn back.

One of the most difficult questions we shall have to deal with is the matter of the enforcement of the prohibition law. The Congress has reduced the appropriation for this branch of our activities from about ten and one-quarter million dollars to about eight and one-half million dollars. This revised appropriation must further be reduced in order to bring about the additional savings which the economy program requires. The enactment of the 3.2 beer legislation, it is to be hoped, will reduce the number of minor offenders, resulting not only in a direct saving but in the indirect saving which is reflected in the costs of our courts and in the expense of maintaining prisoners. It must not be forgotten, however, that the eighteenth amendment has not been repealed, and so long as it remains the law of the land it will be the duty of the Department of Justice to use its utmost efforts to see that it is respected and enforced. Minor offenders may well be left to the judgment and discretion of local courts, so that the work of the Bureau of Prohibition may be concentrated upon the activities of commercial violators, racketeers, and groups of offenders who make it their business, by conspiracy and violence, to defraud the Government, terrorize legitimate business, and bring the law into disrespect.

It is highly important that the legitimate, legalized beer industry should be kept free from the control of racketeers. It is to be anticipated—and, indeed, it has already become apparent—that the bootlegging interests will seek to levy a toll on the manufacture and distribution of legal beer as they have done for years with regard to illegal liquor and even more innocent enterprises. No matter how honest the beer industry itself may be, there remains the danger that it will be preyed upon by outside influences. This in itself constitutes a very substantial problem. Those who are endeavoring honestly to live within the law will find a friend in the Department of Justice; others will proceed at their peril.

There is another aspect of the work of the Department of Justice to which I ought to draw your attention. It cannot be called a self-supporting branch of the Government; nevertheless, the activities of the Department result in the covering into the Treasury of a large amount of money through the settlement of judgments, the imposition of fines, the collection of additional revenues, and various forms of taxes.

Moreover, this Department saves the Government substantial sums of money in defending, with success, suits brought against it. For instance, during the fiscal year now drawing to a close cases were brought against the United States involving more than $470,000,000. In these cases judgments were rendered against the Government for only $5,500,000, or a matter of a little more than 1 percent of the amount claimed.

Heretofore I have remarked upon the question of the elimination of unnecessary employees. One of the most vexatious problems I have to deal with grows out of the enthusiastic manner in which many people endorse themselves for attachment to the public service. It must not be forgotten that the work of a lawyer employed by the Department is specialized to a very considerable degree, requiring intimate knowledge of the branches of the law peculiar to governmental administration. It is manifest, therefore, that there can be no indiscriminate removal from the service of those who are efficiently and faithfully discharging their duties. Such changes as are to be made will be designed for the betterment of the service and for that purpose alone.

One of the most important functions the Attorney General is called upon to perform has to do with the recommendation to the President of candidates for appointment as Federal judges, district attorneys, and United States marshals. These officials are concerned in a most intimate fashion with the rights, the liberty, and the welfare of our people in all parts of the country. In particular, the members of the judiciary (whose appointments run during good behavior, and therefore in most instances for life) must be selected with the utmost care. So far as I am concerned, there will be no undue haste in making such appointments. Each person under consideration will be studiously investigated as to his character, capacity, knowledge of the law, and all other attributes which should be possessed by an upright, honest, and impartial judge. This particular responsibility lies heavily upon me. From personal experience I know, and in every fiber of my being feel, that the discharge of this duty is a solemn responsibility. Many mistakes may be repaired, but an error in the selection of such an official leaves a permanent and almost ineradicable mark upon the very structure of our Government. I am not saying these things to magnify the tasks of the Department of Justice but merely to state, in direct and simple language, what purpose it is we are supposed to serve and how we are endeavoring to meet the duties imposed upon us.

In brief, I aim at a sane, wholesome administration. The Department of Justice belongs to the people of America. It is their servant, ministering to their needs, and I bespeak for it the support and the good opinion of all law-abiding citizens.

INVESTIGATION OF MOVING-PICTURE INDUSTRY

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 121, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 121

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution the House shall proceed to the consideration of House Resolution 95, and all points of order against said resolution shall be considered as waived. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the resolution and shall continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Rules, the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the resolution to its adoption or rejection.

Mr. WARREN and Mr. BLANTON rose.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, before we take up the rule, I want to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman from Pennsylvania desire any time?

Mr. RANSLEY. We want the usual time.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman recognizes that in all of his long and able service here, this is a most remarkable rule. It gives the control to the Rules Committee of the entire hour on this resolution. Then after the rule is passed, it gives the same Committee on Rules entire control of the whole hour on general debate. That is the first time that such a procedure has been inaugurated in this House during the 16 years that I have served here. Is the gentleman from Illinois going to yield us any time to oppose this measure?

Mr. SABATH. I have yielded 30 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. BLANTON. But that is to the other side of the aisle.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, we are not going to let this rule pass without due consideration.

Mr. SABATH. This is a fair rule. The Rules Committee is fair in allocating the time.

Mr. BLANTON. Is the gentleman going to yield any time to the opponents of this rule? I am one who wants to oppose it.

Mr. SABATH. I have already yielded 30 minutes to those who are opposed to it.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman has yielded time only to Republicans. As a Democrat I want to get time from the Democratic side of the House. I do not want to have to go over into the wilderness to get it. [Applause.] This is a bad measure that will accomplish no good whatever, but will cost the taxpayers of the United States a tremendous sum of money. We must not let it pass. We can defeat it if we are given time to properly debate it, and to let the Members of the House know just how seriously it may affect the Treasury.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, the adoption of this rule will make in order the consideration of House Resolution 95, known as "the Sirovich resolution." It provides for the creation of a special committee of seven to investigate the most vicious group of manipulators—yes, racketeers—a group that has destroyed what at one time was a legitimate and prosperous motion-picture industry and that has defrauded and fleeced thousands upon thousands of investors, widows, and orphans of nearly two thousand millions of dollars; a group that within the last 4 weeks, through its hirelings and lobbyists, has attempted, and is now attempting, to mislead the Members of this House as regards its shameful activities in order to defeat this investigation; a group that by questionable means—yes, bribery—controls city, State, and even Federal officials; a group that has by corruption forced upon the screen some of the most obscene and crime-breeding pictures; a group that has even debauched our judiciary. This same group has defrauded the Government of millions of dollars and was instrumental in sending an innocent woman to the penitentiary.

Some claim, and will claim, that this is a matter for the courts. Yes; it might be a matter for the courts if individuals comprising this group were not able to control our judges.

It will be claimed, and statements have been circulated, that the investigation will cost $200,000; but I have the word of the gentleman who introduced this resolution, and I believe him, that it will cost no more than $20,000 to $25,000; and I assure the House that for every dollar that we will expend on the investigation the Government will recover at least $100 in income taxes, of which the Government has been defrauded by this vicious group, this coterie of manipulators and racketeers. [Applause.]

I have here in my possession many resolutions from independent motion-picture houses in America. I have complaints from hundreds of men and women who have been defrauded of their entire savings. I hold in my hand the book, Upton Sinclair Presents William Fox, and I know that if all of us were to spend but 1 hour on this book and become acquainted with the conclusions arrived at, the vote for the resolution would be unanimous and that a real investigation could be had, so that in the future the activities of these men and other men of their caliber, who have been allowed to continue their speculations and fraud unmolested, controlling, as they do, some of the highest officials in the several States and even in our own Government, would be prohibited.

It is high time that this House should not be deterred by these lobbyists from doing its duty to provide a real, honest-to-God investigation, so that the country and the House may know what has been transpiring and so that we can legislate in the interest of the American people, eliminate this racketeering, and prevent these unscrupulous manipulators from continuing their nefarious work and from controlling our public officials.

I regret that I cannot continue further, for I have promised the balance of the time to others. However, before I conclude I want the new Members to know that if, due to the misleading statements that have been circulated, this rule shall be defeated, it may mean the defeat, at least temporarily, of the resolution itself, for it is only by the adoption of this rule that an investigation can be had. But I give notice now that if the resolution should fail to pass, its proponents will by no means cease their efforts to force action; so regardless of what the outcome may be today, I am certain that eventually the House will vote for investigation.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield for one question?

Mr. SABATH. I cannot yield, because I do not have the time.

I ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANSLEY] to use some of his time now.

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN].

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I deeply appreciate the courtesy of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANSLEY] in yielding me this time, which I was unable to get on my own side of the House.

It is to be greatly regretted that the House has been given no information whatever about this measure other than the statement just made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH]. The great Rules Committee of this House not only failed to hold any hearing on this resolution but it comes to us with the informing and enlightening report as their sole recommendation that the resolution should pass.

I also regret that this measure should be dignified by a rule of the most stringent kind, such as we have adopted on major legislation, providing that no points of order may be made, for, under the resolution as presented, a single point of order would send the entire thing to the discard, where it properly belongs.

Now, this calls for a large expenditure of money. I have had a careful investigation made in the Committee on Accounts, and I am told by experienced men that if section 4 of this resolution is carried out as it is intended, according to its wording, it would call for the expenditure from the contingent fund of the House of approximately $200,000.

Mr. SABATH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. No. The gentleman refused to yield, and I do not have the time.

Now, there is not one penny in the contingent fund of the House for investigations. Only $40,000 is allotted each year, and the $40,000 allotted for the next fiscal year has already been set apart for the orderly investigations decreed by the House in times past.

I have no objection in the world to an investigation of the moving-picture industry. I do not know any of them. I am not connected with them. I understand this is a fight between two groups. I hear it is merely a case of "dog eat dog." [Applause and laughter.]

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. I do not have time.

I do believe that where we have set up orderly procedure for such investigations, they should be made by the constituted branches of this Government, rather than by any select committee of this House.

Now, if it is securities they wish to inquire into, both Houses of Congress have already passed a securities bill, so that those securities will be regulated in the future. If it is unfair trade practices they take exception to, then we have the Federal Trade Commission, which the administration has agreed it will put the breath of life into, and that it will act and function. If it is illegal receiverships and bankruptcies they wish to object to, then we have the grand juries of our land; and we Democrats have prided ourselves upon the fact that we have heading the Department of Justice the great Attorney General who will go into these matters and investigate them to the very limit, if they are properly brought to his attention.

In conclusion, permit me to say that this thing is a joy ride to Hollywood [applause] for the personal advancement and notoriety of some who are proposing it. If you want to kill it, if you want to stop it where it is, then vote down the rule and end the whole thing. Let us not embark upon a useless and reckless waste of public funds. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I yield back whatever time I may have.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has consumed 5 minutes.

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM]. [Applause.]

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I am very much opposed to this resolution and, consequently, very much opposed to the very stringent rule which would make its consideration in order.

I oppose it, in the first place, because it is unnecessary. I oppose it, in the second place, because it is inexpedient. It is unnecessary by reason of the fact that we have various governmental agencies already established to investigate matters of this character. We have our Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission. A committee of the Senate is now making an investigation somewhat akin to the one here proposed. The Congress is now engaged in passing the securities bill to remedy many of the evils of which complaint is made. Such other things as may demand correction in this industry may be presented before a committee of the House here in Washington without the enormous expense which the adoption of this resolution would entail.

It is inexpedient because of the fact that in these times of necessary economy it authorizes a useless expenditure variously estimated at from $200,000 to $500,000, and for what purpose? For the purpose of providing for a junketing trip over the United States. [Applause.] Surely this is not the time to be taking money away from the disabled veterans in order to give a few Members of Congress an opportunity to gratify their whims by going about over the country and enjoying themselves. [Applause.] This seems to be a proposal which involves some ire on the part of certain wise men of the East who take exception to the practices of some other men, perhaps equally wise, who have gone west. [Laughter and applause.] It involves also a dabbling into the courts of our country. A committee of the House of Representatives on a junketing trip to investigate, incidentally, receiverships and bankruptcy proceedings and judicial matters of that character!

Now let me call attention to another thing. I believe in having proper regard for the welfare of our colleagues. The adoption of this resolution would bring to my friend the gentleman from New York a widespread publicity which would be very distasteful to one of his modest nature. [Laughter and applause.] He would be constantly subjected to the ordeal of looking at pictures of himself with screen stars in various magazines and newspapers [laughter] and having to peruse interviews and things of that character with reference to himself and his activities. I would spare him that. [Laughter.] I feel that, if this resolution should unfortunately carry, there ought to be some concerted action here to see that he is not subjected to this ordeal. [Laughter.]

Only a few weeks ago we saw the gentleman from New York take his place upon this floor and inveigh very properly against the persecution of the Jews under the Hitler regime. We listened with attentive interest to his remarks on that occasion. Ah, little did I think then and little did you think that the gentleman from New York would be the very first in this body to make a proposal which would bring division and dissension among the Jewish people of America. [Laughter.] Yet here is his resolution.

I knew that the gentleman from New York was an eminent doctor. I knew he was an eminent playwright. I knew he was a great scientist. Now it is brought home to me in the authority proposed here to investigate the courts of the country that he is also a great lawyer.

Mr. Speaker, at this time, when economy is necessary, when the people are craving action with reference to the serious problems which confront them, there is no reason to authorize an expensive excursion of this kind, when the established channels for such investigation are open and available. Let the correction of such evils as may exist be undertaken through the proper committees and the constituted authorities organized for such purpose. [Applause.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SROVICH] 16 minutes.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, to all intents and purposes, the motion-picture industry, one of the leading industries in our Republic, is bankrupt.

Billions of dollars have been invested in the motion-picture industry by working people, widows, orphans, small estates, and unsuspecting American citizens. It is alleged that most of this money has been dissipated, squandered, and diverted by a group of financial manipulators.

The rulers and officials of this great industry have milked it dry and almost destroyed its very existence. This deplorable situation holds very little hope for holders of 1,000,000 bonds and holders of 20,000,000 shares of stock, representing an investment of billions of dollars. An investigation will show that the very people who have been responsible for its looting and disintegration are now desperately trying to reorganize this artistic and useful industry so they may control its future destiny.

Whether any part of the billions that have been invested can be recovered and those responsible for its looting and ruination brought before the bar of public opinion and judicial scrutiny is dependent on what action the House will take regarding my resolution calling for a complete and thorough investigation of the whole motion-picture industry to protect the rights and property of our innocent American investors.

Mr. Speaker, our Government is conducted by three great branches, the legislative, the executive, and the judicial departments. The combined salaries of 435 Members of the House, 96 Members of the Senate, and President and his entire Cabinet, the Vice President, the Chief Justice and the 8 Associate Justices, and the 48 Governors of the States of the Union amount to about $5,000,000 per year, which is less than the amount received by way of salary and bonus by 5 men in one motion-picture corporation alone. These bonuses paid to five men, according to my information, amounted to $3,000,000 in 1930, $2,000,000 in 1931, and $1,500,000 in 1932, exclusive of salaries.

An astounding revelation regarding these bonuses is the fact that they have not been revealed to the stockholders in reports made at annual meetings or in published balance and earning sheets. In no other walk of industry are amounts like these rewards paid to executives. Not even in the days of the great life-insurance scandal, investigated and exposed by the present distinguished Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Charles Evans Hughes, was anything like the monetary insanity of the movies disclosed.

It is currently stated that the annual income of Louis B. Mayer was $800,000; of Adolph Zukor and Jesse Lasky, $520,000 each; of Irving Thalberg, $500,000 minimum; of Nicholas Schenck, $404,000, besides 2½ percent of all the profits of Loews; of Benjamin F. Shulberg, $416,000; of the Warner brothers, $520,000 each. In addition to these salaries, all received extravagant bonuses.

While these fabulous and hitherto unheard-of salaries and bonuses have been taken by these officials the assets of the companies have been dissipated and the liabilities have increased. Dividends have been wiped out in practically every company. The value of shares of stock has fallen almost to nothing; but, Mr. Speaker, the salaries of all employees in the studios, even the stenographers and typists, have been curtailed, but the officers' salaries and their bonuses have been renewed by themselves by an iron-clad contract for 6 more years.

Mr. Speaker, let me call your attention to one of the most glaring financial deals in connection with the Paramount-Publix Corporation. In the years 1927 and 1930 Paramount-Publix, in order to extend their activities, floated two 20-year bond issues amounting to $31,000,000, and agreed it would not create any other encumbrance or lien against any of the assets.

In 1930 the Paramount-Publix Corporation owed a million dollars to banks, which it paid off from money raised by these $31,000,000 bonds.

In 1932, due to extravagance and mismanagement, the Paramount-Publix was indebted to various banks in the sum of $10,000,000. These loans were entirely unsecured. When the loans became due Paramount-Publix officials met the bank officials and stated they could not pay their obligations. The banks refused to extend the time of payment. Paramount-Publix needed an additional $3,500,000 to carry on its operations. The banks refused to give them this loan unless they secured the previous $10,000,000 due to the banks, which up to that time had been unsecured.

To accomplish the demand of these bankers Paramount-Publix created a paper subsidiary having no assets, possessed of nothing, and called it Paramount Productions, Inc. To this paper subsidiary Paramount-Publix turned over 23 of its motion pictures which had been completed or were in the process of completion, which consisted of practically the only live assets of the corporation and which violated the terms of the $31,000,000 bond issue.

By this amazing financial transaction bondholders were defrauded of the security granted under the $31,000,000 bond agreement. This financial transaction gave an unauthorized lien in favor of the banks, securing their otherwise unsecured claims, and a preference over the Paramount-Publix $31,000,000 bondholders to whom these assets rightfully belonged, as well as other creditors.

This indefensible act diminished, weakened, and destroyed the equities of $31,000,000 bondholders, as well as other creditors. A few months later, on November 5, 1932, the Paramount-Publix Corporation and its directors to further strip the $31,000,000 bondholders, and other creditors, organized three other paper subsidiary corporations, the Paramount International Corporation, the Paramount Distributing Corporation, and the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

To these companies they transferred and conveyed all the remaining assets owned by the Paramount-Publix Corporation, namely, all of its properties, accounts receivable, real-estate holdings, contracts with producers and distribution in foreign countries, contracts with artists, directors, picture rights, book rights, dramatic rights, copyrights, and all its holdings including studios and plants and all other properties and by means of such paper corporations the Paramount-Publix Corporation stripped itself completely of every vestige of property and assets of which it had been possessed, ruining $31,000,000 invested by bondholders, and approximately $200,000,000 of stockholders' money that had been invested in this enterprise, so that today the Paramount-Publix Corporation is bankrupt and an empty shell.

The amazing situation now is that Adolph Zukor, the president of the Paramount-Publix Corporation, and his associates, under whom all these extraordinary financial manipulations were planned and executed, has been appointed and is now the receiver of this corporation—the very man through whom and whose allies these manipulations were made possible, that wrecked the Paramount-Publix Corporation.

Indignant protests were made to the Paramount-Publix Corporation by the bondholders and stockholders through their various attorneys throughout the country, but no attention has been paid to these protests.

This gives you an idea of one transaction. If I had the time, I would give you dozens of other tragic incidents appertaining to Paramount-Publix Corporation that cry to heaven for investigation.

Let us take up matters concerning Loew's, Inc. Up to the year 1932, Loew's paid not only its customary annual dividend of $3, but an additional dividend of $1 per annum. This continued up to the last quarterly dividend period. At that time, without any prior notice to its stockholders, the dividend was cut to an annual dividend of only $1. This dividend cut seemed to be in line with a decline in earnings of the corporation. Yet, in spite of these conditions, at the last annual meeting of that corporation, held on December 15, 1932, the corporation made a 6-year contract with certain of its executives which carried with it exorbitant salaries for five officials amounting to over $2,000,000 a year and tremendous bonuses amounting to over $1,500,000 a year, besides giving to these selected officials of the company valuable rights to acquire large blocks of shares of stock of the company at preferential rates. Three men are in charge of the motion-picture productions of that company. These three officials alone have contracts under which they receive a 20-percent share of the profits not only of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation, which is the corporation that produces the motion pictures of Loew's, Inc., but in addition thereto they receive a share of the profits earned from exhibiting in their theaters pictures that are not even produced by them. The shares of the profits which these three officials alone have received in the past have aggregated approximately $1,500,000 a year besides their bonuses.

In the year 1929 five officers of Loews organized an inside pool, without the knowledge of the stockholders, and double-crossed their associates and sold 400,000 shares of Loews to William Fox Theatres Corporation. In gathering these 400,000 shares they obtained a call on most of these stocks at a price less than $100 per share, then sold the entire block to the Fox Theatres Corporation at $125 per share, resulting in the enormous profit to this inside group of approximately $9,000,000.

Here, too, we find a repetition of the same situation in this company as in the Paramount-Publix Corporation; the payment of exorbitant salaries and of large bonuses without making any revelation thereof to stockholders or security holders in reports to stockholders in published balance sheets or profit-and-loss sheets.

Let us look into the affairs of Radio-Keith-Orpheum combine, commonly called RKO. The purchase of the Pathe Co. by RKO and the practical merger of that company with RKO embraces matters which concern an alleged fraud on the stockholders of RKO. It appears that a group were loaded down with a very substantial block of stock of the Pathe Co. The quotation had fallen down to about $30 per share. As soon as the merger with RKO was announced, this inside group pushed the Pathe stock up until it reached about $80 a share. The inside group then unloaded their stock on the public, making millions of dollars. The purchase was made at levels which were not warranted by any values possessed by the Pathe Co., and the purchase practically emptied the treasury of RKO. Competition in the open market between the Pathe Co. and the RKO Co. was stifled.

The RKO Co. received in the transaction studios which they did not need, and distributing agencies which only duplicated those which already existed under the management of RKO. The only property that RKO obtained that it did not have was a news-reel service, at a cost of many millions of dollars more than it was worth at that time. As a consequence of this improvident transaction RKO was compelled to borrow $6,000,000 to fill its empty treasury, to pay a bonus of $600,000 for the loan, and the Pathe Co. transaction was the one that really got the RKO Co. into such serious financial difficulties that it was on the verge of receivership. In order to avoid this receivership, the Radio Corporation of America agreed to go along with a refinancing plan if it could obtain the stock control of the RKO Co. The stockholders under threat of receivership, and a total loss of their investment, were forced into a reorganization plan under which each stockholder was compelled to reduce his stock holdings by 75 percent and to give up to the Radio Corporation of America in effect 75 percent of his prior holdings, so that the Radio Corporation of America became the owner of the control of the shares of stock of the RKO Co.

This stock manipulation placed the Radio Corporation of America in the position of dominating the RKO Co., and in that way compelling the RKO Co. and its subsidiaries to use the electrical equipment of Radio Corporation of America in all of their activities. As a result of that manipulation the Radio Corporation of America, which prior thereto had owned only approximately 22 percent of the stock of the RKO Co., became the owner of approximately 60 percent of the stock of the RKO Co., the large part of which was taken out of the pockets of the stockholders of RKO by forced involuntary contribution.

In addition to the foregoing, serious charges have been made that the insiders of RKO operated a pool in RKO stock and at will, were on both the long and short sides of the stock and unloaded large blocks of the stock on the public at millions of dollars profit to themselves and at enormous loss to the public.

Besides the companies I have named, there is another—the Fox Corporation—in the assets and securities of which financial manipulation has been made that may well be called "astounding." This manipulation involved the diversion and dissipation of $50,000,000 to $100,000,000, into the details of which I now have not the time to go.

There are about 20,000 motion-picture theaters in the United States. About 1,500 belong to Paramount, Loews, Fox, Warner Bros., and RKO. They are banded together in an organization known under the "highfalutin" but deceptive name of the "Motion Picture Theater Owners" organization. This producer-controlled organization is working in conjunction with a most powerful and pernicious lobby, backed by the motion-picture industry, in and about the House Office Building and has sent out quite a good deal of false propaganda to influence the Members of the House against this resolution to investigate the motion-picture industry, making the ridiculous assertion that it will cost $250,000, when, as a matter of truth, it would cost about $20,000 to $25,000. The remaining 18,500 motion-picture theaters belong to the independent owners in every congressional district of every Member of Congress.

The entry of these conniving big picture manipulators in the field of exhibition, first, as a means of exhibiting their own pictures, and then to monopolize the distribution outlets and finally to put the 18,500 independent exhibitors out of business, is an activity in the American motion-picture industry which the membership of the Congress of the United States will be privileged to correct.

Mr. Speaker, the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] who preceded me, called the attention of the House to the fact that most of the people involved in the manipulation of funds of the motion-picture industry are Jewish people, and that only a few days ago I arose to defend the Jewish people of Germany against the atrocities of the madman of Germany, Hitler. Let me call his attention to the fact that I am proud to have arisen in this historic forum to speak for the persecuted and oppressed in Germany, whose pitiful cry to live in the land in which they and their forbears have been born and have given the best of their lives to make Germany great, prosperous, and glorious, and who seek opportunities to earn their daily bread the same as all peoples of the world, is surely deserving of the responsive acclaim that has come to their cause from all the civilized people of the world.

Goodness, honesty, and justice belong to no race. They are the common property of civilization. In that spirit, I resent the statement of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] and desire to tell him that, so far as I am concerned, I demand the prosecution of all evil and wrongdoers irrespective of race, creed, or color, who have defrauded widows, orphans, and humble people of our country to enrich themselves. [Applause.]

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield me 2 additional minutes?

Mr. SABATH. I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIROVICH. Yes.

Mr. SABATH. Certain charges have been made as to the administration. The gentleman made a statement to me as to the President and the administration. Will he not repeat it on the floor of the House?

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, last week I saw the President of the United States, Franklin D. Roosevelt. I spoke to him about this motion-picture investigation; I explained the situation to him, including these outrageous salaries; and he is in full sympathy with this resolution and thinks this investigation would do a great deal of good to the American people. [Applause.]

Mr. MOTT. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SIROVICH. I am awfully sorry, but my time is very limited. Let me first finish this statement.

Mr. MOTT. May I suggest to the gentleman that it will be necessary for the gentleman to get some time, either for himself or someone else, in order to answer a half dozen very pertinent questions or everything the gentleman has said will be of no avail. We want to know where the information came from and whether this is in violation of the particular blue sky laws of the States in which these concerns are located.

Mr. SIROVICH. I will give that later. When you pass this rule I would give you the source of all the information. I will give you court facts, documentary facts, and affidavits that will corroborate every word I have uttered.

Mr. MOTT. I hope the gentleman may, and I would like to have the information before the rule is voted on.

Mr. SIROVICH. I will do that after I have finished my statement, if I may have a few minutes more. The purpose of my resolution is to provide for an investigation which will disclose all this information.

Mr. RAYBURN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIROVICH. I hope the gentleman will let me finish my statement first. These continuous interruptions and interrogations are breaking the sequence of my thoughts.

Mr. RAYBURN. The President of the United States has been brought into this matter and I want the gentleman to be definite. Did the President of the United States tell the gentleman from New York that he wanted this resolution passed and this investigation made?

Mr. SIROVICH. I did not go to him when I started out on the investigation, but I saw him subsequently.

Mr. RAYBURN. The gentleman said he talked to him last week.

Mr. SIROVICH. That is correct. I saw him last week and talked to him about it, explained it, and he is in full sympathy with the purpose of this resolution.

The regular order was demanded.

Mr. SIROVICH. Now to continue with my thoughts:

What are some of the terrible injustices that have been perpetrated by these 5 large motion-picture concerns against the 18,500 independent exhibitors?

First. Block booking, combined with blind booking, which requires the independent theater owners to buy unseen the entire output of a given producer in order to get such pictures as may be desirable or suitable for exhibition in their theaters.

Second. Compelling the 18,500 independent theater owners to wait for unreasonable periods of time after pictures have first been shown in producer-controlled houses before these 18,500 independent theater owners are allowed to run them in their theaters.

Third. The allocation of better pictures to producer-owned circuit houses without allowing the 18,500 really independent theater owners to even bid for these pictures in free and open competition.

Fourth. The buying up by producer-owned theater circuits of more pictures than they can use so as to cripple the 18,500 truly independent houses in their efforts to compete with the circuits.

Fifth. The practice of these big producers through motion-picture producers and distributors in contributing large sums of money to certain organizations of alleged independent exhibitors in order to create the impression that there is a division in the 18,500 independent ranks in the matter of industry reforms.

Sixth. The activities of the members of the motion-picture producers and distributors of America to monopolize or control the motion-picture industry by such devices as uniform sales contracts, compulsory arbitration, withholding of products from 18,500 independent theaters, the allocation of products to producer-controlled houses, unfair and unreasonable zoning, so-called "protection", and other unfair practices, especially by withholding films for unreasonable periods from the 18,500 independent low-admission houses.

There are 435 Representatives in Congress, so the average proportion of independent motion-picture theaters, each one a victim of these unfair practices, is over 40 theaters in each congressional district, all representing a substantial investment of over $1,000,000,000 and a considerable employment in each district, the operators and employees of which look to Congress for relief from this unwarranted monopoly and tyranny.

Thus we see how a few czars in the motion-picture industry through devices of interlocking, long-term franchises, preferential zoning, clearances, and protection have almost ruined and destroyed, by these unjust and unfair practices, the 18,500 independent motion-picture houses found in every congressional district of our country.

Let us look at the transactions of Warner Bros. Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., was incorporated in the State of Delaware in 1923. Prior to 1928 it was a small, inconsequential producing company of silent film that did not rate with the large producers. With the advent of sound, the company obtained a temporary monopoly on the production of synchronized sound on disk, and thereby became one of the large producing factors in the business.

Shortly after their development as a large producing company, they went into the purchasing of theaters on a large scale, and probably at present hold more theaters than any of the other producing and distributing units.

Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., control approximately 50 corporations, covering every form of motion-picture activity. All of these companies, however, are dummy corporations in which the officials are either obscure office boys or glorified clerks, drawing modest salaries, although holding high-sounding titles in the various companies.

The actual control of all of these 50 subsidiary companies is held by 11 directors of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., the majority composed of 3 Warner brothers and 4 personal attorneys for the 3 Warner brothers. That, in itself, insures control of the board of directors.

With reference to this corporation two matters stand out glaringly. One is that Warner brothers have placed themselves in a position where they have become the preferred creditors of the corporation with respect to loans previously advanced so that if anything happened they would receive all of the money loaned the corporation and the stockholders would receive nothing. Second, it has been charged and admitted that Harry Warner, the president of the company, and other members of his family, and officials connected with his company, were on the long and short side of their stock, unloading the stock to the public at high prices and making enormous profits in those transactions, the only sufferers being the public and the stockholders. It is also charged that the company is practically a family affair, the entire family having profited generally by way of large salaries and bonuses, while the stockholders have received no dividends and have suffered frightful losses, so that today the stock is practically worthless, and all the estates, widows, orphans, and humble owners of Warner Bros. stock have been ruined and their holdings are today worthless. Since 1928 the salary payments made to Warner brothers were between $520,000 per annum to $1,000,000 per annum each. They have received bonuses of 90,000 shares valued at $12,000,000, and their stock speculations have made another $10,000,000, totaling almost $25,000,000, while the present value of the stock that shareholders paid for with their hard-earned money at $100 a share, is selling at about $1 per share, showing a shrinkage in value of the stocks of the staggering total of about $200,000,000 of stockholders' money. And Mr. A. Julian Brylawski, the professional lobbyist, is in the employ of this company, and trying through propaganda to persuade Congress not to conduct an investigation.

Mr. Speaker, I have but scratched the surface of the great corruption that exists in the motion-picture industry today—corruption that will make the Teapot Dome investigation appear like a mere tempest in a teapot. The innocent holders of stocks and bonds of these looted companies that I have mentioned are crying aloud for justice. The moral welfare of America demands that the present control of motion pictures be eliminated. Eighteen thousand and five hundred independent motion-picture houses in every congressional district are earnestly appealing to you for assistance and justice. In the name of innocent investors and 18,500 small motion-picture concerns I appeal to the Membership of this House to pass my resolution calling for a complete and thorough investigation of the whole motion-picture industry, with the object of righting a great wrong, making restitution, if possible, to its now destitute financial victims, drive the looters from their executive offices, punish the guilty, and once and for all make an exemplary lesson to all future financial manipulators that the Government of the United States will not tolerate financial racketeers, masquerading as honest men, who through fraudulent representation and manipulation have diverted billions intrusted to them by widows, orphans, and small estates which represent the hard-earned life savings of our American working people.

For these reasons, fellow Members of the House, I appeal to your sense of honor, fair play, and justice to pass this resolution. [Applause.]

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, these are the days of the new deal. If the President of the United States were for this resolution, would he not have sent us a message? [Laughter and applause.]

You know this is a wonderful resolution. Why, I was brought up in school to believe that there were three departments of the Government, the executive, the judicial, and the legislative. This resolution is a declaration on the part of the Democratic majority, if it is passed, that the appointees to the Attorney General's Office are not competent to do their jobs. [Applause.]

Are you going to make this declaration and indict your President's own appointees, or are you going to say that you have some confidence in them and that you believe that they and the grand juries and the judges of the courts are as competent to make a judicial investigation as some committee of Congress?

Mr. KRAMER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Is it not time we attended to our own business, instead of trying to attend to everybody else's business and every other officer's business, as well as our own?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I cannot yield. I have not the time.

I believe if we do our own job and do it right, that is enough.

Frankly, I believe, and these are the facts, the Senate investigating committee has been into the Warner business, it has been into the Fox business, and yesterday there was put in the RECORD over there a voluminous report that pretty well covers that picture. Why should we go ahead and authorize the expenditure of a lot of money which would be wasted, instead of securing action on the part of the Attorney General, the grand juries, and the courts in reference to this matter? Is it not time we stopped trying to butt into things and to be ourselves a grand jury and to be ourselves an attorney general.

If they are not competent and able to do the job, why do we appropriate $41,000,000 for the Department of Justice? Maybe they are not competent. If they are not competent, let us investigate them through the Judiciary Committee, instead of ourselves trying to do the job for which we have set them up and provided them with $41,000,000.

Let us vote down this resolution and stop this kind of business. [Applause.]

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN].

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Speaker, in view of some of the things we have heard and seen in connection with this resolution, I think it not inappropriate at this time to quote an observation recently made by that great humorist and philosopher, Will Rogers:

You see the movies are a peculiar business. Everybody that don't get in 'em some way have got it in for 'em and want 'em investigated, abolished, or given solitary confinement for 99 years.

[Laughter.]

With respect to what the gentleman from New York, Dr. SIROVICH, said about the moving-picture securities that have been purchased by so many people in this country, I reply that already both Houses have passed a Federal Securities Act under the leadership of the President of the United States—an act which has teeth in it and will soon be in effect to protect the investing public from the purchase of worthless or fraudulent securities.

This resolution would carry with it an unlimited burden of expense to the taxpayers of this country. It would give a special committee of 7 Members of this House authority to investigate 15,000 theaters in America and approximately 320 distributing companies which distribute pictures to every State in the Union. Then, 15 corporations in New York, New Jersey, Illinois, and California, whose business it is to receive, record, and reproduce sound in making modern talking pictures, would have to submit themselves to the inspection of this nomadic committee. This select committee would investigate the production of moving pictures, which would require a long stay in New York and a still longer junket to far-famed Hollywood. In that vicinity, I am reliably informed, there are at least 30 companies engaged in the production of motion pictures, all of which would be subject to a microscopic examination by this committee.

Ladies and gentlemen, in view of the methods to which some have resorted in seeking adoption of this resolution, I wonder how many Members of this House have had held up to their enraptured gaze by some of the sponsors of this resolution alluring visions of a sojourn in that land of flowers and how many have had their ears ravished by glowing word pictures of the enchanting beauties and intriguing mysteries of Hollywood. [Laughter and applause.]

They would invade the province of the courts of justice, because this resolution would give them power to investigate receivership, bankruptcy, and equity proceedings, with trips all over the country, and all at the expense of the American taxpayers, at a time like this when we are striving to practice economy in every branch of the Government. I am surprised at the audacity, at the temerity of these men who, under these circumstances, stand up here and advocate such an expensive and extravagant resolution, such a prodigal and wanton waste of the American taxpayers' money. [Applause.] They would authorize the expenditure of public funds for—legal counsel, technical, or other counsel; auditors, clerical, stenographic, and other assistants; to make * * * expenditures, including expenditures for actual travel and subsistence of members and employees, and for such other and further expenditures as are necessary for the efficient execution of its functions under this resolution, including transcription, printing, and binding of data and reports.

With such powers of investigation, such a committee gallivanting about over the country would spend at least a quarter of a million dollars before the Congress reconvenes in January 1934.

Such an investigation would undoubtedly result not only in delaying the production of pictures, the curtailment of the industry's legitimate activities, but would close innumerable picture shows throughout the country, and would also cause irreparable loss to countless business men in every State who are engaged in other lines of business, and especially to retail merchants who are largely dependent for their prosperity upon the prosperity of the picture shows in their immediate localities.

Ladies and gentlemen, I trust this House will vote down this rule and thereby prevent the consideration of this resolution by an overwhelming majority. [Applause.]

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, if the arguments of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SIROVICH] are sound, this House should investigate every industry and corporation [applause] where the people of this country have lost money as the result of the purchase of stocks and bonds. Why stop with the motion-picture industry? I think every man and woman in this House has suffered a jolt in their bank account for the last few years as a result of the purchase of stocks and bonds.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] stated that an investigation will disclose that there has been an evasion of the income-tax laws. I want to remind the gentleman—for I am sure he knows it—there is an outstanding investigation bureau of the Government in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, the intelligence unit; it cleaned up his own city when his police department could not do it. If he has any evidence that the people engaged in this business have evaded their income-tax returns or made improper returns, the head of the unit, Mr. Elmer Irely, will put the people responsible in a safe place in Atlanta, where he put Chicago's leading citizen. [Laughter.]

I have been attempting on this floor to get an adequate appropriation for the investigation of corporate practices—not only the motion-picture industry but all industries, by the Federal Trade Commission, and you have repeatedly refused to appropriate the money. The Commission desires to carry on such an investigation. It is equipped to do it.

I went to the Federal Trade Commission and asked the officials of the economic division what this proposed investigation of the motion-picture industry would cost, and the answer was, a tremendous sum. I could not get them to set the figures. I said, "Would it cost $250,000?" and they said my estimate was probably too low, if the entire industry was to be investigated.

Mr. SABATH. I want to say to the gentleman that the Committee on Accounts has full jurisdiction, and they can say how much shall be expended. They set the figure at twenty to twenty-five thousand dollars.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I am a member of the Committee on Accounts. If the House passes the resolution, you will say it is a mandate for us to provide all the money needed. The Federal Trade Commission said it would cost more than $250,000 to carry out a real investigation under this resolution. We would be required to appropriate funds to complete the investigation. Twenty-five thousand dollars would not be a drop in the bucket.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York, the author of the resolution, said the independent operators—18,000—favored his resolution. I challenge that statement, because I have evidence that he is not properly advised as to the attitude of the operators in my section of the country. I submit my proof. Here is what 500 owners from Missouri and eastern and southern Illinois have to say:

St. Louis, Mo., April 25, 1933.

Representative JOHN J. COCHRAN,

House of Representatives, Washington, D.C.

HONORABLE CONGRESSMAN: At a meeting held on Monday, April 24, this organization, consisting of over 500 theaters throughout the State of Missouri, wishes to protest against House Resolution No. 95, offered by Congressman SIROVICH, of New York, for the investigation of all branches of the film industry.

Passage of such an enactment at this time would be most destructive to the slowly awakening morale of our industry, and we deem it unwise and undeserved publicity, and we strongly urge you to use your good offices to defeat same.

Very truly yours,

FRED WEHRENBURG,

President Motion Picture Theater Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri, and Southern Illinois.

[Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I have letters from the receivers of the large motion-picture houses in St. Louis, and we have some of the finest in the country, all in the hands of receivers. The receivers are lawyers and bankers. They were required to take over the theaters. They appeal for the defeat of the resolution. Mr. Clarence M. Turley, operating three large houses for a receiver says:

Steps are being taken in all directions to put this business on a sound, sensible basis, and the only accomplishment the Sirovich resolution would be is a hampering of strenuous efforts on the part of the people interested to straighten out their affairs, and would result in the expenditure of large sums by the Government and likewise large sums on the part of the representatives of the industry who are today extremely busy trying to salvage the same and put it on a sound basis.

What the author of the resolution complained of is water over the dam. Let him take his complaint to the Federal Trade Commission. If he presents the complaint in proper form and abides by the procedure, his complaint will receive attention. If he has evidence of law violation, let him give it to the Attorney General. The gentleman knows we now have a new and a real Attorney General. Take your evidence of income-tax evasions to Elmer Irely, of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. He will get results if you give him the proper lead. The Government agencies are set up to do what he wants if he can present a cause of action. This is not a matter for the House of Representatives, but belongs to the executive branch of the Government.

Mr. SIROVICH. That is one of the subsidized organizations paid for by these big fellows.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, for nearly a score of years I have been the personal friend of our good colleague, ADOLPH SABATH, of Illinois. I have deep affection for him. For almost as long I have been the personal friend of our distinguished and talented colleague from New York, Dr. SIROVICH, ever since he came to Congress. Hence, it is very evident that when I oppose their resolution, it is with sincere regret that I cannot vote with them.

This measure proposed by them is a most unwise one. When the Committee on Rules favorably reported this Sirovich resolution (H.Res. 95) to the House, I convinced both the Parliamentarian and the Speaker that it was subject to a point of order, because it created a charge upon the Treasury, and the Rules Committee did not have the jurisdiction to report such a bill. When its proponents learned that it would be stopped by a point of order, they then got the committee to report this special rule making it impervious to points of order. Therefore it is necessary for us to vote down this rule in order to stop the passage of this measure.

Some of you who were then present on that day will remember that I took this floor on April 12, 1933, and warned you against this resolution. I then called attention to the fact that by its terms, wholly unlimited and unrestricted, it would permit this proposed committee, or any subcommittee thereof, to sit anywhere at any time. It could sit in New York, or Chicago, or St. Louis, or Abilene, or California, or Seattle, or Alaska, or in the Philippines, or in England, France, Italy, Germany, Asia, Africa, or South America. The committee was to be controlled only by its own wish and will. And I then called attention to the wasteful, extravagant, ridiculous powers given this committee by section 4, to wit:

SEC. 4. The committee is authorized and empowered to employ such legal counsel, technical or other counsel; auditors, clerical, stenographic, and other assistants; to make such expenditures, including expenditures for actual travel and subsistence of members and employees, and for such other and further expenditures as are necessary for the efficient execution of its functions under this resolution, including transcription, printing, and binding of data and reports.

I then called attention, Mr. Speaker, to the fact that under said section 4 this committee could employ as many high-priced New York lawyers as it saw fit and could pay them tremendous salaries; that it could employ numberless technical advisers at huge salaries; that it could employ as many clerks, stenographers, and assistants as it saw fit and itself fix their salaries; and that this committee could spend just as much as it pleased for traveling expenses and subsistence for its members and employees, wholly without limit. And I then urged all of you colleagues then present to be on the watch for this resolution and to be here to help us kill it.

Several have indicated that it could cost $200,000 or $250,000. Why, if this committee saw fit to incur the obligations authorized by this House Resolution 95, it could cost $500,000 or more. When a committee of Congress is authorized by such a resolution to incur obligations and it does incur them, they have to be paid, and they will be paid. We all realize that. If the committee under this House Resolution 95 saw fit to employ lawyers and agreed to pay them a fee of $25,000 each, we all know that we would deem it a moral obligation, and we would have to provide the money to pay it. You will find my speech against this resolution on page 1596 of the RECORD for April 12, 1933.

We older Members here well remember that the Graham of Illinois smelling committee cost us nearly $100,000, that the Joe Walsh committee that lived in special Pullmans with palatial diners attached for so long on the Pacific coast cost thousands upon thousands of dollars, that the special coal committee cost first $400,000 and then an additional $400,000, and that the initial cost of the Wickersham committee was $500,000. I was against all of them. None of them accomplished anything worth while. The huge sums of tax money spent by all of them were wasted. It is time to stop such waste. It is time to stop these expensive junkets. I am going to fight them until we stop them. Our good friend from New York, Dr. SIROVICH, ought to be satisfied with the last trip he took to Europe that was paid for by Congress out of the Public Treasury. He ought not to ask Congress to provide another, especially one on such an extensive scale as this resolution authorizes. His last interesting junket to Europe ought to last him for a while. I have been here since the War Congress met in April 1917, and I have never even been to Panama. I have never yet taken any kind of a junket anywhere on Government expense. I have been all over the United States many times checking up Government business, but I have always paid out of my own pocket. It has not cost the taxpayers anything.

I want to talk to my good friend ADOLPH SABATH about his so-called "lobbying." This morning there came to every one of the 435 Members of this House that voluminous book by Upton Sinclair. Is that lobbying? That is the most expensive lobbying that I have ever seen.

I am for breaking up these picture-show monopolies and all other kind of monopolies. I am for passing whatever legislation that will stop them. But this junket resolution will not stop them. They will go on and on, even after we pass it. What more information do you want, Doctor, than you recited and placed in the RECORD here a few minutes ago? You have that information already. You say it is all authentic. Then why do not you make use of it? It certainly is all-sufficient. Why do not you bring on this floor proper legislation that will put these crooks, as you call them, out of business?

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. No; I regret that I have not the time. Otherwise I would gladly yield. The Doctor said everything he charged against them was a fact. If that is so, he has enough facts, and why does he not bring in legislation to stop that great combine? Why does the gentleman not bring in legislation that will break up this monopoly?

Mr. SIROVICH. It is people like my friend from Texas who stop it.

Mr. BLANTON. No; I never stop salutary measures. I stop only the unwise wasteful ones. Gentlemen will remember what I told our friend, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHANNON], when he was asking you to give him that money for his investigation. I said, "Mr. SHANNON, you know, and we already know, every fact that you are going to develop; and after you investigate, after you travel all over the United States, after you spend the $13,500 of the people's money, you will not know any more than we know already, and you will not do a thing as a result of the spending of that money that accomplishes anything worth while."

If you will look on page 11680 of the RECORD for May 31, 1932, you will see where I predicted truthfully and reliably that Brother SHANNON would spend his thousands without accomplishing anything, which he did do as I predicted, to wit:

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHANNON] or the Committee on Rules will present a resolution to stop the sale of these goods by the Government in Army commissaries and Navy stores I shall vote to stop it without hesitation, but I cannot support a resolution of this kind that will only waste money and do a futile thing. If they get any information, they will not have any more than we already have. We know that this is being done. What is the use of spending money to ascertain what we know already? This committee, or any member of it as a subcommittee, can travel all over the United States from Maine to Seattle and Florida and you will have to pay the bill. I am not in favor of it. You have to pay the expenses of it. You are authorizing them to incur expenses here, and you are going to have to appropriate the money to pay for it. I am not in favor of it. It is doing a foolish thing. Why do they not bring in a resolution and stop this now? We know that these commissaries and naval stores are selling these things all of the time and that they have been doing it.

You will remember that the Shannon committee first spent $10,000, and then it came back to Congress and got $3,500 more, making in all $13,500. And not one thing did it accomplish worth while. We older Members here knew before he investigated all of the facts that he developed on his investigation. The people's money has been spent and is gone. And now it is proposed here that we pass this resolution under which $500,000 could be spent, and in his speech this morning Dr. SIROVICH showed very ably and adeptly that he already knows every fact and circumstance about these crooks and manipulators, as he calls them, that he could hope to develop by any investigation. And after the Doctor and his expert committee junkets all over the United States, and possibly all over Europe, and has spent huge sums of money and has paid out of the Treasury all of the salaries, traveling expenses, and subsistence of his lawyers, his expert advisers, his clerks, stenographers, and assistants, he will not know any more about all this crookedness he has depicted than he knows so intimately right now, and he will not accomplish a single thing. He will not bring us back a fact that he does not have now. He will not produce a thing of value, and that is the reason I am against it. Otherwise I would be for it.

This is not the only proposed junket that is pending on the calendar. There are others. There is one proposing to spend $48,500 on a junket to Rome, Italy. It is House Joint Resolution No. 149, which the Committee on Foreign Affairs has favorably reported, and it is now on the calendar, subject to be called up at any time. And the worst of it all is that it proposes to spend this $48,500 in the name of the farmers. It recites that it is to enable us to participate in the "International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, Italy." The farmers of the United States are not interested in any junkets to Rome, Italy. They want us to stop useless and wasteful expenditures and get our Nation back on a sound financial basis. So let us kill this rule and stop this Sirovich junket, and then let us watch for and kill this Rome junket. And when we do it both Brother SABATH and Dr. SIROVICH will think more of us for doing it. For when they reflect they will know that we have done our duty.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONNERY].

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, I regret that I have not more time than 1 minute to talk on this resolution, but I speak from personal experience, having run a theater of my own. In this 1 minute let me say that I am heartily in favor of this resolution of Dr. SIROVICH. The Actors' Equity Union, which is the actors' union of the theatrical profession as well as the union of the screen actors, is in favor of this resolution. The Federation of Labor, the workers in the picture industry, are in favor of the resolution, because it will show up to the American people the rottenness of some of the working conditions of that industry and will show what they are doing to labor, to their actors and actresses, and to the American people with their stock manipulations. I hope the resolution will pass. [Applause.]

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. COX].

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I have no particular objection to the adoption of the pending resolution. I am prepared to agree with the proponents of the measure that the moving-picture business is probably the rottenest industry in the country; that it has done more to corrupt public morals and to bring about a general disrespect for authority than all other influences combined; but this is what I want to say: The transactions that it is proposed that Congress shall investigate are properly the subject matter of judicial determination. There is nothing that the committee could disclose that would prove fruitful other than affording a basis for legislation for the control of the issuance and sale of stocks. There has just been passed by this House a blue sky law to take care of the conditions which it is insisted exist in the picture-show industry.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. Yes.

Mr. SABATH. That law applies only to new corporations that will be formed from now on and not to the old manipulations and thievery that has been going on.

Mr. COX. Let me say this to you gentlemen, that unless this House is prepared to authorize an expenditure of at least a quarter of a million dollars, any investigation that such a committee as you are invited to set up would prove absolutely worthless.

Mr. SCHULTE. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. COX. With pleasure.

Mr. SCHULTE. The gentleman has just made the statement that it would cost a quarter of a million dollars, and I take it that figure was given to him by some gentleman, to make this investigation. Is the moving-picture business that rank and rotten that it will cost a quarter of a million dollars to investigate it? [Applause.]

Mr. COX. The investigation, in order to amount to anything, must take a wide scope, and it is not the sort of matter that you could go to New York and sit down in an office and have a hearing in a week or 2 weeks, but it will take you all over the country and into all of the different operations of the industry.

Mr. KRAMER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. Yes; I yield.

Mr. KRAMER. Does the gentleman know that this investigation would make the never-to-be-forgotten Teapot Dome oil scandal look like a backyard chicken-stealing?

Mr. COX. Oh, I know it is insisted the investigation will disclose that parties in control of the moving-picture business have been guilty of most scandalous practices, but are we not prepared to accept that as a fact already? Suppose everything that is said by those advocating the adoption of the rule is true, then what of it?

What you are after is the curing of the evil that is complained of. What you must have is legislation. What facts can be disclosed by an investigation that will enable you to do more than you have already done or can do upon the basis of the facts in hand?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. COX] has expired.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. BUSBY].

Mr. BUSBY. Mr. Speaker, ordinarily I would not have anything to say on this question. I served for some years on the Committee on Patents and Copyrights, and would have been chairman of that committee if I had not gone to another committee. There seems to be a peculiar silent interest in opposition to this particular proposition. The resolution is being sternly opposed. I understood at one time what caused that particular type of interest. When I took this floor opposing a bill presented by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] and the late lamented Mr. Vestal on June 28, 1930, when there was not another Member of the House who was willing to take the floor opposed to that bill, I pointed to gentlemen who were sitting in the executive gallery at that time, and on that occasion I said:

Sitting in the gallery to the right are counsel of the lobbyists for this bill, some of whom I am informed are receiving as much as $100,000 a year from monopolies they have organized to put over this legislation. There is no doubt about it. They do not deny it.

They did not stay there long but soon left the gallery. We whipped that type of interest that is down here today in opposition to this resolution [applause], and we ran them out, because they were wrong, and they were representing not the people but they were representing the type of interest that ought not show its head in these legislative Halls. We whipped them by exposing them, and if we had the time here today to expose them again, we would whip them, notwithstanding the gentlemen from Texas, Mr. BLANTON or Mr. LANHAM. And I might tell you that Mr. LANHAM went on that junket trip to Europe he spoke of a moment ago in referring to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SIROVICH] and had his expenses paid by the Government, but he did not tell you that. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. LANHAM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUSBY. I do not have time to yield.

Now, I have no interest in the world in this matter, but I know their game; and if you knew their game you would vote for this resolution. You would not sidetrack it and pocket it down in the Department of Justice or the Federal Trade Commission or some other department that might be controlled by these big-salaried interests. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. BUSBY] has expired.

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes, the balance of my time, to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH].

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, I have been very much interested during the discussion of this rule in regard to the remarks that have been made with reference to our colleague from New York [Mr. SIROVICH]. I want to say in reference to our colleague from New York that I have sat with him on the Committee on Patents and Copyrights during the last session of Congress for a month or 6 weeks, and I have learned to know that my colleague, Dr. SIROVICH, in the work he is trying to do is honest and sincere. I believe absolutely that the gentleman has something and knows something that will be vital to the interests and welfare of the American people. I think the remarks that have been made about him in the Halls of Congress today are not the kind of remarks we should make with reference to a colleague, because I believe if a proper investigation of this organization were made, such as we are discussing at this time, we would have revelations of unethical business methods that would make some of the other investigations very small in the estimation of Members of Congress.

I think the amount to be spent should be limited to $20,000. I think it will prove to be money well spent by the Congress of the United States. It will bring facts to the attention of various departments of the Government upon which they can take proper action.

I believe, however, the Members appointed to this committee should be charged by the Speaker of the House to serve diligently, because there is no reason for a Member to be put on a committee if he is not going to give his time and attention to the work.

As I say, I believe this will prove to be money well expended, and I hope the House will give consideration to this resolution, at least enough consideration to grant the rule that the Members may have a chance to discuss it on the floor. We have been prohibited from doing too many constructive things—I mean real action and constructive legislation.

Mr. CLARKE of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I believe there is a great lobby here. I think it should be exposed, and feel that in exposing it we will be doing a lot of good to the American people.

I now yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CLARKE of New York. The gentleman himself has been on one of these investigating committees, the chairman of which was the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHANNON]. What has that committee accomplished except to spend a lot of money?

Mr. RICH. Committees cannot get legislation out on the floor unless it has been authorized by the President of the United States, nor will they be able to during this session of Congress. The Shannon committee has accomplished a great deal, and the members of the committee will do still greater service for the $13,500 expended, and if its creation has not and will not save the Government millions of dollars, then I should say it was not justifiable. It will save to the American taxpayer $100,000 for every dollar spent.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR].

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, there is an effort here apparently to defeat this measure first by disorder and secondly by ridicule.

I charge, and I shall be glad to support an investigation to prove my charges, that there is now lobbying on the floor of the House not only by ex-Members of Congress but by employees of the House. [Applause.]

I voted for this resolution in the Rules Committee. I am ready to stand by my friend from New York, Dr. SIROVICH, and I was shocked to hear that distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM], who, too, has enjoyed junkets, using ridicule against such a distinguished Member of our body as the gentleman from New York [Mr. SIROVICH]. [Applause.]

We have seen this lobby working.

Mr. PARKS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I cannot yield; my time is too limited.

Mr. PARKS. The gentleman has made serious charges against ex-Members of Congress and employees of the House.

Mr. MOREHEAD. Will not the gentleman name them?

Mr. O'CONNOR. We have seen headlines in the magazines. This is a contest between a lobby and a committee of the House. We voted out the second rule because the challenge was given to the Rules Committee as to whether it is bigger than this lobby.

This threat was made to us.

I was not present when the first resolution came up; but, when this threat was made that a lobby would thwart the will of a committee of the House of Representatives, the Rules Committee voted out this rule we are now considering.

I think everybody who believes in the integrity of this House will vote to adopt this rule. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, on that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 115, nays 227, answered "present" 6, not voting 83, as follows:

A PRIZE TRIBUTE TO MOTHER

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that our colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr.

CULLEN], may extend his remarks in the RECORD by inserting therein a brief statement of one of his constituents on Mother's Day.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following article containing the prize-winning essay of Esther Elwofsky, of Brooklyn, N.Y., winning the prize awarded by the Mother's Day Committee of the Golden Rule Foundation:

Youngest of a family of seven girls and a boy, younger than most of her classmates, and an honor student, 14-year-old Esther Elwofsky achieves a new distinction. And that by putting down in a few simple words all that she feels for her mother.

Esther is a Brooklyn high school girl, the daughter of Mrs. Pauline Elwofsky. With more than 600 other children she participated in a Nation-wide contest for prizes awarded by the Mother's Day committee of the Golden Rule Foundation. The children's tokens consist of prose, poetry, and song. Esther's is in prose, in just four paragraphs, in which she compresses all that others have taken volumes to express. Her tribute won the first prize, $50, offered by Mrs. Frank Presbrey, vice chairman of the Mother's Day committee. It was presented at the Lincoln Building, headquarters of the foundation, in New York City, by Charles H. Tuttle, acting chairman of the board of trustees of the foundation.

Here is Esther's tribute as it is quoted in the Times:

"MOTHER'S DAY"

"One day in the year set aside for mothers—how strange a custom! Like setting one day aside to grasp the beauty of the sun, the moon, the stars—all the lovely, natural things that bring warmth, light, comfort.

"Many times I have longed to set my thoughts down upon paper. Not in the flowery language of greeting cards but in the simple language of love. I write the words, 'Dear Mother'—lovely tender words—and grow silent beneath the weight of thoughts and memories that, lying buried like precious jewels beneath the dust of years, arise clear and glowing in my mind.

"Impossible to describe the homely beauty of these thoughts: Warm kitchen filled with the scent of bread; sunlight dappling a clean white cloth, touching the rosy apples in their copper bowl; tender memories of loving acts and dreary tasks done smilingly while the sun shone and the years marched swiftly past, and youth, perhaps secretly mourned, passed with it.

"How describe the broad, deep-bosomed earth, symbol of maternity—awakening in the spring of the year, lying fruitful beneath the summer sun, resting from its labors in the autumn and dreaming peacefully wrapt in snowy mantle? Dwelling upon these thoughts, we hear borne strong on the wind the galloping hoofs of Time astride the ceaseless cycles of the years, drawing nearer and nearer. Then caught by a vague fear, we say or we think or we write, 'Dear Mother'."

HOUSE RESOLUTION 121

Mr. BEAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on House Resolution 121.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. BEAM. Mr. Speaker, I am supporting this resolution for the reason I believe the welfare of the industry and the security of the public demand such a congressional investigation as herein proposed. Of all industries not classed as public utilities or of a strictly governmental nature, none exercises a greater influence or has a more drastic effect upon the minds and hearts of our people than does the motion-picture industry in the United States.

It has in its power the instrumentality of appealing to the sentiments of our nature. It has the means of molding public opinion by the tremendous influence it exerts upon the people of our country. By dramatizing events, imprints are left upon the public minds; whether these impressions are for good or evil is determined largely upon the end they desire to attain.

Throughout the Nation a cry has arisen for a congressional investigation of this great industry, and only a congressional committee has the power to undertake such a far-reaching task as an undertaking of this kind will entail.

I am not concerned here with the class or character of entertainment which is produced. This is the responsibility of our municipal and State censor bureaus chiefly; but I am concerned, and so is every Member of this House, in what has become of the hundreds of millions of dollars of worthless stocks and securities which have been fed through this great instrumentality of conviction and persuasion—"the screen"—to an unsuspecting and trusting public.

I am interested to disclose why a few men in this industry receive such unwarranted and fabulous salaries, ranging from $150,000 to $800,000 annually, in addition to having various forms of gratuities voted to themselves, to the detriment of hundreds of thousands of investors of their worthless securities.

I am concerned in bringing to the forefront that system of high finance which has existed for a great number of years between certain banking institutions of the United States and a few of these men who control the motion-picture industry in this country.

I believe the Membership of this House and the people of the United States should know by what means and for what particular purposes these interorganizations and intercorporations or subsidiary corporations, such as the Paramount-Publix Corporation; Paramount Pictures Corporation; Paramount Distributing Corporation; Paramount Pictures Distributing Co., Inc.; and the Paramount International Corporation, are formulated. I am anxious to have the searchlight of truth disclose some of the workings of these interlocking corporations to bring to light the alliance between the promotional schemes and the banking cooperation which they receive.

I want to know whether the antitrust laws of the United States have been violated by the practices in which they have heretofore engaged and indulged and if that same cloak of immunity which has assiduously guarded their activities during the last 10 years is still present and strong enough to prevent the searchlight of truth to pierce its sacred precincts.

I believe the Membership of this House and the people of the United States should have some information as to the inner workings of an industry which so vitally effects and influences our industrial and cultural life.

I want to ascertain some of the methods employed by this so-called "all-powerful trust." The receipts from the showing of motion pictures, I am advised, approximate $1,600,000 a day, or approximately $600,000,000 a year. I believe we are interested in finding out what becomes of this enormous intake of money, as only dribbles reach the bondholders and stockholders of motion-picture corporations and the rank and file of American citizens, who provide the actual cash for the operation of the industry.

I believe it is highly significant for us to ascertain whether or not there have been any infractions of the antitrust law by the system of block booking or protection in the distribution and exhibition of pictures classed as "features", to the detriment of thousands of independent exhibitors, which this giant monopoly has attempted to crush or destroy, to the detriment of the masses of the people of the United States.

I am of the opinion that the American Congress should know, and through them the citizens of our country should be informed, that that same all-powerful influence has successfully thwarted and stifled any attempt to investigate the motion-picture industry for the last 10 years. I, for one, want to know if that cloak of immunity from any congressional inquisition is still existing, is still an integral part of this Government, and under that mantle of defiance and security can still persist in their nefarious practices, which have brought ruin to so many of the citizens of our country.

Members of the House, this resolution should be passed unanimously. The mandate should issue from this Chamber that a few motion-picture executives or any combination of men are not powerful or influential enough to prevent the Congress of the United States from turning the searchlight of scrutiny upon their deeds and practices, to the end and to the purpose of safeguarding the citizens of this country and the future welfare and security of this great industry.

EXTRAVAGANCE IN THE PURCHASE OF MOTOR TRUCKS

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the purchase of trucks by the Post Office Department.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection.

There was no objection.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, our Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, authorized to investigate expenditures of the Post Office Department in accordance with H.Res. 226, considered among other items the purchase of motor trucks for the use of the Post Office Department.

Hearings in this connection were held on Friday, July 8, 1932, at the committee rooms in the House Office Building, and representatives of a number of leading automotive manufacturing concerns presented their views to the committee.

Much of the criticism offered at the hearings by the witnesses was directed against the specification requirements and the general method of procedure adopted by the Department in awarding contracts to the successful bidder. It was pointed out very clearly that the present methods were discriminatory and resulted in increased cost to the Department.

The specifications as prepared prevent the offering of current production trucks and make it incumbent upon the bidding company to design a specially constructed truck, using parts and accessories which in many cases are obsolete and difficult to obtain.

Another complaint registered rather emphatically was to the effect that the bidding companies were given no opportunity whatsoever to prove that their product met with the Department's requirements, and that the elimination of designs which were held to be contrary to the Department's specifications and the award to the successful bidder usually took place at the same time. This procedure limits the number of bidders and gives the unsuccessful concerns no opportunity to prove their claims.

We were informed that considerable saving would result to the Government if all the companies desiring to bid were given a reasonable amount of time to prove that their product met with the Department specifications, and that keeping this information secret until the award was made public was bad business practice.

Information was also given to our committee to the effect that economy would result from the purchase of standard, current-production trucks, parts for which could be made available at lower costs at any time and without the delay which results from the present practice of specifying obsolete or out-of-production parts and accessories.

The procedure practiced by the Department in the past is not in keeping with the provisions of section 3709, Revised Statutes. If this law were followed, it would result in increasing the number of competing bidders and in securing lower cost to the Government.

Probably one of the most important subjects in Government contracting is that concerning section 3709, Revised Statutes, which requires that all purchases and contracts for supplies in any of the departments of the Government, except for personal services and except in cases of emergencies, shall be made after advertising a sufficient time previously respecting same. It has been frequently held by the courts and by the accounting officers of the United States that the provisions of the statute are designed to give all manufacturers, dealers, and so forth, equal right to compete for Government business, secure for the Government the benefits which flow from competition, to prevent unjust favoritism by representatives of the Government in making purchases on public account, and to prevent collusion and fraud in procuring supplies and letting contracts.

During the recent hearings before the committee there was brought to the attention of the committee a situation with reference to the purchase of automobiles by the Post Office Department as well as other departments of the Government, it appearing that the provisions of section 3709, Revised Statutes, had not been complied with in that the specifications were drawn with reference to a particular make or to contain nonessential details not shown to have anything to do with the needs of the United States and that award was made to other than the lowest bidder without lawful reason therefor.

As an example of the situation prevailing in the Post Office Department, your attention is invited to certain purchases made during the past year. It appears that under date of May 5, 1932, bids were requested by the Post Office Department for the furnishing of 275 trucks of gross-load capacity of not less than 8,000 pounds, opening of May 27, 1932; 160 trucks of gross-load carrying capacity of not less than 12,000 pounds, opening of May 27, 1932; 300 trucks of a gross-load capacity of not less than 5,200 pounds, opening of June 2, 1932.

After the respective bids had been opened, they were referred to a committee of the Post Office Department, which was represented to consist of experts on the purchase of automotive equipment. The several bids were given consideration by the said committee, and as a result thereof recommendations were submitted as to whom the award was to be made, the higher bid being recommended for acceptance in each instance. There was filed in the office of the Comptroller General of the United States some 5 or 6 formal protests with reference to the proposed award; but notwithstanding this and the fact that award had been made to a higher bidder in each instance, the Postmaster General disregarded the advices of the Comptroller General to the effect that the representations made in the respective protests were such that no appropriated moneys were available to make payments pending disposition of the protest, and notwithstanding the fact that the matter was pending before a committee of the Congress, the Postmaster General ordered delivery to be made, and delivery was accepted, thereby obligating the United States to make payment on the basis of a quantum valebat, regardless of the shown irregularities in the rejection of the lower bids.

It was subsequently shown that the specifications were discriminatory and unduly restrictive, permitting only a few preferred competitors to qualify. In fact, one of the largest manufacturers in the United States—General Motors Corporation—could not bid on its standard model but was forced, because of the restrictive features of the specifications, to bid on a model in a higher price range which increased its price to the point where it could not bid competitively. The specifications were shown to be at variance with what the trade considered accepted manufacturing practice, although the operating requirements of the Post Office Department are no severer than ordinary commercial usage; that is transportation of mail in most cases over paved streets and highways. An examination of the specifications disclosed that they were inconsistent and contradictory. Maximum and minimum limitations were placed on engine displacement, which is a physical measurement only and has only a relative bearing on the amount of power the engine will produce.

The specifications covering the chassis frame were highly restrictive, exact dimensions were given covering depth, width, and thickness, with very close maximum and minimum tolerances. This disqualified frames which were actually larger and stronger than the specifications require, and it is singular to note that certain preferred manufacturers produced frames within the dimensional limits so specified. This in spite of the claim made by the Post Office Department that the frame was special to all bidders. The preferred manufacturers could produce frames of the special material called for, utilizing their existing dies, whereas other bidders, including some of the large manufacturers in the United States, were forced to new dies, the cost of which is shown to run into thousands of dollars, thereby preventing competition.

The nature of the unduly restrictive clauses in the specifications accompanying the bids in this instance justifies the conclusion that the Post Office Department was apparently unwilling to accept motor-vehicle designs which represented the opinion of the large majority of automotive engineers. This in spite of the fact that such designs have been accepted by commercial users at large and by other governmental departments, such as the Navy Department, Forest Service, and so forth, whose requirements in most cases would appear to be far more exacting than the requirements of the Post Office Department.

Your particular attention is invited to the request for bids on the 300 trucks in the 5,200-pound class. In that case the bid of the Studebaker Corporation of America was rejected and the higher bid of the International Harvester Co. was accepted; the principal reason for the rejection of the lower bid being that the steering gear on the truck offered by the Studebaker Co. was not adequate, this notwithstanding the fact that on numerous occasions before award had been made the Studebaker Co. with its resources and 80 years experience guaranteed that the steering gear was adequate and conformed to the specifications and would give bond for the satisfactory performance thereof. As a result of the rejection of the Studebaker Co.'s bid the United States was compelled to pay some $38,000 more for trucks not shown to be of any better construction or any different from those of the lowest bidder.

In a recent purchase made by the Panama Canal the lower bid was rejected because the trucks so offered by the low bidder did not have pressure-feed lubrication to the piston pins. This notwithstanding the fact that trucks not equipped with pressure-feed lubrication to the piston pins were shown to be in extensive use by various Government departments as well as the District of Columbia and apparently giving satisfaction. The Panama Canal, in justification of its apparent disregard of the provisions of section 3709, Revised Statutes, stated that the trucks were not to be used for ordinary transportation purposes but for the purpose of constructing and repairing overhead and underground transmission lines and over wide areas and through jungles, over rough roads and cut trails where no road exists. It is singular to note, however, that there was nothing in the specifications that advised prospective bidders that the trucks were to be used for other than the ordinary hauling, and there was thus a failure to show such need of the United States and as had been pointed out in decisions of the Comptroller General of the United States that the provisions of section 3709, Revised Statutes, made it an administrative duty to specify the needs to support an expenditure of public moneys. It is not conceivable that the needs of the Panama Canal with respect to a truck differ in any respect from the needs of other departments of the Government who also use trucks in repairing transmission lines, and so forth. Furthermore, it would seem absurd to contend that the conditions under which the trucks were to be used or the areas to be covered are such that only a truck equipped with pressure-feed lubrication to the piston pins will answer the needs.

It is interesting to note in connection with the rejection of the low bidder in this case, Federal Motor Truck Co., offering a truck for the sum of $1,908.90 meeting the essential requirements of the specifications, but not including pressure-feed lubrication to the piston pins, that at one time the Panama Canal used the specifications of the Federal Motor Truck Co.—the rejected bidder here—as a standard in its advertisement for trucks, and the specifications of the said trucks were incorporated into and made a part of the advertisement for bids; and that a protest was filed with the Comptroller General of the United States by the Autocar Sales & Service Co.—successful bidder here—against the use thereof, and in reporting to the Comptroller General with respect thereto the general purchasing officer of the Panama Canal stated in his letter of February 27, 1926, in part, as follows:

This circular also contained the standard provision hereinbefore quoted on page 2 of this letter, and bids were in fact received from three companies other than the Federal Motor Truck Co., to whom award was made. The specifications of the lower-priced trucks offered varied from the specifications in essential points, and, therefore, were not satisfactory for the service required.

The disinterested effort of the Autocar Sales & Service Co. to improve Government procedure for purchasing motor trucks is duly appreciated, but this office is unable to see wherein the present procedure of the Panama Canal for such purchases is unsound in business principle or in any way prejudicial to the best interests of the Government.

The Panama Canal was very properly advised by the Comptroller General in his decision of March 9, 1926 (5 Comp. Gen. 712), that the methods must be corrected so that bids be not asked under specifications so drawn as to limit competition.

In a more recent case the Department of the Interior entered into a contract with the Ford Motor Co. in February 1933 for the furnishing of a 2-door 5-passenger automobile, the low bid of the Continental Automobile Co. being rejected because the spare tire was mounted in the rear instead of in a right front fender well as specified. In other words, the low bid conformed in every respect to the advertised specifications except that the spare tire was mounted on the rear instead of the right front fender well. I assume that it would not be seriously contended by anyone that an automobile conforming in every respect to the advertised specifications except location of spare tire would not answer the needs of the United States for ordinary transportation purposes. The procedure followed in this case justifies but one conclusion, and that is the desire of the contracting officer to purchase a particular make regardless of automobiles offered by others and at a lower price and conforming to the essential requirements of the specifications.

There was at one time a tendency on the part of the various establishments of the Government to standardize on automotive equipment, particularly the War Department. Originally the War Department stated that the Dodge automobile would best meet the needs of the service, and it was adopted as the standard and approved type of motor vehicle for the Army, and purchases were made accordingly for the fiscal year 1925. Next year the Chevrolet was adopted by the War Department as the only automobile that would satisfactorily meet its need. Recommendation was also made by the War Department for the purchase of a Willys-Knight car, with the result that we find the War Department urging standardization of a particular make of car because of military necessity and at the same time either purchasing or recommending the purchase of different makes—Dodge, Chevrolet, and Willys-Knight cars—and to add to this confusion of standardization the War Department subsequently purchased a Chrysler touring car and Chrysler sedan and more recently Ford cars. I am informed, however, that this situation has been somewhat corrected, and there is not the desire, or at least the War Department is not known to be now attempting, to standardize on one particular make of automobile.

In connection with the drawing of the specifications to accompany the request for bids the Comptroller General of the United States has on numerous occasions stated clearly and concisely the conditions that should govern the substance, being that under existing laws governing purchase of equipment for the Government the controlling element is the job to be done, the work necessary to be accomplished. The request for bids must fairly reflect the needs through specifications or otherwise, and the equipment to be had at the lowest price that will serve to do the job is that authorized to be purchased at the public expense. If the need be of an extraordinary nature as distinguished from the usual so as to require unusual equipment, the true nature of the need should be fully disclosed so that all who wish to bid may be informed but the specifying of minor details having nothing to do with the need may only be viewed as an attempt to limit competition and circumvent the law. The fact that manufacturers put out certain makes does not necessarily mean that they would not bid upon specifications open to all and not descriptive of a particular make or manufacture.

The various motor-vehicle manufacturers and stockholders have an interest in doing business with the Government. They have a right to stand or fall on such business by the superiority of their product rather than by favoritism of a purchasing officer or predilection of that purchasing officer for some particular make of car. The American people through Congress have an interest in keeping expenditures to a minimum and preventing favoritism, waste, and extravagance in the expenditure of public funds. In conclusion, permit me to state that the procedure followed by the Post Office Department in awarding the contracts in question, as well as the other cases referred to, is but illustrative as to why there exists so much dissatisfaction among bidders and why numerous complaints are being filed in the office of the Comptroller General of the United States; it cannot be seriously contended that such procedure as was followed in the cases referred to is in the interest of the United States or fair to competitive bidders, nor does it comply with the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of the United States v. Purcell Envelope Co. (249 U.S. 313) to the effect "that the Government should be animated by a justice as anxious to consider the rights of the bidder as to insist upon its own." It can but seem to cast doubt on the integrity of the purchasing officers of the United States, eliminate competition to the prejudice of the Government and competing bidders. Furthermore, such restrictive specifications with a limited number of qualified bidders result in increased cost to the Government at a time when economy in Government expenditures is of paramount importance.

A PLAN SUGGESTED TO OUR COMMITTEE

The attention of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads has been called to the methods used by the Post Office Department in purchasing motor trucks for the Department, and there seems to be a feeling that these selections are made too near the end of the fiscal year to give the Department sufficient opportunity to investigate fully the merits of the individual bids.

Believing that the Department at the beginning of each fiscal year has a general conception of its motor-truck requirements, it is respectfully suggested that, instead of waiting until the end of the year, specifications be drawn and bids requested early in the year, to permit of a proper review of all the bids and give manufacturers an opportunity to submit claims to support their bids, should they so desire.

Knowing that there may arise some question as to the exact amount of money available for this purpose, and in order also that the Department's needs may be met in the event the original order falls short of actual requirements, it is further suggested that the specifications contain a proviso that a small percentage of additional motor trucks may be purchased at any time during the fiscal year at the same contract price.

In addition to giving the bidders ample opportunity to lay their claims before the Department, it is believed that this method would permit of a longer period of time in which to make deliveries, which, in turn, would enable the contractor to schedule production in a way that would help to keep down the costs, giving the Government advantage of a lower price, and stabilize employment by retaining the employees over a longer period.

MOTOR-TRUCK SUGGESTIONS SUBMITTED TO THE COMMITTEE ON THE POST OFFICE AND POST ROADS

The White Co., Cleveland Ohio: A classification plan, based on type of service, operating conditions, etc. Under this plan the manufacturer must establish and prove his qualifications before being permitted to bid.

Kenworth Motor Truck Corporation, Seattle, Wash.: Entire quantity on which bids are requested is so high as to eliminate 90 percent of the truck companies from bidding. Local manufacturers should be permitted to bid. The motor-truck business is very much of a local business. The conditions met in each district are handled by the truck manufacturer, and you will not find the same standardization in the manufacture of trucks as you will find in the manufacture of cars.

Continental Motors Corporation, Detroit, Mich.: A general specification covering the gasoline engine should suffice when dealing with reputable gas engine and truck manufacturers. Department's rigid standards calling for certain lubrication features in the engine as well as horsepower and torque output at a given speed entail changes in design and prevent manufacturer from bidding because the engine is not in strict accordance with descriptive literature previously published.

Moreland Motor Truck Co., Los Angeles, Calif.: Pacific coast manufacturers prevented from bidding because specifications require bidder to bid on all of the order and to be able to provide service at each one of the cities where the trucks are used. Local conditions are best met by local manufacturers, and Pacific coast manufacturers would like to be permitted to bid on trucks for use in that territory.

Brockway Motor Co., Inc., Cortland, N.Y.: A reputable builder who meets every major specification should not be rejected because he does not use in his standard lines certain design features, such as special wrist-pin lubrication, unless he has in advance an opportunity to decide whether or not such a special feature should be incorporated in his standard line.

Federal Motor Truck Co., Detroit, Mich.: Specifications should be drawn so that all truck manufacturers may bid.

Fargo Motor Corporation, Detroit, Mich.: Specifications are too restrictive.

Theurer Wagon Works, Inc., North Bergen, N.J.: Business placed by the Government for these units would benefit the citizens of each locality if such bodies were to be built in the location in which they were to be used in the distribution of Government mail. It would be necessary to take into account the existing wage scale prevailing in such communities.

Superior Body Co., Lima, Ohio: Specifications are written with the assistance of outside engineers and the scope of purchasing is limited to a few manufacturers. General welfare of the country involved. Because of some of the prices paid for material, labor has received the lowest hourly rate in many years, and companies have been driven to the verge of bankruptcy. Competitors are forced, or feel they are forced, to make prices which crush both labor and material.

The Autocar Sales & Service Co., Washington, D.C.: Consideration should be given in the preparation of specifications to vehicles which will give the most continuous, uninterrupted service, coupled with the most economical operation, taking into consideration the original purchase price and the cost of operation spread over the life of the vehicle.

York-Hoover Body Corporation, York, Pa.: Awards on bids which are based on delivered cost at destination should be figured from official tariff rates and not on special concessions. Bidder should have right to have comparative figures to check up his bid against the figures which determined the award to the successful bidder.

Rex-Watson Corporation, Canastota, N.Y.: Unfair competition in the motor-truck body awards should be eliminated. Department might make up bills of material and estimated costs of the bodies involved at each letting, to be used as a guide in determining the lowest responsible bidder. If a bid is found to be considerably under the estimated costs as well as lower than a majority of the bids offered, an investigation should be made, and the Department reasonably satisfied that the contract if awarded would be completed and in accordance with plans and specifications.

Indiana Motors Corporation, Marion, Ind.: The specifications each year have been changed around to indicate a desire for one specific vehicle. This procedure precludes competitive bidding. The specifications should be written to define a truck to haul a certain pay load, to give the required performance under test, and be entirely free from all the identifying marks of one specific make and model. The committee on awards should be the post office inspectors, and to them should be furnished for technical advice and automotive counsel an engineer from the Department of Standards.

Spillman Engineering Corporation, North Tonawanda, N.Y.: Advocates a definite minimum scale of wages, such as the highway department has adopted in New York State by specifying that a minimum labor rate of 40 cents should be paid.

General Motors Truck Co., Pontiac, Mich.: Cites work of the Federal Specification Board and suggests that the Department adopt these specifications in their final form, employing the "evaluation" idea of these specifications, which considers the responsibility of the manufacturer and his ability to meet requirements, past performance of product, service facilities, price of repair parts, and many other items in addition to the mechanical details of his product. After advertising for bids the Department should designate a period, starting 7 to 10 days after issuance and continuing for 7 to 10 days, during which manufacturers may submit specifications on the model they believe will meet requirements and on which they would elect to bid. During this period the Department should be required to certify that such models will or will not be acceptable. Should there be a difference of opinion between the manufacturer and the Department regarding the interpretation of the specifications with regard to the manufacturer's design or product, the matter should be referred to some central governing board, such as the Federal Specification Board.

The Mifflinburg Body Co., Mifflinburg, Pa.: In awarding contracts the financial responsibility of the bidder should be taken into consideration. Irresponsible concerns often make such bids as to make it impossible for a financially responsible firm to compete. Government should discourage unsound low bids.

Diamond T Motor Car Co., Chicago, Ill.: It would be a very desirable thing if it were possible to standardize on a certain number of makes of trucks, allocating certain sections of the country to those manufacturers who geographically are best able to take care of that particular territory. This plan has been worked successfully with large privately owned corporations.

The Corbitt Co., Henderson, N.C.: Each and every bidder should be notified in writing of the reasons for rejection of his submission a reasonable length of time prior to the issuance of any notification of award to any other bidder for such action as each bidder might desire to take.

Pioneer Auto Works, Tacoma, Wash.: Awards should be made, as far as possible, to manufacturers in the district wherein this equipment is to be used.

It cannot be contended that the purchase of standard, current-production motor trucks will result in increased cost to the Government because of the necessity of purchasing standard parts for replacements when necessary. This matter is covered in an act approved June 30, 1930, which reads as follows:

[PUBLIC—No. 486—71ST CONGRESS]

An act to authorize the Postmaster General to purchase motor-truck parts from the truck manufacturer

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever motor-truck parts are needed by the Post Office Department in the operation of motor trucks, the Postmaster General is hereby authorized to enter into agreements with truck manufacturers for the purchase of such truck parts at a price not exceeding the truck manufacturer's list price, less regular discounts, without advertising under such arrangements as in the opinion of the Postmaster General will be most advantageous to the Government.

Approved, June 30, 1930.

Our committee has been furnished by the Comptroller General's Office with abstracts of bids received for the furnishing of automobile-truck chassis to the Post Office Department, showing that the award was made in favor of the company that was actually the highest bidder but who succeeded for the reason that the lower bidders were eliminated on the grounds that their product did not conform to the specifications.

It may be possible for the Department to secure lower estimates by advertising for standard, current-production trucks and to purchase replacements or parts in accordance with the act of June 30, 1930, or to give every responsible bidder an opportunity to prove that his product conforms with the specifications.

Under existing conditions the bidding is restricted and many reputable firms are not being given the privileges they should enjoy. This practice is wasteful and extravagant and should be stopped in the interest of economy in government and fair dealing to our American manufacturers.

PROPOSED INVESTIGATION OF THE MOTION-PICTURE INDUSTRY

Mr. MUSSELWHITE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on House Resolution 95.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MUSSELWHITE. Mr. Speaker, I am constrained to oppose the resolution fathered by my friend the gentleman from New York [Mr. SROVICH]. Whatever merits the measure may have I confidently feel are nullified by the dangerous provisions contained in section 4 of the bill.

We are here to carry out the pledges of the administration in its effort toward governmental economy. How can anyone in this House say that an unlimited empowerment contained in section 4 for the expenditure of money is in the interests of economy? Why, gentlemen, it is a pronounced reversion to the old type of junkets and wasteful expenditure.

This section places no limit whatever on the amount to be expended in this so-called "investigation." It would permit of traveling in style by these investigators from Hollywood to Long Island and back again, time without number.

The very language of the resolution indicates an intent to investigate and study every activity of the motion-picture industry. This investigation, of necessity, would be nationwide. With the limited committee suggested in the resolution, no real investigation of this great industry could be accomplished in less than 2 years and at a minimum cost of probably a quarter of a million dollars.

The supply of salable motion pictures has been steadily shrinking throughout the life of the depression until it is today but 60 percent of the 1928-29 period. As a result of this many theaters in the country have been forced to close, while to keep others open it has been necessary to import and use pictures made in foreign countries.

The investigation, if carried out, would cause a disruption in the orderly processes of making salable motion pictures, and, by reason of the turmoil of investigation with its consequent disturbance of confidence and faith in the motion-picture industry, might easily curtail their financial resources to such an extent at this particular time that the American manufacturers would be unable to finance their product for the forthcoming season.

This financing of production is a vital necessity at this time of year when the manufacturers lay out their plans for the coming season, and any disturbance of their arrangements would be bound to result in further curtailed production, which is proving so devastating to the motion-picture theaters of the country.

I do not believe the motion-picture industry should be singled out for investigation at this time. It is a loyal American industry, whose contribution to the upkeep of the morale of this Nation was so singularly recognized during the war by President Wilson and by every succeeding administration. It has loyally supported the Government in all its movements and policies.

The continued operation of motion-picture theaters has been conceded by all students of political economy, as well as city and State governments, to be of vital necessity to the American public.

It is a known and admitted fact that the motion-picture industry has suffered in this depression and is just beginning to see the light, and, in fact, today is trembling on the upturn.

An investigation such as the one proposed would, in my opinion, demoralize the industry and retard its recovery.

To my mind, this provides the set-up for the most elaborate and expensive junket in the country's history. For this reason, if for no other, I must oppose it.

Under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD I desire to include the following telegrams from representative men and organizations in the Ninth District of Michigan who stoutly oppose this resolution:

MANISTEE, MICH., April 26, 1933.

HON. HARRY W. MUSSELWHITE,
Representative Ninth Congressional District of Michigan,
House Office Building, Washington, D.C.:

Certain individuals with ulterior motives endeavoring force through House Resolution No. 95, known as the Sirovich resolution, to investigate the motion-picture industry. We respectfully ask your opposition to this measure which at present time would seriously penalize and handicap the operation of the industry during this time of stress in which it is already struggling under excessive burden.

MANISTEE BOARD OF COMMERCE,
GEORGE O. NYE, Secretary.

MANISTEE, MICH., April 26, 1933.

HON. HARRY W. MUSSELWHITE,
Representative Ninth Congressional District of Michigan,
House Office Building, Washington, D.C.:

As our Representative we ask your opposition to House Resolution No. 95, known as the Sirovich resolution, to investigate the motion-picture industry. This resolution seems to be inspired by thoughtless individuals and would bring untold hardship on this industry which employs thousands of workers directly and indirectly and which at present should not be further disturbed by such destructive legislation.

MANISTEE UNITY CLUB,
THOMAS KEELY, President.

CADILLAC, MICH., May 1, 1933.

HON. HARRY W. MUSSELWHITE,
House of Representatives, Washington, D.C.:

I desire to express my opposition to House bill No. 95, known as the "Sirovich resolution", believing it to be out-of-step at present time, and trust your views in this matter will coincide with mine.

JAMES C. FLYNN.

MANISTEE, MICH., April 26, 1933.

HON. HARRY W. MUSSELWHITE,
Representative Ninth District of Michigan,
House Office Building, Washington, D.C.:

Our attention has been directed to House Resolution No. 95, known as the "Sirovich resolution", to investigate the motion-picture industry. We ask your firm opposition to the passing of this measure, which would place another unwarranted burden on the motion-picture industry, which at the present time is struggling against odds to keep afloat.

MANISTEE ROTARY CLUB,
TED VOLMER, Secretary.

THIRD DEFICIENCY BILL

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H.R. 5390, the third deficiency bill, with Senate amendments, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. BUCHANAN, TAYLOR of Colorado, AYRES of Kansas, TABER, and BACON.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Will the gentleman withhold that request a moment?

Mr. PATMAN. I withhold it.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Mr. Speaker, may I state further that my colleague the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HART] was detained on important business and therefore did not vote on the independent offices bill.

MEDIOCRITY TRIUMPHANT

Mr. HENNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend and revise my remarks and to include in the RECORD an oration by Arthur B. Madigson, captioned "Mediocrity Triumphant", which recently won the national oratorical contest held at Iowa City, Iowa. Mr. Madigson is a distinguished student at the University of Wisconsin, and is a constituent of mine at Madison, Wis. I believe that this young orator, who has received national distinction, deserves the consideration of a place in our national RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HENNEY. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD I include the following text of an original oration by Arthur Magidson, which this past week won him first place in the National Oratorical League contest at Iowa City, Iowa. Magidson won the $100 Frankfurter oratorical contest with the same selection some time ago:

On a bleak, windswept hillside in Vermont, there is a newly made grave. As yet, no headstone marks the identity of the occupant. I should like to suggest one—an undecorated pillar of stone with no inscription. For the man was silent in life, silent in death, and will remain silent forever.

No words of his will long linger in our memories. We shall retain no colorful stories of his acts as the Nation's Chief Executive. He made no eternal precedents as did Washington; he propounded no new political philosophy as did Jefferson; he lacked the rugged, majestic personality of Lincoln; his public appearances were not filled with the bombastic showmanship of Theodore Roosevelt. He had neither the scholarly mien of Wilson nor the genial simplicity of Harding. Yet we shall remember him—remember him for what he was rather than for what he did.

Calvin Coolidge was Governor of Massachusetts at the time of the Boston police strike. Whether or not he actually wrote the ringing proclamation credited to him is a matter of conjecture, but because it was issued over his signature he became known throughout the Nation as the apostle of law and order. A peculiar twist of mob psychology, so common in our political conventions and legislative assemblies, made him the Republican candidate for Vice President. The postwar reaction swept him from the shadows of the governorship to the complete obscurity of the vice presidency, under Harding.

The Harding administration is remembered chiefly for the oil scandals. Coolidge sat in the Cabinet meetings at the time that the crooked deals were made. He remained silent—silent through the negotiations, silent through the discovery of the frauds, silent through Senator Tom Walsh's heroic prosecution of the guilty men. Suddenly the unexpected death of Harding shocked the Nation and pushed Coolidge into the Presidency. In that position he still remained silent. Only because of the insistence of his advisers did Coolidge reluctantly accept the resignations of Denby and Daugherty from his Cabinet. Yet when these two had left the Capital the country rejoiced that at last it had a President who would resolutely punish all evildoers.

Coolidge's ascension to the Presidency was perhaps the most dramatic incident in his career. When the news of Harding's death came the Vice President was in a cabin in Vermont with his father. There in that New England home, by the flickering yellow light of a kerosene lamp, the elder man, a notary public, raised his son's hand to Heaven and administered the solemn oath of office. And then the people began to couple the name of Calvin Coolidge with the name of Abraham Lincoln.

In 1924 the Democratic Party was split asunder at the sanguinary battle of Madison Square Garden. The late Senator La Follette entered a third party in the field, in a vigorous attempt to divide the vote and to force the election into the House of Representatives. The American people hesitated. Here stood John W. Davis—scholar, diplomat, statesman. Here stood Robert M. La Follette, appealing to the farmers and workers to support a program of industrial welfare and social justice. But here was Calvin Coolidge representing all that was safe and conservative in American life. His was not the party of Sinclair and Fall: it was the party of Hamilton and Lincoln. Davis promised sound international policies; La Follette promised a better world for the future; but Coolidge promised the full dinner pail. He sat calmly in the White House, made one speech shortly before the election to assure the country that it was fundamentally sound and prosperous, and was swept into office on a landslide. Bankers, industrialists, laborers, and farmers—all had unlimited confidence in the omniscient "sage of Northampton."

That election of 1924 was one of the great failures of democracy. Instead of recognizing that their President should be a forceful leader, and that his party should be an instrument for carrying out a definite political program, the American people asked that their Chief Executive be nothing more than a Santa Claus who would fill their stockings with Ford cars and put a chicken in every pot. When the Republican Party, represented by Coolidge, tried to satisfy that impossible demand, it bartered away the soul of its founder for a mess of political jobs.

During Coolidge's term, as usual, the people were clamoring for economy in government. Coolidge gave it to them by cutting the blue stripes off the mail bags, by ordering the Government office workers to conserve on paper, pencils, and rubber bands, and meanwhile by approving several new and expensive Government bureaus. Yet "Coolidge economy" was the watchword of the day.

Coolidge was in sympathy with the financial powers who engineered the boom in Wall Street. His phrase, "Don't sell your country short" became the battle cry of the bull market. "Coolidge prosperity" was one of the miracles attributed to the White House philosopher. We know today that this prosperity was a sham, and that beneath the towering piles of easy money to be made in Wall Street was a phantom foundation—desperate inflation of values. We know today that even then the farms and factories of the Nation were haunted by the specters of poverty, unemployment, and despair!

The Republican Convention, 1928, approached. A nod of the head from the White House and Coolidge would have been renominated by acclamation. But one summer morning, while the President was resting out in South Dakota, he handed the newspaper correspondents at his camp small slips of paper bearing the single sentence, "I do not choose to run in 1928. (Signed) Coolidge." And thus, in this terse yet cryptic statement the silent New Englander retired from public life.

Why did he issue that statement? Did he have a premonition that he would never live through another 4 years in the White House? Was he afraid of the third term tradition? Or had he seen on the horizon the tiny black cloud foretelling the impending storm, a devastating tornado which would strip any President of prestige and shatter the Coolidge legend? We do not know whether it was fear, foresight, genius, or merely luck which caused him to retire at the height of his popularity. Be that as it may, he will be remembered as "the man who knew when not to run."

But Calvin Coolidge had sowed the wind! And before the whirlwind broke he quietly sought the safe seclusion of Northampton to write syndicated columns of platitudes for the newspapers and long articles for the Saturday Evening Post at so many dollars per word.

He was like a vaudeville performer who has just built a house of cards upon the stage and then faded from view. There is a crash of trumpets! Another comes upon the scene! The house of cards collapses! So the audience still damns Herbert Hoover as a bungler but elevates Calvin Coolidge to a pedestal and proclaims him a miracle man.

The dark years of 1930, 1931, and 1932 went by. He saw the complete debacle of the system in which he believed. He saw the smashing victory of the forces of the opposition, a victory which even his own once potent voice was powerless to stay. And then he died, suddenly, alone, as unexpectedly as he had become President. And in his death as in his life he was silent.

The mound of earth above him has not yet become hard. Some are still fiercely questioning the merits of his policies; others are as warmly defending them. Now, before his figure is encrusted with legend, before he is either canonized as a saint or dismissed as a false prophet, we ought to analyze his story. Only by frank discussions can we eventually award him his due place in our American scene.

What was Calvin Coolidge? What made him so popular as President? His biographers would have us believe that his personality was warm, human, and lovable. H. L. Mencken calls him a "cheap and trashy fellow, deficient in sense, almost devoid of any notion of honor; in brief, a dreadful little cad." Neither of these two extreme positions is tenable. We still ask, What was Calvin Coolidge?

Let us put aside divergent opinions. Let us go to the man himself, as he is revealed in his speeches and papers of state. We open a volume of his earlier papers and we read, "Have faith in Massachusetts." A few more pages, "Have faith in America." Still a little further, "Have faith in government." In his last public address, delivered at Madison Square Garden during the recent campaign, he implored the people to have faith in the Republican Party. "Have faith." It seems to be the sum total of his political philosophy.

What were his economic policies? They were epitomized when he said, "The fostering and protection of large aggregations of wealth are the only foundation on which to build the prosperity of the whole people." Or, in a more poetical mood, "The man who builds a factory builds a temple, and the man who works there worships there." It is in these incredible words that he stated the pith of his economic belief.

Have faith in the captains of industry! Have faith in the Mitchells, the Insulls, and the Kreugers! Twelve million starving families must be content to have faith in these demigods! And to think that Calvin Coolidge, living in the industrialized twentieth century, could seriously offer these banalities to a ruined and prostrate Nation!

But, after all, this is not the philosophy of Calvin Coolidge. The ideas are as old as the laissez faire doctrine of Jeremy Bentham. Coolidge did nothing original; he said nothing original.

Perhaps our answer lies in that very fact. For in the lack of anything outstanding about the man is a suggestion that as a Northampton lawyer, as Governor, as Vice President, as President, Calvin Coolidge was never more nor less than an average man. He had no transcendent qualities of leadership. His personality was average—neither remarkably forceful nor deplorably weak, neither humorous nor humorless, neither saintly nor wicked. Then why was he so popular as President? A political opponent once said, "Profound silence was mistaken for profound wisdom", but it seems to me that there is a better answer. The very fact that he was just an average American—one of the local boys who made good—gave rise to the myth that Calvin Coolidge had the interest of every common citizen at heart. Extraordinary luck, plus his own canny shrewdness, plus the sentimentality of the electorate, made Calvin Coolidge a hero.

We may not admire his policies. We may disagree with his political and economic philosophy. Even his staunchest friends are forced to admit that his 6 years as President produced no great achievement on his part. Yet he has a secure place in history. For, though Coolidge, the public official, may have seemed cold, sour, flinty, and unattractive, our aversion is tempered with a smile when we think of Silent Cal, the man. After all, that slow, cautious, thrifty Yankee is the inevitable product of our system of government, the veritable incarnation of democracy. He is the vicarious fulfillment of a hope that we all cherish; his triumph is ours—the triumph of the average man. Calvin Coolidge, more than any other national figure, personifies the spirit of middle-class America.

I will not condemn Calvin Coolidge as a man. I condemn him rather as the personification of middle-class America, which worships superficialities and sets a price upon platitudes. I condemn him as a symbol of our tragic rejection of the prophetic dream embodied in the League of Nations and our stupid preferences for the banal "back to normalcy" slogan of a petty Ohio politician. I condemn him as a typical representative of an electorate which scorned the social philosophy of the elder La Follette and chose the psychological prosperity of Andrew Mellon. I condemn him as the emblem of mediocrity triumphant.

INVESTIGATION OF MOTION-PICTURE INDUSTRY

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on House Resolution 95.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, at a time when the whole country is suffering, our credit machinery broken down, our farmers pauperized, our industries paralyzed, and millions of our citizens terrified by the loss of their savings, their homes, and their daily bread, we are convened in Congress to adopt such measures as will most effectually operate to restore a condition which will permit security for life and property in the United States. Many of our industries have been forced to their knees; but one of our largest, the motion-picture industry, is prostrate, as a result not only of general conditions but of the extreme and destructive abuses to which it has been subjected by those that are in control of the organization. I favor this resolution as offering the best, the most practical way of correcting those abuses, reviving a great industry and placing it upon a sound basis for the benefit of a public which has invested heavily in its securities, and for the benefit of the many hundreds of thousands of persons throughout the country who are dependent on this industry for their employment and livelihood.

We do not need to authorize loans by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation nor do we need to issue bonds or go into the Treasury to start the life blood circulating in the motion-picture industry. We do need, however, to throw a strong white light into many dark corners if we would grant any measure of relief to thousands of swindled security holders and more destitute employees.

Every form of chicanery has been employed to complete the wrecking of this large industry. Nepotism, salary accounts, expense accounts, juggled accounts, illegal combinations, fraudulent financing, unnecessary receiverships, and bankruptcy, dilatory tactics, and every other abuse which could be practiced on the court, constitute only a partial list of the means used by the rapacious wreckers. While Wall Street has been loading the public with motion-picture securities which are now worth but a small fraction of the savings invested in such securities, every effort has been made, both from without and from within the industry, to render those securities valueless. In order to effect monopolies, intangible assets have been set up, illegal combinations in restraint of trade have been made, and receiverships have been jammed through the courts with the object of centralizing under the control of utility monopolies every branch of this industry. On the inside, the practice of nepotism is almost universal, huge unearned salaries are paid to inactive executives and practically all of their relatives during times while great displays of the so-called "economy" were being simulated.

Workmen, actors, office employees, and artisans of every kind have been discharged at such a rate that the studios lie idle and deserted for the most of the time. Those few employees remaining have taken a wage cut of 50 percent; but while this is going on the millionaires in their executive positions still draw their unearned and unconscionable salaries. They have appointed a czar of the industry who, with sophomoric glee, has proceeded to haze the independent producers, to haze the writers, to haze the actors, to haze the employees, to haze the wage earners, and to haze the industry and the public in general; and while all this is being done, no real steps have been taken to halt the milking of the companies by those in charge. We need go no farther than to the Wall Street Magazine for April 15, 1933, in an article written by Mr. C. F. Morgan, to find a statement of the following nature:

David Selznick had been production executive of RKO studios and under his regime—during which he is said to have drawn $2,500 weekly—the studio failed to progress suitably, so his contract was not renewed. However, nepotism is still discernible in the studios, so his father-in-law, Louis B. Mayer, vice president and director general of MGM, hired him, the reported remuneration being $4,000 per week. Whereupon the labor unions dashed back into their cyclone cellars, slamming the doors behind them, and Mr. Clarke groaned.

Mr. Clarke referred to is one Victor H. Clarke, who seems to have received much credit for his efforts to cut the union labor wage scales in the studios. If the Wall Street Magazine can be considered any authority, we can proceed on with Mr. Morgan's article, where we find the following:

It is my considered opinion that when much of the water is squeezed out of the motion-picture industry, when it comes to be administered by sane business men who have the background and knowledge of the country's amusement needs, it may return to 50 percent of its former financial position; but that will mean abandonment of superfluous studio plants, retirement from exhibition, cancellation of absurdly extravagant contracts, readjustment of compensations, and some appreciation of what makes a successful picture—which isn't filth, by the way.

What can the banks hope for in liquidation of their enormous loans? That will depend on their willingness to look their situation and the facts in the face. There will be losses inevitably. It will do the bankers no good to send out salvage corps from their own offices. That has been tried, and the result is flat failure. But there are men in Hollywood who know pictures, can bring order out of chaos, who are real business executives, and who have demonstrated their ability, but they are not affiliated with any studio today. They couldn't be.

And if the banks do not act to protect their loans—and perhaps if they do—undoubtedly stockholders themselves must guard their interests, for as conditions are now their securities are worth but a fraction of what was paid for them. The results of the congressional investigation into the motion-picture industry suggested by the Sirovich resolution and adopted by the House Rules Committee should prove of wide public interest.

Actually the movie business is a 5-and-10 enterprise, reaping its greatest profits in the years when production costs stayed below $40,000 for a feature and the top admission price to a theater was 15 cents. Since then greed and rare stupidity have all but wrecked it. However, if there is a bright spot, it will lie in the rise of the independent producer, who has been half strangled during many years.

Regarding the proposed resolution, I should like to place in the Record an article appearing in the Cinema Digest, Hollywood, published under date of April 24, 1933, which is as follows:

No one within or "without" the industry can justifiably question his—Mr. Sirovich's—allegations "that assets of corporations within the industry are being dissipated, dividends are being passed, stock values are being lowered, and nothing is being done to protect the rights of the stockholders in good faith of the corporations", which in itself is sufficient to warrant an investigation.

It is our belief that such an investigation would in comparison make the never-to-be-forgotten Teapot Dome and Elk Hills oil scandals look like back-yard chicken stealing. Of course, such an investigation will have opposition on every hand, not only from the film magnates but from certain high Washington officials and ex-officials themselves; for in all likelihood, if such an investigation probed deep enough, it might expose political intrigue on the part of these Washington higher-ups and ex-higher-ups.

Most important of all right now is not to permit filmdom's Washington lobbyists to whitewash the efforts of such men as Sirovich, who desire democratically to look after the interests of a bilked public. If alleged irregularities are nonexistent, why do these lobbyists for the film magnates, as well as certain Washington officials, fear an investigation? Why not let them conduct the investigation and let the industry emerge from this current chaos with at least a clean slate?

Two questions for an investigating committee, if and when appointed, to try to find the answers to are:

(1) How can most of the studio heads continue to be millionaires and multimillionaires, either in their own names, their wives' names, or other relatives' names, while their companies go broke (some of them into bankruptcy), theaters have to close through lack of product, and the majority of films which are made are objectionable for one reason or another?

(2) Why are various lawsuits involving the Nation's antitrust laws permitted to drag through the Federal and State courts unadjudicated for years and years, while the victims of these alleged violations, including the cinema-going public, suffer pending these adjudications?

For the sole sake of emphasis we repeat: Don't permit Washington lobbyists and certain high officials to whitewash this attempted investigation. If their consciences, individually and collectively, are clear, they have nothing to fear.

For my part, I should like to propose several more questions for such an investigating committee. One of them is, Why have obsolete films and dead stock been carried at great values on the asset side of the ledger of certain motion-picture producing companies, and why have liabilities, in the form of personal-service contracts running into millions of dollars, been listed also as assets, and what connections have such practices with the rights of stockholders and the ability of studios to produce economical and good pictures? Why are writers, directors, and players being paid hundreds of thousands of dollars for not writing a line, for not directing a scene, and for not having played even a minor role?

If the executives and production vice presidents are too busy making pencil figures with general theater managers of vast circuits to give these writers, directors, and actors anything to do to earn their salaries, what kind of "cut backs" are they drawing with their pencil figures? Is it possible that these "cut backs" have nothing to do with the coordination of screen versions but rather have to do with the percentages and bonuses?

Thus we have a situation which requires prompt treatment in order to check the race to ruin, which threatens not only to wipe out the savings of many who have invested in motion-picture securities but threatens to bring about the downfall of the very industry itself. We must uncover and place before the Congress and the public the methods of juggled accounting by which the motion-picture financial statements are made up and used as a basis for the sale of securities; the methods by which the independent producers are hazed to death; the methods by which vast producing and exhibiting organizations are thrown into bankruptcy and receivership in order to acquire monopolistic control of all branches of the industry; the methods by which their assets are dissipated through the payment of huge personal-service contracts, their employees' salaries cut, their workmen discharged, and their profits disposed of in percentages and bonuses. This investigation should be instituted and carried to its conclusion if we wish to give any protection to the holders of these securities and to preserve for the United States against foreign competition the business of making motion pictures.

HOUSE RESOLUTION 95—INVESTIGATION OF MOTION-PICTURE MONOPOLY

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on House Resolution 95 and to include therein part of the testimony in the case of Paramount-Publix against Commissioner of Markets of Wisconsin.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, how much space will this occupy in the RECORD?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I do not believe it will occupy more than half a column.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, the investigation proposed by this resolution should have the support of the Members of this House. This resolution proposes the creation of a congressional committee to investigate numerous charges, many of them contained in the resolution itself, so that Congress may recommend legislation to effectively protect the American people, the governments of the several States, and the independent producers, distributors, and exhibitors of motion pictures from the unfair and restraining influences of an established monopoly in this important American industry.

There is no other business in America that so directly affects the American public as the motion-picture business. Likewise there is no other business that has for so long brazenly disregarded fair regulation, flaunted public decency, and which has been so successfully monopolized by a small group of producers, who have thwarted every effort of State and National Legislatures to expose their insidious activities and enact legislation to control them.

For more than a decade scores of responsible people in every walk of life from the educational field to the pulpit, and from the ranks of labor, and even in the industry itself, have charged that the business of producing and exhibiting motion pictures is being carried on by various corporations in direct violation of the antitrust laws. In addition, they have charged that indecent pictures, unfit for public display, are weekly being forced upon a defenseless public, even over the protest of exhibitors themselves. The rankest kind of frauds have been perpetuated on a large section of the investing public, due to the manipulations of certain picture-producing and theater-operating companies. This well-organized monopoly of producers, through unfair devices, such as uniform-sales contracts, compulsory arbitration, blacklisting of independent theaters, block booking, unreasonable zoning regulations, secret deals with censorship boards, and even the regulation of admission prices at theaters, has promoted and established itself to a point of absolute control of the motion-picture business.

State governments have been rendered helpless in their endeavors to remedy this situation by legislation because of repeated rulings of United States courts that the States have no jurisdiction. In the case of Paramount-Publix Corporation against the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture and Markets the department of my State charged and was ready to prove the following allegations which are contained in the court records of the United States District Court, Western District of Wisconsin, filed on December 20, 1932.

These records show that the Wisconsin department alleged in its complaint by specification these particulars:

- (a) That distributors refuse to sell films to independents.
- (b) That producer-affiliated exhibitors purchase pictures or plays "in excess of their requirements", thereby preventing independent exhibitors from acquiring a "suitable or sufficient number of pictures."
- (c) That distributors "exact discriminatory prices, terms, and conditions" as against "favored exhibitors."
- (d) That distributors and producer-affiliated exhibitors "have conspired with each other in Wisconsin to exact discriminatory prices as against producer-affiliated or favored exhibitors."

Second. The respondents therein, who are designated as "the distributor and producer-affiliated exhibitors", are charged "to employ unfair practices in the exaction of protective arrangements; that is to say, the fixing of an interval after one exhibition of a copyrighted photoplay before its exhibition by a succeeding exhibitor in the same community."

(a) That distributors have exacted "discriminatory protection against exhibitors."

(b) That distributors "have administered protection and the release of films in an unfair manner."

(c) That producer-affiliated exhibitors "have induced and coerced the distributors to exact unreasonable protection against independent exhibitors."

(d) The distributors and producer-affiliated exhibitors "have conspired with each other in the State of Wisconsin to "exact discriminatory protection against independent exhibitors" and discrimination in the administration of protective arrangements and the release of films to independent exhibitors."

Third. That the "producer-affiliated exhibitors" are monopolizing the business of showing motion-picture films, i.e., exhibiting copyrighted photoplays in communities in this State.

The department has further, in support of its contentions, made the following allegations:

(a) That they have secured control of competing theaters in given communities and, in some instances, have closed one or more theaters, "thereby compelling patrons to come to the houses of producer-affiliated exhibitors."

(b) That such producer-affiliated exhibitors "have conspired in the State of Wisconsin to assign to each the exclusive control of the business of showing motion pictures in given communities in the State."

(c) That such last-noted practices "have the effect of monopolizing the business of showing motion-picture films in communities in this State."

In this particular case the department charged a violation of the statutes of Wisconsin and sought to compel the motion-picture companies, as shown in the court record on the injunction hearing—

(2) To compel the respondents (plaintiffs herein) to submit to a hearing;

(3) To determine the truth of the charges; and

(4) If such charges be found to be true, to enforce the statute and its penalties.

The net result of the case, from which I have quoted some of the record, shows that the United States court rendered a decree for an interlocutory injunction on April 14, 1933, thereby preventing the sovereign State of Wisconsin to proceed against Paramount-Publix Corporation in the injunctive proceedings to stop their violations of Wisconsin statutes, section 99.14, known as the "fair trade law" of my State. So when I say that the States are helpless to act against this monopoly to protect their citizens against unfair trade practices, I speak from the record of the inability of our established State departments to act to prevent the monopolization of the motion-picture industry in not only my own State but in every other State of the Union. The investigation proposed by the gentleman from New York is absolutely necessary in order that this Congress may proceed to recommend legislation to effectively smash this monopoly and protect the States against the actions of these certain producers.

Why, gentlemen, if this committee were to confine itself to only one phase of the motion-picture business it would more than justify creation and the small expense this House might be called upon to authorize. I refer specifically to the investigation of that phase of the motion-picture business under the domination of an organization known as "the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America", headed by that clever and elusive gentleman, Mr. Will Hays.

The organization headed by "Elder" Hays has been directly responsible for the monopoly in the motion-picture business. And this committee, if created, should be able to obtain ample evidence that the activities of Mr. Hays and his gang of motion-picture racketeers have subsidized and propagandized private and business agencies to a degree unparalleled in American history. In the 11 years during which Mr. Hays was head of this particular motion-picture organization, and his own so-called "censorship bureau", the motion-picture industry has been so manipulated that the public-utility monopoly, the oil monopoly, and similar superpublic organizations, are amateurs in the game of controlling, influencing, and frustrating an organized public opinion. Under the direction of Mr. Hays and his secret censorship bureau, many independent producers have been driven into bankruptcy. Theater owners in every State have been forced to exhibit indecent and revolting pictures through crooked deals and questionable decisions rendered by censorship boards. The little "Main Street" theater owner has been forced to pay the cost of not only Mr. Hays' own stupendous salary of $250,000 a year, but to pay a "racketeer tax" in order to support the costly organization that Will Hays and his crew have created to eliminate and destroy competition in every part of the motion-picture field.

For years pleadings have been made for an investigation of the activities of the Hays organization. For years decent American citizens in every walk of life have tried to discover why this great industry has persisted in releasing upon a defenseless public a yearly deluge of obscene, moronic, and downright filthy pictures, some of them so morally rotten that even the motion-picture theater owners rebelled against exhibiting them but had to take them or gain the enmity of the monopoly and be blacklisted. But somehow, through the activities of the censorship bureau with its whitewash brush, the connections Mr. Hays has maintained in Washington and the most powerful legislative lobby in the history of the country, this organized monopoly has succeeded time after time in openly and brazenly violating every anti-trust law ever written on the books and escaping every attempt to bring them to justice.

I charge that this censorship bureau maintained by the Hays organization, instead of being used as its proponents have claimed to clean up the motion-picture industry, has been nothing but a means to the end of perpetrating and strengthening the motion-picture monopoly. They have cared nothing about the type of picture they forced the American public to be exposed to as long as their profits are guaranteed. Col. Jason Joy, one of the chief "fixers" of the Hays crew, wrote a very interesting letter reporting his visit to censorship boards in the United States and Canada in 1932. This report of Colonel Joy's was addressed to Mr. Hays. In that report he gives some interesting information as to the true functions of this so-called "censorship bureau." In commenting on such pictures as The Strange Love of Molly Louvain, a particularly moronic descent into filth, Colonel Joy points out that this picture and others were passed by some of the boards only after "earnest consideration and discussion with us." It is entirely probable that these "discussions" were such as to convince the boards to pass the pictures regardless of their filth because profits were involved. Farther on in the colonel's illuminating report he makes the following comment:

My suggestion on this score (score of filthy pictures) is entirely constructive. The number of such pictures in any one period (I assume to be released during any year) should be determined by their acceptability upon the part of the audiences. An overdose of this theme is bad economics.

The colonel's last statement, I am sure, means to convey to the makers of pictures that it does not matter how dirty they are as long as they are diplomatically spaced so as not to excite the public to too much of a protest. Thus the so-called famous "Hays morality code", around which so much publicity and propaganda has been fed the public, and around which Mr. Hays has built up an organization to insure the maintenance in the monopoly of the motion-picture business, is only to be used to keep the public from getting an overdose of filth to the point where they would rise up in arms and insist upon an investigation such as we are asking for here today.

And now I leave the bunk connected with the Hays censorship bureau to return to the organization which supports and maintains this bureau through an enforcement of an agreement providing for payments by certain producers to maintain the expense of the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Inc. This particular body, of which Mr. Hays is also the leading light, aids and abets certain producers and associations to maintain a restraint of trade on copyrighted productions, and in secret ways is one of the organizations of the Motion Picture Trust which is active in attempting to prevent this legislative body from investigating their activities and thus protect the public against their insidious manipulations. Why, gentlemen, I feel sure that if this Congress has the courage to authorize this investigation—and I hope it will have, in spite of the threats, intimidations, and activities of the powerful lobby attempting to prevent it—that this committee, when created, will show the American public that the Motion Picture Trust and its lobby has even had the temerity to enter under the roof of this Capitol and endeavor to subsidize public officials right here in the city of Washington.

This resolution provides the only means for a thorough and impartial investigation into the machinery of the motion-picture monopoly; provides the only means for disclosing the colossal corruption and graft that has thrived in the motion-picture industry for years. And it provides the only means for disclosing to the American public how a few producers, for the sole and only purpose of dictating and controlling the actions, profits, and businesses of small producers and thousands of independent theater owners, have banded themselves together in an "unbeatable alliance" to set themselves above the law and the will of the people and complete their stranglehold on this industry in brazen disregard of public welfare. The tactics employed by the promoters and supporters of this one organization have been so infamous that I know the revelations which this committee can disclose will astound the American public, as well as the Members of this House who have been denied the opportunity time and again to have brought before them the ramifications of the motion-picture lobby and the motion-picture monopoly.

Rumblings beneath the surface of public opinion have indicated unmistakably that the public itself is aroused to the need for an investigation of the motion-picture industry with a view toward legislation for sensible, decent regulation of this industry with which the public interest is so inseparably linked. As the culmination of a number of months' work on my own initiative, it was my original intention to introduce in this House a resolution calling for an investigation of the motion-picture monopoly, its self-maintained "censorship bureau", and its subsidized legislative lobby. I believe the resolution introduced by the gentleman from New York provides enough leeway for this proposed committee to go into every phase of the business, including that of the activities of Mr. Hays and his crew of motion-picture "trust builders."

In conclusion, I want to say that when any organization, through its lobbyists, through its secret propaganda, and through its publications and press releases, boldly asserts that it can get any picture past any board of censorship it wants to; that when its representatives go so far as to tamper with and fix news reels to influence public and political opinion; that when, under cover of a copyright law enacted by this Congress, it extracts penalties and payments from defenseless small-theater owners; and when, by intimidations of employees and its influence and friendships among members of public bodies, it dares to openly boast in the press of the Nation that it can continue to bunco and hoodwink the public and the lawmakers and still successfully choke off any investigation proposed, it has made a direct challenge to the integrity and courage of every Member of this House of Representatives.

Since the favorable report of the Rules Committee on this resolution numerous telegrams and letters have been received from the all-powerful members of the monopoly to the effect that this investigation should be prevented. The public favors this proposed investigation, and so does every small, independent exhibitor and theater owner in the country who, with the public, looks forward with hope that this House will create this committee and that its subsequent revelations will result in laws that will protect the public interest. I hope that every Member here will challenge the boast and the dare of these "archracketeers" of business that they have been able to prevent every investigation of their activities ever proposed and will support this resolution. Its passage is the first step in tearing the lid off the motion-picture monopoly, and will enable this Congress in the next session to pass laws that will help the States and the governmental departments charged with the enforcement of the law to correct the abuses which have existed in this industry for more than a decade.

The motion-picture lobby and the powerful influences back of them protecting certain big companies in the violation of antitrust laws and their violation of the American public code of decency have issued a direct challenge to this House. They have attempted and are attempting to prevent and forestall this investigation; to heap ridicule upon its proponents; to inject everything but reason into their arguments; which certainly proves that if they were clean and able to face public opinion, they would not now be seeking by every means, fair and foul, to defeat this resolution. If we have the courage to justify our place in this body at all, we will answer the challenge thrown down to us that says that the "movie monopoly is bigger and more powerful than the House of Representatives" and support this resolution as our answer to the challenge.

ASSESSMENT WORK ON MINING CLAIMS

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Mines and Mining, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate bill (S. 7) providing for the suspension of annual assessment work on mining claims held by location in the United States and Alaska.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object to ask the gentleman a question. Is this bill a part of the President's economy program for the special session? This special session was called by the President to carry out this program. Committee after committee has refused to function during the special session. One of them is the Committee on Pensions—as important a committee as that—it has not functioned at all. I feel impelled to object to any measure that is not sent here by the President of the United States, because we are going to be here until the first of September if we start on these outside measures. Until you confine measures called up to the President's program, I shall object. During this special session there should be no bills passed except those desired and sent here by the President himself. This is the President's session. It is to put into effect his program and his policies. It is to give the President an opportunity to carry out his pledges made to the people.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield? This is not a part of the President's program, but it is an emergency measure.

Mr. BLANTON. If we are going to consider this bill, we then could not refuse to give time to all of the other 10,000 bills that have been introduced in this Congress, and we will be here all summer. The President wants Congress to adjourn. The people want Congress to adjourn. We all know that, and I want us to get through with emergency legislation and adjourn and go home.

Mr. GREEN. If we are going to take up these extraneous matters, I claim that we should take up the Mediterranean fruit-fly claim in my State.

Mr. BLANTON. I am going to object to everything except the President's program.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes; certainly.

Mr. COX. The Rules Committee granted a rule for the consideration of this emergency matter, and if the House grants this request of the gentleman from Utah it would save the House 2 hours' time.

Mr. BLANTON. If the Rules Committee gives a rule on this matter, it puts the responsibility on the Rules Committee. If we give unanimous consent to its consideration, it puts the responsibility on the shoulders of every man in this House.

Mr. BYRNS. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. BLANTON. I will.

Mr. BYRNS. I want to say that I felt disposed myself to object were it not for these facts. In the first place, the Committee on Mines and Mining has unanimously recommended the bill and unanimously reported it. The Committee on Rules has unanimously reported it. If unanimous consent is not given the rule is going to be presented, and this will save 1 hour's time.

Mr. BLANTON. If the majority leader wants this bill considered I withdraw my objection. I always follow my leader.

Mr. GREEN. Reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, it is common information in the House that the people of my State have been waiting for 3 years for the consideration of the fruit-fly claim. I hope the Agricultural Committee will at least give us a hearing on it. Let us present the claim and let it stand on all-fours with the legislation that has been passed for reimbursement of the damages by the foot-and-mouth disease and the pink bollworm. It is an emergency, and our people need it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. 7

An act providing for the suspension of annual assessment work on mining claims held by location in the United States and Alaska

Be it enacted, etc., That the provision of section 2324 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which requires on each mining claim located, and until a patent has been issued therefor, not less than $100 worth of labor to be performed or improvements aggregating such amount to be made each year, be, and the same is hereby, suspended as to all mining claims in the United States, including Alaska, during the year beginning at 12 o'clock m. July 1, 1932, and ending at 12 o'clock m. July 1, 1933: Provided, That the provisions of this act shall not apply in the case of any claimant not entitled to exemption from the payment of a Federal income tax for the taxable year 1932: Provided further, That every claimant of any such mining claim, in order to obtain the benefits of this act, shall file, or cause to be filed, in the office where the location notice or certificate is recorded, on or before 12 o'clock m. July 1, 1933, a notice of his desire to hold said mining claim under this act, which notice shall state that the claimant, or claimants, were entitled to exemption from the payment of a Federal income tax for the taxable year 1932.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, it is not my purpose at this time to make any prolonged speech in support of Senate bill No. 7, but merely to briefly explain the bill and point out some reasons for its immediate passage. Under the laws of the United States every person in possession of a mining claim, in order to perpetuate his right to the claim, must perform on the claim, annually, work and labor in the amount of not less than $100 in value. In order for the thousands of persons, mostly in the western part of the United States, to perpetuate their possessory rights to mining claims, they must on or before noon of July 1, 1933, commence in good faith the prosecution of their annual assessment work.

Recently Senate bill No. 7 was introduced in the United States Senate by Senator BORAH, of Idaho, and passed by the Senate on May 1 of this year. The purpose of the bill is to relieve the holders of mining claims in the United States and Alaska from the performance of annual assessment work during the year beginning at 12 m. July 1, 1932, and ending at 12 m. July 1, 1933. The bill, however, has a proviso which excludes from the benefits of the bill and makes it inapplicable to any claimant not entitled to exemption from the payment of a Federal income tax for the taxable year 1932.

When the matter first came to my attention I was in doubt as to whether I should support it, for the reason that it might tend to deprive some people of employment which they would otherwise get in the event the annual assessment work was not suspended for this year. But after mature study of the situation and quite thorough investigation I have come to the conclusion that the employment which would be available in the performance of annual assessment work were this bill not to pass would, as compared with the benefits to be derived from the passage of the bill, be negligible.

Most of the big operators and the corporations which are engaged in mining to a very large extent have their property patented, and the bill, of course, in no way affects patented claims. On the other hand, there are thousands of miners and prospectors who in thousands of cases have devoted many years to the development of their mining claims and whose entire future and hopes depend on perpetuating their possessory rights to these claims who are absolutely unable financially to do the required annual assessment work for this year due to the economic and financial depression. These are the men who would suffer, and probably lose their property were they required to conform to the annual assessment law requiring $100 in work and labor to be performed on each and every mining claim.

In every mining locality there are what are known to the mining community as "claim jumpers", who like vultures are hanging around awaiting an opportunity to "jump" some valuable mining claim in the event the man in possession is unable to do his work. These "claims jumpers" when the opportunity presents itself "jump" mining claims, not with the idea of development but simply for the purpose of securing the right to the possession of such claims, in the hope that, without doing more than relocating, they will be able to sell the property "jumped" at a very fancy price.

The thousands of prospectors in the mining States who have devoted years to the development of their claims find themselves victims at this time of the worst financial depression ever known in this country. Their financial plight is not the result of indolence on their part or the result of any other economic principle or law within their control, but they are the victims of causes over which they have no control. To compel them to do their assessment work at this time on penalty of being deprived of their property would be confiscation of the most vicious kind and without any color of justification.

By the passage of this act our Government loses nothing. No appropriation is necessary, no person is injured in the least, except the few who might get some employment if the work were required; and these few, in my opinion, are negligible. We are here in a special session to enact emergency measures for the relief of all people throughout the United States. In many instances our Government is called upon to appropriate millions, yes, billions, of dollars out of the Public Treasury for the relief of our citizens. As Members of Congress we have been called upon to do this and have generously and patriotically enacted without exception every measure requested by the President up to this date. Notwithstanding the fact that this emergency measure will not cost the Government one dime, it is just as vital to the lives of thousands of United States citizens as if it carried with it an appropriation of millions.

Some might say that it is purely sectional legislation, but it is not simply because it will benefit my section of the country or my district that I am asking its enactment. I ask your favorable consideration of this bill and its immediate passage in behalf of thousands of citizens of the United States in the West whose hopes and future existence are very much dependent on the enactment of this bill. I ask you to join me and the other sponsors of the bill and pass it at this time.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word. I am not going to oppose this bill—in fact I have constituents who will benefit by it—but I rise for another purpose. At the outset of this session the Democrats of the House met in caucus and adopted a policy, practically by unanimous vote, for the appointment of a steering committee. That committee has been organized. To the steering committee was to be referred legislation, and upon the vote of that steering committee legislation was to be presented, when approved for consideration of the House. Today a resolution reported from the Committee on Rules was considered. That resolution was not referred to the steering committee. We have now a bill that was not referred to the steering committee. I realize that it is of minor importance, speaking of the country as a whole, but it is of major importance to some of our citizens. The thought that I want to express is this. I feel in the future we should endeavor to stop the consideration of public bills which have not been referred to the steering committee when attempts are made to call them up on the floor of the House. We should either carry out the policy that was adopted by the Democrats in caucus or reconsider our policy and decide that we do not want a steering committee. Some of us have fought for years to secure a steering committee to get away from control by a few, and now that we have it through the action of the caucus, there seems to be a tendency to ignore the adopted policy. I express the hope the Speaker and leader will see to it that in the future the steering committee will function as the Democrats of the present Congress desired that it function. It is no small matter, and if carried out will make for harmony. [Applause.]

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a vote on the bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

WHITE-BORAH RESOLUTION

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, the bill under consideration, which has passed the Senate, is an emergency measure of vital need to the mining industry of this country and Alaska.

Mr. Speaker, I have been asked to state the number of people that would be benefited under the operation of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, in the great area of public lands in the West in our mining States there are thousands of mining claims staked and held under the provision of our statutes which require the expenditure of $100 assessment work annually for each claim. In many cases groups of these claims are held by companies in which there are thousands of stockholders. Many of these claimants and companies, acting in good faith, have developed their mining properties by the expenditure of labor and capital in the hopes of discovering and developing ore bodies of commercial value.

Mr. Speaker, let me point out that many of the great mines producing millions in metal wealth passed through the prospect stage and were developed to their productive stage by the plan followed by the prospectors that are holding unpatented claims in thousands of districts in the mining States of the West. In many cases after discovering veins that give promise of developing into paying mines in the mountain fastness, they have complied with the law in making their location and have constructed roads, erected buildings, brought in machinery, and opened the ground by driving tunnels or sinking shafts. Many of these mining properties represent the work of a lifetime of the locators and company organizations that develop them. Many such companies deem it more advisable to expend their money in opening and proving the value of the deposits rather than making a large outlay necessary to acquire the land by patent before its value as a mine is proven. Now, when thousands of these owners, through financial inability, are unable to meet the requirements of the law and must, if the provision is not suspended, lose the labor of a lifetime. It is sought here by the passage of this bill to protect these helpless mine owners and preserve to them the title of the claim that they are holding under the Federal mining law.

Mr. Speaker, I should like to read to you the account of the life work of one of these sturdy prospectors, as outlined in an article printed in the Spokesman Review, of Spokane, Wash., under date of January 21, 1931:

By death of T. B. McWilliams, 65-year-old, 1-armed miner, at the Parnell Hospital at Sandpoint yesterday, Idaho has lost as resolute a prospector as ever took up a pick and shovel to wrest a fortune from its rugged hills.

Undeterred by the loss of his right hand in a premature blast while driving a prospect tunnel on Scotchman Peak 16 years ago, he continued working his claims, lengthening his tunnels day by day. In his work he used an ingenious device, fitted to the stub of his arm by the blacksmith here. It permitted his holding and turning drill steel or hooking onto the handle of a wheelbarrow to take out the broken rock.

Known to the scourdoughs and the youths of the region as "Uncle Tommy", he carried on. Summer suns passing, and winter snows, piling high on his lonely cabin roof, found "Uncle Tommy" hammering away at the hard, steel-defying quartzite, boring his way to nature's mineral wealth, which has baffled and discouraged many more able-bodied and better-equipped men. Not one tunnel, but four, yawn at the foot of Goat Mountain as monuments to his undaunted courage and tireless labor.

"Uncle Tommy lived to see his dream of a mining camp in this district realized. His 40 years of faith and work have been an inspiration to those who in recent years have caused the surrounding hills to yield up silver and lead in paying quantities", was the tribute paid him here today.

Mr. Speaker, "Hope springs eternal in the human breast", and in no breast does it reside with more permanency than in the breast of our grizzled prospectors. Fortune awaits just 10 feet ahead in the solid rock in the minds of the old prospectors. Never daunted, always buoyant, and sure that fortune will some day smile upon his efforts, the prospector pounds away at the clinking drills slowly opening the way to the bonanza that lies a few feet ahead in the vein that he is following.

Mr. Speaker, let me recount to you an event in the history of mining in Montana, an episode told in mining camps wherever beans are boiled and bacon is fried over a prospector's camp fire. Years ago a stout-hearted little Irishman by the name of Tommy Cruse formed an idea that, in the hills surrounding the great placer diggings in the Helena district, somewhere there must be deep-bedded veins of gold. He staked his claim high on the mountainside in the Marysville district and resolutely drilled and blasted his way into the solid rock. Months and years rolled around as Tommy pounded away in driving his tunnel, leaving anon to go forth and earn a grubstake that he might continue his work. Some miner once wrote on his mine door, "Cruse's folly", but Tommy persevered single-handed and alone and drove 1,300 feet through the rock to open the great gold ore body known as the Drom Lummond Mine. Tom Carter, of Helena, was his lawyer.

Tommy's ambition had always been to own a million dollars. So when the sale was made and Tommy was secure in his million, lawyer Carter saw to it that he retained one sixteenth interest in the mine. This produced many times Cruse's original million and may have been one of the major reasons for giving us the Honorable Senator Tom Carter, of Montana. Tommy opened a bank in Helena for carrying out one of his cherished ambitions. When the great depression of 1893 closed in on Helena and bank after bank closed and eager depositors made a run on Tommy's bank, he simply opened his vaults and piled high in the teller's cages his golden store within sight of everyone, where eager depositors could be paid as fast as they came. This ended the run on Tommy Cruse's bank and made financial history in the State of Montana. My friends, the romance of mining is not dead in the West; many opportunities await stout-hearted prospectors that roam the western hills seeking for another Drom Lummond.

Mr. Speaker, in passing this bill let us give the sturdy prospector of the West a year's respite in this gruelling hour of depression. Preserve to him the future of his years of labor so that when prosperity again smiles upon the mining industry he may have an opportunity to continue his efforts in opening and bringing forth new mineral wealth for the use of this great Nation.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. BEEDY] would like to have 15 minutes, following the gentleman from Texas.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is any other legislation coming before the House today?

Mr. BYRNS. No; but many gentlemen here are very anxious to get away this afternoon. They do not like to leave while the House is in session. We will have plenty of time for discussion next week, because there will be little before us the first part of the week. I am not going to object to any of these requests for unanimous consent to address the House, but I do hope we will be able to adjourn soon and permit some of these gentlemen to leave.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Can the gentleman tell us the order of business on Monday?

Mr. BYRNS. At the present time I know of nothing that will come up on Monday except possibly the President will have a message to deliver on Monday. There are no conference reports, and I know of no legislation that will come up. Of course that is suspension day, and I do not know what the Speaker has in mind.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday, after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BEEDY] may address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. That is contrary to the rule that we have been following. Under the practice, we have not granted permission to address the House at some future date.

Mr. BYRNS. I should not want to give unanimous consent to that, not knowing what will be before the House on Monday.

Mr. BRITTEN. Is it not possible to agree now that there will be no attempt made to pass any particular legislation this afternoon, so that Members who desire to speak under the unanimous consent may do so?

Mr. BYRNS. Will the gentleman from Illinois remain here until we adjourn, if that is done?

Mr. BRITTEN. Yes, if the distinguished leader remains with me.

Mr. BYRNS. I certainly will remain, but I wonder whether my friend will.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, if there is no emergency business on Monday, I take it the gentleman would not object to Mr. BEEDY's having 20 minutes at that time.

Mr. BYRNS. No; but I would rather not have the order made now.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. With that understanding, I shall not object to the gentleman from Texas' proceeding for 2 minutes.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Tennessee yield?

Mr. BYRNS. Yes.

Mr. BLACK. I notice that the Senate yesterday passed a bill concerning Federal secrets. Is there any possibility of that bill's coming up on Monday? That is the bill that passed the House under a misapprehension, which contained a press-censorship provision.

Mr. BYRNS. It would first have to go to conference.

Mr. BLACK. I ask the question because I want to have something to say about my own relations with the Attorney General's office and the Department of State in respect to that bill.

Mr. PARKER of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

Mr. BYRNS. The bill has come over from the Senate. It is a bill that came originally from the Committee on the Judiciary and I think that that committee should have opportunity to look it over before it is brought up.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Can the gentleman tell us whether the Celler resolution is coming up this afternoon?

Mr. BYRNS. It is not.

Mr. BUSBY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS. Yes.

Mr. BUSBY. Some days ago I made points of no quorum for a purpose, which I did not explain at that time.

The thing that is now before the House relates to that situation. There is one committee of this House that is given the exclusive prerogative of doling out the time of the House, not to attend to its business but to let Members make speeches.

Mr. PARKER of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, the regular order. The SPEAKER. Regular order is demanded.

Mr. BUSBY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

Mr. BYRNS. Will the gentleman withhold that for just a moment?

Mr. BUSBY. No. I insist on the point of no quorum, if the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. PARKER], is going to be so inconsiderate of what I am saying.

Mr. PARKER of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I made the point before the gentleman from Mississippi was recognized.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will permit, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourn today it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

Mr. BUSBY. Mr. Speaker, I insist on the point of order of no quorum. I am not satisfied with the attitude of the gentleman from Georgia. I arose courteously and for a particular purpose.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BUSBY. I do not have any time. The regular order has been demanded.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. PARKER of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I have already made the statement that I demanded the regular order before the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. BUSBY] was recognized, and the RECORD should show this to be a fact. I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. BUSBY. Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw the point of order of no quorum, temporarily. [Applause.]

ADJOURNMENT OVER

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourn today it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS]?

There was no objection.

Mr. BUSBY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS. I yield.

Mr. BUSBY. I started to make this explanation, because some of the Members did not understand the other day why I made the point of no quorum. I consider the time of this House does not belong to the Committee on Appropriations, to be doled out to Members who manage to get some favorable ear from the subcommittee chairmen who happen to be handling the time. I think those requests of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] for time to address the House are entirely in order, and that the time of the House for debate ought to be controlled by the House and by the Speaker, instead of by the Committee on Appropriations. The fact is, I do not think the subcommittee chairmen of the Appropriations Committee want to be bothered with it. I think I shall continue, when the Committee on Appropriations performs, to make points of no quorum if it is so important that it can control the time of the House, to see that there is a quorum present to accord them that importance to which they are entitled. [Applause.]

Mr. BYRNS. Permit me to say to the gentleman that I have been a Member of this House for some time, and it has always been the custom when a bill is pending before the House to give the chairman and the ranking minority member the privilege of controlling the time. That has not only been done with reference to appropriation bills but it is done with reference to every bill that comes before the House.

Mr. BLANTON. To the District bills especially.

Mr. BYRNS. To the District bills and all bills. I know of no other way that we can have any regular procedure in the way of debate except by that particular plan which has been followed.

Mr. BUSBY. If the gentleman will yield, I will tell him how. You do not discuss your business as other committees are required to do. The District Committee does, most of the time.

Mr. BLANTON. It does not have to confine debate to its bills, for in Committee of the Whole general debate is always in order. I myself have yielded the gentleman from Mississippi a whole hour. I distinctly remember yielding a whole hour to the gentleman myself.

Mr. BUSBY. And I thanked the gentleman for his courtesy when he was in the chair, and that disposes of that matter.

What I started to say was that formerly we had an opportunity of asking the Chair for special orders when men really had something to talk about, but we have to forego that under the recent arrangement and policy. That is how we got time, not from the Appropriations Committee, which time belongs to the Members of the House, but from the House itself, and from the Speaker, by unanimous consent.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS. I yield.

Mr. DOWELL. May I make this suggestion: That when the Budget law was passed it was the understanding of the Members of the House and that was the rule that the Committee on Appropriations was not to consider or bring in any legislation. The rule just recently, however, has been that the Committee on Appropriations has had entire charge, not only of appropriations but of legislation, and if any objection is made to the legislation the Rules Committee brings in a rule making the legislation in order on an appropriation bill. That is the reason the Committee on Appropriations has the assignment of all this time, because they are doing all the legislating as well as appropriating.

Mr. BYRNS. May I say this: That I have been a member of the Committee on Appropriations of this Congress ever since the Budget law was framed and passed. I do want to say in justice to that committee, both under Republican Congresses and under the last Democratic Congress, that it recommended very little legislation on appropriation bills, and only in cases of what might be considered an emergency, and before those matters were brought in the committee consulted with the chairman of the legislative committee which would have jurisdiction of the matter as to whether his committee would object.

In the recent bill, to which the gentleman refers, there is a great deal of important legislation, and the gentleman realizes that if all that legislation had gone to legislative committees we might have been detained here 2 or 3 weeks considering it. Therefore a rule was brought in and the House was given an opportunity to vote its sentiments as to whether or not it should be retained.

Mr. DOWELL. If the gentleman will yield a moment, my criticism just now was not especially directed to the last bill. Before the Budget law was passed all of the legislative committees made their recommendations for appropriations, and when the Appropriations Committee was given the task of recommending appropriations for all activities of the Government, it was the definite understanding of the House that it would bring in no legislation.

Mr. BYRNS. The gentleman understands, and the country understands, that we are legislating now under emergency conditions, trying to meet a situation which the gentleman and every Member of the House is very anxious to clear up.

Mr. DOWELL. Yes.

Mr. BYRNS. This has required a rather unusual number of rules during this session; but I hope after we have disposed of this legislation, which is considered of an emergency nature, we can get back to normal conditions, insofar as procedure is concerned. As the gentleman from Oklahoma said, the amendments put upon this appropriation bill were solely in the interest of economy and nothing else.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to proceed for 3 minutes. Is there objection? There was no objection.

INVESTIGATION OF MOTION-PICTURE INDUSTRY

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I voted against the Sirovich resolution because I felt the delay that would be caused by an investigation by a congressional committee would be in the interest of the law violators rather than against their interests. I felt that it would cause considerable and unnecessary delay.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE SHOULD ACT

I am preparing now and expect to introduce Monday, a resolution requesting the Attorney General of the United States to immediately and speedily investigate all the charges made by Mr. SIROVICH in his resolution and all the charges made against the motion-picture industry, in the hope that if violations of the law are discovered that criminal and civil actions will be commenced immediately, and that there will be no delay. I hope if they are discovered that those who should be prosecuted will be tried before the bar of justice rather than before the bar of public opinion.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ORGANIZED TRUST

I do not want this investigation to be made by the Federal Trade Commission. The Federal Trade Commission made a substantial contribution toward the organization of this trust. If I had the time I could convince you that the Federal Trade Commission has organized many trusts; that it has assisted monopoly and not the people. Certainly it is not going to do anything against trusts when it is in the trust-organizing business. Therefore, I want a fair, impartial, and speedy investigation made by the Department of Justice in the hope that all violators of the law will have to pay a fine, go to the penitentiary, or go to jail. I am tired of this "throwing the rabbit in a briar patch" or "slap on the wrist" punishment that the Government has been a party to in recent years.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Does the gentleman think his resolution necessary? Can he not bring the facts to the attention of the Attorney General, and would not the Attorney General proceed?

Mr. PATMAN. Since the House refused to adopt the Sirovich resolution and since some of the Members were misunderstood in voting against the resolution, I felt that it would be in order for the House to express itself as favoring an investigation of the matter and I am introducing this resolution for the purpose of allowing the Members to record their expressions on this subject. The Attorney General will probably appreciate an expression from the House on this important matter. Certainly he would not object to it.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The gentleman is not attacking the integrity of Mr. Cummings?

Mr. PATMAN. Not in the least.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Then I do not see why the gentleman's resolution is necessary.

Mr. PATMAN. I do not doubt his integrity in the least. I have the utmost faith and confidence in Mr. Cummings. I believe he will carry out and perform the duties of his office, which is more, I will say to the gentleman, than was done by his predecessor. This resolution merely requests him to make this investigation.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Then why does not the gentleman from Texas take it down to the Department of Justice and give it to him?

Mr. PATMAN. Passage of this resolution will be an expression from this House that we are in favor of it and that we want him to know how we feel about it.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Where does the gentleman get the information that Members were misinformed who voted in the negative on the rule?

Mr. PATMAN. I did not get that information. I said some of them were probably misunderstood.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I think if the gentleman would take a taxi and ride down to the Department of Justice he would get there quicker than to wait for the resolution to be acted upon.

Mr. PATMAN. My resolution will be prepared and presented Monday.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. The gentleman from Missouri said he is going to dispose of this matter. This matter is just started, and anyone who opposes it will never hear the end of it.

FUTILITY OF ORDINARY INVESTIGATION

Mr. PATMAN. I see no reason why we should investigate known violations of the law, except for the purpose of punishing someone; if that is the purpose, the investigation should be conducted by those who have the power to institute criminal and civil proceedings. A congressional committee would have no such power. We know the main facts presented in the Sirovich resolution, so why delay action against the wrongdoers until a congressional committee can spend a few months and a few thousand dollars? Such a committee would then have to turn the facts over to the Department of Justice, so why not let the Department of Justice check the facts that are now known and commence proceedings without delay? Delay is a wrongdoer's best witness. If the facts were not already known, I would be in favor of the Sirovich resolution. This proposal is unlike the Teapot Dome investigation in this: In the Teapot Dome case the facts were suspected but not known. In this case the facts are known. Do we need an investigation to determine the large salaries paid? No; Mr. SIROVICH has all that information now, and it is also known by other Government officials. It is also known how the giant monopoly is crushing independents and otherwise violating the laws. We do not need an investigation by a congressional committee; we need the facts compiled for effective criminal and civil action. A few criminal cases will do more toward effectively enforcing the antitrust and antimonopoly laws than all the investigations that can be conducted. Wrongdoers are not afraid of investigations by committees powerless to cause punishment to be administered. They want us to investigate until the statute of limitations has run against the enforcement of criminal penalties. That is what usually happens—a long investigation; volumes of testimony printed, never to be read by anyone; hundreds of thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money spent, report made years later, and nothing done because of the long delay and the statute of limitations.

INVESTIGATION OTHER FEATURES DESIRABLE

The Sirovich resolution did not propose an investigation of the charge that no bona fide effort is being made to censor screen material and that pictures are exhibited that are indecent and otherwise unfit for public display; nor the charge that the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Mr. Will H. Hays is president, is primarily a political organization and, although a public-service industry, is attempting to unduly influence public opinion by misleading propaganda. The first charge in regard to indecent pictures I would especially like to see investigated. These three subjects should properly be investigated by a congressional committee in order that the facts may be disclosed in aid of future legislation.

I insist, however, that all investigations that have for their purpose the punishment of violators of the criminal laws or the antitrust laws where the facts are known should be conducted by a body that is in a position to prosecute such charges. An investigation to determine facts that are not known as a basis for wholesome legislation should properly be made by a congressional committee.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, there has been a great deal of discussion here relative to legislation being brought in on appropriation bills. I want to state to the Members of the House the policy that is going to guide my action as chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and that is this: When the special session is over and when the emergency legislation requested by the President has been enacted or disposed of and when normal times come, there will be no legislation on the appropriation bills. [Applause.]

I just want to let you know that this is my policy and under no condition will any legislation be on an appropriation bill, even during this emergency, unless the President requests such legislation.

Mr. HOEPEL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I yield.

Mr. HOEPEL. Is the gentleman so hopeful as to believe that the emergency is going to be over in this session?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I am hopeful the legislation which we shall enact will cause prosperity to return to this country in a reasonable time.

Mr. HOEPEL. I hope the gentleman is correct, but I believe he is wrong. [Laughter.]

Mr. BUCHANAN. I am sorry the gentleman is such a pessimist.

Mr. BLANTON. May I remark that the gentleman, instead of looking at the doughnut is looking at the hole. [Laughter.]

Mr. BUCHANAN. Now, one other suggestion. We have had a special session and there has been emergency legislation on appropriation bills and there have been appropriations on legislative bills. Did you hear one complaint from any member of the Appropriations Committee against $100,000,000 of actual appropriations carried in the farm relief bill? No. Why? Because we want results to bring this depression to an end, and we do not want any technicality to stand in the way of getting results. [Applause.] What do the people of this country care about the rules of the House when they are suffering and want results? Therefore, whatever will give the quickest results to end this depression I am for, and I do not justify my action in bringing in legislation on appropriation bills by Republican precedents, but on the necessities of the case, and I have no apology to make to any man. [Applause.]

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, yesterday I introduced a resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, to the effect that our delegates to the World Economic Conference be directed not to enter into any arrangements or accords or understandings with the delegates from the Governments of Germany, Spain, and Mexico.

I did this on the theory that this country, which has before all men stood for the thesis that there should be religious freedom, should not in any way use our economic resources to continue in power the present Governments of Germany, Spain, and Mexico, and thus enable these Governments to continue their persecutions—in Germany of the Jews and in Spain and Mexico of the Catholics.

I think it is highly unfair for this Government in any way to call upon the coreligionists in this country of the Jews in Germany and the Catholics in Spain and Mexico to help by their personal economic resources, through the taxing power of this country, governments abroad which are persecuting their own people.

If this country has builded well, because it offered opportunity to all men, regardless of their creed or religious belief, this is a good idea for the world to carry out; and inasmuch as we have taken a leading part before the world in the efficacy of religious freedom, and because we are taking a leading part in this conference, I believe we should insist that these persecuting governments should not be helped in any measure at all by the Government of the United States which, after all, is only the people of the United States.

We are going to call upon our people, no matter what they are, in the event of agreements with these countries, to do something in an economic way to help, and anything we do that will help the present Government of Germany and the present Governments of Spain and Mexico will only be calling upon our people to help to carry on persecutions of an economic nature abroad.

There is nothing religious about these persecutions. There is nothing spiritual about these persecutions. They are entirely economic persecutions. These governments do not care anything about the hereafter of any of their people. Those in the countries who insist on the government persecuting do not care anything about the spiritual welfare of those persecuted. All they care about is the watch in the Jew's pocket or the watch in the Catholic's pocket that they want.

Religious persecution is entirely a crass, material proposition, and I say this Government should not enter into any arrangements at all calling upon Catholics and Jews in this country to help continue in power these persecuting governments abroad. [Applause.]

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, the following leave of absence was granted:

To Mr. WILLIAMS, indefinitely, on account of illness.

To Mr. DRIVER, for 1 week, on account of important business.

To Mr. CLARK of North Carolina, for several days, on account of important business.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H.R. 3835. An act to relieve the existing national economic emergency by increasing agricultural purchasing power, to raise revenue for extraordinary expenses incurred by reason of such emergency, to provide emergency relief with respect to agricultural indebtedness, to provide for the orderly liquidation of joint-stock land banks, and for other purposes; and

H.R. 4606. An act to provide for cooperation by the Federal Government with the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia in relieving the hardship and suffering caused by unemployment, and for other purposes.

BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

SENATE

MONDAY, MAY 15, 1933

The Chaplain, Rev. Z. Barney T. Phillips, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God our Heavenly Father, with whom is the well of life and light; impart to our thirsting souls the draught of living water from Thy plenteous fountain, and increase in us the brightness of divine knowledge, that our darkened minds may be illumined by the effulgence of Thy love.

Calm Thou our spirits by that subduing power which alone can bring all scattered thoughts into captivity to Thee, that we may find that inward peace in which Thy Spirit's voice is heard, calling us to sacrificial service for the welfare of our Nation. Deal tenderly with all mankind, granting hope to the discouraged, forgiveness to the sinful, friendship to the lonely, comfort to the sorrowing, and, to us all, light at eventide. We ask it in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5081) to provide for the common defense; to aid interstate commerce by navigation; to provide flood control; to promote the general welfare by creating the Tennessee Valley Authority; to operate the Muscle Shoals properties; and to encourage agricultural, industrial, and economic development, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by the Senate insert the following:

"That for the purpose of maintaining and operating the properties now owned by the United States in the vicinity of Muscle Shoals, Ala., in the interest of the national defense and for agricultural and industrial development, and to improve navigation in the Tennessee River and to control the destructive flood waters in the Tennessee River and Mississippi River Basins, there is hereby created a body corporate by the name of the 'Tennessee Valley Authority' (hereinafter referred to as the 'Corporation'). The board of directors first appointed shall be deemed the incorporators, and the incorporation shall be held to have been effected from the date of the first meeting of the board. This act may be cited as the 'Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933.'

"SEC. 2. (a) The board of directors of the Corporation (hereinafter referred to as the 'board') shall be composed of three members, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. In appointing the members of the board, the President shall designate the chairman. All other officials, agents, and employees shall be designated and selected by the board.

"(b) The terms of office of the members first taking office after the approval of this act shall expire as designated by the President at the time of nomination, 1 at the end of the third year, 1 at the end of the sixth year, and 1 at the end of the ninth year, after the date of approval of this act. A successor to a member of the board shall be appointed in the same manner as the original members and shall have a term of office expiring 9 years from the date of the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed.

"(c) Any member appointed to fill a vacancy in the board occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed shall be appointed for the remainder of such term.

"(d) Vacancies in the board so long as there shall be 2 members in office shall not impair the powers of the board to execute the functions of the Corporation, and 2 of the members in office shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of the business of the board.

"(e) Each of the members of the board shall be a citizen of the United States, and shall receive a salary at the rate of $10,000 a year, to be paid by the Corporation as current expenses. Each member of the board, in addition to his salary, shall be permitted to occupy as his residence one of the dwelling houses owned by the Government in the vicinity of Muscle Shoals, Ala., the same to be designated by the President of the United States. Members of the board shall be reimbursed by the Corporation for actual expenses (including traveling and subsistence expenses) incurred by them in the performance of the duties vested in the board by this act. No member of said board shall, during his continuance in office, be engaged in any other business, but each member shall devote himself to the work of the Corporation.

"(f) No director shall have financial interest in any public-utility corporation engaged in the business of distributing and selling power to the public nor in any corporation engaged in the manufacture, selling, or distribution of fixed nitrogen or fertilizer, or any ingredients thereof, nor shall any member have any interest in any business that may be adversely affected by the success of the Corporation as a producer of concentrated fertilizers or as a producer of electric power.

"(g) The board shall direct the exercise of all the powers of the Corporation.

"(h) All members of the board shall be persons who profess a belief in the feasibility and wisdom of this act.

Any appointee of the board may be removed in the discretion of the board. No regular officer or employee of the Corporation shall receive a salary in excess of that received by the members of the board.

"All contracts to which the Corporation is a party and which require the employment of laborers and mechanics in the construction, alteration, maintenance, or repair of buildings, dams, locks, or other projects shall contain a provision that not less than the prevailing rate of wages for work of a similar nature prevailing in the vicinity shall be paid to such laborers or mechanics.

"In the event any dispute arises as to what are the prevailing rates of wages, the question shall be referred to the Secretary of Labor for determination, and his decision shall be final. In the determination of such prevailing rate or rates, due regard shall be given to those rates which have been secured through collective agreement by representatives of employers and employees.

"Where such work as is described in the two preceding paragraphs is done directly by the Corporation the prevailing rate of wages shall be paid in the same manner as though such work had been let by contract.

"Insofar as applicable the benefits of the act entitled 'An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes', approved September 7, 1916, as amended, shall extend to persons given employment under the provisions of this act.

"(d) May make contracts, as herein authorized.

"(e) May adopt, amend, and repeal bylaws.

"(f) May purchase or lease and hold such real and personal property as it deems necessary or convenient in the transaction of its business, and may dispose of any such personal property held by it.

"The board shall select a treasurer and as many assistant treasurers as it deems proper, which treasurer and assistant treasurers shall give such bonds for the safe-keeping of the securities and moneys of the said Corporation as the board may require: Provided, That any member of said board may be removed from office at any time by a concurrent resolution of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

"(g) Shall have such powers as may be necessary or appropriate for the exercise of the powers herein specifically conferred upon the Corporation.

"(h) Shall have power in the name of the United States of America to exercise the right of eminent domain, and in the purchase of any real estate or the acquisition of real estate by condemnation proceedings, the title to such real estate shall be taken in the name of the United States of America, and thereupon all such real estate shall be entrusted to the Corporation as the agent of the United States to accomplish the purposes of this act.

"(i) Shall have power to acquire real estate for the construction of dams, reservoirs, transmission lines, power houses, and other structures, and navigation projects at any point along the Tennessee River, or any of its tributaries, and in the event that the owner or owners of such property shall fail or refuse to sell to the Corporation at a price deemed fair and reasonable by the board, then the Corporation may proceed to exercise the right of eminent domain, and to condemn all property that it deems necessary for carrying out the purposes of this act, and all such condemnation proceedings shall be had pursuant to the provisions and requirements hereinafter specified, with reference to any and all condemnation proceedings.

"(b) To arrange with farmers and farm organizations for large-scale practical use of the new forms of fertilizers under conditions permitting an accurate measure of the economic return they produce.

"(c) To cooperate with National, State, district, or county experimental stations or demonstration farms, for the use of new forms of fertilizer or fertilizer practices during the initial or experimental period of their introduction.

"(d) The board in order to improve and cheapen the production of fertilizer is authorized to manufacture and sell fixed nitrogen, fertilizer, and fertilizer ingredients at Muscle Shoals by the employment of existing facilities, by modernizing existing plants, or by any other process or processes that in its judgment shall appear wise and profitable for the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen or the cheapening of the production of fertilizer.

"(e) Under the authority of this act the board may make donations or sales of the product of the plant or plants operated by it to be fairly and equitably distributed through the agency of county demonstration agents, agricultural colleges, or otherwise as the board may direct, for experimentation, education, and introduction of the use of such products in cooperation with practical farmers so as to obtain information as to the value, effect, and best methods of their use.

"(f) The board is authorized to make alterations, modifications, or improvements in existing plants and facilities, and to construct new plants.

"(g) In the event it is not used for the fixation of nitrogen for agricultural purposes, or leased, then the board shall maintain a stand-by condition nitrate plant no. 2, or its equivalent, for the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen, for the production of explosives in the event of war or a national emergency, until the Congress shall by joint resolution release the board from this obligation, and if any part thereof be used by the board for the manufacture of phosphoric acid or potash, the balance of nitrate plant no. 2 shall be kept in stand-by condition.

"(h) To establish, maintain, and operate laboratories and experimental plants, and to undertake experiments for the purpose of enabling the Corporation to furnish nitrogen products for military purposes, and nitrogen and other fertilizer products for agricultural purposes in the most economical manner and at the highest standard of efficiency.

"(i) To request the assistance and advice of any officer, agent, or employee of any executive department or of any independent office of the United States, to enable the Corporation the better to carry out its powers successfully, and as far as practicable shall utilize the services of such officers, agents, and employees, and the President shall, if in his opinion, the public interest, service, or economy so require, direct that such assistance, advice, and service be rendered to the Corporation, and any individual that may be by the President directed to render such assistance, advice, and service shall be thereafter subject to the orders, rules, and regulations of the board: Provided, That any invention or discovery made by virtue of and incidental to such service by an employee of the Government of the United States serving under this section, or by any employee of the Corporation, together with any patents which may be granted thereon, shall be the sole and exclusive property of the Corporation, which is hereby authorized to grant such licenses thereunder as shall be authorized by the board: Provided further, That the board may pay to such inventor such sum from the income from sale of licenses as it may deem proper.

"(j) Upon the requisition of the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy to manufacture for and sell at cost to the United States explosives or their nitrogenous content.

"(k) Upon the requisition of the Secretary of War the Corporation shall allot and deliver without charge to the War Department so much power as shall be necessary in the judgment of said Department for use in operation of all locks, lifts, or other facilities in aid of navigation.

"(l) To produce, distribute, and sell electric power, as herein particularly specified.

"(m) No products of the Corporation shall be sold for use outside of the United States, its Territories and possessions, except to the United States Government for the use of its Army and Navy, or to its allies in case of war.

"(n) The President is authorized, within 12 months after the passage of this act, to lease to any responsible farm organization or to any corporation organized by it nitrate plant no. 2 and Waco Quarry, together with the railroad connecting said quarry with nitrate plant no. 2, for a term not exceeding 50 years at a rental of not less than $1 per year, but such authority shall be subject to the express condition that the lessee shall use said property during the term of said lease exclusively for the manufacture of fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients to be used only in the manufacture of fertilizer by said lessee and sold for use as fertilizer. The said lessee shall covenant to keep said property in first-class condition, but the lessee shall be authorized to modernize said plant no. 2 by the installation of such machinery as may be necessary, and is authorized to amortize the cost of said machinery and improvements over the term of said lease or any part thereof. Said lease shall also provide that the board shall sell to the lessee power for the operation of said plant at the same schedule of prices that it charges all other customers for power of the same class and quantity. Said lease shall also provide that, if the said lessee does not desire to buy power of the publicly owned plant, it shall have the right to purchase its power for the operation of said plant of the Alabama Power Co. or any other publicly or privately owned corporation engaged in the generation and sale of electric power, and in such case the lease shall provide further that the said lessee shall have a free right of way to build a transmission line over Government property to said plant paying the actual expenses and damages, if any, incurred by the Corporation on account of such line. Said lease shall also provide that the said lessee shall covenant that during the term of said lease the said lessee shall not enter into any illegal monopoly, combination, or trust with any privately owned corporation engaged in the manufacture, production, and sale of fertilizer with the object or effect of increasing the price of fertilizer to the farmer.

"Sec. 6. In the appointment of officials and the selection of employees for said Corporation, and in the promotion of any such employees or officials, no political test or qualification shall be permitted or given consideration, but all such appointments and promotions shall be given and made on the basis of merit and efficiency. Any member of said board who is found by the President of the United States to be guilty of a violation of this section shall be removed from office by the President of the United States, and any appointee of said board who is found by the board to be guilty of a violation of this section shall be removed from office by said board.

"Sec. 7. In order to enable the Corporation to exercise the powers and duties vested in it by this act—

"(a) The exclusive use, possession, and control of the United States nitrate plants nos. 1 and 2, including steam plants, located, respectively, at Sheffield, Ala., and Muscle Shoals, Ala., together with all real estate and buildings connected therewith, all tools and machinery, equipment, accessories, and materials belonging thereto, and all laboratories and plants used as auxiliaries thereto; the fixed-nitrogen research laboratory, the Waco limestone quarry, in Alabama, and Dam No. 2, located at Muscle Shoals, its power house, and all hydroelectric and operating appurtenances (except the locks), and all machinery, lands, and buildings in connection therewith, and all appurtenances thereof, and all other property to be acquired by the Corporation in its own name or in the name of the United States of America, are hereby entrusted to the Corporation for the purposes of this act.

"(b) The President of the United States is authorized to provide for the transfer to the Corporation of the use, possession, and control of such other real or personal property of the United States as he may from time to time deem necessary and proper for the purposes of the Corporation as herein stated.

"SEC. 8. (a) The Corporation shall maintain its principal office in the immediate vicinity of Muscle Shoals, Ala. The Corporation shall be held to be an inhabitant and resident of the northern judicial district of Alabama within the meaning of the laws of the United States relating to the venue of civil suits.

"(b) The Corporation shall at all times maintain complete and accurate books of accounts.

"(c) Each member of the board, before entering upon the duties of his office, shall subscribe to an oath (or affirmation) to support the Constitution of the United States and to faithfully and impartially perform the duties imposed upon him by this act.

"SEC. 9. (a) The board shall file with the President and with the Congress, in December of each year, a financial statement and a complete report as to the business of the Corporation covering the preceding governmental fiscal year. This report shall include an itemized statement of the cost of power at each power station, the total number of employees and the names, salaries, and duties of those receiving compensation at the rate of more than $1,500 a year.

"(b) The Comptroller General of the United States shall audit the transactions of the Corporation at such times as he shall determine, but not less frequently than once each governmental fiscal year, with personnel of his selection. In such connection he and his representatives shall have free and open access to all papers, books, records, files, accounts, plants, warehouses, offices, and all other things, property and places belonging to or under the control of or used or employed by the Corporation, and shall be afforded full facilities for counting all cash and verifying transactions with and balances in depositaries. He shall make report of each such audit in quadruplicate, one copy for the President of the United States, one for the chairman of the board, one for public inspection at the principal office of the Corporation, and the other to be retained by him for the uses of the Congress. The expenses of each such audit may be paid from moneys advanced therefor by the Corporation, or from any appropriation or appropriations for the General Accounting Office, and appropriations so used shall be reimbursed promptly by the Corporation as billed by the Comptroller General. All such audit expenses shall be charged to operating expenses of the Corporation. The Comptroller General shall make special report to the President of the United States and to the Congress of any transaction or condition found by him to be in conflict with the powers or duties intrusted to the Corporation by law.

"SEC. 10. The board is hereby empowered and authorized to sell the surplus power not used in its operations, and for operation of locks and other works generated by it, to States, counties, municipalities, corporations, partnerships, or individuals, according to the policies hereinafter set forth; and to carry out said authority, the board is authorized to enter into contracts for such sale for a term not exceeding 20 years, and in the sale of such current by the board it shall give preference to States, counties, municipalities, and cooperative organizations of citizens or farmers, not organized or doing business for profit, but primarily for the purpose of supplying electricity to its own citizens or members: Provided, That all contracts made with private companies or individuals for the sale of power, which power is to be resold for a profit, shall contain a provision authorizing the board to cancel said contract upon 5 years' notice in writing, if the board needs said power to supply the demands of States, counties, or municipalities. In order to promote and encourage the fullest possible use of electric light and power on farms within reasonable distance of any of its transmission lines the board in its discretion shall have power to construct transmission lines to farms and small villages that are not otherwise supplied with electricity at reasonable rates, and to make such rules and regulations governing such sale and distribution of such electric power as in its judgment may be just and equitable: Provided further, That the board is hereby authorized and directed to make studies, experiments, and determinations to promote the wider and better use of electric power for agricultural and domestic use, or for small or local industries, and it may cooperate with State governments, or their subdivisions or agencies, with educational or research institutions, and with cooperatives or other organizations, in the application of electric power to the fuller and better balanced development of the resources of the region.

"SEC. 11. It is hereby declared to be the policy of the Government so far as practical to distribute and sell the surplus power generated at Muscle Shoals equitably among the States, counties, and municipalities within transmission distance. This policy is further declared to be that the projects herein provided for shall be considered primarily as for the benefit of the people of the section as a whole and particularly the domestic and rural consumers to whom the power can economically be made available, and accordingly that sale to and use by industry shall be a secondary purpose, to be utilized principally to secure a sufficiently high load factor and revenue returns which will permit domestic and rural use at the lowest possible rates and in such manner as to encourage increased domestic and rural use of electricity. It is further hereby declared to be the policy of the Government to utilize the Muscle Shoals properties so far as may be necessary to improve, increase, and cheapen the production of fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients by carrying out the provisions of this act.

"SEC. 12. In order to place the board upon a fair basis for making such contracts and for receiving bids for the sale of such power, it is hereby expressly authorized, either from appropriations made by Congress or from funds secured from the sale of such power, or from funds secured by the sale of bonds hereafter provided for, to construct, lease, purchase, or authorize the construction of transmission lines within transmission distance from the place where generated, and to interconnect with other systems. The board is also authorized to lease to any person, persons, or corporation the use of any transmission line owned by the Government and operated by the board, but no such lease shall be made that in any way interferes with the use of such transmission line by the board: Provided, That if any State, county, municipality, or other public or cooperative organization of citizens or farmers, not organized or doing business for profit, but primarily for the purpose of supplying electricity to its own citizens or members, or any two or more of such municipalities or organizations, shall construct or agree to construct and maintain a properly designed and built transmission line to the Government reservation upon which is located a Government generating plant, or to a main transmission line owned by the Government or leased by the board and under the control of the board, the board is hereby authorized and directed to contract with such State, county, municipality, or other organization, or two or more of them, for the sale of electricity for a term not exceeding 30 years; and in any such case the board shall give to such State, county, municipality, or other organization ample time to fully comply with any local law now in existence or hereafter enacted providing for the necessary legal authority for such State, county, municipality, or other organization to contract with the board for such power: Provided further, That all contracts entered into between the Corporation and any municipality or other political subdivision or corporate organization shall provide that the electric power shall be sold and distributed to the ultimate consumer without discrimination as between consumers of the same class, and such contract shall be voidable at the election of the board if a discriminatory rate, rebate, or other special concession is made or given to any consumer or user by the municipality or other political subdivision or cooperative organization: And provided further, That as to any surplus power not so sold as above provided to States, counties, municipalities, or other said organizations, before the board shall sell the same to any person or corporation engaged in the distribution and resale of electricity for profit, it shall require said person or corporation to agree that any resale of such electric power by said person or corporation shall be made to the ultimate consumer of such electric power at prices that shall not exceed a schedule fixed by the board from time to time as reasonable, just, and fair; and in case of any such sale, if an amount is charged the ultimate consumer which is in excess of the price so deemed to be just, reasonable, and fair by the board, the contract for such sale between the board and such distributor of electricity shall be voidable at the election of the board: And provided further, That the board is hereby authorized to enter into contracts with other power systems for the mutual exchange of unused excess power upon suitable terms, for the conservation of stored water, and as an emergency or break-down relief.

"SEC. 13. Five percent of the gross proceeds received by the board for the sale of power generated at Dam No. 2, or from any other hydropower plant hereafter constructed in the State of Alabama, shall be paid to the State of Alabama; and 5 percent of the gross proceeds from the sale of power generated at Cove Creek Dam, hereinafter provided for, or any other dam located in the State of Tennessee, shall be paid to the State of Tennessee. Upon the completion of said Cove Creek Dam the board shall ascertain how much additional power is thereby generated at Dam No. 2 and at any other dam hereafter constructed by the Government of the United States on the Tennessee River, in the State of Alabama, or in the State of Tennessee, and from the gross proceeds of the sale of such additional power 2½ percent shall be paid to the State of Alabama and 2½ percent to the State of Tennessee. These percentages shall apply to any other dam that may hereafter be constructed and controlled and operated by the board on the Tennessee River or any of its tributaries, the main purpose of which is to control flood waters and where the development of electric power is incidental to the operation of such flood-control dam. In ascertaining the gross proceeds from the sale of such power upon which a percentage is paid to the States of Alabama and Tennessee, the board shall not take into consideration the proceeds of any power sold or delivered to the Government of the United States, or any department or agency of the Government of the United States, used in the operation of any locks on the Tennessee River or for any experimental purpose, or for the manufacture of fertilizer or any of the ingredients thereof, or for any other governmental purpose: Provided, That the percentages to be paid to the States of Alabama and Tennessee, as provided in this section, shall be subject to revision and change by the board, and any new percentages established by the board, when approved by the President, shall remain in effect until and unless again changed by the board with the approval of the President. No change of said percentages shall be made more often than once in 5 years, and no change shall be made without giving to the States of Alabama and Tennessee an opportunity to be heard.

"SEC. 14. The board shall make a thorough investigation as to the present value of Dam No. 2, and the steam plants at nitrate plant no. 1, and nitrate plant no. 2, and as to the cost of Cove Creek Dam, for the purpose of ascertaining how much of the value or the cost of said properties shall be allocated and charged up to (1) flood control, (2) navigation, (3) fertilizer, (4) national defense, and (5) the development of power. The findings thus made by the board, when approved by the President of the United States, shall be final, and such findings shall thereafter be used in all allocation of value for the purpose of keeping the book value of said properties. In like manner, the cost and book value of any dams, steam plants, or other similar improvements hereafter constructed and turned over to said board for the purpose of control and management shall be ascertained and allocated.

"SEC. 15. In the construction of any future dam, steam plant, or other facility, to be used in whole or in part for the generation or transmission of electric power the board is hereby authorized and empowered to issue on the credit of the United States and to sell serial bonds not exceeding $50,000,000 in amount, having a maturity not more than 50 years from the date of issue thereof, and bearing interest not exceeding 3½ percent per annum. Said bonds shall be issued and sold in amounts and prices approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, but all such bonds as may be so issued and sold shall have equal rank. None of said bonds shall be sold below par, and no fee, commission, or compensation whatever shall be paid to any person, firm, or corporation for handling, negotiating the sale, or selling the said bonds. All funds derived from the sale of such bonds shall be paid over to the Corporation.

"SEC. 16. The board, whenever the President deems it advisable, is hereby empowered and directed to complete Dam No. 2 at Muscle Shoals, Ala., and the steam plant at nitrate plant no. 2, in the vicinity of Muscle Shoals, by installing in Dam No. 2 the additional power units according to the plans and specifications of said dam, and the additional power unit in the steam plant at nitrate plant no. 2.

"SEC. 17. The Secretary of War, or the Secretary of the Interior, is hereby authorized to construct, either directly or by contract to the lowest responsible bidder, after due advertisement, a dam in and across Clinch River in the State of Tennessee, which has by long custom become known and designated as the Cove Creek Dam, together with a transmission line from Muscle Shoals, according to the latest and most approved designs, including power house and hydro-electric installations and equipment for the generation of power, in order that the waters of the said Clinch River may be impounded and stored above said dam for the purpose of increasing and regulating the flow of the Clinch River and the Tennessee River below, so that the maximum amount of primary power may be developed at Dam No. 2 and at any and all other dams below the said Cove Creek Dam: Provided, however, That the President is hereby authorized by appropriate order to direct the employment by the Secretary of War, or by the Secretary of the Interior, of such engineer or engineers as he may designate, to perform such duties and obligations as he may deem proper, either in the drawing of plans and specifications for said dam, or to perform any other work in the building or construction of the same. The President may, by such order, place the control of the construction of said dam in the hands of such engineer or engineers taken from private life as he may desire: And provided further, That the President is hereby expressly authorized, without regard to the restriction or limitation of any other statute, to select attorneys and assistants for the purpose of making any investigation he may deem proper to ascertain whether, in the control and management of Dam No. 2, or any other dam or property owned by the Government in the Tennessee River Basin, or in the authorization of any improvement therein, there has been any undue or unfair advantage given to private persons, partnerships, or corporations, by any officials or employees of the Government, or whether in any such matters the Government has been injured or unjustly deprived of any of its rights.

"SEC. 18. In order to enable and empower the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Interior, or the board to carry out the authority hereby conferred, in the most economical and efficient manner, he or it is hereby authorized and empowered in the exercise of the powers of national defense, in aid of navigation, and in the control of the flood waters of the Tennessee and Mississippi Rivers, constituting channels of interstate commerce, to exercise the right of eminent domain for all purposes of this act, and to condemn all lands, easements, rights of way, and other area necessary in order to obtain a site for said Cove Creek Dam, and the flowage rights for the reservoir of water above said dam, and to negotiate and conclude contracts with States, counties, municipalities, and all State agencies and with railroads, railroad corporations, common carriers, and all public-utility commissions and any other person, firm, or corporation, for the relocation of railroad tracks, highways, highway bridges, mills, ferries, electric-light plants, and any and all other properties, enterprises, and projects whose removal may be necessary in order to carry out the provisions of this act. When said Cove Creek Dam, transmission line, and power house shall have been completed, the possession, use, and control thereof shall be intrusted to the Corporation for use and operation in connection with the general Tennessee Valley project, and to promote flood control and navigation in the Tennessee River.

"SEC. 19. The Corporation, as an instrumentality and agency of the Government of the United States for the purpose of executing its constitutional powers, shall have access to the Patent Office of the United States for the purpose of studying, ascertaining, and copying all methods, formulae, and scientific information (not including access to pending applications for patents) necessary to enable the Corporation to use and employ the most efficacious and economical process for the production of fixed nitrogen, or any essential ingredient of fertilizer, or any method of improving and cheapening the production of hydroelectric power, and any owner of a patent whose patent rights may have been thus in any way copied, used, infringed, or employed by the exercise of this authority by the Corporation shall have as the exclusive remedy a cause of action against the Corporation to be instituted and prosecuted on the equity side of the appropriate district court of the United States, for the recovery of reasonable compensation for such infringement. The Commissioner of Patents shall furnish to the Corporation, at its request and without payment of fees, copies of documents on file in his office: Provided, That the benefits of this section shall not apply to any art, machine, method of manufacture, or composition of matter, discovered or invented by such employee during the time of his employment or service with the Corporation or with the Government of the United States.

"SEC. 20. The Government of the United States hereby reserves the right, in case of war or national emergency declared by Congress, to take possession of all or any part of the property described or referred to in this act for the purpose of manufacturing explosives or for other war purposes; but, if this right is exercised by the Government, it shall pay the reasonable and fair damages that may be suffered by any party whose contract for the purchase of electric power or fixed nitrogen or fertilizer ingredients is hereby violated, after the amount of the damages has been fixed by the United States Court of Claims in proceedings instituted and conducted for that purpose under rules prescribed by the court.

"SEC. 21. (a) All general penal statutes relating to the larceny, embezzlement, conversion, or to the improper handling, retention, use, or disposal of public moneys or property of the United States shall apply to the moneys and property of the Corporation and to moneys and properties of the United States intrusted to the Corporation.

"(b) Any person who, with intent to defraud the Corporation, or to deceive any director, officer, or employee of the Corporation or any officer or employee of the United States (1) makes any false entry in any book of the Corporation, or (2) makes any false report or statement for the Corporation, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c) Any person who shall receive any compensation, rebate, or reward, or shall enter into any conspiracy, collusion, or agreement, express or implied, with intent to defraud the Corporation or wrongfully and unlawfully to defeat its purposes, shall, on conviction thereof, be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"SEC. 22. To aid further the proper use, conservation, and development of the natural resources of the Tennessee River drainage basin and of such adjoining territory as may be related to or materially affected by the development consequent to this act, and to provide for the general welfare of the citizens of said areas, the President is hereby authorized, by such means or methods as he may deem proper within the limits of appropriations made therefor by Congress, to make such surveys of and general plans for said Tennessee Basin and adjoining territory as may be useful to the Congress and to the several States in guiding and controlling the extent, sequence, and nature of development that may be equitably and economically advanced through the expenditure of public funds, or through the guidance or control of public authority, all for the general purpose of fostering an orderly and proper physical, economic, and social development of said areas; and the President is further authorized in making said surveys and plans to cooperate with the States affected thereby, or subdivisions or agencies of such States, or with cooperative or other organizations, and to make such studies, experiments, or demonstrations as may be necessary and suitable to that end.

"SEC. 23. The President shall, from time to time, as the work provided for in the preceding section progresses, recommend to Congress such legislation as he deems proper to carry out the general purposes stated in said section, and for the especial purpose of bringing about in said Tennessee drainage basin and adjoining territory in conformity with said general purposes (1) the maximum amount of flood control; (2) the maximum development of said Tennessee River for navigation purposes; (3) the maximum generation of electric power consistent with flood control and navigation; (4) the proper use of marginal lands; (5) the proper method of reforestation of all lands in said drainage basin suitable for reforestation; and (6) the economic and social well-being of the people living in said river basin.

"SEC. 24. For the purpose of securing any rights of flowage, or obtaining title to or possession of any property, real or personal, that may be necessary or may become necessary, in the carrying out of any of the provisions of this act, the President of the United States for a period of 3 years from the date of the enactment of this act, is hereby authorized to acquire title in the name of the United States to such rights or such property, and to provide for the payment for same by directing the board to contract to deliver power generated at any of the plants now owned or hereafter owned or constructed by the Government or by said Corporation, such future delivery of power to continue for a period not exceeding 30 years. Likewise, for 1 year after the enactment of this act, the President is further authorized to sell or lease any parcel or part of any vacant real estate now owned by the Government in said Tennessee River Basin, to persons, firms, or corporations who shall contract to erect thereon factories or manufacturing establishments, and who shall contract to purchase of said Corporation electric power for the operation of any such factory or manufacturing establishment. No contract shall be made by the President for the sale of any of such real estate as may be necessary for present or future use on the part of the Government for any of the purposes of this act. Any such contract made by the President of the United States shall be carried out by the board: Provided, That no such contract shall be made that will in any way abridge or take away the preference right to purchase power given in this act to States, counties, municipalities, or farm organizations: Provided further, That no lease shall be for a term to exceed 50 years: Provided further, That any sale shall be on condition that said land shall be used for industrial purposes only.

"SEC. 25. The Corporation may cause proceedings to be instituted for the acquisition by condemnation of any lands, easements, or rights of way which, in the opinion of the Corporation, are necessary to carry out the provisions of this act. The proceedings shall be instituted in the United States district court for the district in which the land, easement, right of way, or other interest, or any part thereof, is located, and such court shall have full jurisdiction to divest the complete title to the property sought to be acquired out of all persons or claimants and vest the same in the United States in fee simple, and to enter a decree quieting the title thereto in the United States of America.

"Upon the filing of a petition for condemnation and for the purpose of ascertaining the value of the property to be acquired, and assessing the compensation to be paid, the court shall appoint three commissioners who shall be disinterested persons and who shall take and subscribe an oath that they do not own any lands, or interest or easement in any lands, which it may be desirable for the United States to acquire in the furtherance of said project, and such commissioners shall not be selected from the locality wherein the land sought to be condemned lies. Such commissioners shall receive a per diem of not to exceed $15 for their services, together with an additional amount of $5 per day for subsistence for time actually spent in performing their duties as commissioners.

"It shall be the duty of such commissioners to examine into the value of the lands sought to be condemned, to conduct hearings and receive evidence, and generally to take such appropriate steps as may be proper for the determination of the value of the said lands sought to be condemned, and for such purpose the commissioners are authorized to administer oaths and subpoena witnesses, which said witnesses shall receive the same fees as are provided for witnesses in the Federal courts. The said commissioners shall thereupon file a report setting forth their conclusions as to the value of the said property sought to be condemned, making a separate award and valuation in the premises with respect to each separate parcel involved. Upon the filing of such award in court the clerk of said court shall give notice of the filing of such award to the parties to said proceeding, in manner and form as directed by the judge of said court.

"Either or both parties may file exceptions to the award of said commissioners within 20 days from the date of the filing of said award in court. Exceptions filed to such award shall be heard before three Federal district judges unless the parties, in writing, in person, or by their attorneys, stipulate that the exceptions may be heard before a lesser number of judges. On such hearing such judges shall pass de novo upon the proceedings had before the commissioners, may view the property, and may take additional evidence. Upon such hearings the said judges shall file their own award, fixing therein the value of the property sought to be condemned, regardless of the award previously made by the said commissioners.

"At any time within 30 days from the filing of the decision of the district judges upon the hearing on exceptions to the award made by the commissioners, either party may appeal from such decision of the said judges to the circuit court of appeals, and the said circuit court of appeals shall upon the hearing on said appeal dispose of the same upon the record, without regard to the awards or findings theretofore made by the commissioners or the district judges, and such circuit court of appeals shall thereupon fix the value of the said property sought to be condemned.

"Upon acceptance of an award by the owner of any property herein provided to be appropriated, and the payment of the money awarded or upon the failure of either party to file exceptions to the award of the commissioners within the time specified, or upon the award of the commissioners, and the payment of the money by the United States pursuant thereto, or the payment of the money awarded into the registry of the court by the Corporation, the title to said property and the right to the possession thereof shall pass to the United States, and the United States shall be entitled to a writ in the same proceeding to dispossess the former owner of said property, and all lessees, agents, and attorneys of such former owner, and to put the United States, by its corporate creature and agent, the Corporation, into possession of said property.

"In the event of any property owned in whole or in part by minors, or insane persons, or incompetent persons, or estates of deceased persons, then the legal representatives of such minors, insane persons, incompetent persons, or estates shall have power, by and with the consent and approval of the trial judge in whose court said matter is for determination, to consent to or reject the awards of the commissioners herein provided for, and in the event that there be no legal representatives, or that the legal representatives for such minors, insane persons, or incompetent persons shall fail or decline to act, then such trial judge may, upon motion, appoint a guardian ad litem to act for such minors, insane persons, or incompetent persons, and such guardian ad litem shall act to the full extent and to the same purpose and effect as his ward could act, if competent, and such guardian ad litem shall be deemed to have full power and authority to respond, to conduct, or to maintain any proceeding herein provided for affecting his said ward.

"SEC. 26. The net proceeds derived by the board from the sale of power and any of the products manufactured by the Corporation, after deducting the cost of operation, maintenance, depreciation, amortization, and an amount deemed by the board as necessary to withhold as operating capital, or devoted by the board to new construction, shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States at the end of each calendar year.

"SEC. 27. All appropriations necessary to carry out the provisions of this act are hereby authorized.

"SEC. 28. That all acts or parts of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed, so far as they affect the operations contemplated by this act.

"SEC. 29. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly declared and reserved, but no such amendment or repeal shall operate to impair the obligation of any contract made by said Corporation under any power conferred by this act.

"SEC. 30. The sections of this act are hereby declared to be separable, and in the event any one or more sections of this act be held to be unconstitutional, the same shall not affect the validity of other sections of this act."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amend the title, as proposed by the Senate, so as to read: "An act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at and near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama, and for other purposes"; and the House agree to the same.

G. W. NORRIS,
CHAS. L. McNARY,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

JOHN J. McSWAIN,
LISTER HILL,

Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, in view of the fact that the changes in the bill as passed by the Senate are not very material, and as this measure is one of considerable importance, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the report.

THE VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, while I joined the Senator in making the report, a great many Senators in the Chamber desire such reports as this to go over for the day, under the rule, because they want to have an opportunity to read them; and I cannot make an exception in this case. Therefore I must object.

THE VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair suggest to the Senator from South Carolina that the report does not have to go over until tomorrow. The only question is whether the reading of it can be completed in 30 minutes before the Court of Impeachment shall meet. Does the Senator care to continue?

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I thought perhaps the Senate might be in the spirit to adopt the conference report, as it is practically in the form in which the bill passed the Senate. I thought we might save time and expedite matters by considering it now. The author of the particular bill is of the opinion that we might get through with it before the time for the Senate to convene as a Court of Impeachment. That was the reason I asked unanimous consent, which, in effect, would be suspending the rule that it must go over for a day. However, in face of the objection, I merely present the report and consent to have it lie on the table.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, of course it is in order under the rules to move to consider the report; but if the Senator from Oregon or any other Senator desires more time to look into it, I shall not object to its going over. However, just as the Senator from South Carolina says, we have been over this subject almost a thousand times.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair just called attention to the fact that the presentation of a report of a committee of conference is always in order, except when the Journal is being read or a question of order or motion is pending.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have said I must adhere to the policy which I have heretofore inaugurated, in fairness to Members of the Senate who are not conversant with the particular report, and I hope the Senator from South Carolina will not insist on making the motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the report will lie on the table and go over until tomorrow.

Whereas there are a large number of native Hawaiians in the congested tenement districts in the city of Honolulu whose condition will be greatly improved if they are enabled to secure residence lots in less-congested areas in or near said city under the terms of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920, and thereby escape from the unhealthy conditions of said tenement districts; and

Whereas it is advisable and for the best interests of the Hawaiian race that the lands hereinafter described, which are within the limits of the city of Honolulu but are unoccupied at the present time, be brought under the operation of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920, and be made available to native Hawaiians for residence purposes in lots not exceeding in area one half acre each: Now, therefore,

Senate Joint Memorial 9 (by Mr. Walker)

To the President of the United States and to the Congress of the United States and to the Honorable A. J. Dimond, Delegate to Congress from Alaska, and to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, in eleventh regular session assembled, do most respectfully represent that:

Whereas the vital-statistics records show that more than three times as many persons die in the Territory of Alaska from tuberculosis than from any other cause, and further that practically all of the victims of the white plague are natives, and the 1930 census shows there are 29,983 natives in the Territory—5,990 in the first division, 8,686 in the second division, 7,298 in the third division, and 8,009 in the fourth division; and

Whereas the only facilities for handling this dreaded disease among the natives, as reported by the medical director connected with the Bureau of Indian Affairs, consists of an annex to the native hospital in Juneau, Alaska; that this institution is not nearly large enough to care for the Indian patients in this immediate vicinity, and that frequently it has been necessary to refuse admittance to many needy cases, which necessitates returning these patients to their families and further exposing others and spreading the disease; that this single institution has demonstrated the wisdom of maintaining such institutions in every division of the Territory, and the need for such places is urgent;

Now, therefore, we, your memorialists, petition the Congress of the United States to appropriate sufficient funds for the Bureau of Indian Affairs to construct and operate such institutions in each of the four judicial divisions of the Territory and at such places as the said Bureau of Indian Affairs shall deem advisable. And your memorialists will ever pray.

Senate Joint Memorial 6 (by Mr. Lomen)

To the President of the United States and to the Congress of the United States and to the Honorable A. J. Dimond, Delegate to Congress from Alaska:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, in eleventh regular session assembled, do most respectfully represent that—

Whereas mining is the basic industry of the Territory of Alaska upon which a large percentage of the population is directly and indirectly dependent; and

Whereas about 98 percent or more of the area of Alaska is public land and contains great potential mineral resources, auriferous deposits, and large areas where mineralized gold-bearing quartz occurs, as has been determined by the United States Geological Survey; and

Whereas these vast areas of public lands are to a large extent unprospected, unappropriated, and not subject to taxation by the Territory nor the United States, and yield no revenue to the Government of either the United States or the Territory of Alaska; and

Whereas the future development of all industries in Alaska, including agriculture and lumbering, depends on the development of the mining industry; and

Whereas this Nation and the whole world are greatly in need of increased gold production as a means of rehabilitating industry and reviving and stabilizing commerce, and aiding in a recovery of prosperity and normal conditions; and

Whereas many of the most promising mining areas in Alaska are in comparatively inaccessible districts not supplied with transportation facilities available to the average prospector; and

Whereas the Government of the United States has in the past assisted in the colonization of her undeveloped territories and possessions by means of various subsidies and inducements to those willing to pioneer unsettled and undeveloped districts and territories, and the Government can, with comparatively small expense, render more aid in the development of Alaska and in the production of gold than has ever been heretofore rendered in the opening up and development of other unsettled and undeveloped possessions of the country; and

Whereas if gold production is stimulated and mining encouraged, colonization can be accomplished, new cities and towns established, agriculture and lumbering encouraged and stimulated, and unemployment relieved and gold production greatly increased by the extension of the necessary encouragement to prospecting; and

Whereas both the Army and the Navy of the United States have many airplanes which are idle during peace times, and have a trained personnel competent to pilot and operate such planes, which could be used to the great advantage of Alaska and the Nation and the whole world in prospecting for gold;

Now, therefore, your memorialists petition that the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States enact into law without delay a bill to assist in the prospecting of the great undeveloped area of Alaska by authorizing the organization of a prospecting and development army, which shall serve for a definite term of enlistment, officered by competent geologists, engineers, and prospectors, and recompensed on the basis of a small wage, together with an interest in such discoveries as may be made of mineral-bearing lodes and placers; and that machinery be set up in said bill for the authorization of the use of Government airplanes in transporting men and supplies to the areas to be prospected; and that sufficient appropriation be made to carry the expense of such an army of prospectors for a period of 5 years.

And your memorialists will ever pray.

Senate Joint Memorial 8 (by Mr. DeVane)

To the President of the United States, the Congress of the United States, the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of the Interior, and to the Delegate to Congress from Alaska:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, respectfully represents that:

Whereas the Congress of the United States has granted the President of the United States broad powers to reorganize the executive department of the Government, to prevent duplication of various departments, and to reduce governmental expenses; and

Whereas the Alaska Game Commission of the Department of Agriculture has built up an expensive and oppressive bureau costing the taxpayers of the United States more than $100,000 per annum, to wit: 1931, $97,450; 1932, $106,290; 1933, $103,566; and

Whereas the activities of the Alaska Game Commission have largely been and are oppressive and repugnant to a large majority of the people of the Territory of Alaska, especially since no distinction is made between commercial trappers and native Indians whose sole means of sustaining themselves is hunting, trapping, and fishing. They have made unreasonable, oppressive, and unenforceable regulations governing the taking and marketing of skins of fur-bearing animals resulting in large financial losses and great inconvenience to trappers and fur dealers who have all their resources invested in the fur industry; and

Whereas the Alaska Game Commission has ceased to represent the views of a majority of the permanent population of the Territory.

Wherefore your memorialist respectfully requests that the repeal of the Alaska game laws and abolishment of the Alaska Game Commission be made at the earliest possible date and that the Alaska Legislature be given full authority to make and enforce laws and regulations not inconsistent with the general laws of the United States and the treaties of the United States with other nations governing fur and game in Alaska and that pending such transfer of authority to the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska the President of the United States immediately reorganize the Alaska Game Commission by appointing a new commission, two members of which shall be men actively engaged in the raw-fur industry.

That native Indians be exempted from the provisions of the Alaska game law and its regulations to the extent that they be allowed to take game for food when in need of food for themselves and families and such fur as may be required for clothing at all times regardless of any law regulation.

And your memorialist will ever pray.

Senate Joint Memorial 11 (by Mr. Bragaw)

To the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Secretary of Commerce, the Commissioner of the Bureau of Fisheries, and the Delegate from Alaska:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of Alaska, in regular session assembled, respectfully represents:

I. That whereas the act of Congress of June 18, 1926, entitled "An act to amend section 1 of the act of Congress of June 6, 1924, entitled 'An act for the protection of the fisheries of Alaska, and for other purposes'", in the first section of said act, and its first proviso, declares, "That every such regulation made by the Secretary of Commerce shall be of general application within the particular area to which it applies, and that no exclusive or several right of fishery shall be granted therein, nor shall any citizen of the United States be denied the right to take, prepare, cure, or preserve fish or shellfish in any area of the waters of Alaska where fishing is permitted by the Secretary of Commerce" (44 U.S. Stat.L. 752).

II. That whereas under the authority of the several United States fishery laws applicable to the public waters in Alaska the Secretary of Commerce has heretofore made and promulgated rules and regulations having the force of laws to control and protect the salmon fisheries in those waters; these rules and regulations are found in the Department of Commerce Circular No. 251, nineteenth edition, dated December 20, 1932, signed officially by E. F. Morgan, Acting Secretary of Commerce, with some subsequent amendments issued by the same official.

III. That whereas False Pass (Isanotski Strait), separating Unimak Island from the western end of the Alaska Peninsula, and Ikatan Bay lie wholly within the Alaska Peninsular area, Ikatan Bay and False Pass constitute the first opening coming westward along the Alaska Peninsula from the Pacific Ocean through and into Bristol Bay, and affords the first chance the Pacific salmon hordes have as they swim north and westward from their winter resorts in the more southerly Pacific waters to enter Bristol Bay en route to their natural spawning beds in the streams and lakes at the head of Bristol Bay; False Pass (Isanotski Strait) is a very narrow and shallow body of water, and at low tide the salmon do not pass; when the spring run of Bristol Bay red salmon are seeking their spawning grounds through False Pass, they huddle in countless millions in Ikatan Bay, the southern entrance to False Pass, waiting for the rising tide, on which they go through the pass into Bristol Bay. Ikatan Bay is the natural gathering place of the greatest and most valuable horde of Alaska red salmon to be found along the Alaskan coast; a monopoly of the trap privileges in taking and canning these fish in that bay and pass is of exceeding great value.

IV. That whereas paragraph 23, page 13, of Circular 152, nineteenth edition, as amended in additional Alaska fishery regulations issued and signed by the Secretary of Commerce on January 6, 1933, provides: "The use of any trap for the capture of salmon is prohibited except as follows: 1. Unimak Island: Along the coast on the west and south sides of Ikatan Bay from a point on False Pass (Isanotski Strait) indicated by a marker to a point"—including the lower part of False Pass and the whole west and south shore of Ikatan Bay—"and 2, the mainland along the north side of Ikatan Bay within 2,500 feet of a point"—there fixed; traps are prohibited at all other places along the shores of False Pass and Ikatan Bay. Paragraph 10, page 13, also provides: "The use of floating traps for the capture of salmon is prohibited." Paragraph 12 provides: "The use of purse seines for the capture of salmon is prohibited"—in False Pass and Ikatan Bay. Paragraph 19 provides: "Commercial fishing for salmon by gill nets, including drift nets and set nets, is prohibited west of 161° west longitude, exclusive of waters along the Bering Sea coast"—False Pass and Ikatan Bay are west of 161°. Paragraph 20 provides: "Commercial fishing for salmon by means of stake nets, except along the Bering Sea coast, is prohibited." Paragraph 2, page 12, of the rules and regulations governing the Alaska Peninsular area, provides: "In the waters along the south side of the Alaska Peninsula from Cape Tolstoi to Castle Cape, including the waters of Shumagin and other adjacent islands, the 36-hour closed period for salmon fishing prescribed by section 5 of the act of June 6, 1924, is hereby extended to include the period from 6 o'clock p.m. of Saturday of each week until 6 o'clock p.m. of the Wednesday following, making a weekly closed period of 96 hours," etc. Paragraph 3, following, provides: "In all other waters of this area the 36-hour closed period for salmon fishing prescribed by section 5 of the act of June 6, 1924, is hereby extended to include the period from 6 o'clock a.m. of the Saturday of each week until 6 o'clock a.m. of the Monday following, making a weekly closed period of 48 hours", etc. Ikatan Bay and False Pass lie about 100 miles west of the region described in paragraph 2; the weekly closed period in Ikatan Bay and False Pass is but 48 hours long, thus having under these rules and regulations 2 days each week longer fishing period than any other waters in any part of the Alaska Peninsular area, it has more protection under the rules and regulations and less restrictions than any other fishery in the Territory.

V. That whereas it appears to us from available information that the exclusive and almost unrestricted right to take Alaska salmon from False Pass and Ikatan Bay has long been under the ownership and control of the P. E. Harris Co. and the Pacific American Fisheries Co., two non-Alaskan corporations engaged in taking and canning salmon in said waters; that both these companies have long maintained salmon fish traps in the mouth of False Pass and on the west and south sides of said pass and bay; that in the fishing season of 1932 the Harris Co. took the salmon from False Pass and Ikatan Bay and canned 252,834 cases of forty-eight 1-pound cans to the case; that the Pacific American Fisheries Co. in that season took the salmon from the same waters and canned 69,824 cases of forty-eight 1-pound cans to the case; a total of 322,781 cases, containing 15,493,488 pounds—nearly 8,000 tons—of Alaska salmon from False Pass and Ikatan Bay; the average price of similar grades of Alaska salmon from the 10 years past, including 1932, is the sum of $6.88 per case; at that 10-year average price the 322,781 cases taken from False Pass and Ikatan Bay by these two companies in 1932 would be $2,220,733; the average price per case for that salmon in 1932, however, was reduced to the sum of $4.06 per case, but at that 1932 average price (the lowest in 10 years) the value of the 1932 False Pass and Ikatan Bay pack was $1,310,490, all of which belonged to the two said companies; that the cost of production of canned salmon in False Pass and Ikatan Bay is exceedingly low; all their salmon are caught in traps belonging to the companies which are located in the mouth of False Pass and on the west and south shore of Ikatan Bay; they transport their fish from their own traps in their own boats and scows to their own near-by canneries, and there they are prepared and canned;

VI. That whereas it appears to us from a fair consideration of the said fishery rules and regulations so heretofore approved and enforced by the Secretary of Commerce in their application to the natural conditions which exist at False Pass and Ikatan Bay that the Harris Co. and the Pacific American Fisheries Co., with the connivance and permission of those who make and enforce the rules and regulations are allowed to carry on their own exclusive and several right of fishery in one of the most important salmon streams in Alaska, and under unfair and illegal conditions are permitted to obstruct the ascent of these great salmon hordes in their efforts to reach their spawning grounds in the streams and lakes at the head of Bristol Bay; to secure for themselves an unfair and illegal advantage to the injury of the salmon industry by blocking the streams through which the fish get into Bristol Bay with traps set in the flow of the stream and thus violate the spirit of the act of Congress which forbids the establishment of traps at or near the flow of salmon streams; that the unfair but friendly rules and regulations prepared and enforced at this place by the Secretary of Commerce have created an unfair and illegal monopoly of right in these two cannery and trap companies, give them special privileges not possible to accord to any other person or company, and exclude all other persons and companies, Alaska and/or the Union or other fisherman from fishing in this location, thereby violating the spirit and letter of the act of Congress of June 10, 1926:

Wherefore your memorialist, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, in regular session assembled, does most earnestly request that the United States authorities take such immediate action to reduce the number of traps and restrict the days of fishing equal to those allowed in adjacent districts, and that such further action be taken as will prevent any person or company from acquiring an exclusive or several right of fishery therein, and that all American purse seiners and gill netters be given equal right to fish therein while protecting the free flow of salmon through the False Pass stream.

And so your memorialist will ever pray.

were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Resolution adopted by the Veterans' Association, Summit County Unit, Akron, Ohio, May 5, 1933

Whereas Congress recently enacted legislation of vital concern to veterans of wars of this country and directly affecting the welfare of 11,000,000 citizens, this legislation is of great length and highly technical; and

Whereas this legislation of such vast importance and grave consequences was considered by a special committee of the House of Representatives for only 3 minutes and then reported favorably for passage under a special rule denying amendment and limiting deliberation to 40 minutes and immediately put upon its passage; and

Whereas the Members of the House of Representatives were not permitted to have copies of the said legislation but passed the measure without seeing the bill; and

Whereas said law provides that "any person who served in the active military or naval service and who is disabled as a result of disease or injury incurred in line of duty * * * may be paid a pension" and fails completely to assure that the wounded and service-disabled man or his dependents shall receive any assistance from the Federal Government, and that the thousands of our comrades suffering from tuberculosis, from gas, and additional thousands now insane due to shock or shell fire and battle horror are precluded from reestablishing their claim because of their inability due to helplessness; and

Whereas a single appointive subordinate official has complete and final jurisdiction over every claim of every veteran or his dependents and that this decision "shall be final and conclusive * * * and no court of the United States shall review such decision"; and

Whereas such legislation specifically encourages the extravagant and unprincipled policy of private pension bills, thereby opening wide the door of politics in the matter of veterans' affairs; and

Whereas officers and employees of the Government receive a small reduction of salary for one year, while the reductions and eliminations of veterans' compensation are permanent; and

Whereas there was no emergency for such legislation, as it does not become effective until July 1, 1933, and that Congress had ample opportunity to give the question the time and deliberation that the gravity of the subject should have received: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Veterans' Association, Summit County Unit, (1) That the method of passing this legislation be vigorously condemned as violative of the principles of representative government and contrary to the spirit and intentment of the Constitution of the United States;

(2) That the vesting of power in the discretion of a single official to deny the right of a wounded veteran help from the Government is a harsh, cruel, and unjust exercise of power of government in a Republic;

(3) That the sweeping denial of the right of appeal to the courts of justice of our country is a dangerous and insidious attack upon the fundamental institution of American Government and that private pensioning is an unfair discrimination; be it further

Resolved, That the Congressmen of Ohio who have the courage to vote against this vicious assault upon the principles of government cherished by our citizens and fought for on fields of battle, even though these Congressmen were threatened with political ostracism for their stand, be commended as a splendid example of real courage and faith in the representative government, maintaining the principle that "government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth"; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the Senators and Representatives in Congress from Ohio, the Director of the Budget, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, the Vice President of the United States, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

TREATMENT OF JEWS IN GERMANY

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana also presented a resolution forwarded to him by Rabbi Milton Steinberg, president of the Indianapolis (Ind.) Zionist District, protesting against the treatment of Jews in Germany, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Be it resolved, That the Indianapolis Zionist District of Indianapolis, Ind., views with pain and horror the persecution of the Jews of Germany; that its moral sensibilities have been outraged by authenticated reports of physical violence done against these people by systematic, legal exclusion of Jewish citizens from all contemporary German life, and by the persistent attempts of the German Government to reduce to the stage of degradation and terror 600,000 Jews of Germany, whose only offense has been that they were born Jews.

That the Indianapolis Zionist District of Indianapolis, Ind., petitions you to express its sentiments and to exert your influence so that the Government of the United States may make official protest against such barbarous behavior of a modern, civilized nation and may use its moral influence in an attempt to check such excesses.

That the Indianapolis Zionist District of Indianapolis, Ind., petitions you to lend your efforts toward the amelioration of the lot of these persecuted Jews, and that it urges you to recommend a temporary loosening of immigration restrictions from Germany so as to permit for refugees from religious intolerance a haven in our United States.

That copies of the resolution be forwarded to our Representatives in Congress and to the Honorable Cordell Hull, Secretary of State.

This resolution was duly executed by the above-named organization on the 11th day of May, 1933.

Respectfully submitted.

RABBI MILTON STEINBERG,
President of Indianapolis Zionist District.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in full in the RECORD and appropriately referred a resolution adopted on March 27, 1933, at a mass meeting held in Asbury Park, N.J., protesting against the intolerant policy of the Hitler government toward the Jewish people in Germany. In this manner I want to draw to the attention of the Congress the demands of this group of representative citizens.

There being no objection, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas a protest has been made heretofore on the 27th day of March 1933, at the high school auditorium in the city of Asbury Park, county of Monmouth, and State of New Jersey, against the intolerant policy of the Hitler government in relation to the Jews of Germany, in which protest participated the lay and spiritual leaders of Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant religions of the Monmouth county seaboard, as well as civic, political, and industrial leaders of said county; and

Whereas this formal protest was delivered to the State Department of our Federal Government and to the German Ambassador, Wilhelm von Prittwitz; and

Whereas verified and confirmed reports from Germany have since that time brought to America, day after day, the news of a systematic and thorough exclusion of Jews from the civic and political life of Germany by the Hitler government, an exclusion which expresses itself in the elimination of Jews from all federal, state, and local offices, the wholesale dismissal of Jewish physicians, the forced retirement of Jewish professors and instructors from the colleges and universities and smaller educational institutions; the ejection of Jewish judges from the courts; the expulsion of Jewish lawyers from the bar; the limitation and restriction of the attendance of Jewish students in all the higher educational institutions: Therefore be it

Resolved, at this meeting of American-Jewish citizens of the county of Monmouth, State aforesaid, held this 10th day of May 1933, at the Synagogue Sons of Israel, in the city of Asbury Park, county of Monmouth, and State aforesaid, That we do hereby most emphatically condemn the unjust, intolerant, and outrageous anti-Semitic measures, policies, and discriminations of the Hitler regime; and be it further

Resolved, That we do hereby call upon the Honorable W. WARREN BARBOUR, and the Honorable HAMILTON F. KEAN, United States Senators for the State of New Jersey, and also upon the Honorable WILLIAM H. SUTPHIN, Congressman of the Third Congressional District of the State of New Jersey, to raise their voice of protest in the Halls of the United States Congress and move for the adoption of the resolution by the Congress and the Senate denouncing the unjust, unwarranted, and inhuman exclusion of Jews from the civic, political, and professional life of the country in which they have lived over 1,600 years and to which they brought untold glory and distinction in every field of endeavor; and be it further

Resolved, That we call upon the Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of these United States, to use his good offices in behalf of the oppressed and persecuted Jews in Germany.

Respectfully submitted by the resolutions committee.

AMENDMENT TO INDEPENDENT OFFICES APPROPRIATION BILL

Sykes of an amount equal to the amount he would have received as salary from February 23 to March 20, 1933, both inclusive, as a member of the Federal Radio Commission, intended to be proposed by him to House bill 5389, the independent offices appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REGULATION OF BANKING—AMENDMENTS

Mr. CONNALLY submitted two amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 1631) to provide for the safer and more effective use of the assets of Federal Reserve banks and of national banking associations, to regulate interbank control, to prevent the undue diversion of funds into speculative operations, and for other purposes, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

COST OF ELECTRICAL DISTRIBUTION

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I submit a resolution and ask that it be printed in the RECORD and lie on the table.

The resolution (S.Res. 80) was ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

Whereas growing interest is manifest throughout the Nation on the part of householders, both urban and rural, as to present and future uses of electricity and reasonable rates chargeable therefor; and

Whereas a considerable, if not controlling, factor in the cost of rural and domestic electric service is reported to be the expense of distributing transmitted current between local substations and the customers' meters; and

Whereas it is responsibly alleged by engineers that the service companies keep no record of this important distribution cost and that the subject has never been discussed before any engineering society; that technical literature does not deal with it; and that only rarely has it been considered in electric rate cases:

Resolved, That the Federal Power Commission is hereby requested to furnish the Senate with a report summarizing such information as may be available indicating the cost of electrical distribution expressed in cents per kilowatt-hour under varying service conditions, as contrasted with the more widely known costs of electrical generation and electrical transmission.

INVESTIGATION BY TARIFF COMMISSION

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The resolution (S.Res. 68) submitted by Mr. REED on the 3d instant was read as follows:

Resolved, That the United States Tariff Commission is hereby directed to investigate, for the purpose of section 336 of the Tariff Act of 1930, the differences in the cost of production between the domestic article and the foreign article, and to report at the earliest date practicable upon goat, kid, and cabretta leathers.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, this is a resolution merely asking a study and information, but no other action. It is in the usual form. The Senate has passed a great many such resolutions.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. KING. My recollection is that a similar resolution, or at least a resolution dealing with the same commodity, has been before the Senate within the past 4 or 5 months.

Mr. REED. Oh, I do not think so. There has been no investigation of this particular variety of leather. It can be done by the Tariff Commission in a very short time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection the resolution is agreed to.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States submitting several nominations were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

COMPENSATION OF DISABLED VETERANS AND THEIR DEPENDENTS

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD two letters. The first is a letter received by me from Ernest A. Ryan, adjutant of the Kansas Department of the American Legion. The second is a copy of a letter delivered by myself to President Roosevelt, urging more of humanity and honorable dealing on the part of the Veterans' Administration in dealing with disabled veterans and with the widows and dependents of veterans.

It is my belief, Mr. President, that everyone is beginning to realize and ready to admit that the Veterans' Administration and the Budget Department have gone far beyond what Congress intended or the country desired in administering the provisions of the Economy Act affecting veterans. I know that I never intended such drastic cuts for veterans suffering from wounds and disabilities connected with the veterans' service in the Army or Navy. I sincerely hope that statement from the White House last week means that there will be more of justice and less of uncalled-for cruelty in the revision of regulations and in the reviews of individual cases of these veterans.

Mr. President, the honor of this Government is just as important as a balanced Budget—and the Nation's honor is involved in taking adequate care of deserving disabled veterans. I send the letters to the desk.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OFFICE OF ADJUTANT,
KANSAS DEPARTMENT, THE AMERICAN LEGION,
Topeka, May 10, 1933.

HON. ARTHUR CAPPER,
United States Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR CAPPER: I presume that you have been besieged with communications from all parts of Kansas in regard to the recent regulations which have been put into effect governing pensions and compensations to World War veterans and Spanish War veterans.

I have completed my Fifth Congressional District meeting and I state to you frankly that I have never seen such a wholehearted and indignant uprising on the part of legionnaires in Kansas as there is over this legislation. That the legislation is unfair is not even being denied by the Veterans' Administration itself; and the extent to which the power voted the Administration under the Economy Act has been used, I am sure, far exceeds your expectations and the expectations of other members of the Kansas delegation who voted for the measure.

I presume it was your thought that the reductions in veterans' expenditures would affect largely those men who could not connect their disabilities with their war service and possibly a few others who could not prove their need for compensation at the time. However, this is not the manner in which the Economy Act has operated. The regulations issued subsequent to the act have proven extremely cruel to needy veterans who contracted their disabilities in active war service.

I can point to you instances in Kansas of outstanding veterans, with whom you are personally acquainted, who will suffer reductions in their service-connected compensations of as much as 40 to 60 percent. I believe in previous years that the Veterans' Administration has been correct and fair in the allowing of presumption of service connection in tubercular and mental cases, even when they extended the date as far as January 1925. Under recent regulations presumptive service connection is wiped out in these types of cases, and we find men heretofore totally disabled with tuberculosis and mental diseases who now will receive only $20 per month under the nonservice provision of the new regulations.

I do not think that I need bring it home to you that hundreds and thousands of these men are going to be thrown upon the charity rolls of their local communities during the coming months, and this is coming at a time when local communities cannot possibly make provision for their care. I think you will agree with me that it is far more equitable that the burden at this particular time could much better be borne from Federal income taxes paid largely by corporations and individuals who built their fortunes during the war than by placing this tax in the form of a charity assessment on the backs of the personal and real property taxpayer in our local communities.

Whole I am presenting no particular brief in behalf of nonservice cases, these being the least worthy of those who have been upon the Government pension rolls, I want to recall to your mind that even the drastic provisions of the recent regulations make provision for $20 per month for men totally disabled and who cannot connect their disability with service.

Undoubtedly these injustices have been called to your attention previously by individual legionnaires and service men who with their families have been affected by the recent action of Congress and the administration. I know and appreciate the fine service that you have rendered the World War veterans, and especially Kansas veterans, ever since we came home from service. I know that you still have that same appreciation for their war-time service and that same sympathy for their welfare in peace time.

I am asking you to present these problems, as you best see fit, not only to the Veterans' Administration but if necessary to the President himself. It will also be appreciated if you will see fit to call attention to the people of Kansas to what I am sure you now recognize to be the rank injustices of the recent Veterans' Administration regulations.

Thanking you in advance for your cooperation now and expressing again our appreciation for your loyal services in the past, I am,

Sincerely yours,

ERNEST A. RYAN,
Adjutant, Kansas Department.

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 13, 1933.

HON. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT,
President of the United States,
The White House, Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I have just received from Ernest A. Ryan, adjutant of the Kansas Department of the American Legion, a protest against the hurried discharge of hundreds of needy veterans from the national military home at Leavenworth. My information is that nearly 1,000 of these, practically none of them with any other means of support, are being discharged. Certainly, they cannot get jobs of any kind at this time. The local communities are not in shape to care for them adequately in addition to the heavy burdens already imposed upon them by the great army of unemployed in the country.

It was with heartfelt approval I read the statement from the White House Wednesday morning to the effect that there would be careful review of service-connected cases, and also of regulations affecting nonservice cases where the veterans are clearly disabled or destitute. It seems to me that is fair and just not only to the veterans in question but also to the country.

In regard to the Leavenworth situation, I believe Adjutant Ryan has sent you a telegram urging you to suspend all further discharges until the review of the regulations contemplated in the Wednesday morning statement by Mr. Early can be made.

Permit me to join Adjutant Ryan in that plea.

Permit me to urge that until the regulations are reviewed these disabled veterans be allowed to remain in the homes. Surely it is more equitable and more humane to discharge only those clearly entitled to such discharge after review than it is to cast them out now by the hundreds and then later allow some of them to return.

I realize this is a most difficult problem. I realize that you are doing everything in your power to handle the situation with justice to all and in a humane spirit. But I do want to urge that no needy disabled veteran be discharged upon public charity at a time when the local communities are straining every resource to take care of the large numbers of destitute already on their hands. And may I express the hope that immediate steps will be taken by the Veterans' Administration to correct the most glaring inequalities in the regulations now in force, and that pending these adjustments those likely to be affected by the change not be thrown out to shift for themselves at a time when this is practically impossible.

With sincere regards,

ARTHUR CAPPER.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the following bills of the Senate:

S. 1410. An act to amend section 207 of the Bank Conservation Act with respect to bank reorganizations; and

S. 1415. An act to amend sections 5200 and 5202 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, to remove the limitations on national banks in certain cases.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. DOUGHTON, Mr. RAGON, Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL, Mr. TREADWAY, and Mr. BACHARACH were appointed managers on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (S. 7) providing for the suspension of annual assessment work on mining claims held by location in the United States and Alaska, and it was signed by the Vice President.

VETERANS' ALLOWANCES AND ADJUSTED-SERVICE CERTIFICATES

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD two letters, one with respect to the allowances of veterans and the other with reference to the present movement in behalf of the payment of adjusted-service certificates. Preceding the letters are brief statements prepared by me, which I ask may also be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statements and letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. President, two phases of veterans' legislation are involved in wide-spread discussion at the present time. One phase deals with excessive and indefensible reductions in service-connected disability allowances in violation of all the assurances which were given to Congress at the time of the passage of the so-called "Economy Act." Another phase deals with the renewed movement in behalf of present payment of adjusted-service compensation certificates. The only possible way in which I can hope to respond to the large number of inquiries that are coming to me upon this score is to ask the Senate's unanimous consent that two typical correspondence exhibits be printed in the RECORD.

The first exhibit deals with the so-called "bonus problem." The following typical letter was received from Mr. Stanley Banyon, editor of the News-Palladium, at Benton Harbor, Mich.:

"There is considerable discussion of the proposition that if the new administration is to attempt controlled inflation of the currency, as a stimulus to economic recovery, there ceases to be any sound reason why the so-called 'soldiers' bonus' should not now be included among those 'maturing obligations of the Government' to be paid with so-called 'greenbacks' at once. It seems to me that under a greenback program of controlled inflation the bonus question is a totally different question than it was 1 year ago. I do not discuss whether the inflation program is wise. That has been settled. We are to have it. Since we are to have it, I ask about the bonus as part of it. We all have great respect for your opinion on a matter of this nature, and I think your State would welcome any public statement you might care to make on the subject."

My self-explanatory reply follows:

"The so-called 'bonus problem' is substantially different today, in the light of the passage of the inflation bill, than it was previously. If the Federal Government is to embark upon the reissue of so-called 'greenbacks' under the general terms of the old act of 1862, for the purpose of meeting certain maturing obligations of the United States Government, it seems to me that a thoroughly sound case can be made out in favor of paying adjusted-compensation certificates in this fashion immediately. Therefore, if we are to have limited inflation as is the new administration's plan, I considered it logical and preferable to include the 'bonus' among those 'maturing obligations' which the President shall be thus authorized to pay in this fashion. I voted accordingly."

"There are several specific reasons which sustain this conclusion. I am glad to submit them to the approval of your judgment."

"First. There is more actual advantage to the Federal Treasury in using the major portion of the contemplated $3,000,000,000 of 'greenbacks' in paying off this particular 'Government obligation' than any other. The new inflationary law requires an annual 4-percent sinking fund to retire these 'greenbacks.' (A 'greenback' is a piece of paper money representing the Federal Government's promise to pay, without specific collateral value assigned to support it.) This annual sinking-fund obligation, in respect to the 'greenbacks' necessary to pay the bonus, would be about $25,000,000 per year less than the annual payment which otherwise must continue to be made into the maturity fund to pay the bonus in 1945. In other words, there would be an actual and substantial budgetary advantage today in using the contemplated 'greenbacks' to anticipate these bonus maturities. This is the exact reverse of the situation 1 year ago when we were not committed to inflation as a policy and when, on any other basis, the cash payment of the bonus would have more than doubled the already yawning deficit which was threatening to wreck the public credit."

"Second. The purpose of this inflation is said to be the encouragement of commerce through the increase in the volume of currency. I never have believed that the volume of currency is as important as the velocity of its turn-over—as witness the fact that we have as big a volume (barring hoarding) today as in the peak days of 1928. Certainly there must be velocity as well as volume—there must be the use as well as the creation of new money—if inflation is to serve any useful purpose. The payment of the bonus would produce swifter decentralized distribution and use than the payment of any other existing Government obligation. Therefore, if we are to try this inflationary stimulus—and that question is no longer open to argument—the present payment of the bonus best serves the end in view. Any argument to the effect that this money would be swiftly swallowed up and would soon cease to affect the situation, as was the case when the first 50 percent was made available upon my initial motion 2 years ago, is simply an argument against the utility of the contemplated limited inflation—with the exception that it must be remembered that the first payment was not in inflated money."

"Third. The present payment of the bonus in 'greenbacks'—if we are to pay any Government obligations in 'greenbacks'—would serve a collateral public purpose which is absent in the payment of any other existing Government obligations. It would take every World War veteran in the country off of local relief rolls for a considerable time to come. This would help relieve local welfare responsibilities and would aid the situation in cities and towns and States—even up to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and its advances to the States for welfare purposes. Certainly there is a particular obligation to veterans in this connection."

"Fourth. The fact that the face of these adjusted-compensation certificates are not due until 1945—heretofore a compelling argument against anticipated payment of the 1945 value—ceases to be other than an academic consideration if the present payment be included within the already legalized 'greenback' limitation. Indeed, it were far better for the Government's reputation for good faith to thus inexpensively anticipate these particular 'maturing obligations' than, as in the case of other 'maturing obligations' contracted to be paid in gold, to repudiate the gold clause and force payment of gold obligations in paper money. Certainly I would not force a veteran to take 'greenbacks' in 1933 if he prefers to wait for other and different payment in 1945. But certainly I would give him the option at once, under all these circumstances and for these compelling reasons."

"This entire argument is predicated upon the fact that it already has been decided that the President shall have authority to issue up to $3,000,000,000 in 'greenbacks' to pay 'maturing obligations' of the Government as he sees fit. In other words the advisability of this type of inflation has ceased to be in argument. The only remaining argument, as I see it, is the choice of 'obligations' to be paid. I have warned before—and I warn again that 'printing-press money' is a dangerous experiment. It is too much like the opium habit—a progressive curse. The German Republic doubled her currency with 'printing-press money' in 2 years. The next doubling occurred in 2 months; the next in 2 weeks; the next in 2 days. It finally had to be stabilized on the amazing basis of 1,000,000,000,000 to 1. We must protect America against that debacle at any cost. The American inflation now proposed is limited to $3,000,000,000 in 'greenbacks.' They are protected by a 25-year sinking fund. They are limited to use on existing obligations of the Federal Government. It is to be fervently prayed that our self-restraint will keep us within limits. But since the power to proceed as indicated is now created and no longer open to argument, I believe that the power should also be created to include adjusted-service compensation certificates within the definition of those 'maturing obligations' entitled to present and immediate payment."

"I want to add that 'bonus marches' upon Washington, no matter how nobly meditated, have a most unfortunate effect upon these veterans' problems. No one would deny veterans, singly or in groups, the sacred right of petition. But when petitioners encamp upon the Capitol more or less indefinitely, there is an element of physical compulsion, whether intended or not, which emphasizes the threat above and beyond the petition itself. This inevitably has the exact reverse from the intended effect upon legislators."

The second exhibit which I desire to submit has to do with the rules and regulations announced by the United States Veterans' Bureau and the Bureau of the Budget in respect to reductions in pensions and disability allowances pursuant to the so-called 'Economy Act.' There are unexpected inequities and severities in the administrative rules and regulations which represent the form in which this Executive authority is to be exercised. Some of these inequities are more violent than those in the old order which it was sought to purge. Actual battle casualties have been reduced in allowances from 35 percent to 55 percent, sometimes even more. Total reductions of 72 percent in World War allowances and 66 percent in Spanish War allowances cannot be defended—either on the basis of justice, or on the basis of the driving need for economy which I support, or on the basis of the assurances given Congress when the 'Economy Act' was passed. There must be a rational revision of these rules and regulations or 'economy' inevitably will suffer from just such a reaction as previously hit prior allowances themselves. A typical letter on this subject from George A. Osborne, editor of the News at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., was answered by me as follows:

"This will reply to your letter with its enclosed news article describing the contemplated reduction from $90 per month to $8 per month in the disability allowance to a veteran who 'received a volley of machine-gun bullets in the abdomen' while fighting in France in direct contact with the enemy and who thus was permanently disabled."

"Any such treatment of a veteran with direct service-connected disability is not only an affront to the humanities and to American patriotic sensibilities, but it also is a direct violation of the assurances which were given Congress at the time the President asked for special powers in the so-called 'economy bill.' I shall not only emphatically protest this action; I also shall use it as a further demonstration that the economy bill is being administered under rules and regulations never remotely contemplated when Congress was asked for the bill by the President in the dire emergency which he confronted the second week in March."

"Some of these rules and regulations, recently announced by the Budget Director, are shocking beyond words in their effects. They cannot be justified even in the name of 'economy'—to which we all must rigidly commit ourselves—because illogical and illegitimate economy simply invites reaction against all economy."

"Ten days ago the national commander of the American Legion, which is seeking patriotically to uphold the President's hands in his economy needs, protested to the President against some of these unexpected regulations. I promptly wired the commander at Indianapolis headquarters of the Legion, under date of May 5, as follows:

"I want you to know that I emphatically agree with your statement that 'those to whom President Roosevelt has intrusted administration of the Economy Act have gone far beyond what his spokesmen in Congress promised would be the extreme limit of the burden to be imposed upon veterans.' The Legion certainly is justified in asking a review of the new orders, particularly as affecting battle-front service-connected disabilities."

"On May 12 President Roosevelt ordered his Budget Director and his United States Veterans' Bureau to review these offensive rules and regulations. They ought to be reviewed and they ought to be purged. I am perfectly sure that the veterans themselves are willing to again make their fair share of contribution to the country's needs. But no exigency on earth could justify anything remotely approximating a cut from $90 per month to $8 per month in the case of a veteran who was disabled in action in such an instance as you present. Unfortunately, this is not an isolated case. I am amazed that any administrators could conceive such ruthlessness."

"It is physically impossible for my office facilities to pursue each individual Michigan case which falls under the new bans. But I shall be glad to make an example of the particular case which you submit. It could not be expected that the necessary cut-backs in veterans' allowances would not bring a storm of protests. But neither should it have been expected that the cutbacks would invade legitimate allowances in any such fashion as we now contemplate. I feel particularly offended because I insisted upon assurances to the contrary when the bill originally was in the Congress.

"I am hopeful that the review which the President has ordered will correct some of these aggravated situations. If not, they must be corrected otherwise. I understand that already it has been determined not to abandon regional offices of the United States Veterans' Administration at once. This would have been another grievous error, since it would have centralized these millions of claims in Washington and prolonged, perhaps by years, their adjudication in many instances."

STIMULATION OF BUSINESS

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "Program to Stimulate Business", by James M. Thomson, appearing in the New Orleans Item.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New Orleans Item]

PROGRAM TO STIMULATE BUSINESS

By James M. Thomson

Senator COSTIGAN, Democrat, of Colorado, has offered a bill in the United States Senate providing for a $6,000,000,000 public-works program. This bill contemplates an expenditure of $5,000,000 a day for 2 years.

Senator COSTIGAN is an able and progressive Democrat. I am more than happy to see identified with the bill the name of Senator CUTTING, a Republican, of New Mexico, and the name of Senator ROBERT LA FOLLETTE, of Wisconsin. Senator CUTTING is an interesting character. He is a scion of a very wealthy New York family who moved to New Mexico on account of his health. He is in his forties and is a bachelor. He is reputed to be worth a good many millions of dollars of inherited money. It is greatly to his credit that Senator CUTTING has taken almost uniformly from the time he entered the Senate the fight of the people. He deserted the Republican Party and supported Franklin Roosevelt in the last election. He made some of the best speeches that were made for Roosevelt. He represents a type of western progressive leadership which should have a voice in the councils of the administration.

Perhaps the greatest compliment that can be paid Senator ROBERT LA FOLLETTE, of Wisconsin, another young man, is to state that he is a worthy son of a great father. When American history is written the senior La Follette will rank as one of the really great Americans of his time.

I don't know how the Senate will line up on this bill, but it will be surprising to me if another Member of the Senate, a wealthy Republican, does not line up with these gentlemen for a $6,000,000,000 bond issue. I refer to Senator COUZENS, of Michigan. Senator COUZENS is a former partner of Henry Ford. He sold out his business for a good many millions of dollars. He is understood to have his money in the safest type of investment. It is clearly to his credit that the Michigan Senator has tried to stand uniformly for what he considers the popular interest. He refers to the attitude of Senator CUTTING and Senator COUZENS because it is popularly supposed that rich men in public life and whose investments may be in bonds or mortgages are considered to be influenced by their money in their vote and in their attitude. My personal contacts with men of this type have been rather refreshing. They are very often men desirous of legislation in the interest of the people.

I noted when America went off the gold payment abroad that J. P. Morgan came out in a statement not only approving the Government's action but approving inflation. When I started out several weeks ago to urge inflation or reflation on the Government I never expected to find myself in Mr. Morgan's company within a few weeks.

The point that I want to make is that in urging the issuance of five or six billion dollars by the Government to put the people to work, I do not believe that I am radical but think that I am business-like and conservative.

Interest on $6,000,000,000 is $180,000,000 a year at 3 percent, and if the Federal Government splits this money with the States and with the cities which need money and starts a vast employment program in this country, I for one expect to see business so stimulated that the Federal Government will increase its revenue by a billion dollars a year from income and other forms of taxes.

I have heretofore presented the argument that the loss to the country in increased wealth which can be got from employing 12,000,000 people now unemployed will be $5,000,000,000 a year. Public improvements are not a liability to a nation; they are an asset to a nation, and expenditure for public improvements is wise.

All the surplus wealth of Russia goes each year into public improvements. A great part of the surplus wealth of Italy goes each year into public improvements. France has put her surplus wealth into military equipment and has loaned it to her European allies for military purposes. In my opinion, Great Britain made a terrible mistake in inaugurating the dole and in maintaining millions of idle people for 10 or 12 years at British expense. The country had far better have issued public-improvement bonds and have put those people to work.

The United States does not need great military expenditures, I know.

DEPOSIT OF GOLD AND GOLD CERTIFICATES

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article appearing in a Colorado paper written by Hon. C. S. Thomas, formerly a Member of this body.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Shakespeare once defined gold as the visible god. Whatever its physical qualities, it was always and still is the most formidable deity ever worshiped by mankind. Even when the first commandment was voiced on Sinai, the Jews were imaging the golden calf at the foot of the mountain. Moses destroyed their statue, but he could not dethrone the metal which until quite recently men and women were privileged to see, albeit the bulk of it was buried in the ground from whence it came.

We, or some of us, therefore, know that it is yellow, bright, and heavy. Also that by reason of the supernatural qualities with which it has been endowed it measures and shifts the values of all things spiritual and material. Moreover, the more fortunate of the people until recently, could actually acquire and enjoy meager portions of it; while theoretically, those possessed of other forms of money might demand its conversion into gold as the only real money in the habitable world, those contending for other standards being neither honest, intelligent, nor trustworthy. The metal failed to function and then abdicated. Yet the gold god is too sacred to be seen. Its fires burn too brightly for mortal eyes to gaze upon.

The leader of American Democracy, ostensibly invested by Congress with the purple of unlimited power, last week issued an old-fashioned Russian "ukase" commanding all citizens (they are still so designated) by or before May next to deposit with the financial authorities all gold and gold certificates in their possession in exchange for other forms of money. Failing this, the President by the same edict subjects them to arrest, indictment, and on conviction to a maximum fine of $10,000 or sentence of imprisonment for a term of 10 years or both. The visible god of Shakespeare is thereby clothed with invisibility and the single standard transformed from a human agency into a thing of omnipotence.

Under the law as written, gold is legal tender for the satisfaction of all human obligations. He who demands and he from whom it is demanded have no alternative but compliance with its terms. It was thus enacted at the behest and by the command of the single-standard powers and until yesterday it functioned as "the law of the land." But the President by his "ipse dixit" has assumed to repeal it.

The owner of paper money is not only prohibited from demanding its redemption in gold, he is commanded under the sanction of the penal code to exchange with the Treasury for its paper. Although his own, he may not even retain it save at the risk of his liberty. Its mere possession after May 1 becomes a felony eo ipso, not by act of Congress but by Executive order based on legislative delegation of authority.

With all due acknowledgement of the best of intentions, with which hell is said to be paved, I assert that this Executive order is the most deadly and appalling attack upon the integrity of the American Constitution thus far encountered since its ratification. Only by abdication can the Congress so legislate. Its Members falsify their oath of office when they so ordain. The President has no more power to exercise the authority thus conferred than he had before the effort was made to confer it. The plea of necessity would be farcical, if the incident were not so tragical in its reaction upon American institutions.

If the assertion were true that the salvation of the Republic or of the gold standard required this extreme policy, which it is not, then neither is worth the sacrifice. The latter has long been a curse and will so continue as long as the public interests are sacrificed upon its altar. Moreover, the Government has but to stretch out its hand and grasp the remedy; a fact which the world keenly realizes while its chancelleries willfully shut their eyes to it and will have none of it. If on the other hand, penalizing by edict those rightfully possessing and entitled to the use of gold is within the Executive power, especially in times of peace, then no right of the American citizen is safe from the exercise of despotic power.

The Nation has traveled far and fast on the road to centralization since the Civil War, but it is somewhat melancholy to reflect that the Democratic Party under Wilson and Roosevelt has done more to demolish State boundaries and trample upon the fundamentals of the bill of rights than its opponent, which for three quarters of a century we have bitterly denounced for its disregard of constitutional limitations. And the bitter pill is now coated with gold, whose bar sinister, branded by fraud on the Nation's forehead in 1873, dictating its policy for 60 years, itself bankrupt in morals and in fact and doomed to early extinction, has now dragged Democracy into the fathomless pool of repudiation. "Alas, it is not in our stars but in ourselves that we are underlings."

Comes at this juncture the economic statement that owing to expansion of debt and destruction of values, the Nation's liabilities exceed its assets. If this be true, bankruptcy is in sight and repudiation, is inevitable. Is it surprising that gold as usual has between two days to run to its cover disappeared in the gloaming and left the Nation to the elements and to fate?

C. S. THOMAS.

MOTHER'S DAY—ADDRESS BY SENATOR NEELY

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address in commemoration of Mother's Day delivered over the radio yesterday by the eloquent Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY].

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MOTHER'S DAY

For more than 19 centuries mankind has had three unfailing sources of inspiration to heroic efforts, great accomplishments, and sublime achievements. For more than 1,900 years the three words that represent these ever-flowing fountains of inspiration have charmed the ears, brightened the hopes, and thrilled the hearts of all the children of men. They have incited the genius that has produced the most exquisite pictures ever painted, the most beautiful poems ever written, the most melodious songs ever sung—songs, poems, and pictures that have given us sunshine for our shadows, joy for our sorrows, smiles for our tears, and intimated to us the endless bliss of immortality in that "realm where the rainbow never fades", where no one ever grows old, where friends never part and loved ones never, never die.

These three mighty, magic, and inspiring words are "Jesus", "Home", and "Mother."

The first of them impelled Charles Wesley to write:

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to Thy bosom fly;
While the nearer waters roll,
While the tempest still is high.

"All my trust on Thee is stayed;
All my help from Thee I bring;
Cover my defenseless head
With the shadow of Thy wing.

"Hide me, O my Savior, hide,
Till the storm of life is past;
Safe into the haven guide,
O receive my soul at last."

What unspeakable consolation, born of boundless faith in the everlasting Father's imperishable love for His erring children, is revealed in this beautiful hymn. Its music, "like a sea of glory, has spread from pole to pole."

The second of our magic words prompted John Howard Payne to compose that deathless song that has been sung and played around the world. Millions of weary wanderers on foreign strands have been transported upon the wings of imagination back to the romantic scenes of their childhood, to the picturesque paths which their infancy knew, to the happy days of the long ago by that soothing symphony of sublime sentiment:

"Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam,
Be it ever so humble there's no place like home!
A charm from the sky seems to hallow us there,
Which, seek through the world, is ne'er met with elsewhere.

"Home, Home, sweet, sweet home!
There's no place like home!"

And the last of this tranquilizing trinity of wondrous words, with the stirring force of the celestial muse of Isaiah, impelled Elizabeth Akers Allen to write the following pathetic, appealing, and rapturous poem that is destined to live until the everlasting hills, "The vales stretching in pensive quietness between", and "old ocean's gray and melancholy waste", shall be no more:

"Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight,
Make me a child again just for tonight!
Mother, come back from the echoless shore,
Take me again to your heart, as of yore;
Kiss from my forehead the furrows of care,
Smooth the few silver threads out of my hair—
Over my slumber your loving watch keep;
Rock me to sleep, Mother, rock me to sleep!

"Backward, flow backward, O tide of the years!
I am so weary of toil and of tears—
Toil without recompense, tears all in vain,
Take them, and give me my childhood again!
I have grown weary of dust and decay,
Weary of flinging my soul-wealth away;
Weary of sowing for others to reap;
Rock me to sleep, Mother, rock me to sleep.

"Mother, dear mother, the years have been long
Since I last listened your lullaby song:
Sing, then, and unto my soul it shall seem Womanhood's years have been only a dream.
Clasped to your heart in a loving embrace,
With your light lashes just sweeping my face,
Never hereafter to wake or to weep—
Rock me to sleep, Mother, rock me to sleep."

Kings and potentates and parliaments have proclaimed holidays, thanksgiving days, and emancipation days for observance by the people of various kingdoms and countries and states. But Miss Anna Jarvis, a distinguished woman of West Virginia, has established Mothers' Day in the love, in the devotion, and in the throbbing heart of the humanity of all the world.

Today we venerate the sacred name and memory of mother. We laud the virtue, extol the spirit of self-sacrifice, and eulogize the loving kindness of every mother living; and in imagination, with bowed heads, grateful hearts, and generous hands lay new wreaths of the freshest, the fairest, and the most fragrant flowers upon the graves of all the mothers who have gone from the fitful land of the living into the silent land of the dead. In this hour of sober and serious reflection we realize that everyone who treads the globe owes his birth to the unspeakable agony of a mother. From mother's breast the baby first was fed. In mother's arms the baby first was lulled to sleep. Mother, in the twilight hour of baby's existence, breathed the fervent prayer:

"That He who stills the raven's clamorous nest,
And decks the lily fair in flowery pride,
Would, in the way His wisdom sees the best,
For her darling child provide; but chiefly
In her loved one's heart, with grace divine preside."

Then, as the days grew into the months and the months lengthened into the years mother's life became a continuous round of solicitude, service, and sacrifice for her child.

Mother's hands made the first dress that baby ever wore. Mother's deft fingers made playthings for the little one that filled his eyes with wonder and his heart with joy.

A splinter in baby's finger, a briar in baby's foot, or a bruise on baby's toe became an affliction of such momentous consequence that only mother could heal it; only mother could banish its ache; only mother could exile its pain; only mother could smile away the tears it caused to flow down baby's cheeks.

And a little later mother, like an inexhaustible encyclopedia of universal knowledge, informed her baby about the birds and the beasts and the flowers and the trees. She discussed with him the cause of day and night; of winter's storm and summer's calm; the mysteries of the earth and sea and sky. She explained as best she could the marvels of the sun and moon and stars and the grandeur of the far-off milky way.

And the little one at night, upon his knees, at mother's side, with mother's hand upon his head, learned to say in the lisping accents of childhood:

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep:
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take.
And this I ask for Jesus' sake.
Amen."

Thus from the day of the birth of her babe, "tolling, sorrowing, rejoicing onward through life mother goes", generously giving the best of her thought and energy and effort and life to make of her child a successful, useful, and righteous woman or man.

But until—

"The stars are old,
And the sun grows cold,
And the leaves of the judgment book unfold"—

no one will ever know the full measure of service the mothers of earth have constantly rendered their children.

The following touching story illustrates the fact that the average mother is ever ready to sacrifice as sublimely for her child as the mother pelican is said to sacrifice for her young by feeding them the lifeblood from her breast:

A poverty-stricken Italian woman was, by the death of her husband, compelled to work hard in a "sweatshop" to support her three little children. A humane organization learned that this unfortunate woman was in the last stage of consumption and endeavored to take her from her task. But she resisted and continued to work until she died of a hemorrhage. During this martyr's last moments someone inquired of her why she had worked so hard and so long, and she gasped, "I had to work to get the grub for the kids."

Greater love than this has no woman shown. She laid down her life for her children.

Just such love as this poor, dying Italian woman had for her children every other mother has for her own.

In token of our appreciation of the great boon of maternal devotion which we all enjoy, or have enjoyed in the days gone by, let us habitually exalt the name, commemorate the memory, and sing the praises of our mothers, and let us devoutly beseech our Heavenly Father to love them and keep them, and shower His richest blessings upon them forever and forever.

"O mother, thou wert ever one with nature,
All things fair spoke to my soul of thee;
The azure depths of air,
Sunrise and starbeam, and the moonlight rare,
Splendors of summer, winter's frost, and snow,
Autumn's rich glow, bird, river, flower, and tree.

"Mother, thou wert in love's first whisper,
And the slow thrill of its dying kiss;
In the strong ebb and flow of the resistless tides of joy and woe;
In life's supremest hour thou hadst a share,
Its stress of prayer, its rapturous trance of bliss.

"Mother, leave me not now when the long shadows fall athwart the sunset bars;
Hold thou my soul in thrall till it shall answer to a mightier call,
Remain thou with me till the holy night puts out the light
And kindles all the stars."

Mr. LONG subsequently said: Mr. President, there was ordered to be printed in the RECORD this morning, at the request of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], an address by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY]. I understand that will be printed in the ordinary small type, will it not, unless I am able to get an order from the Committee on Printing to the contrary?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that the law provides that it shall be printed in small type unless authorized to the contrary by the Joint Committee on Printing.

Mr. LONG. I want to get authority from the Printing Committee to have it printed in the ordinary type of the RECORD. Will I have to have the request referred to the Printing Committee?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will require action of the Joint Committee on Printing.

Mr. LONG. Of the two Houses?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Yes.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, was the request referred to the Joint Committee on Printing?

The VICE PRESIDENT. No; it was not.

Mr. FLETCHER. The law requires such matter to be printed in a certain type.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Yes; and the law requires action by the Joint Committee on Printing.

CARE OF VETERANS—DAYTON (OHIO) SOLDIERS' HOME

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. President, I desire to read a letter from Lawrence Andrews, of the editorial department of the Dayton Journal, with reference to the disabled veteran who was discharged from the Dayton Soldiers' Home in his underwear. That story was denied to some extent later in the day after it had been placed in the RECORD.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] had some matter incorporated in the RECORD that seemed to be somewhat at variance with the original story. I now have a communication from the Dayton Journal, which reads as follows:

DAYTON, OHIO, May 12, 1933.

HON. ARTHUR R. ROBINSON,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR: The United Press Association, under date of May 12, under a Washington, D.C., date line, carried the following story:

"WASHINGTON, May 12.—Perry M. Long, of Dayton, Ohio, may have left the soldiers' home minus his pants, but the Roosevelt economy program has nothing to do with the incident, Veterans' Administrator Frank T. Hines has informed Congress.

"C. W. Wadsworth, director of the soldiers' homes for the Veterans' Bureau, and F. C. Runkle, manager of the home in question, were the authorities given by Hines for the denial. The two termed the affair 'A carefully staged publicity stunt.'

"Hines' statement was placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD by Senator BYRNES, Democrat, of South Carolina, after Senator ROBINSON, Republican, of Indiana, had placed in the RECORD a news item from the Dayton (Ohio) Journal, in which Long was quoted as saying he had been told on leaving the home, 'Orders is orders; you will have to take them off.'

"A picture with the item showed Long standing in his underwear, shirt, and shoes."

If you want to make liars out of two Government officials, namely, C. W. Wadsworth, director of soldiers' homes for the Veterans' Bureau, and F. C. Runkle, manager or governor of the Dayton home, in their assertion that the above affair was a carefully staged publicity stunt, just write to me or either of the following men: Irwin Rohlf, former assistant prosecuting attorney of Montgomery County, residing at 1818 Ravenwood Avenue, Dayton, Ohio; Frank Humphrey, former municipal judge and prominent local Democratic leader, residing at 817 St. Agnes Avenue, Dayton, Ohio; Russell Schlafman, treasurer of the Montgomery County Veterans' Association, well-known local Democrat, residing at 410 Burns Avenue, Dayton.

Any of these men will be glad to furnish you with their own affidavits and affidavits from other persons who know the facts; that the above-referred affair did take place; that P. M. Long had no alternative but to turn in his clothes; that employees of the quartermaster's department at the home laughed when Long walked out in his underwear; that a stranger picked Long up just inside the home gates and took him to Ruebenstein's store, left him in the machine and went in and bought him a suit of overalls, and then took Long home; that Long is a tuberculosis patient; that he took a Civil Service examination for a Government position at Wright Field, Government aviation field near Dayton, but that they refused him the position because a physical examination showed him to be suffering from tuberculosis.

Either of the above-mentioned men can cite you dozens of equally pitiful cases and back up their assertions with affidavits if you will request them. One of the latest cases to come to their attention is that of a former soldier who received frozen feet while on duty in the Yukon; had part of his feet amputated, crippling him for life, and was discharged from the Army because of his disability as shown by his papers; that he has been receiving $60 a month pension, which is all that he has, and that this has just been cut to $18 a month. Perhaps that does not come under the Roosevelt economy program either, but I am prepared to send you photostatic records and affidavits to substantiate those facts.

Perhaps you will be interested to learn that since April 1, 1933, approximately 2,000 former service men have been sent out of the soldiers' home; that these men were turned loose in hundreds of cases without any funds whatever as charges on our local government and welfare agencies; that it was necessary for the veterans' association to open a temporary shelter in an old building in the heart of the downtown section, and that 55 men are now housed there with 15 of them compelled to sleep on the floor while cots are stored away at the home—cots which they formerly slept on.

It may interest you to know that the veterans association at first attempted to take care of these men by voluntary subscription and funds raised from benefits; that the burden became so heavy that they demanded that county commissioners, under the State law, appropriate immediately the sum of $254,000 for soldiers' relief to be raised by an additional half mill levy on over-burdened real estate; that the county commissioners did provide food and transportation for a number of veterans back to their homes, and finally were compelled to seek aid from the State relief commission, and that these needs are now being met by Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds. In other words a part of the burden of caring for indigent and disabled veterans is being borne by the Government out of Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds instead of the soldiers' home budget and at a greater per capita cost than formerly. Yet it is all a part of the "economy program."

You will find also, Senator, that all of the former soldiers in this city who are fighting for justice and fair play to be given their comrades, are men who do not themselves receive pensions, but who are insisting that those veterans who are in need be taken care of adequately by the Government.

The wide publicity given the Long story and picture has put officials at the soldiers' home on their guard, but at that time there was no alternative for Long but to turn in his clothes, and if you want an affidavit from Long I am certain that you can get it.

A rigid investigation of the manner in which the economy law is being enforced here would not be amiss and would be welcomed by 12,000 local veterans.

Sincerely yours,

LAWRENCE ANDREWS,
Editorial Department, The Dayton Journal.

P.S.—I am enclosing story that appeared on front page of Dayton News today. Suggest that you force Veterans' Bureau to make public correspondence they exchanged with Gov. F. C. Runkle, manager of Dayton home, on Long incident so you will have Runkle's story in black and white.

Even convicts discharged from Federal penitentiaries are given a suit of clothes and some cash.—L. A.

As will be noted, the writer suggests that the correspondence which passed between the Veterans' Bureau here in Washington and the Soldiers' Home in Dayton be made public. I am trying to get copies of that correspondence, and when I do I shall place them in the RECORD.

Mr. President, I understand the same situation exists all over the United States where veterans' hospitals are located, and there are some 54 or 55 of them. What a cruel thing it is! This administration will be known for its infamous so-called "economy act" long, long years after we are all dead and gone.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Certainly.

Mr. LEWIS. May I ask the Senator from Indiana who it is in charge of that home at Dayton representing the National Government?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. F. C. Runkle.

Mr. LEWIS. How long has that official head been in charge of this particular locality and department?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I do not know of my own knowledge, but I understand about 2 years or more.

Mr. LEWIS. He is not a new appointee?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I think not. I think he is getting his orders from Washington, however. He is just administering the law as he is told to administer it under these inhuman regulations that the President and his chief executioner, Mr. Douglas, have promulgated.

Mr. LEWIS. I understand the Senator from Indiana merely deduces his idea that whatever transpired there was a result of orders obtained from Washington, but the Senator has no knowledge of such facts?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I think I will have some correspondence in the next day or so that passed between Washington and Dayton that will settle that question.

THE CALENDAR

The VICE PRESIDENT. Morning business is closed. The calendar is in order. The clerk will state the first business on the calendar.

JOINT RESOLUTION AND BILL PASSED OVER

The joint resolution (S.J.Res. 15) extending to the whaling industry certain benefits granted under section 11 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1920, was announced as first in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that that go over.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will not the Senator agree that the resolution may be considered at some day in the near future?

Mr. KING. I do not want to make any commitment in advance. I think the measure is so important and, to my way of thinking, so improper, not to say obnoxious, that I should not want to consider it under any limitation of debate. If it comes up in the proper way, in a way that does not involve limitation of debate, I shall have to take my chances.

Mr. COPELAND. Will the Senator withhold his objection just a moment?

Mr. KING. I will withhold it for a moment.

Mr. COPELAND. The resolution has to do wholly with the matter of an industry which is not associated with those matters which the Senator thinks are evil, connected with the American merchant marine. It has to do with the whaling industry and it is important at this time that there should be a reorganization of part of the work in order that there may be brought about an increase in the business. However, I shall not press the matter at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. On objection, the joint resolution goes over.

The bill (S. 682) to prohibit financial transactions with any foreign government in default on its obligations to the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. JOHNSON. That may go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

IMPEACHMENT OF HAROLD LOUDERBACK

The VICE PRESIDENT. The hour of 12:30 o'clock having arrived, under the order of the Senate, the Senate is now in session sitting as a Court of Impeachment for the trial of articles of impeachment against Harold Louderback, judge of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California.

The managers on the part of the House of Representatives—Hon. HATTON W. SUMNERS, of Texas; Hon. RANDOLPH PERKINS, of New Jersey; Hon. GORDON BROWNING, of Tennessee; Hon. U. S. GUYER, of Kansas; Hon. J. EARL MAJOR, of Illinois; and Hon. LAWRENCE LEWIS, of Colorado—were announced by the secretary to the majority (Mr. Leslie L. Biffle) and conducted to the seats assigned them.

The respondent, Harold Louderback, appeared with his counsel, Walter H. Linforth, Esq., and James M. Hanley, Esq., and took the seats provided for them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Sergeant at Arms will make proclamation.

The Sergeant at Arms made the usual proclamation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Journal of the proceedings of the last session of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment will be read.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the Journal of the last previous session of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment may be dispensed with and that the Journal may stand approved.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The Chair is informed by the Secretary of the Senate that on April 29, 1933, Representative HATTON W. SUMNERS, chairman of the managers on the part of the House of Representatives heretofore appointed to conduct the impeachment against Harold Louderback, United States district judge for the Northern District of California, filed with him, as said Secretary, under authority of House Resolution No. 108, the following documents:

1. The replication of the House of Representatives to the answer of said Harold Louderback to the articles of impeachment, as amended; and

2. A statement making more specific an allegation contained in article 5 of the articles of impeachment, as amended.

In order that they may be incorporated in the printed proceedings, the Chair lays before the Senate, sitting for the trial of the said impeachment, the said documents, which will also be printed for the use of the Senate.

The documents are as follows:

REPLICATION OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE ANSWER OF HAROLD LOUDERBACK, DISTRICT JUDGE OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, TO THE ARTICLES OF IMPEACHMENT, AS AMENDED, EXHIBITED AGAINST HIM BY THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The House of Representatives of the United States of America, having considered the several answers of Harold Louderback, district judge of the United States for the Northern District of California, to the several articles of impeachment, as amended, against him by them exhibited in the name of themselves and of all the people of the United States, and reserving to themselves all advantages of exception to the insufficiency, irrelevancy, and impertinency of his answer to each and all of the several articles of impeachment, as amended, so exhibited against the said Harold Louderback, judge as aforesaid, do say:

(1) That the said articles, as amended, do severally set forth impeachable offenses, misbehaviors, and misdemeanors as defined in the Constitution of the United States, and that the same are proper to be answered unto by the said Harold Louderback, judge as aforesaid, and sufficient to be entertained and adjudicated by the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment.

(2) That the said House of Representatives of the United States of America do deny each and every averment in said several answers, or either of them, which denies or traverses the acts, intents, misbehaviors, or misdemeanors charged against the said Harold Louderback in said articles of impeachment, as amended, or either of them, and for replication to said answers do say that Harold Louderback, district judge of the United States for the Northern District of California, is guilty of the impeachable offenses, misbehaviors, and misdemeanors charged in said articles, as amended, and that the House of Representatives are ready to prove the same.

HATTON W. SUMNERS,
On Behalf of the Managers.

IN THE MATTER OF THE IMPEACHMENT AGAINST HAROLD LOUDERBACK, DISTRICT JUDGE OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES MAKING MORE SPECIFIC AN ALLEGATION CONTAINED IN ARTICLE 5, ARTICLES OF IMPEACHMENT, AS AMENDED

Whereas on April 17, 1933, the managers on the part of the House of Representatives, in the impeachment against Harold Louderback, filed an amendment to article 5 of the Articles of Impeachment, which contains the following language:

"It also became a matter of newspaper comment in connection with that receivership matter and others that theretofore, about 1925 or 1926, the said Gilbert had been appointed by the said Harold Louderback when the said Harold Louderback was a judge of the Superior Court of California, an appraiser of certain real estate, the said Harold Louderback well knowing at the time of such appointment that the said Gilbert was without any qualification to appraise the value of such real estate, and in truth the said Gilbert never saw said real estate, and that the said Gilbert did not undertake to assist in the appraisal of said real estate, only signing the report which was presented to him, for which services he was allowed the sum of $500."

And whereas said language and allegation was objected to by counsel for Harold Louderback by a motion to strike out said language on the ground that the said Harold Louderback was not advised of "the time or times (of) said acts were committed by respondent", or "in what action or actions, proceeding or proceedings such alleged acts occurred" whereupon the managers agreed with counsel for the said Harold Louderback that they would endeavor to give to said counsel more exact information with regard to said transaction, and failing to do so by the 5th of May the said allegations would be withdrawn and no evidence offerred in their support, counsel for the said Harold Louderback agreeing that they would exert themselves to try to ascertain the facts with regard to the transaction referred to and advise the Managers.

Since such agreement and understanding the managers have ascertained more definite information with reference to this transaction, and now allege the facts to be that on or about April 5, 1927, in the matter of the estate of Howard Brickell, no. 46618, pending in probate that said Harold Louderback appointed the said Guy H. Gilbert an appraiser of property of said estate and also appointed with him as appraiser of said property Sam Leake, referred to in said article 5 of the Articles of Impeachment as amended; that on or about December 21, 1927, the said Harold Louderback made an order awarding to the said Guy H. Gilbert and to the said Sam Leake the sum of $500 each for their services; which information has been furnished to the said counsel for Harold Louderback.

HATTON W. SUMNERS, Chairman,
On Behalf of the Managers.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I offer the resolution which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah offers a resolution, which will be read.

The resolution was read, considered by the Senate, and agreed to, as follows:

Ordered, That the opening statement on behalf of the managers shall be made by one person, to be immediately followed by one person who shall make the opening statement on behalf of the respondent.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I would not resort to such an unseemly thing as even to intimate that either statement should be attenuated beyond what is absolutely necessary; but it might be well for the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment to be advised as to how long the honorable managers on the part of the House desire to take for their statement, and how long the attorneys for the respondent will require. I am sure there is no disposition on the part of the Senate to limit the time. The rule permits an hour on each side.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Do the managers on the part of the House desire to make a statement as to the length of time they desire to address the Senate?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, the managers on the part of the House cannot anticipate the exact length of time required to make the opening statement, but we do not believe we will require an hour. We think we can finish in less time than an hour.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Do counsel for the respondent desire to make any statement about the probable length of time they will desire?

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. President, I will say to the Chair and to the Senators that I think we will consume about an hour.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, the managers on the part of the House would like the privilege of having the clerk of the Committee on the Judiciary in attendance to assist the managers with regard to the documents they shall use.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I apologize to the Senate sitting as a court and to the managers on the part of the House and to the attorneys for the respondent, but I trust I shall not be required to ask the managers or the attorneys to elevate their voices. Audition is extremely important. In the Senate Chamber, to be heard at all, one must lift his voice almost to an oratorical pitch. If the honorable managers and the honorable attorneys and the witnesses desire any audition—and that is what we seek—I beg of them to speak so that they may be heard.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, we will endeavor to conform to the suggestion made by the Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate, and we appreciate the suggestion made.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the managers on the part of the House to have the clerk of the Judiciary Committee sit with the managers? The Chair hears none, and permission is granted.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, we desire to submit a further request, namely, that Mr. Bianchi, a member of the bar of San Francisco, who has been requested by the managers to assist them in the development of the facts of this case, and who is here, be permitted to sit with the managers.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. HANLEY. We will ask the chairman of the managers whether or not Mr. Bianchi is to be a witness. If he is, we should say that he should not be present.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, it is not anticipated that Mr. Bianchi will be a witness; but the managers do not propose to foreclose their opportunity and privilege of putting him on the stand if they should deem it necessary.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair suggest—

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, a point of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Mexico will state it.

Mr. BRATTON. Under the rules of the Senate, the point is to be decided by the Chair without debate and without comment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order is sustained.

Let the Chair suggest to the managers on the part of the House and to counsel for the respondent that it has been suggested to the Chair, in view of the statement made by the Senator from Arizona as to the difficulty in hearing in the Chamber, that the gentlemen occupy a place on each side of the Chair in making their statements to the Senate. That is a mere suggestion to the managers and to counsel. They can occupy whatever station they see fit; but if they desire a place here, it will be made for them.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Will the President indicate at what point it is desirable that the spokesman for the managers shall now stand?

The VICE PRESIDENT. At a point here [indicating] on the rostrum, where the speaker can be seen better than when sitting in the well.

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. President, the Chair has not yet ruled upon the question as to whether or not Mr. Bianchi, if he is to be a witness, should sit in the Chamber and assist the managers.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will submit the question to the Senate: Shall the gentleman suggested by the managers of the House be permitted to sit in the Chamber and confer with the managers? [Putting the question.] The ayes have it, and permission is granted.

The managers on the part of the House are recognized to make a statement of their case.

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. President, before the manager makes his statement we have an affidavit to submit. We should like that opportunity at this time, and also to file an answer to the portion of article V that has been amended since the last session of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment. Mr. Linforth has the answer, and we will ask that the clerk read it. It is very short.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the answer. The Chief Clerk read as follows:

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
SITTING AS A COURT OF IMPEACHMENT.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA V. HAROLD LOUDERBACK, UPON ARTICLES OF IMPEACHMENT PRESENTED BY THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Answer of respondent to article V as last amended

Respondent admits that on or about the 5th day of April 1927, while acting as judge of the Superior Court of the State of California in and for the city and county of San Francisco, in the matter of the estate of Howard Brickell, deceased, he made an order appointing Guy H. Gilbert, W. S. Leake, and R. F. Mogan appraisers; that in said matter Crocker First Federal Trust Co., of San Francisco, was special administrator of said estate; that in the first and final account of said trust company was included the sum of $500 each paid to said Gilbert and said Leake as appraisers' fees therein; that upon the hearing of the settlement of said account, an officer of said trust company testified that said account was in all respects true and correct; that the inventory on file in said estate showed its appraised value to be $1,020,804.38; that thereupon respondent, as judge of said superior court, made an order settling and allowing said account. Other than as hereinabove specifically set forth, respondent denies that he made any order awarding said Gilbert and said Leake, or either of them, $500 for their said services as such appraiser.

HAROLD LOUDERBACK,
Respondent.
WALTER H. LINFORTH,
JAMES M. HANLEY,
Attorneys for Respondent.

Mr. HANLEY. At this time, Mr. President and Members of the Senate, we will ask whether or not the witness, W. S. Leake, has been subpoenaed and is here.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Sergeant at Arms will give the information as to whether he is here.

The SERGEANT AT ARMS. W. S. Leake has been subpoenaed by both sides; but, so far as I understand, is not present.

Mr. HANLEY. We understood, Mr. President, that he may not be here. If he is not here, in order not to delay the Senate in the trial, but for the purpose of having permission to take his deposition in California before the end of these proceedings, we ask that the clerk read the affidavit which we submit upon an application for a commission to issue.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the affidavit will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
SITTING AS A COURT OF IMPEACHMENT.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA V. HAROLD LOUDERBACK, RESPONDENT
CITY OF WASHINGTON,
District of Columbia, ss:

Harold Louderback, being duly sworn, deposes and says: I am the respondent in the above-entitled matter. On September 6 and 7, 1932, the special committee of the House of Representatives, Seventy-second Congress, pursuant to House Resolution 239, at San Francisco, examined as a witness one W. S. Leake. At the conclusion of his examination by Mr. LaGuardia on September 7, 1932, the following occurred:

"Mr. LaGuardia. Mr. Chairman, I want to reserve the right to recall this witness at a later day.

"Mr. SUMNERS. Very well.

"Mr. HANLEY. We won't ask any questions at this time. We will wait until he is recalled.

"The WITNESS. Will I have time to go back and see about some matters?

"Mr. SUMNERS. Yes; you are excused, Mr. Leake.

"The WITNESS. If you phone me, I can get over here very quickly.

"Mr. SUMNERS. Yes; we will telephone you.

"The WITNESS. I thank you."

The witness, W. S. Leake, was never recalled, his direct examination evidently not concluded, and the witness was not cross-examined.

Subsequently, on February 24, 1933, the Congress of the United States of America, in the House of Representatives, resolved that affiant be impeached for misdemeanors in office, and in the first article of impeachment it is alleged that affiant entered into a certain arrangement and conspiracy with the said W. S. Leake for the objects and purposes set forth in said first article. Affiant never entered into any such arrangement or any such conspiracy or, in fact, any conspiracy with the said W. S. Leake, and the said W. S. Leake will testify that no such arrangement as alleged in said article I, and no such alleged conspiracy as there referred to, was ever entered into between himself and affiant. That the said W. S. Leake is a material and necessary witness for affiant upon the trial of this matter, without the benefit of which testimony affiant cannot safely proceed to trial.

That on the 29th day of April 1933, and for several days thereafter, two of the managers selected and appointed by the honorable House of Representatives were in San Francisco, Calif., namely, the Honorable RANDOLPH PERKINS and the Honorable GORDON BROWNING. That the said W. S. Leake resides, and for many years past has resided, in the Fairmont Hotel in said city of San Francisco, and was on said 29th day of April 1933 confined to his bed by illness, and upon and according to the information and belief of affiant, had been so confined to his bed for some time prior thereto, and was so confined to his bed on Tuesday last when affiant left San Francisco for Washington. That upon and according to the information and belief of affiant the physical condition of the said W. S. Leake is such as to prevent his appearance in person in Washington before this honorable Senate.

That on April 29, 1933, counsel for respondent called to the attention of said managers the condition of the said W. S. Leake and requested their consent to the taking of the deposition of the said W. S. Leake to be used upon the trial of this matter, or, their consent to the reading before this honorable Senate of the testimony so given by the said W. S. Leake on the hearing already referred to, and the supplementing of that testimony by deposition, counsel for respondent informing said managers at said time that they desired to examine the said W. S. Leake, in particular as to these alleged charges of conspiracy so set out in the first article of impeachment and so filed months after the taking of the testimony of the said Leake as hereinbefore set forth. The said managers advised my said counsel they desired to interview Mr. Leake and would on the Monday following advise my counsel as to their conclusion in the matter. My counsel thereupon made arrangements for said managers to interview said W. S. Leake, and according to my information and belief both said managers did interview Mr. Leake on the afternoon of the 29th of April 1933.

At said time and place my counsel also advised the said managers of their desire to supplement by deposition the testimony of one W. L. Hathaway, who was a witness at said hearing at San Francisco in September 1932, and also their desire to take the deposition of the wife of the said W. L. Hathaway, telling them of the testimony expected to be elicited from each of said witnesses, the same relating to the charge contained in said article I to the effect that the said W. S. Leake "did receive certain fees, gratuities, and loans directly or indirectly from one Douglas Short amounting approximately to $1,200" and advising them that it was expected to be proven by said witnesses and each of them that the loan referred to in article I had no relation whatever to the said Douglas Short—did not come from any fees received by the said Douglas Short as attorney for any receiver or otherwise, but was a personal loan made by the said W. L. Hathaway and his wife to the said W. S. Leake, and arranged for by a borrowing upon a life-insurance policy on the life of the said W. L. Hathaway.

My said counsel at said time informed said managers that the said W. L. Hathaway was critically ill and unable to appear in person before this honorable Senate and testify on behalf of respondent, and that, due to his then condition, his said wife would not leave him and appear in person upon the trial of this matter.

On the said hearing so had in September 1932, in San Francisco, the said wife of the said W. L. Hathaway did not appear and was not examined as a witness. Said managers requested an opportunity of personally interviewing the said W. L. Hathaway and his said wife, and, as the result of arrangements made by my said attorneys, one of said managers—namely, Hon. Randolph Perkins—did, on the 30th day of April 1933, interview both Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway. On Monday, May 1, 1933, at about 5 p.m., Mr. Browning, on behalf of said managers, notified my counsel the managers would not consent to the taking of the depositions of any of said witnesses and would not consent to the testimony of either Mr. Leake or Mr. Hathaway being supplemented by deposition.

Subsequently and on the 2d and 3d of May 1933 said managers did enter into a stipulation with my counsel to the effect that the testimony so given by the said W. L. Hathaway at said hearing had in San Francisco in September 1932 might be read upon the trial of this matter and did enter into a stipulation to the effect that, if present, his said wife would testify in accordance with the statement attached to said stipulation, and that if the said W. S. Leake did not appear before this honorable Senate upon the trial of this proceeding, the testimony given by him at said hearing in San Francisco might be read, but beyond this said managers refused to go and refused to stipulate.

Said W. S. Leake, at the time of the giving of the testimony aforesaid, was not asked and did not testify in regard to the $1,200 transaction referred to in article I, and was not asked and did not testify on the subject of the alleged conspiracy in said article I set forth.

Affiant desires the testimony of the said W. S. Leake on these and other subjects. Affiant does not desire to delay the trial of this proceeding. The testimony of the said W. S. Leake can readily be taken and returned for use upon this proceeding before the close of this trial, and if the said deposition is taken on Saturday next, said deposition can be completed and returned to this honorable Senate for use upon this trial within 48 hours thereafter.

Wherefore affiant respectfully requests that a commission forthwith issue, directed to Ernest E. Williams, United States commissioner at San Francisco, Calif., authorizing him to take on Saturday, the 20th day of May 1933 the deposition of the said W. S. Leake upon oral interrogatories to be then and there propounded to him by respective counsel, and thereafter return said deposition to this honorable body by air mail; said deposition to be taken either at his office or at the residence of the said witness in the event of his inability to attend in person at his office.

HAROLD LOUDERBACK.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 15th day of May 1933.

[SEAL]

CHARLES F. PACE,

Notary Public.

My commission expires February 12, 1936.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, in reply to the application to take the deposition of W. S. Leake, the managers on the part of the House desire to say that they are extremely anxious to have W. S. Leake here. W. S. Leake was a very intimate associate of the respondent in this case. He was available to the respondent. I observe from the statement made that he was to be called. There was nothing to prevent the respondent from calling W. S. Leake and eliciting any information possessed by him which the respondent then regarded as desirable.

I desire to direct attention of the Senate to the fact that when the managers on the part of the House were recently in San Francisco there was this stipulation with regard to the testimony of W. S. Leake:

It is further stipulated that the testimony of W. S. Leake taken at a hearing above referred to—

That is, the hearing to which counsel for the respondent refers—may be read upon said trial by either party hereto with the same force and effect as if the said witness were present and testified in person. This stipulation, however, insofar as W. S. Leake is concerned, is without waiver by either party hereto to insist upon the attendance of said Leake before the court above referred to, and shall become operative only in the event of the nonappearance of the said Leake at Washington before the said Court of Impeachment.

The observation of the managers on the part of the House is that counsel's complaint with reference to the incomplete examination of W. S. Leake is without point because W. S. Leake was available to counsel on the part of the respondent at the time when counsel complains that the testimony of W. S. Leake was not fully developed.

Second, when the managers on the part of the House were recently in San Francisco, the respondent, through his counsel, stipulated with the managers on the part of the House that, in the event of the nonappearance of W. S. Leake, the testimony of W. S. Leake when he was examined in San Francisco could be offered by either party, the respondent or the managers.

We are very anxious to have the attendance of W. S. Leake. At this time the managers are not prepared to deviate from the stipulation entered into by counsel for the respondent and the representatives of the managers.

The VICE PRESIDENT. What is the pleasure of the court with reference to the request of respondent?

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. President, we should like to be heard.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, a point of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state his point of order.

Mr. ASHURST. All such matters ought to be decided by the Chair without debate at this juncture. It is not appropriate at this time to take the time of the Senate in the discussion of a matter like this. Let the affidavit be presented and be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. As the Chair understands it, the question before the court, or before the Chair, according to the construction of the Senator from Arizona, is whether or not grant will be given by the court to take the deposition of W. S. Leake.

Mr. ASHURST. That is to be decided by the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That, it seems to the Chair, is a matter which should be determined by the court itself.

Mr. ASHURST. Very well. The Chair has a right to submit it to the court.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It seems to the Chair that it is not a question for the Chair to determine. Therefore the Chair has recognized these gentlemen to make statements prior to the vote of the court.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, may I make a suggestion to the Chair and to the court? It is that this particular matter be held in abeyance until tomorrow for determination.

Mr. HANLEY. We have no objection to that.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

OPENING STATEMENT ON BEHALF OF THE MANAGERS ON THE PART OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President and members of the court, on account of the peculiar powers possessed by the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment, it is a little difficult to determine what ought to be the scope of the opening statement by the managers.

If I may be permitted a very brief introductory statement, an examination of the place, the function, and the philosophy of the impeachment power lodged in the Senate of the United States discloses that when the Senate sits as a Court of Impeachment, it possesses all the powers of a civil court trying an ouster suit. In addition to that, with regard to a member of the judiciary, holding an office secure from the direct power of the people to remove, the Senate possesses all the power which a free people possess to rid themselves of a public official who disregards individual rights, and whose conduct in office is calculated to bring disrespect and hurt to public institutions. I shall be very brief on this point.

Mr. President, there is, perhaps, no more interesting power possessed by government than the power of impeachment possessed by the Senate. It is rather an anomalous thing that a judge in a free country should be commissioned to hold office and exercise power over a free people secure from their power and opportunity to procure his removal. So the power of removal in such cases has been lodged in the Senate, and the Senate possesses all the power which free men have under our system of government to protect themselves and their institutions with regard to members of the Federal judiciary.

When we came to frame our Constitution we recognized a fact which had developed in England, from which country we inherited our institutions. Prior to the adoption of our Constitution the exercise of the power of impeachment had become practically obsolete in England. The impeachment of Warren Hastings was contemporaneous with the adoption of our Constitution, and the case of Lord Melvin in 1804 was the last one in which an impeachment was had in England.

In the beginning of the operation of our Constitution it was considered that an impeachment was a criminal action, notwithstanding the fact that our Constitution withdraws from the Senate all power to impeach. But in the process of time, because of the rather infrequent examination of the power, it has now come to be universally recognized, I believe, by all students of our Constitution that impeachment under the American Constitution is not a criminal action but, insofar as its distinctive features are concerned, it is an ouster suit, because the Senate has no power to punish. In addition to the power to oust, as I have indicated, and associated with that power to oust, is the delegated power of a free people to rid themselves of a public official whose conduct violates the principles of government under which a free people live.

Mr. President, this is the first time in 22 years that managers on the part of the House have appeared at the bar of the Senate offering to introduce testimony to substantiate impeachment charges. The House of Representatives, and particularly the Committee on the Judiciary, have a more frequent contact with this question. In this particular case the House of Representatives, in the first instance its Committee on the Judiciary, was moved to consider this matter by a letter received from the Bar Association of the city of San Francisco. With the permission of the Chair and as a matter explanatory and in line with the practice in the Archbald case, the last impeachment case considered by the Senate, I desire to have read this letter and to ask permission that my colleague [Mr. BROWNING] may read it for me.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. Manager BROWNING read the letter, as follows:

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., May 24, 1932.

JUDICIARY COMMITTEE,

House of Representatives, Washington, D.C.

SIRS: Under date of May 2, 1932, the Bar Association of San Francisco addressed a communication to His Excellency Herbert Hoover, President of the United States, with reference to certain matters published in the press of San Francisco concerning Hon. Harold C. Louderback, judge of the United States District Court at San Francisco, Calif., accompanying said communication with clippings from San Francisco newspapers.

Under date of May 9, 1932, we received an acknowledgment of said communication from Mr. Lawrence Richey, Secretary to the President, stating that the matter "is being referred for the consideration of the Attorney General", and thereafter we received a letter dated May 12, 1932, from Mr. Charles P. Sisson, Assistant Attorney General, stating in effect that our letter addressed to the President had been referred to the Department of Justice for consideration, and further stating "that the Department of Justice has no jurisdiction whatsoever over United States judges. Criticisms of Federal judges are ordinarily addressed to the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives."

Pursuant to the suggestion contained in the letter from the Assistant Attorney General, we are hereby addressing your honorable committee and forwarding copies of the above-mentioned correspondence, together with duplicate press clippings, for such action as your committee may deem proper.

We feel certain that you will readily realize that the interest of the Bar Association of San Francisco in this matter is solely a public one and that it is concerned only in preserving the integrity of the bench, public confidence in, and respect for, the courts and the due administration of justice. We believe that no department of the Government should occupy a higher position in the public mind, or perform a more important function, than that of the courts, and that it is of the utmost importance that they shall be maintained on a plane of the strictest honesty and efficiency and shall be above suspicion. Charges against a court or judge, especially when publicly made, require thorough investigation, not only in the interest of the public and respect for our judicial system but also in the interest of the incumbent.

If your committee should undertake an investigation of the matters in question, our association will cheerfully render such assistance as is within its powers, in the hope that whatever the outcome may be the result will contribute to the maintenance of public confidence in our courts.

Respectfully submitted.

BAR ASSOCIATION OF SAN FRANCISCO,
By RANDOLPH V. WHITING, President.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, in order to save time, we will not introduce the commission of the respondent and certain other documents which seem to have been usually introduced in the course of impeachment trials, but shall take it for granted that it will be understood that the respondent is a Federal judge of the northern district of California. Further, we shall not make specific reference to the preliminary action on the part of the House of Representatives, assuming that it will be understood that by due course and in the ordinary order this matter has gone through the preliminary processes and has now reached the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment.

It is a regrettable thing, of course, whenever it shall be deemed necessary to take the judgment of the Senate of the United States as to whether or not a judge or any other public official has forfeited his right to hold office in this country, but there is a duty that rests, first, upon the House, and now upon the Senate.

I shall be as brief as possible, and will introduce the conduct of this judge, the respondent, by a brief recitation of the facts which the managers on the part of the House will undertake to establish by competent testimony.

First, I desire to direct the attention of the court to the facts in what is known as the "Russell-Colvin Co. case." The Russell-Colvin Co. was a stock and bond brokerage concern, a member of the San Francisco Stock Exchange. Following the crash in the fall of 1929, this company became involved in serious financial difficulty. The stock exchange for some months had been in close contact with this concern, having constantly in the office of that organization its auditors, and receiving reports from an auditor by the name of Strong. It became evident after a while that it would be impossible for this concern to continue in business, and an equity receivership was suggested by the circumstances and conditions in which it found itself. That is the conclusion that was arrived at by frequent consultations between representatives of the concern and the stock exchange.

A proceeding brought in equity was determined, in the first instance, by those who had initiated this matter, the stock exchange and the copartnership. It was determined that the best man to be receiver was Strong, who was familiar with the affairs of the business. Representatives of the plaintiff in that case, representatives of the stock exchange, representatives of the copartnership, attended upon the respondent, asking the appointment of Strong to be the receiver, stating the facts with reference to his peculiar qualifications quickly to begin work because of his familiarity growing out of his contact with the business, the stock exchange having an interest in the matter which readily can be appreciated, and having only the interest of conserving the assets of that concern in order that its creditors might receive the largest possible amount. The respondents agreed to appoint Strong as receiver.

I shall not go into details, but directly after the appointment a controversy arose between Strong, the appointed receiver, and the respondent with reference to who should represent the receiver as attorney in this matter. The receiver insisted, under the circumstances, that he wanted an expert with regard to stock-and-bond matters and preferred to have for his attorney the firm which was the attorney, and had been for a long time the attorney, of the San Francisco Stock Exchange. The respondent insisted upon the selection of an attorney by the name of Short.

Short was then an employee in a law office at the rate of $200 per month, with certain divisions with reference to fees that he originated. The controversy terminated in the discharge of Strong and in the appointment of a man by the name of Hunter, who on the evening after his appointment selected Short as his attorney.

Unfortunately, with reference to the transactions centering in this development of the matter, there comes a clear issue of veracity as between the respondent and gentlemen of high standing in that community.

From the judge's chambers, insofar as this transaction is concerned, the scene shifts to the Fairmont Hotel. In that hotel there was resident the father-in-law of Short. Hunter lived there, also; and Mr. Leake, who has been referred to this afternoon, also lived there. Mr. Hathaway was registered at the hotel. Mr. Strong was registered at the hotel. Mr. Leake had two rooms with regard to which he was registered, and in one of those rooms lived the respondent, not registered. In a room registered in the name of Sam Leake lived the respondent, judge of the Federal Court of the Northern District of California.

A statement as to how Hunter came to be selected is about to this effect: On the evening of the day when Strong's discharge was determined the respondent, sitting in the lobby of the Fairmont Hotel with Mr. Leake, discussed with him the situation in which he found himself, namely, that it would be necessary, in his judgment, to discharge Strong, and he asked Mr. Leake to indicate to him a good man to take the job. Mr. Leake said he would have to think it over, and just at the psychological moment Hunter appeared walking through the corridor, and Mr. Leake said, "That is your man." Commissioned by the judge, he interviewed Mr. Hunter, and Mr. Hunter asked the privilege of consulting his employer. The next day Mr. Hunter indicated that he would take the job, and that night Mr. Short was engaged by Mr. Hunter.

The explanation which the respondent makes of the peculiar conditions under which he was living at the Fairmont Hotel was that he anticipated or rather there was possible a lawsuit against him, a civil action, and that he did not want to register at the hotel, because registering at the hotel was indicative of residence, and that if the suit was brought against him he wanted to be able to shift it to Contra Costa County, Calif. In order to strengthen the claim of residence in Contra Costa County, the respondent had registered there and voted there. It is charged by the managers and we propose to prove that the respondent registered as a voter and voted but refused to disclose the truth as to his place of residence by registering his name as people ordinarily do who have not anything to hide, in order that he might, in furtherance of the conspiracy—I do not like to use the term—commit a fraud against the rights of the contemplated plaintiff to have the case tried in the place where as a matter of fact the judge resided.

In this hotel resides Mr. Hathaway, the father-in-law of Mr. Short, the attorney whom the respondent was deeply concerned to have appointed.

Mr. Leake, according to his testimony, has no business. He keeps no bank account. He does claim to have this business—he is a mental healer. He teaches people how to think right and does not charge them for his services, but they make contributions to him. His office costs him $72 a month and his hotel—and, by the way, it is one of the more expensive hotels in San Francisco—costs him $200 per month. He is a widower. We shall establish the fact that Mr. Hathaway, the father-in-law of Short and beneficiary of the judge's interest, loaned to Mr. Leake $1,000 which he admits he had little hope of being able to collect, and later gave him $250.

Sam Leake, it is charged, is the cover-up man of the respondent, living those 2 years or more in a room registered in the name of the respondent. In order to be just about the matter, and we hope we will be just, the evidence will show that while Mr. Leake paid for the room at the hotel in which the respondent lived, the respondent reimbursed him. It is the contention of the managers that in these transactions we begin to see the picture of the respondent as the respondent appears to the people of the northern district of California where he exercises jurisdiction.

The respondent's claim for wanting to be rid of Strong because Strong would not select the attorney whom he wanted was that he wanted somebody, either the attorney or the receiver, known to him to be an honest man whom he could trust and whom he knew. It is the contention of the managers that that is the front, and that behind it lay the facts which we propose to develop. It is our contention that those facts will develop as we examine the other cases to which I now desire to make reference, and I shall be brief about it.

We had raised the question that the fees in that case and the fees in the other cases to which we shall make reference were entirely out of proportion to what people of the ability of the receiver and the attorneys were drawing and were out of proportion to the services they rendered. Mr. Short, who was drawing a salary of $200 per month and whatever division of fees he could get for a little over a year, was allowed a fee of $51,000, and the receiver was allowed a fee of $45,000. It is the contention of the managers that, extravagant and unreasonable as are those fees, they do not constitute the gravamen of the respondent's offense with regard to these transactions.

Mr. Leake had another very intimate friend, Mr. Gilbert. The first appointment of Mr. Gilbert by the respondent was in the Stempel-Cooley case. I shall not take the time of the court to discuss that case because there is not anything very significant about it except that in that case Mr. Gilbert employed as his counsel the same Short referred to in the other transaction.

We now move to the Sonora Phonograph Co. case and take the liberty of suggesting to the court that the transactions of the respondent with regard to the Sonora Phonograph Co. case bear directly upon the claim of the respondent with reference to his desire to have competent receivers, attorneys, and so forth. The Sonora Phonograph Co. was a large distributor of phonographs and radios, one of the major businesses of that community. Without going into detail, financial difficulties brought it to the court of the respondent. The respondent selected for the receiver in that case a man whose whole training had been connected with the mechanical operations of a telegraph company, Mr. Gilbert. For thirty-odd years he had been an employee of the telegraph company, and there is no evidence indicating any familiarity on the part of this referee with business transactions. In this case the respondent designated as attorneys the firm of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel, who showed up with three accounts which had been forwarded to them from New York, a typical case of bankruptcy ambulance chasing, as we contend. In this case they were allowed a fee of $20,000, which fee we shall undertake to establish was not a justified fee to be allowed.

The Prudential Holding Co. were large real-estate operators in that community, with alleged assets of $1,500,000, engaged in large and varied real-estate transactions; chiefly, however, in the operation and probably the construction of apartment houses. The respondent selected to represent him and the interests of the creditors in that case this telegraph operator, Mr. Gilbert. I do not mean to reflect upon Mr. Gilbert by that observation. He probably was a very fine telegraph operator, a good man to have been selected if the question had been with reference to operating telegraph instruments. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel were also the attorneys appointed in that case.

There was a very remarkable transaction in connection with that case. The petition for the receiver was filed, sworn to by an attorney upon information and belief, and granted without a hearing. Immediately the concern itself came into court, seeking to have the action set aside. The respondent held that matter in abeyance until a petition in bankruptcy was filed in Judge St. Sure's division. There were three judges in that court. When Judge St. Sure was absent the respondent went across in Judge St. Sure's division, and, upon the application in bankruptcy, agreed to the writ, and appointed this same Gilbert and Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel receiver and attorneys, respectively, in that case. Then, later, he dismissed the application for the equity receivership on the ground that it ought not to have been issued, and granted the application in bankruptcy upon the sole ground that this action with reference to the equity receivership in his court had been granted. Judge St. Sure came back to his bench and dismissed the whole thing.

I am going to take up the time of the court to refer to only one additional case specifically. That is the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association case.

The Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association was an insurance company engaged in writing workmen's compensation insurance. Perhaps I do not state it correctly; but they were insuring companies against the hazards to their workmen. It was a Texas concern. It became known in California that the home office of the Texas concern was in difficulties; and immediately the insurance commissioner of the State of California busied himself to try to hold in California, for the benefit of the citizens of California insured and having claims, about $80,000 required by the law of California to be deposited in that State, the plan being not only to hold this money but to permit the administration of the affairs of this concern in California by the insurance commissioner of California in order to save the ordinary expense of equity administration for the benefit of the citizens of California who were being protected by that fund. We will show that the respondent not only refused to cooperate with the officials of California seeking to bring about that arrangement, but—I will make a general statement—that he did in substance whatever a Federal judge could do in the contest between the insurance commissioner and Mr. Samuel Shortridge, Jr., his receiver, to prevent those funds going back to the insurance commissioner of California.

Without going into the details of the procedure had, the action of the respondent was appealed from. It went to the circuit court of appeals of that circuit, and the respondent was reversed and the funds ordered into the custody of the insurance commissioner of California. When that mandate came back—and I will venture the statement that there is not to be found in the judicial history of this country a thing like it—when that mandate came back from the circuit court of appeals, commanding that these funds be turned over to the insurance commissioner, the respondent attached a condition to the mandate of the circuit court of appeals that the funds should not be turned back unless there should be effected an agreement that his determination, his assignment of fees to Shortridge and the attorney, would not be appealed from.

There are a good many things about that case which we will undertake to develop.

I beg the pardon of the court for having overlooked the Fageol Motor Co. case.

The Fageol Motor Co. was one of the very largest concerns in that part of the country. It was engaged primarily in assembling automobiles, and was engaged to a degree in making at least the bodies of automobiles. It got into difficulty also. Now, here is the picture:

Everybody interested came into conference with regard to what ought to be done in that situation; and after conference they decided that a man by the name of Tuller, who had been prominently connected with an automobile activity, a man with large experience in business and all sorts of financial and business contacts, should be the man who would be intrusted with taking the affairs of that business, administering them intelligently and wisely and economically, and giving back to the creditors the very greatest amount that could be salvaged from the concern.

Following that agreement the papers were prepared and the counsel for all the parties in interest presented themselves at the chambers of the respondent. That was shortly before the noon hour of adjournment. They were advised by the secretary of the respondent that the respondent would not adjourn court at the usual hour; that he would be delayed. They left the papers. They went back at 1:30. They were told by the secretary for the respondent that the respondent had gotten through earlier than he expected and was gone. They returned at 2:30 to see the respondent, the judge of that people, and were told that he had already appointed Gilbert, this telegraph operator, instead of this automobile man, the choice of a free people.

An arrangement was finally effected, under a threat of going into bankruptcy, that if Gilbert and Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel—I did not mention that, the same Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel—would step into the background and let the people in interest run the thing, they would not go into bankruptcy; and Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel apparently faded into the background. They were satisfied with only $6,000. My impression is that this was a concern with assets that ran into some millions; and Gilbert, I believe, took the statutory fee.

Just one word in conclusion, gentlemen:

We propose to show to the court the picture of this respondent as it is developed by the facts in this case, to show that the reasonable and probable consequence of proven facts has been to destroy the confidence of the people of the northern district of California in the judicial integrity and fairness of this defendant, and make it, therefore, necessary, unpleasant as may be the duty of the Senate of the United States, to exercise its extraordinary power, the only power that this people have.

OPENING STATEMENT ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENT

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. President and Members of the Senate, you have just heard Mr. Manager SUMNERS make his opening statement. In the interest of accuracy I have put down, practically in form of writing, the whole situation as it will be developed to the Senate. I will try to follow that line of thought to show you that Judge Louderback should not be tried upon insinuation, not upon surmise, not upon suspicion, and not upon thoughts of any of the managers, but upon sworn testimony. In that respect let me address myself to you as to what we expect to show in this case.

You judges and jurors of the fate of Harold Louderback are about to try the articles of impeachment which you just heard repeated in the opening statement of Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We deem it proper at this time, without waiting to hear a single bit of testimony that will be adduced by the managers in support of their five charges, expressed in the impeachment articles, to make our statement now, at this time, of what we expect to show to each and all of you Senators of the United States sitting as judges and jurors in this case, to prove that there is not one syllable, there is not one thing in any of those articles, for which Judge Louderback should be found guilty.

Who is the man you are about to try? Judge Louderback is a man about 52 years of age. His father was Judge Davis Louderback, of San Francisco. His mother was born in San Francisco, where Judge Louderback was born. We are proud of our pioneers of California. Judge Louderback is the son of a mother pioneer, and his father was an old pioneer judge of the city of San Francisco and the State of California.

Judge Louderback's brother is George D. Louderback, professor of geology of the University of the State of California, and the dean of that university in the college of science and letters.

Judge Louderback in his youth was quite delicate. He was sent by his parents to Nevada, and while in Nevada he graduated from the University of the State of Nevada. He afterwards took his law course at Harvard University, and graduated therefrom. He then was admitted to the bar of the State of Massachusetts. He was then admitted to the bar of the State of California. He was a practicing attorney for a number of years, and was associated with men of the standing of the late William C. Van Fleet, a district judge; the late John S. Partridge, a former district judge of the northern district of California; Mr. Mastick, and others—eminent lawyers, eminent men of our community.

During the World War this same respondent went to the first officers' training camp, graduated therefrom and became a captain of artillery, and, at the end of the war, came back and resumed the practice of the law in San Francisco, with few clients, as was the case with most of those returning from the war.

Judge Louderback was elected a judge of the superior court of San Francisco for a term of 6 years. I am speaking of the man you are trying. Thereafter he was reelected to that office for another term of 6 years by the highest vote given any judge that year in the city and county of San Francisco. There are 16 judges of our superior court. Judge Louderback was elected the presiding judge thereof, and he remained the presiding judge for the term of 1 year. Thereafter he was nominated, selected, and appointed one of the three United States district judges for the northern district of California.

He was vouched for by the late Chief Justice Taft. He was vouched for by Judge Gilbert, the presiding and eminent judge of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. He was vouched for by the chief justice of the Supreme Court of the State of California, the present chief justice, William Waste. This is the man whom you are about to be asked to find guilty of the charges in the articles of impeachment.

You heard Mr. SUMNERS in his opening statement say to you what he expected to prove. In the interest of an intelligent presentation of this matter, we deem it proper, not by rambling outside statements, not by anything that cannot be produced in evidence, but taking the articles of impeachment, to explain each and every one of them to you, so that when the testimony comes forth from the lips of the witnesses, you will be prepared to receive that testimony, and know what it is all about.

We will prove to you from exhibits, from documents, and from records in the cases mentioned in the articles, and from witnesses produced on both sides, that each and every charge against Judge Louderback—and I say this now advisedly to you Senators—will fall of its own weight.

You heard the half truth as told to you by the House manager about the Russell-Colvin Co. case. Let me tell you the whole truth about the matter. The Russell-Colvin Co. was a stockbrokerage concern doing a stock and bond business in San Francisco at the time of the receivership, on March 11, 1930. The appraised value of the securities belonging to that firm and to its customers was about $2,100,000. The appraised value of the firm's securities, not including other assets, was over half a million dollars.

In the receivership 679 claims were filed, totaling in money, $1,300,000. Bank loans and repurchase securities liquidated in the receivership amounted to nearly a million dollars. That was the kind of a receivership with which the court presided over by the respondent was asked to deal.

Respondent wanted the receiver to be a man of integrity and one of ability, a receiver who would follow instructions of the court in administering truly the affairs of that particular estate.

As we progress we will show to you that this receivership was one of the outstanding receiverships in the United States, both for ability shown, for integrity displayed, for economic and speedy operation, among all the receiverships in the United States.

The creditors of the Russell-Colvin Co. entitled to preference—and I want you to pay particular attention to this—and the customers entitled to priority, received 100 cents on the dollar. The ordinary margin customers, those who signed cards giving the firm authority to deal with their securities as they would, and not entitled to priority, received 46 percent of their claims, either in cash or in securities. We will show that the claims of the general creditors of the firm, including margin customers who were relegated to the position of general creditors for a portion of their claims, amounted to over half a million dollars, of which $152,000 represented claims of general customers not creditors, and about $352,000 represented the claims of margin customers who were relegated to the position of general creditors.

We will show that the general creditors received 28 percent of their claims, with a prospect of an additional dividend of about 12 percent. We will show that the creditors and customers of the firm had received securities and cash in an amount of about $828,000, and, for all creditors of all kinds, of every nature and character, 65 percent was paid to the customers and the people who had dealings with that particular firm.

We will show that, due to the splendid administration of this estate—remember, now, I told you that there were 679 claims filed—only 21 objections were filed to the receiver's report, either by customers or creditors, and those objections were summarily settled, either at a hearing before the court or before the referee, with the result that the administration of this estate was substantially completed without any protracted litigation on the part of any dissatisfied customers, and the work of tracing the money and the securities to which they were entitled was completed in a period of about 18 months, and we will show that there is still due to be distributed in this estate about 12 percent when the assets are finally distributed.

It will be seen, from what I have stated to you, that this Russell-Colvin matter involved careful, conscientious, and expert handling. It was a case of magnitude, dealing with numerous customers of the concern, and with a great many conflicting claims.

I say to you Senators now, is it to be wondered that Judge Louderback wanted men in charge of this estate who would honestly and freely consult with him and inform him conscientiously and truthfully of the administration of the estate as and when it progressed? Judge Louderback felt that the receiver and the attorney for the receiver should have no entangling alliances with the stock exchange of San Francisco. The testimony will disclose to you that, because Judge Louderback did divorce the administration of this estate from the hands of the stock exchange of San Francisco, its influence was such that he is now being here tried upon articles of impeachment.

It is alleged in article I, and what might be termed a subdivision thereof, is in substance as follows. I quote now almost verbatim from article I of the impeachment articles. Here it is:

That Judge Harold Louderback did, on or about the 13th day of March, at his chambers, in his capacity as judge, willfully, tyrannically, and oppressively discharge one Addison G. Strong, whom he had formerly appointed, on the 11th day of March 1930, as equity receiver in the Russell-Colvin case, after attempting to force the said Strong to appoint one John Douglas Short as the attorney for the receiver in said case.

It is alleged immediately thereafter that Judge Louderback did attempt to cause Addison G. Strong to appoint said Short as attorney for the receiver, by promises of allowance of large fees and by threats of reduced fees if Strong refused to appoint said Short.

We have filed with the Senate a formal answer setting out in some detail our set-up, and we will show you by affirmative proof in relation to this matter and from the testimony to be adduced that—remember this, because it will be spoken of in the testimony frequently—that Thelen & Marrin, attorneys for the plaintiff in the Russell-Colvin case, De Lancey C. Smith, another attorney, and Francis C. Brown—they were the attorneys for certain defendants—requested the appointment of Strong on the 11th day of March 1930; that at that time there were present in the chambers of Judge Louderback—now mark this well—Max Thelen, his partner, Mr. Marrin, Mr. DeLancey Smith, Mr. Francis C. Brown, Lloyd Dinkelspiel, who has no relation to the firm of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel, adverted to by our friend, Mr. Manager SUMNERS, but was one of the partners of the firm of attorneys known as Heller, who is dead, Ehrmann, who is alive, White, who is alive, and McAuliffe, who is alive.

They are the attorneys and have been the attorneys for the San Francisco Stock Exchange. Mark that well, because it is to be a very important matter in the consideration of the affairs of the Russell-Colvin Co. These attorneys, as I have said, were all attorneys for the stock exchange and had been for some time. Addison Strong was auditor for the stock exchange. He was also auditor for the Russell-Colvin Co. as and when that firm was doing business.

It is true he was recommended to Judge Louderback, as we will show you, to be appointed receiver. The recommendation was concurred in by all the parties present in the judge's chamber that day—the attorney for the stock exchange, the attorney for the plaintiff, the attorney for the defendant. Two of the partners of the firm of Russell-Colvin Co., namely, Ronald Burliner and Guy Colvin, were also present at the meeting. We will show you that Judge Louderback did not personally know Strong, although he knew him by reputation as a member of the firm of Hood and Strong, but personally Judge Louderback had never met Addison G. Strong.

At the meeting while they were present Judge Louderback emphasized the proposition that Addison G. Strong, if appointed receiver, would be an officer of the court and that he must confer with the judge in the matter of the appointment of his attorney. That was said to the group there. There was no hiding about it; no going behind doors. It was said to Strong in the presence of all who were then and there assembled that in the appointment of the attorney the court must be consulted.

Lloyd Dinkelspiel was there, representing the stock exchange and representing his own firm, the attorneys for the stock exchange. Strong was asked by Judge Louderback then and there, "Have you selected any one of the attorneys present in this room or in this chamber as your attorney?" Strong said, no, that he had not done so. We will show you, from the testimony, that regardless, at the very time Strong made that statement, in fact the day before, he had already selected a man named Lloyd Ackerman to act as his attorney in the event he was selected as receiver in the Russell-Colvin case. We will show you from the deposition of Mr. Lloyd Ackerman, taken while two of the managers were out in San Francisco the other day, that when Strong stated to Judge Louderback that he had not selected an attorney in the event he was selected as the receiver he told that which was not true. At the time he had already selected Lloyd Ackerman to act as his attorney in the event that he (Strong) was appointed receiver, and Ackerman had accepted the office. That is the witness Strong, who, we are told, was such a marvelous receiver and was to be the friend of the court and that he was full of integrity.

Later Strong was appointed, and he informed Ackerman that he could not appoint him. He said the pressure—this is, in substance, what we will show you—that the pressure brought to bear upon him by the San Francisco Stock Exchange was too great; that they wanted Strong to appoint their own attorneys, the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe as the attorneys for the receiver.

Let me say here parenthetically that we will show you under a rule of the stock exchange, the seats being very valuable, that in the case of a fellow member defaulting for any debts due to another member of the stock exchange the members must receive dollar for dollar before creditors. In other words, the seats that were sold in this case, with a curb seat, were worth 2 years before March 1930 one hundred and some odd thousand dollars, but we will show you that the receiver in this case sold the two seats on the exchange for $75,000. We will show you why the stock exchange was so anxious to control the appointment not only of the receiver but to have appointed the attorney for the San Francisco Stock Exchange.

Judge Louderback relied upon the statement of Strong before he appointed him, the statement being made at the meeting at the time of his appointment. If Addison G. Strong, the receiver appointed, had told Judge Louderback at that time that he had selected Heller, Ehrmann, White, & McAuliffe he might not have been appointed; the Russell-Colvin case would not be before you, and the fact is we would have no impeachment case here to be tried this day.

What developed thereafter in the Russell-Colvin case? Immediately when the matter was placed before Judge Louderback what happened? The first thing that was discovered was that two filings were made in the same matter with the same defendants and in the same cause of action. Two filings—for what purpose? I leave that to the Senate when the time comes. The two filings were called to the attention of Judge Louderback after he had agreed on their recommendations to appoint their selected receiver, Addison G. Strong. We will show you that immediately suspicion was aroused in respondent's mind that he had to be careful in dealing with the affairs of the Russell-Colvin Co. The filings were simultaneous, I say. In one instance the case number was 2594, assigned to Judge St. Sure, and in the other the case number was 2595, assigned to Judge Louderback. Time will not permit me to go into the details of how and when. The clerk will do that when he arrives here, as to how they assign cases to the three judges by a certain system of pooling they have in that particular district. Judge St. Sure was absent. I think he was in Sacramento. That is a place where we hold court. We hold court in Eureka; we hold court in San Francisco in that district, and we hold court in Sacramento. At different times the different judges are assigned to these various places to sit. At that time and at the time of the assignment to Judge St. Sure he was sitting in Sacramento. In the absence of Judge St. Sure, we will show by letter and by stipulation, that Judge Louderback acts for him, and during the absence of Judge Louderback Judge St. Sure acts for him. We will show that Judge Louderback said: "I cannot attend to this matter now; get in touch"—or words to that effect—"with Judge St. Sure." They said, "No; we will dismiss the action assigned to Judge St. Sure's department. You appoint our receiver as selected"; and Judge Louderback did appoint the receiver as selected.

A strange thing will develop in this case, that is, the first double filing ever had in that Federal court is the double filing had in the Russell-Colvin case. When Judge Louderback made his order appointing Addison Strong he approved the bond. The hour was late, the closing time of the clerk's office had passed. The judge sent word to the clerk, as we will show you, to do what? To hold the office open in order to accommodate the litigants. The bond was filed and the order appointing the receiver was filed.

Now I want the Senate to just bear with me, because this man comes 3,000 miles from San Francisco; witnesses cannot all be brought here with reference to the matter, and it is important for us now, the only time we have to meet and face this accusation, to have the attention to some of the matters that will be brought out here; and I ask your indulgence and your patience to bear with me while I relate what took place at that time.

Before Strong left Judge Louderback's chambers, upon the afternoon of the 11th of March 1930, he turned to Strong and he said to Strong, in words and substance to this effect, "I want to talk to you when you qualify; I will wait for you in the chambers; come back to see me; I want to talk to you."

I will tell you what then took place and what we expect to show. Strong promised to return. The clerk's office is a distance of less than from the end of the Senate Chamber to the other end over here [indicating]—I would say a distance of about 50 or 75 or 80 feet away from the judge's chambers. The hour was about 5:30 or 5:35. The judge waited for Strong. Did Strong return? Oh, no. What did Strong do? All practitioners of the law in San Francisco, those who do not golf too early, try to leave their offices at about 5 or 5:15. But Strong immediately on his way down, as if the guiding hand of the stock exchange was waiting for him, moved to Montgomery and Market Streets and entered the Wells, Fargo Building. There in the great suite of offices was the lone man, Florence McAuliffe, waiting to receive him. Strong stayed with him for an hour or more, and when he left him the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe, the attorneys for the stock exchange, was selected. A telephone message then went on to Lloyd Ackerman, "We do not need you Lloyd; we have already taken the attorney for the stock exchange."

That is the picture we will show you of what took place in San Francisco in March of 1930. Then what took place?

Strong got very busy—I say Strong in the interest of time—in the morning about 9:30 and immediately came to Judge Louderback's chamber full of excuses and full of apologies for not having been there the night before. The conversation then drifted to what he had done. The judge told him that he had waited for him, that there was a matter he wished to talk to him about, and that was the matter of an attorney. Then he said to the judge that he had employed the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe as his attorneys—the attorneys for the stock exchange. The judge said to him in substance "That is the very thing that I feared would take place." Then the judge told him to think it over. We have some very eminent firms of lawyers in that city, the present speaker and his associate not included. We have the firm of Sullivan, Sullivan, and Theodore Roche, at that time, but now one of your own Members in it, Senator JOHNSON. We have Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro. We have Cushing & Cushing, very eminent lawyers. They were there practicing law. The judge named several firms and went down the line to name a number of firms from among whom he might select one as his counsel. But Strong said, "Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe" first, last, and all the time. That is not his exact language, but in substance and effect "I stand by them." The judge told him that he would not take the firm, that he wanted to get away from the stock exchange in the receivership, that it was too close in the family. He gave his reason, not any personal reason against the members of the firm, but that the association was too close and that he wanted the estate handled in an open, free way, as we will show you.

Strong refused to recede from his position. It was no one except that firm. He was defiant to the judge in his request. The judge asked him at the time if he had signed any request for the appointment. He said, "Not yet"; but he did cause a signed petition to be presented to the judge requesting the appointment of the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe, attorneys for the stock exchange. Mr. Jerome White may be a witness here and will probably so testify.

Immediately Judge Louderback called into consultation the attorneys for the parties. He told them in substance that it was probably incumbent upon him to remove Addison G. Strong as receiver unless Strong resigned; that he had lost confidence in Strong by reason of his conduct. Would you if you were a judge? Judge Louderback stated that he had seriously contemplated the removal of Strong and the appointment of H. B. Hunter as receiver. He requested then and there of those attorneys that they go out and find the qualifications of H. B. Hunter and report to him their findings upon that subject matter. "Is he a fit and proper man?" he asked them. "Go and look him up, because the conduct of this man Strong is such that I feel that I cannot go along with him because of the defiant attitude he is assuming toward the court."

He finally determined there was no other course for a courageous, just, and decent man to take but to remove Strong; and he did remove Strong.

It will also be shown that Judge Louderback said to the attorneys at this time—mark this—that it would be entirely agreeable to him to dismiss the proceedings, thereby getting rid of the entire matter. We will also show that before he appointed Hunter he caused his secretary to telephone the attorneys for the parties asking what their investigation disclosed, and the word came back that the same was favorable and that Hunter was a competent man.

The evidence will show that on the 13th of March, 1930, Judge Louderback vacated and set aside his order appointing Strong as receiver and that the same was filed; that there was no arbitrariness involved, but that there was no other course left for a decent, courageous man to pursue because Strong was so defiant in his attitude as an officer of the court, and because, as we will show you, a receiver is an officer of the court, and the judge did the only thing, the human thing, the right thing, and that was to dismiss him and remove him.

We will further show to you that there is a standing general rule of that court, known as rule 53, which in part reads as follows:

Receivers shall employ counsel only after obtaining an order of the court therefor.

We will show you that this rule at that time and prior thereto had been construed by the court and by the judges thereof to mean that counsel should be satisfactory and acceptable to the judge of said court.

Subdivision 1, article I, of the articles of impeachment alleges that respondent—I shall follow this as closely as the language will give me permission without reading it verbatim—willfully, tyrannically, and oppressively discharged Addison G. Strong as receiver. We will disprove this allegation. We will prove that Judge Louderback had the right at any time to remove his own officer as receiver in that case or any other receiver who was an officer of that court.

It will be established by the testimony of witnesses that Judge Louderback, the respondent, did not force or coerce Strong to appoint John Douglas Short as attorney, but that he suggested to him different attorneys of eminence and standing in the community for Strong to select from among them, but that the course of conduct of Strong and his defiance of the court made it necessary for the respondent at that time to remove Strong.

In subdivision 2 of article I it is charged that the respondent improperly used his office and his power as district judge in his own personal interest by causing the appointment of John D. Short as attorney for H. B. Hunter. It is stated that this was done at the instance and at the suggestion and at the demand of the gentleman whom the managers have so thoroughly played up here, Mr. W. S. Leake; that the judge was under personal obligations to W. S. Leake; that they had entered into an alleged conspiracy, the articles charge, wherein Leake was to provide Judge Louderback with a room at the Fairmont Hotel, and made arrangements for registering it in Leake's name and paying all bills in cash under an agreement with Leake; that Leake was to be reimbursed in full or in part, in order that the respondent might continue to actually reside in San Francisco, after having improperly and unlawfully established a fictitious residence in Contra Costa County for the sole purpose of removing for trial to said Contra Costa County the cause of action which the respondent expected to be filed against him. This is quoting in almost exact language subdivision 2 of article I.

It is further charged in said subdivision that said Attorney Short did receive large and exorbitant fees for his services as attorney for the receiver in the Russell-Colvin matter, and that W. S. Leake did receive certain fees, gratuities, and loans directly or indirectly from said Short amounting to approximately $1,200.

We will show you in this matter by evidence that the receiver, H. B. Hunter, appointed by Judge Louderback after the removal of Addison G. Strong, was at the time of his appointment by respondent connected with the firm of William Cavalier & Co., a company doing a general stock brokerage and banking business in San Francisco and thoroughly competent to act as receiver, and that H. B. Hunter was at that time and is now for all purposes one of the most competent receivers that possibly could be appointed in any jurisdiction of the United States.

The evidence will show that Hunter, after his appointment and qualification as receiver, petitioned for the appointment of the firm of Keyes & Erskine and John Douglas Short as his attorneys. Keyes & Erskine had been for a great many years one of the principal firms of attorneys handling at that time and now some of the biggest cases for the Bank of Italy, now the Bank of America, in the State of California; that a former member of that firm, Keyes, was for years president of the Humboldt Savings Bank and was the attorney for the Humboldt Savings Bank, with hundreds of millions of dollars of the people's money, when it merged with the Bank of America; that this firm was one of the outstanding firms in San Francisco, and that Short was connected with this firm; that it was this firm and Short who were selected as attorneys for H. B. Hunter; that the same was done upon petition, and the judge approved the petition.

We will show that Short, mentioned in subdivision 2, was not appointed at the suggestion of Leake; that Louderback, the judge, was not under any obligation to Leake; that Leake was his friend, but that is all.

We will show you that the appointment of this attorney was approved by the court, and that the conduct of the receivership and the results obtained more than justified Judge Louderback's good judgment in confirming the appointment and selection of H. B. Hunter, and in confirming the appointment of his attorneys.

It will be shown from the testimony that the receivership, as I stated in the beginning, was an outstanding receivership. It was handled economically, intelligently, effectively, and expeditiously. The results achieved for the benefit of both the creditors and the customers of that company were most gratifying. It will be shown from the evidence that Leake for more than 20 years resided at the Fairmont Hotel; that he resided there with his wife until she died in November of 1931; that Hathaway resided there at the Fairmont for a great number of years—I have forgotten the number; I think 12 years—and that his wife resided there; that he had been for many years, and at the present time is, the resident manager in the northern district of California of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of the State of New York, a man of eminent standing, and a man of integrity.

Hathaway and Leake had been intimate friends from their boyhood—from the early eighties. At one time they were both residents of the city of Sacramento in our State. At one time Mr. Leake was the postmaster in that city, during one of the terms of the Cleveland administration. It will be shown that Leake is a man of prominence in the State; that at one time he was the editor of the San Francisco Call when it was run by what are known as the Spreckels interests. For more than 20 years last past he has been a metaphysical student. Call it what the managers will; I care not, be he a Christian Scientist, a New Thoughtist, or what. It will be shown that due to the continuous illness of Mrs. Leake during the period of 2 years prior to her death Mr. and Mrs. Leake became embarrassed, and that while Mrs. Leake was suffering her last illness Leake borrowed from Hathaway the sum of $1,000. This is part of the alleged amount that is stated in article I, in which Short was supposed to have given some of his fee to Leake in the way that is alleged in the article.

What is the fact about the matter, as we will show you? Leake borrowed from Hathaway $1,000. The loan was made possible because of the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway borrowed upon a life-insurance policy in Mr. Hathaway's own company, and $1,000 was made payable to Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway. Being the beneficiary under the clause, they insisted upon her signing it, and she signed the note to the insurance company and the application, and the check was made out by the insurance company. We will produce the check in evidence here, showing you the borrowers on the insurance policy, and give you the number thereof. We will show that the check was made payable to both of them; that they cashed this check for $1,000, and gave the cash to Sam Leake, or W. S. Leake, familiarly called "Sam" by those who know him.

We will show you that Sam Leake paid interest upon this $1,000 loan for 1 year up to April of 1932; that Mr. Hathaway and his wife made this loan to Leake because they were friendly, and because there was a great affection between the families one for the other, and they knew Leake's financial embarrassment. His wife had been dying for a period of 2 years.

It will be shown from the evidence introduced that son-in-law Short—that is, John Douglas Short—never knew a thing about the borrowing of the money by Leake from Hathaway, his father-in-law; and that the respondent, Judge Louderback, never heard of the situation until the proceedings were brought and the special investigation had in San Francisco. Then, for the first time, and the first time only, did Judge Louderback, the respondent, ever know that Leake had borrowed any money from any one, let alone Hathaway, because their intimacy was not of such a kind that they discussed the borrowing of money one from the other, or with others.

The testimony of Mr. Hathaway which was taken while the managers were in San Francisco in September last has been stipulated now to be read because of his illness. He had a partial stroke and was confined to his bed, and Mr. Manager PERKINS and the others saw him when they were there. That testimony will be read in accordance with the stipulation. A statement of what Mrs. Hathaway would testify to has been added to the stipulation, coupled with the application and the note, and so forth, that transpired between these two people. Mrs. Hathaway, attending to her ill husband, refused to come here unless forced by the Senate to desert him in his illness, and the managers have agreed to take, in lieu thereof, her statement as sworn testimony, as if it were given under oath in this particular case.

There was no thought of loaning Mr. Leake any money out of the fees that were allowed John Douglas Short in the Russell-Colvin receivership. We will show you that no one knew of the loan from Hathaway to Leake except Leake, Hathaway, and Mrs. Hathaway. It will be shown further from the testimony that when Mr. Leake needed more money at a subsequent time, Hathaway gave Leake $250. I do not know whether he considered it a loan or not, but my memory of the testimony that will be read to you is that he considered that he could not go away upon a trip feeling that his old friend Sam was there in need, or probably in distress, and that he let him have $250. That is the type and kind of a man that Hathaway is—the resident manager of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, whose testimony will be read to the Senate in this particular case.

We will show you that the fees of Short and Keyes & Erskine as attorneys in the Russell-Colvin case had not anything to do, of any kind or character, with a loan made by Hathaway to Leake; and we will thoroughly disprove the allegation that the $500 alleged in article I, either directly or indirectly, or at all, came from Douglas Short's portion of the fee, or any part of it.

I want the Senate now to bear with me upon a proposition that will come to its attention with reference to this alleged exorbitant fee, as stated by the managers. In that connection I will say that we are going to show you that John Douglas Short and the firm of Keyes & Erskine did not receive any large or exorbitant fee for their services in the Russell-Colvin case as attorneys for the receiver. How are we going to do that? I will tell you how.

We are going to show the Senate, upon the question of fee, that parts of 3 days were spent in that proceeding; that the hearing was upon application for the allowance of compensation to the 3 attorneys, the 2 Erskine brothers, and John Douglas Short for services rendered to the receiver; that a hearing was had, noticed in open court, upon that proposition. I will show you that a hearing took place upon March 14, 1916, and a day that some will remember, the 17th day of March 1931, in San Francisco, upon the question of fee; that there were present in court a great number of the creditors; that all of the attorneys representing the different parties were there; that there was a contest as to the amount of the fee. They had asked for the sum of $65,000. A hearing was had, and witnesses were examined, and upon that full hearing the court awarded the fees; but before I come to what he awarded I am going to tell you the proof upon which he awarded the fees.

Upon the hearing there was introduced the testimony of three outstanding attorneys at the bar of San Francisco, John L. McNab, Albert Rosenshine, and Henry A. Jacobs.

These three attorneys testified that, in their opinion, the services rendered by the attorneys in the Russell-Colvin case were worth somewhere between $55,000 and $75,000.

One of the attorneys, John L. McNab, stated that, in his opinion, $75,000 was a fair fee for the services rendered. McNab is a man of standing in our community. He is a well-known attorney in both State and Federal practice. At one time he was United States district attorney for the Northern District of California—the same position as that to which you confirmed, the other day, H. H. McPike. He is quite an eminent man in national affairs. He nominated one of the Presidents of these United States. His honor and his integrity have never been questioned. He testified, after cross-examination by eminent counsel, that the reasonable value of those services was the sum of $75,000.

Albert Rosenshine, who testified as to the value of the services, is an attorney of integrity and distinction in California. He has handled large affairs for very wealthy clients, and he is well known in our State. For many terms he was a member of the Legislature of the State of California. He has been the attorney for the banking superintendent of that State. At the present time he is handling a similar affair for another stock-brokerage concern known as the Gorman-Keyser receivership. Rosenshine was eminently qualified to give his opinion as to the value of the services rendered by Keyes & Erskine and John Douglas Short, and we will show you that he testified that in his opinion their services were worth $65,000.

Mr. Henry A. Jacobs is a prominent member of our bar, a lawyer of eminence, standing, and integrity. He is a member of the firm of Jacobs, Blanckenberg & May, who engage particularly in what is known as the commercial-law business, and is thoroughly familiar with the type of services rendered in the Russell-Colvin estate; and he, Jacobs, fixed the sum at $55,000.

The receiver and the attorneys for the receiver gave to the court a set-up of their services, and testified as to the value of their services, and requested the court to fix a reasonable fee for them for the services rendered.

I want the Senate to mark this well. On March 17, after one adjournment of the matter, a consultation was had between the attorneys with reference to the fee. Those who had filed objections to the amount requested, and one of the attorneys who was carrying on the examination of the witnesses in reference to the value of their services, made a statement in open court. I am going to read to you as to what we are going to show about the extravagant fees which were alleged to have been given in this particular receivership. This is the statement of the counsel leading the objectors:

We are ready to proceed, if it please the court. During the morning and noon, counsel on the other side and myself have been in conference for the purpose of arriving, if we possibly may, at a settlement of this application. We have come to the conclusion that if the court would ratify the settlement of the various other creditors heard in court, and if the creditors will be satisfied, that the court allow Mr. Hunter the sum of $20,000 for services rendered in addition to what he had received (meaning $1,000 a month he had received up to that time), and to Messrs. Keyes & Erskine and Short the sum of $46,250. All of this will be without prejudice to the rights of the receiver and the attorneys to apply in the future in the ordinary course of business and under normal conditions for compensation for services to be rendered from this date on. We have also felt that the sum of $8,750 would be a reasonable and adequate compensation to be allowed for the attorneys for the plaintiff and the attorneys for the defendant, in such sum and such proportion as they may see fit to divide among themselves. I feel confident there are some very serious questions involved as to the right of the attorneys for the plaintiff and especially the attorneys for the defendant to come into court and ask for compensation.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I desire to offer a resolution at this point.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Will counsel suspend for that purpose?

Mr. HANLEY. Certainly.

Mr. ASHURST. I send forward a resolution, which I ask to have agreed to. It is necessary to have the resolution agreed to at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the resolution.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That during the trial of the impeachment of Harold Louderback, United States district judge for the Northern District of California, the Vice President, in the absence of the President pro tempore, shall have the right to name in open Senate, sitting for said trial, a Senator to perform the duties of the Chair.

The President pro tempore shall likewise have the right to name in open Senate, sitting for said trial, or, if absent, in writing, a Senator to perform the duties of the Chair; but such substitution in the case of either the Vice President or the President pro tempore shall not extend beyond an adjournment or recess, except by unanimous consent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the order will be entered.

The Chair takes the privilege of appointing the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BRATTON] to preside for the balance of the day.

(Thereupon Mr. BRATTON took the chair.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Counsel will proceed.

Mr. HANLEY. The statement of counsel from which I was quoting proceeded as follows:

However, I feel confident also and I am certain that they have rendered service for the benefit of this estate in this case, and with that point in view, I certainly am not going to contest their receiving a reasonable allowance. From that I conclude the arrangement is satisfactory to everybody, but I do feel that the sum of $8,750 is reasonable under all the facts of the case, and I also, without prejudice to their right to go into court in the future, if they see fit, and to ask for reasonable compensation for services which they will render in the future.

That is the end of the statement of counsel asking the allowance. Then followed a discussion between the attorneys, whereupon Judge Louderback said, and I quote the language used:

This arrangement is within the scope of what I think proper, although I will be frank with you gentlemen and say that it is not what I would have made it if this matter were pressed—its present form—I am satisfied with it, if everyone else is, and apparently everyone else is satisfied—it being within the range of a proper fee. I think it is satisfactory to the court to accept that, and without proceeding further, then, with the hearing, in view of the fact that everybody is apparently satisfied, or has shown no objection to this matter, or no objection has been offered by anyone who has been participating in this hearing, I will allow the sums mentioned, $20,000 to Mr. Hunter in addition to the money he has already received in monthly payment; I will allow $46,250 to the attorneys John Douglas Short and Erskine & Erskine, and I will allow the plaintiff's attorneys and the defendant's attorneys the sum of $8,750, and I presume everybody present signifies his acceptance of that arrangement and all join in its approval. I see Mr. Thelen and I believe Mr. Brown is here. Are you satisfied with what has been done?

Mr. Smith replied, "Yes, sir."

The Court then said:

And I presume these arrangements are satisfactory to both of you gentlemen.

Mr. Smith said, "Yes, sir."

Judge Louderback then said, in substance:

I think you gentlemen ought to feel yourselves thanked in this proceeding for handling this matter in the way that you have. You certainly have undertaken a great deal of work in verifying all of these various petitions.

I interrupt to say that over 300 petitions were filed, some very lengthy, requiring a great deal of care, labor, and intelligence in their preparation. All of those were, by order of court, always O.K'd by Thelen & Marrin and by Brown and DeLancey Smith, and when the judge was speaking of the various petitions, he referred to the O.K. that had been placed upon them by the attorneys representing the parties. I continue quoting in substance from what the judge said on that occasion:

You certainly have undertaken a great deal of work in verifying all of these various petitions, and satisfying yourselves that the interests of yourselves and your clients are being protected. I was given your names on the various petitions as they have gone through, and I thought it was very splendid, and such a close check was made by all the parties to see what was done was done properly, and I approve of it, and I presume you did, or you would not have allowed it to be done as it was.

That is the extravagant fee we are alleged to have given to these attorneys. This is the proof we will offer to show that it was a stipulated fee, after a 3-day hearing in open court; yet you are asked to find Judge Louderback guilty because he allowed extravagant and exorbitant fees to the attorneys who stipulated to the genuineness and to the faithfulness of the services rendered.

It will be seen from what I have just stated as to what took place in open court on the 17th of March that the fee allowed for the receiver and the fee for the attorneys were stipulated to by all of the parties, and by the creditors, in open court, after the testimony of expert witnesses who were called to aid the court in fixing the fee for the receiver and the fee for the attorney for the receiver. They were and are reasonable fees, fixed by the respondent, as we will show you in this case.

The attorneys for the receiver gave more than a year of their entire time to the receivership. Their intelligence and knowledge effected great saving to the estate. Litigation was avoided. There were 659 claims against this estate, every one of them a potential lawsuit. Instead of it being necessary to refer the six hundred-odd claims to a master to settle them, the attorney and the receiver, really acting as masters themselves, were successful in settling all but 21 of these particular claims.

It is alleged in the concluding subdivision of article I of the articles of impeachment as follows:

That Judge Louderback entered into a conspiracy to violate the provisions of the Political Code of the State of California to establish a residence in Contra Costa County, when Judge Louderback in fact did not reside in the county, and could not have established a residence without concealment of his actual residence in the county of San Francisco, covered and concealed by means of his said conspiracy with said W. S. Leake, all in violation of the law of the State of California.

Then the article goes on and, in substance, charges this:

That to give color to his fictitious residence in Contra Costa County, all for the purpose of preparing and falsely creating proof necessary to establish himself as a resident of Contra Costa County in anticipation of an action he expected to be brought against him, for the sole purpose of meeting the requirements of the Code of Civil Procedure of the State of California, providing that all causes of action must be tried in the county in which the defendant resides at the commencement of the action, and did in accordance with the conspiracy entered into with W. S. Leake, unlawfully register as a voter in said Contra Costa County, when in law and fact he did not reside in said county, and could not so register, and the said acts of said Harold Louderback—and the said acts of said Harold Louderback constituted a felony as defined by section 42 of the Penal Code of California.

Senators, judges, and jurors, we are going to show you that Leake had been a friend of Judge Louderback; that Leake was a resident of the Fairmont Hotel, and that the respondent here, due to unhappy differences which existed between himself and his wife, on the 21st day of September 1929 separated from his wife; that he obtained a room in the Fairmont Hotel, and that said room was registered in the name of Leake. Arrangements were made with respondent that he was to pay monthly to the hotel through W. S. Leake the amount of the hotel charges for the room, and also any expenses incident to the judge's staying there, such as tailor's bills, barber's bills, meals, and so forth.

In September 1929 Mr. Leake's wife was very ill, and occasionally Mr. Leake, in order to obtain rest, had to take other rooms, because of two trained nurses who were with Mrs. Leake during that period. He had to get other rooms in the hotel in which to sleep. One of the rooms that was formerly occupied by Mr. Leake was a room Judge Louderback took over as his temporary abode. Judge Louderback consulted with his friend Leake, and he told Mr. Leake that he did not know whether the separation was going to be a temporary one or a permanent one. We will show you that the judge, being a Federal judge, was careful about having it notorious in San Francisco that he and his wife had separated; he wanted to keep that matter out of the daily press, although he did not succeed, because it got in the daily press as early as February 1930, and it contained the very idea that has been stated here.

When Leake heard these statements from the respondent he made arrangements with the hotel management for Judge Louderback to stay at the hotel. We will show that every bill contracted at the hotel by respondent was paid by the respondent to Leake. This was either by check or cash. In turn, Leake paid the Fairmont Hotel. The room number was 26, and the Senate will hear of it many times. The canceled checks made to Leake for this room, which we have, we will present to the Senate and allow the Senate to see those checks.

The respondent openly was about the hotel. He had his meals there, he signed the tags that were charged to the room, and he did everything open and aboveboard. There was no concealment of the fact that he was at the hotel, though he was not registered at the hotel.

It will be shown that in September 1929 Judge Louderback, the respondent, had no intention of any kind or character of making his residence in Contra Costa County. It was not until April 1930 that he concluded to make his residence in Contra Costa County. Respondent will show that in the month of April 1930, and that for some years prior thereto, his brother, George D. Louderback—he is the professor to whom I referred in the beginning—and his wife resided at 107 Ardmore Road in the Kensington district of Contra Costa County, which is a little division there about 100 yards in the Berkeley Hills, the county of Alameda stopping at that point and Contra Costa County being the adjoining county. Judge Louderback's brother resided at that place. We will show you that it is about 40 minutes' ride from San Francisco. People commute all the time down the peninsula and across the bay, and it is within commuting distance from the business section of San Francisco.

We will show that in the month of April 1930, with the consent of his brother, Prof. George D. Louderback, and his wife, the respondent determined to make his home with his brother, and he carried out his intention so to do, and that on the 17th of April 1930 he removed nearly all his personal effects, his trunk, and his clothing, and so forth, to a room in the home of his brother, and the room was given to him by his brother to be used by him and for his benefit. Judge Louderback left in his room at the Fairmont Hotel only such articles of clothing as he might need while stopping temporarily at the hotel.

Judge Louderback in evidencing his intention to reside at his brother's home and become a resident of Contra Costa County did on or about the 17th of April 1930 cancel his voting registration in the city and county of San Francisco; and on the 18th of April 1930—the 18th of April is quite an official day with us out there and we can remember it—on April 18, 1930, he registered in the little town of Martinez as a voter in the county of Contra Costa and has voted there ever since. He was actually living and residing there, and this was his home; it was his place of residence.

Respondent will show that in moving to Contra Costa County and registering as a voter therein he acted then with the bona fide intention of abandoning San Francisco as his place of residence and making his home and his residence at the home of his brother in Contra Costa County; that the residence of his brother was the only residence Judge Louderback has had from about the middle of April 1930 up to and including the present time; that it was and is his bona fide residence; that he has no other residence.

Respondent will show that when he was a young man he was a student at the Nevada University and that he lived with his brother, who was then a professor at that institution prior to the time when he was appointed to the institution in California. We will show this from the testimony of his brother, George Louderback, the professor to whom I have adverted. We will show you that George D. Louderback is a man of standing and dean of the College of Letters and Science at the University of the State of California.

It will be shown that the civil code of procedure, or the code of civil procedure, as we call it, does not provide that all cases must be tried in the county where the defendant resides at the time of the commencement of the action. It is only a matter that the defendant can take advantage of if he will. It can be tried in any county.

Respondent states that when the testimony shall be adduced, covering all the charges set forth in article I of the impeachment articles, it will be shown there never was any act of Judge Louderback, as stated in article I, that amounts to misbehavior, misconduct, crime, high or low, felony, or misdemeanor, or any other of the matters that are contemplated as high crimes or misdemeanors under the Constitution of the United States of America.

I now turn to another matter. In the interest of having the Senate know that we are not in any way stopping this investigation, that we are now at the beginning, stating it fully, we tell you what we are going to prove in each article as they present themselves categorically and sequentially, I, II, III, IV, and V. I now come to what is known as the "Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association case", which is covered by the second article of impeachment. It is charged in the first part of article II that the respondent was guilty of a course of improper and unlawful conduct as a judge, filled with partiality and favoritism in improperly granting excessive, exorbitant, and unreasonable allowances and disbursements to one Marshall B. Woodworth and to one Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., as receiver and attorney, respectively, in the case. I might state here that the learned managers have misstated the situation. It is stated that Marshall B. Woodworth was the receiver. He was only the attorney. In the article as drawn Marshall B. Woodworth is named three times as the receiver instead of the attorney.

It is charged in the second paragraph of said article II that respondent improperly acquired jurisdiction of the case contrary to the law of the United States and the rules of the court; that on the 29th day of July 1930 he appointed Woodworth and Shortridge receiver and attorney in said case; that after appeal had been taken from the order and other acts of respondent to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Ninth Circuit, the said court set aside the order and acts of respondent, which were reversed by that court, that after the mandate of the court directing respondent to turn over the assets of the associations in his possession to the insurance commissioner of California it is alleged that the respondent unlawfully and improperly and oppressively did sign an order directing the receiver to turn over said assets to the insurance commissioner but improperly and unlawfully made said order conditional that the insurance commissioner or any party in interest would not take an appeal from the allowance of fees and disbursements granted by respondent to said Woodworth and Shortridge, thereby improperly using his office as a judge to favor and enrich his personal and political friends and associates, to the detriment and to the loss of the said insurance commissioner and parties in interest in said action, causing unnecessary delay, and, it is alleged, forcing the State insurance commissioner to unnecessary delay and expense in protecting the rights of all the parties against such arbitrary, improper, and unlawful order of the respondent.

Then the article goes on to allege that the respondent did improperly and unlawfully seek to coerce the insurance commissioner and the parties in interest to accept and acquiesce in the excessive fees and exorbitant and unreasonable disbursements which were granted by the respondent to the said Woodworth and the said Shortridge, receiver and attorney, respectively.

It is further alleged that respondent did unlawfully and improperly force and coerce the parties to enter into a stipulation modifying said improper and unlawful order.

It is further alleged that the respondent did make it necessary for the insurance commissioner to take another appeal from said arbitrary, improper, and unlawful action of the respondent.

It is further alleged in article II that the respondent did not give fair and impartial and judicial consideration to the objections of the insurance commissioner against the allowance of excessive fees and unreasonable disbursements. Then, it is alleged, that it was all done to enrich his friends and at the expense of litigants, and then that the respondent did cause said insurance commissioner and the parties in interest additional delay and expense and labor and taking an appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in order to protect their rights. It is then alleged that, by reason of his alleged misconduct, respondent was guilty of a misdemeanor in office. That is the charge part of the second article of impeachment.

We will show you in that connection the following: That on the 29th day of July 1930 a verified bill of complaint was filed in the office of the clerk of the court for the northern district, the southern division, by Helen Lay, who was plaintiff, against the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association, defendant; that the complaint was signed by Reisner & Deming, attorneys for the plaintiff; that an application was made for the appointment of a receiver for the Lumbermen's Reciprocal Association. The testimony will show that Bronson, Bronson & Slaven were the attorneys for the defendant; that the attorneys representing both parties requested in writing the appointment of a receiver; that both parties signed a written application requesting the appointment of Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., as receiver; that thereafter Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., qualified as receiver and thereafter he petitioned the court for the appointment of Marshall B. Woodworth as his attorney, and the petition was granted; and that they entered upon the discharge of their duties.

The receivership in this matter was for an insurance company that was incorporated under the laws of the State of Texas, from which comes our learned friend who made the opening statement on behalf of the managers. It had an office in the city and county of San Francisco, State of California. The plaintiff had a judgment against this insurance company and was fearful that all its funds in California would be removed and impounded in the State of Texas, thereby lessening the chances of the plaintiff to collect her judgment. Suit was brought to hold the funds in the jurisdiction of California for the benefit of the corporation and the creditors in California.

We will show that, due to the state of the law in California, the insurance commissioner of California was unable to take action in this State, that is in California, until a receiver was appointed in the State of Texas. It will be shown that if the insurance commissioner of California was compelled to wait until the action was taken in the State of Texas it might be too late; and therefore the suit was brought in the Federal court of our district.

It will be shown that Judge Louderback, the respondent, had no means of knowing that a petition would be filed in the matter; nor did he know nor was he informed, until after the filing of the suit, that the appointment of Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., would be requested by both parties to act as receiver in the case; that on the 6th day of August 1930 the defendant, in the action by its attorneys, the same ones, filed an answer and they admitted all allegations contained in the complaint; that in the said answer no attack was made upon the jurisdiction of the court presided over by the respondent to entertain the bill of complaint or to grant the relief prayed for.

The evidence will show that Roy Bronson, one of the attorneys for the Lumberman's Reciprocal Association, advised with the Industrial Accident Committee of the State of California, and succeeded in having an award made in favor of Helen Lay, the plaintiff in this action. The award was for $5,000. This gave a jurisdictional amount for the plaintiff, Helen Lay, enabling her to bring the action she brought in the Federal court against the Lumberman's Reciprocal Association. We will show you that the complaint in the equity proceeding in which Reisner & Deming appeared for the plaintiff, was prepared from data furnished by Bronson, Bronson & Slaven, and that Mr. J. T. Reisner accompanied Mr. T. J. Slaven and conferred with respondent at the time the receiver was appointed.

It will be developed from the evidence that the award of $5,000 to the plaintiff Helen Lay by the Industrial Accident Commission was set aside after the filing of the equity suit by the plaintiff, Helen Lay. Frank L. Guereña, the attorney for the insurance commissioner of California, appeared for the employer of the deceased husband of Helen Lay, the plaintiff in the equity suit, and asked for a rehearing of the award made by the Industrial Accident Commission, and ex parte had the first award set aside. This was for the purpose of aiding the insurance commissioner of California to gain jurisdiction of this case after the Federal court had already appointed a receiver, at the request and with the consent of the plaintiff and defendant, and after the defendant had fully answered and admitted the allegations of the bill of complaint filed by the plaintiff, Helen Lay. This will be shown from the records and files in the action of Helen Lay v. Lumberman's Reciprocal Association.

It will be shown that an order to show cause to set aside the appointment of Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., as receiver in said matter was issued at the request of the insurance commissioner of California and that a hearing was had thereon. Respondent denied said order to show cause. The respondent at no time, until the decision was rendered by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, entertained any doubt of the jurisdiction of his court to proceed and pass upon the various matters that arose in said action. Respondent's conduct in this regard was not filled with partiality and favoritism, or favoritism in any way, as alleged in article II of the impeachment articles.

It will be shown that on the 1st of December 1930 there was filed in the office of the clerk of the court an order fixing and allowing compensation to the receiver and his counsel, in the sum of $3,000 each for services rendered, covering a period from the 29th day of July 1930 to the 30th day of November 1930. The allowance was made by respondent upon a detailed statement of the services rendered by the receiver and his attorney and upon written stipulation of Reisner & Deming, the attorneys for plaintiff, and Bronson, Bronson & Slaven, the attorneys for the defendant. We will introduce said stipulation in evidence. In substance it provides as follows:

The compensation for the services of the receiver for the above period of time from July 29, 1930, to and including November 30, 1930, in the sum of $3,000 is a proper and reasonable sum for the services rendered, and that the compensation for the legal services of the attorney for the receiver for the above period of time in the sum of $3,000 is a proper and reasonable sum for the legal services rendered by such attorney.

We will show that thereafter, about the 23d day of April 1931, respondent made a further order allowing said receiver and his attorney an additional sum of $3,000 each as compensation for services rendered by them, covering a period from December 1, 1930, to and including the 31st day of March 1931. This order was likewise based upon the written stipulation of the attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant that the same was a reasonable amount to be charged. We will introduce this stipulation in evidence, showing that the court in both instances acted not alone in the exercise of his own judgment but also upon the judgment and consent of the parties to the action. It will appear that no objection was made by anyone to the allowance of the fees to the receiver and his attorney until the hearing of the fourth and final account of the receiver, which was settled on the 15th day of December 1931.

Respondent never, at any time or at all, intended to, or did, in his opinion, grant excessive, exorbitant, and unreasonable allowances as disbursements to the attorney for the receiver or to the receiver in said matter. It is true that after the fourth and final account of receiver was settled, another appeal was taken to the circuit court of appeals for the ninth district from the order settling the fourth and final account and approving the fees heretofore allowed, as well as the disbursements of the receiver and his attorney. We shall show that the order of December 15, 1931, was made under the conditions set forth in our answer, and not otherwise.

We will show that it is not true that respondent improperly used his office as a district judge to favor and enrich his personal and political friends and associates to the detriment and loss of litigants in respondent's court; and, further, it is not true that he was forcing the insurance commissioners of California and the parties in interest to unnecessary delay, labor, and expense in the action. It is not true that all this was done in an arbitrary, improper, and in an unlawful manner. The evidence will show that when the order of December 15, 1931, was prepared by Marshall B. Woodworth, who presented the same to Frank L. Guereña, the attorney for the insurance commissioner for the State of California, the attorneys discussed said proposed order and also the meaning of the proviso therein. By the way, Marshall B. Woodworth was a candidate for district judge at one time, secretary to the late Judge Morrow, who was for many years a Member of Congress, for many years a district judge, and many years on the court of appeals. Marshall Woodworth was a candidate for office against Judge Louderback at the time the judge was appointed. He was attorney in this particular case, a man of standing in our community, former United States district attorney, stepping up the ladder rung by rung until he reached some eminence in his profession.

As explained by Mr. Woodworth to Mr. Guereña, the purpose of the proviso was to obtain a bond to insure the receiver that no liability would be incurred by him in surrendering assets to the insurance commissioner. A discussion was had between the attorneys as to the amount of the bond. They could not agree upon the amount and, therefore, the proviso was left in the order and presented to the respondent for signature. When the order was presented to the respondent by Marshall B. Woodworth, respondent inquired of said Woodworth what he understood to be the meaning of said proviso. Mr. Woodworth explained to the court the discussion and talk he had had with Attorney Guereña with relation thereto. Respondent then signed said order, knowing at the time that he had a right under the terms of the order to modify the same.

Respondent within a few days after he signed the order sent for Marshall B. Woodworth, the attorney for the receiver, and stated to him, in substance, that, on mature reflection, he was satisfied that the proviso in the order of December 15 was erroneous, and that he desired to modify said order by striking out the proviso provision and that, inasmuch as an appeal had been taken, a question might arise as to whether or not he had a right to so modify the order, and therefore suggested to him that he prepare a stipulation to that effect and have it signed by all the parties; whereupon he would then make an order based on the stipulation striking out the proviso from said order.

We will show that respondent did, on the presentation of said stipulation to him on the 11th day of January 1932, make an order modifying his order of December 15, settling the fourth and final account in accordance with the stipulation signed by the parties to the action. The modification made contained a clause that the stipulation signed was made without prejudice to the rights of any party thereto with respect to an appeal therein pending. We will demonstrate that respondent in settling the fourth and final account of the receiver never had in mind to enrich or to favor any friend, political or otherwise, or was said order made to the detriment of any litigant or litigants, or was said order made with the intention of forcing, or causing to force, the insurance commissioner of California, or any party of interest, unnecessary delay and expense in protecting the rights of all or any of the parties in said action.

We will demonstrate further that respondent did not improperly, unlawfully or at all seek to coerce the said insurance commissioner or any parties in interest in the action to accept or to acquiesce in any fees and disbursements granted by respondent to the said receiver and to his said attorney.

Respondent will show that in making the respective orders set out in article II of the impeachment articles allowing the compensation to the receiver and his attorney and allowance of expenses and disbursements, respondent acted honestly and conscientiously, believing at that time that the disbursements and that the fees allowed by him were reasonable and proper fees. Respondent will show that his judgment in this respect was influenced to some extent by the advice given him by the attorneys for plaintiff and defendant, in their written stipulation certifying that the services rendered by the receiver and his attorney were reasonably worth the amount requested and finally allowed by respondent.

Respondent will demonstrate that if there was any mistake made by him in the granting of the fees or in the allowing of the disbursements, the same was not brought about because or as the result of friendship for the parties or prejudice against anyone. If a mistake was made, it was made in good faith and without any thought or purpose or desire on part of respondent to be partial, oppressive, excessive, or unreasonable. There are many other matters that respondent will show in this connection, but time will not permit going into detail. All of this will be brought out in the evidence by witnesses that will testify.

The fact that the United States Circuit Court of Appeals reversed Judge Louderback in this case in no way reflects upon his ability or integrity as a judge.

It cannot be held that a judge, using his best judgment and giving his decisions on questions of law and questions of discretion in good faith, although a higher court may disagree with him, is subject to impeachment for that reason. If a reversal by a higher court is ground for impeachment, then there would be no judges remaining on the Federal bench of the United States. All judges sitting in courts of first instance are at some time in their careers reversed by higher courts. The Supreme Court justices of the United States differ with each other and have numerous dissenting opinions rendered by their members. To announce or to hold the doctrine that the mere fact of a reversal of a judge by a higher court is ground for impeachment would be monstrous.

Respondent will show that article II, in the light of the evidence to be introduced, will fall of its own weight.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I should like to ask the President if he will propound to counsel a question. What does the counsel allege to have happened? As I understand, when these fees were allowed to the attorneys for the receiver, provided they did not take an appeal, the House managers allege—

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, a point of order. All questions propounded by a Senator must be in writing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. LONG. That is too much trouble.

Mr. HANLEY. I have finished article II; but I should have been very anxious to answer, although it was not in writing, the question of the Senator from Louisiana.

Article III is the so-called "Fageol Motor Co. case."

It is alleged in article III that respondent was guilty of misbehavior in office, resulting in expense, disadvantage, annoyance, and hindrance to litigants in respondent's court in the Fageol Motor Co. case, in that respondent knew that G. H. Gilbert, whom he appointed receiver, was incompetent, unqualified, and inexperienced to act as such receiver. It is further alleged in article III that respondent oppressively, and in disregard of the rights of litigants in his court, did appoint Gilbert, knowing that he was incompetent, unfit, and inexperienced for such duties. It is further alleged that he further refused to grant a hearing to plaintiff, defendant, creditors, and parties in interest at the time of the appointment of said receiver. It is further alleged in article III that he did cause the litigants and parties in interest to be misinformed of his action in appointing G. H. Gilbert receiver, while he took necessary steps to qualify as such receiver. It further alleges that this deprived litigants and parties in interest of the opportunity of presenting the facts and circumstances and condition of the receivership, the nature of the business, and the type of person necessary to operate the business in order to protect creditors, litigants, and all parties in interest. It further alleges that this deprived the parties of the opportunity of protesting the appointment of an incompetent receiver. It then states that by reason of these acts the respondent was guilty of a course of conduct constituting misbehavior as a judge, and that he was and is guilty of misdemeanor in office.

Having told you what we expect to prove, if at the end of the trial my statement is shown to be true, you will find that this article, like the others to which I have referred, will fall of its own weight. But what are we going to show you in this regard in reference to the Fageol Motor Co. case?

We answered in our formal answer very fully the allegations set out in article III with reference to the Fageol Motor Co. case. In support of our answer we will show you by the pleadings, exhibits, documents, letters, and witnesses that there are no grounds for the allegations set forth in article III. Respondent will show you that on the 17th of February 1932 an order was made by him as district judge, appointing G. H. Gilbert as receiver of the Fageol Motor Co. upon the complaint of the Waukesha Motor Co. There was an answer filed by the defendant through its attorneys, Bronson, Bronson & Slaven. Upon the filing of the complaint, the application for the appointment was made. In the answer filed, the defendants asked that the relief prayed for in the bill be granted.

Respondent was holding court when the attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant went to the judge's chambers and left an order appointing the receiver, with the name of the receiver left blank, and requested respondent's secretary to call respondent's attention to the name of a party they desired appointed receiver. At this time respondent does not recall the name of the party suggested. Respondent having no information with reference to the party the attorneys suggested to be appointed receiver, respondent appointed G. H. Gilbert receiver by filling in the blank space in the order, and signing the order.

The order signed by respondent appointing Gilbert—now, mark this well, Senators—contained the following. I do not want to bore you, but listen to it:

Decreed that the receiver be, and hereby is, directed within 30 days from the date of this decree to cause to be mailed to each and every creditor of the defendant known to such receiver a copy of this order and a notice of a motion to make the receivership herein permanent, such mailing to be in a securely sealed envelope, postage prepaid, and to be addressed to said creditor at the last post-office address known to said receiver, and such service by mail is hereby decreed to be due, timely, sufficient, and complete service of notice of this decree and this suit, and of such notice and all proceedings had or to be had herein, and upon all such creditors, for all purposes.

That is the order appointing temporarily, for a period of 30 days, Gilbert as the receiver.

Now, what took place?

Upon the signing of the order appointing G. H. Gilbert receiver he qualified as such, and thereafter filed petition for authority to employ counsel. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel were appointed attorneys for the receiver. After said receiver and his said attorneys had acted for a period of 30 days, and after they had caused the notices to be mailed to the creditors, as provided for in the order appointing G. H. Gilbert, this one who forced the receivership upon the Fageol Motor Co., as stated by Mr. Manager SUMNERS, never came into court, never opposed the continuance of the receiver, and we will show you that upon a hearing had, no one appeared to protest the continuance and permanency of the receivership of G. H. Gilbert; and this is the one that you are told we forced upon them!

Respondent will show that written admissions of service were given by the attorneys for the parties upon the papers now on file in said matter; that the matter came on in open court on the 17th day of March 1932 and was continued until the 21st day of March 1932. No opposition to making the temporary order permanent was offered by anyone. No objection was made by anyone in any written filing in said court to the appointment of G. H. Gilbert as either temporary or permanent receiver. Respondent did not know and never had any reason to believe said G. H. Gilbert was incompetent, unfit, and inexperienced for his duties as such receiver, and in fact he was not incompetent. Respondent will show, by witnesses to be produced, that the services rendered by G. H. Gilbert as receiver redounded to the benefit of the estate. Respondent will show that one of the largest creditors, namely, the Central National Bank of Oakland, through its vice president, stated that the work done by Mr. Gilbert as receiver, and Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel, was in every way satisfactory, and that the creditors found no trouble in working with the attorneys and receiver for the benefit of the Fageol Motor Co.; that they gave their cooperation in every way for the benefit of the corporation. The vice president of said creditor stated—mark you this, Senators—that if the receiver were one of his own choice, and had been selected by him, he could not have had better cooperation for the estate than was given in the matter by the receiver, Mr. Gilbert, and his attorneys, Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel.

I am coming to an end very shortly.

We will introduce evidence that G. H. Gilbert competently and carefully handled the affairs of the Fageol Motor Co. while receiver.

Respondent will show you that he never refused to grant a hearing to the plaintiff and defendant, or any creditor or creditors, or any party or parties in interest in the Fageol Motor Co. matter. Respondent will show that he was never requested to grant a hearing to plaintiff and defendant, or any creditor or creditors, or anyone interested in the proceeding in regard to the appointment of G. H. Gilbert as such receiver. Respondent will further show that he did not suppress the fact that he had appointed G. H. Gilbert as receiver to enable said Gilbert to take the necessary steps to qualify as such receiver. Respondent will show you in this regard that he simply signed the order that was left with him, filled in the name of G. H. Gilbert as receiver, and advised his secretary to notify the interested parties that Mr. Gilbert had been appointed receiver.

Respondent will demonstrate to the Senate that all of his conduct and actions in relation to the appointment of G. H. Gilbert as receiver in the Fageol Motor Co. case were open and aboveboard, and were done by respondent for the purpose and with the thought in mind of having a receiver appointed in the matter in whom he had confidence and trust. Respondent will show by witnesses that the conduct and actions of G. H. Gilbert in the Fageol Motor Co. case, the subject of article III of the articles of impeachment, redounded to the credit and benefit of said estate. When we show you these facts and circumstances the allegations set forth in article III must fall of their own weight.

I now come, Senators, to another article—article IV. There are five articles, and this is article IV.

Article IV of the articles of impeachment charges "misbehavior in office, filled with partiality and favoritism, in improperly, willfully, and unlawfully granting, upon insufficient and improper papers, an application for the appointment of a receiver in the Prudential Holding Co. case for the sole purpose of benefiting respondent's personal friends and associates."

Article IV then sets forth the alleged manner in which these acts were committed.

Respondent will show that on the 15th day of August 1931, upon the application of the Character Finance Co., of Santa Monica, Calif., in the matter of Prudential Holding Co., a Nevada corporation, respondent made an order appointing G. H. Gilbert receiver, and thereafter made an order appointing Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel attorneys for receiver. The facts and circumstances surrounding the appointment of Mr. Gilbert as receiver are as follows:

On the 15th day of August 1931 a complaint was filed asking for a receiver. The attorneys for the plaintiff were Gold, Quittner & Kearsley. Mr. Brice Kearsley, Jr., a member of said firm of attorneys, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. J. H. Stephens, vice president and director of the defendant, was present and represented the defendant. Mr. Stephens joined in the request of the attorney for the plaintiff for the order appointing a receiver.

A great many allegations of fact were made in the complaint for the purpose of establishing diversity of citizenship, and ownership of property by the defendant within the jurisdiction of the court presided over by the respondent, as the grounds of jurisdiction of said court.

On August 20, 1931, a motion to dismiss said action was filed, the defendant appearing specially for the making of said motion. The grounds upon which the said motion was based were that said bill of complaint was not properly verified, and that plaintiff was a resident of the Southern District of California and the defendant a resident of the State of Nevada. A hearing was had on said motion on the 29th of August 1931. On that date plaintiff was granted permission to file a memorandum of authorities. The motion to dismiss was finally submitted on the 19th day of September 1931, and was granted by respondent on the 2d day of October 1931.

Respondent will show that on the 5th day of September 1931, a petition in bankruptcy was filed against the Prudential Holding Co.; that the matter was assigned to Judge St. Sure's department; that during the absence of Judge St. Sure respondent acted for him; that on the 30th day of September 1931, respondent, acting for Judge St. Sure, appointed G. H. Gilbert receiver in bankruptcy, and thereafter approved the appointment of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel and a number of other attorneys as attorneys for the receiver in bankruptcy.

Respondent will show that he did not willfully, improperly, and/or unlawfully take the jurisdiction of the cause in bankruptcy, but the matter came to him in the regular course of business while he was acting for Judge St. Sure, during the temporary absence of Judge St. Sure. Instead of bringing Judge St. Sure before this court as a witness, respondent, by his attorneys has secured the consent of the managers to introduce in evidence a letter from Judge St. Sure which sets forth the reason why respondent acted for him during his absence. This letter also contains other matters that are relevant to the proceedings, and at the proper time it will be read to the Senate. This letter will conclusively prove that Judge Louderback, the respondent, is not guilty of "willfully, improperly, or unlawfully sitting in a part of the court to which he was not assigned, at the time, took jurisdiction of the case in bankruptcy, and though knowing the facts in the case and the application before him, for the dismissal of the petition and discharge of the equity receiver", as charged in article IV.

Judge Louderback did grant a motion to dismiss the case that was pending before him on the 2d day of October 1931. Respondent will show that the authorities as to the jurisdictional matter are conflicting, but that the judge exercised his judgment and dismissed the action pending before him. During the trial, these matters will be brought to the attention of the Senate. In this connection, respondent will show that the bankruptcy matter pending before Judge St. Sure was ultimately dismissed by Judge St. Sure; that this company afterward went into bankruptcy; that at the time the petition was filed, the Prudential Holding Co. was hopelessly insolvent; and that although it had a large capitalization, it had practically no assets, this million-and-a-half-dollar corporation spoken of by Mr. Sumners. Respondent will show that the application for the appointment of a receiver, and the order appointing receiver was made in good faith upon the representations of the plaintiff and the defendant also. It is true that the first petition for the appointment of a receiver in this matter was verified by Brice Kearsley, Jr., attorney for plaintiff. It further appears in the verification that the attorney was duly authorized by the plaintiff to verify the petition, and respondent maintains that said verification was good in law. It is true that an amended petition was filed, and one of the officers of the plaintiff verified the same. Respondent will show that respondent did not in any manner or form attempt to benefit and enrich the receiver or his said attorneys, that he did give his fair, impartial consideration to the application of the Prudential Holding Co. for a dismissal of the complaint, and that he did dismiss said complaint. We will show that none of the matters alleged in article IV reflecting upon respondent's conduct are true. In the Prudential Holding case, no fees were allowed either for the receiver or the attorneys for the receiver.

When we have shown you these facts and circumstances, you Senators, as jurors, will see that the allegations of misconduct and wrongdoing contained in article IV are not true and must fall of their own weight.

I now come to the last article, and you will be pleased when I tell you that. This is known as "article V" as amended."

This article deals with three new matters:

SONORA PHONOGRAPH CASE, GOLDEN STATE ASPARAGUS CASE, AND STEMPEL-COOLEY CASE

Article V, as amended, was filed in the Senate on the 18th day of April 1933. The record will show that the managers agreed that the reference in paragraph 1 of the amended article is only to the matters set out in articles I, II, III, and IV, and that the balance of amended article V sets out new matter. The new matter involves the Sonora Phonograph Co., Golden State Asparagus Co., and the Stempel-Cooley cases, and also an order made by respondent when he was a judge of the Superior Court of the State of California.

In our formal answer to amended article V, we answered with some detail the matters charged in amended article V, and we have also fully set forth affirmatively our position in regard thereto before the Senate.

With reference to the new and additional matters set up in article V, as amended, we expect to prove as follows:

RUSSELL-COLVIN CASE

Respondent did not know and never had heard, prior to the inception of these proceedings, that on March 25, 1931, or at any other time, John Douglas Short had given to his father-in-law, W. L. Hathaway, the sum of $5,000 or any sum in any amount from the compensation he had received as one of the attorneys for the receiver in the Russell-Colvin case. Respondent did not know at any time prior to the inception of these proceedings that W. L. Hathaway had advanced a loan to W. S. Leake in the sum of $1,000, or any other sum, or any amount. Respondent will introduce evidence, as heretofore stated, that the thousand dollars given by Hathaway to Leake was a loan, and a promissory note was taken therefor, and that said money loaned to said Leake came from a loan that Hathaway had negotiated with the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York upon an insurance policy on his life, and that the check made payable to W. L. Hathaway and wife was cashed and turned over to W. S. Leake as and for a loan. Respondent will show that the payment of the $5,000 by John Douglas Short to his father-in-law, W. L. Hathaway, had no relation whatever to any loan that Hathaway had made to Leake. We will prove that this $5,000 was paid by Mr. Short to his father-in-law in part of moneys advanced to Mr. Short by said Hathaway, and that the remainder of the $5,000 paid by Short to Hathaway was on account of the purchase price of certain real property heretofore conveyed by the said Hathaway to said Short and his wife, the daughter of W. L. Hathaway. We will show that the matters pertaining to this loan from the Hathaways to Leake were unknown to anyone other than the parties thereto until they were disclosed by the special committee of the House of Representatives at the hearing held in San Francisco between the 6th and 12th days of September 1932, and that said loan from Hathaway to Leake never did or could have the effect of bringing the court over which respondent presides into disrepute as alleged in article V, as amended.

Respondent will show that his relations with W. S. Leake at no time placed him under any obligations to, made him dependent upon, or put him under the influence of the said W. S. Leake in any manner and to any degree or at all.

Respondent has answered article III fully in his formal answer, and in his answer to amended article V particularly with respect to what is known as the Fageol Motor case. We have heretofore stated to you what we will prove in this matter with reference to the fact that G. H. Gilbert was not without qualifications to discharge the duties of receivership. We will show you that the appointment of Mr. Gilbert as receiver and of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel as his attorneys was not made in "tyrannical and oppressive disregard of the rights and interests of the parties in interest" as alleged in amended article V. We will show that there is no justification for the language used or the insinuations contained in amended article V, wherein reference is made to the Fageol Motor Co. case.

Respondent will introduce evidence in regard to this matter that will clearly establish that his conduct in relation to this case was unimpeachable, and that no criticism can justly be made, or could have been made, in relation to the appointment of G. H. Gilbert as receiver and Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel as his attorneys.

SONORA PHONOGRAPH CASE

This case is treated for the first time in amended article V. The Sonora Phonograph case originated in New York, and the proceedings before Judge Louderback involved an ancillary receivership. Judge Louderback appointed G. H. Gilbert as a receiver in bankruptcy. A petition was filed on December 19, 1929, and on December 20, 1929, Judge Louderback appointed G. H. Gilbert and the Irving Trust Co. as coancillary receivers. It will be shown that subsequently the Irving Trust Co. on motion was released as coreceiver. The firm of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel was appointed attorneys for the receiver after a petition filed. The fees for the Receiver Gilbert were statutory and were allowed in the bankruptcy proceedings.

Our formal answer to the allegations referring to the Sonora Phonograph Co. case denies specifically the alleged wrongdoing in this case as expressed in amended article V. We will show to the Senate, in line with the allegations of our answer, that that which is set forth in said amended article V about G. H. Gilbert being a personal and political friend of Harold Louderback is not true.

The evidence will show that respondent had been acquainted with Mr. Gilbert for a number of years and had confidence and trust in his integrity and ability. We will show that G. H. Gilbert had qualifications to discharge the duties of receivership, and that he was a man of good executive ability and had for years many people under him in the position occupied by him with the Western Union Co. We will show you that his services with the Western Union Co. were valuable services, that he was with this company consecutively for a period of 34 years, that he raised himself in said company by his diligence and intelligence from a clerk to traffic manager, and that he left this position with the company some time ago voluntarily. We will show you that the Sonora Phonograph Co. ran as a going business for a period of time under the direction of Mr. G. H. Gilbert, the receiver, and that he successfully handled said business, and collected large amounts of money in said receivership. When we have explained to you, as we will, all the facts and circumstances in relation to this Sonora Phonograph Co., we say to you Senators, judges and jurors, that the allegations in relation to this case will fall of their own weight. So far as the fees to Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel are concerned—the $20,000 allowed—we will show were not unreasonable and the parties interested were willing to and did consent to an allowance of $17,500.

GOLDEN STATE ASPARAGUS CASE

This case is alleged, for the first time, in amended article V. The American Can Co., through its attorneys, caused an action for the appointment of a receiver in equity against the Golden State Asparagus Co., to be filed on September 5, 1930. At the request of the attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant, Mr. George M. Edwards was appointed equity receiver. After Mr. Edwards qualified, he had a talk with Judge Louderback, the respondent herein, and after said talk filed a petition for the appointment of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel as his attorneys. We will show you that the work accomplished by Mr. Edwards, the receiver, and Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel was commended by the parties to the action.

Respondent will show that he suggested to George M. Edwards the appointment of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel in said receivership matter, that the suggestion was acceptable to said George M. Edwards, the receiver. We will show that respondent stated to Mr. Edwards that if the attorneys respondent suggested were not satisfactory to him respondent would suggest others. We will show that the attorneys suggested by respondent were agreeable to Mr. Edwards, that he petitioned to have them appointed, and that his selection of attorneys was confirmed by order of court. We will show that the legal work in connection with the receivership required the time and attention of the attorneys selected by the receiver, that it materially aided the proper administration of said receivership, and that there was allowed by respondent to said attorneys the sum of $14,000 on account.

Respondent will show that he has not denied $1,500 each to the attorneys for the plaintiff and defendants, but that that matter is still pending and undetermined. Respondent states and will show that there was very substantial legal services rendered in the matter. We will show to the Senate that the sum of $14,000 allowed on account for the services rendered to the receiver was a reasonable and proper amount to be allowed, at the time it was allowed, on account of services heretofore rendered by said attorneys in the matter of said estate, that respondent allowed George M. Edwards, the receiver, the sum of $14,000 and the same amount to his attorneys. All parties had agreed upon $14,000 to Receiver Edwards.

We will show that his conduct in the action in ratifying the appointment of the attorneys in the said matter did not add to or cause any "disrespect, apprehension, and public contempt of said respondent to the public in the northern district of California", or anywhere else. That the fees of the attorneys for the receiver were fixed after a hearing had in open court with reference to the amount that should be allowed. And upon a full hearing of said matter, respondent fixed the fee in said case, which due to the value of the services rendered, were and are reasonable for the work performed by said attorneys. Nothing occurred in the Golden State Asparagus case which called for any censure of respondent. Nothing occurred which would tend to show that the discretion exercised and the judgment arrived at by respondent were not sound. We will show that none of the acts and conduct of respondent in this case, by any stretch of the imagination, could be construed as high crimes or misdemeanors spoken of in the Constitution of the United States. We expect to show these matters, and when we do, we state that the allegations in relation to this matter, as expressed in article V, as amended, will fall of their own weight.

STEMPEL-COOLEY CASE

In article V, as amended, references were made to what is known as "the Stempel-Cooley case." This was a bankruptcy matter. The firm of Stempel-Cooley were the owners of some 5 apartment houses and 1 incomplete building at the time the bankruptcy petition was filed. Mr. G. H. Gilbert was appointed receiver, and on a petition filed, Keyes & Erskine were appointed the attorneys. Respondent will show that said receiver was allowed the sum of $500 for his services and that said sum was and is a fair and reasonable sum for the services so rendered by the receiver in said matter, and that no appeal was ever taken from the amount of said sum of $500 to said Keyes & Erskine. That respondent did not fix the fee of said receiver in said matter. That the same was fixed and allowed by the referee in bankruptcy.

Respondent will show you that there were no acts or conduct on his behalf that could call for any censure, or any lack of discretion on his part. His conduct in this case was free from any alleged commission of "high crimes or misdemeanors" as this term is used in the Constitution of the United States. When this case is explained to the Senate, we feel sure that the allegations of his conduct in relation thereto as expressed in article V, as amended, of the impeachment articles will fall of their own weight.

APPOINTMENT OF G. H. GILBERT AS AN APPRAISER WHILE RESPONDENT WAS JUDGE OF THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

We respectfully urge that we should not be called upon to explain anything in relation to this case because it was heard prior to the time Judge Louderback, the respondent herein, was a Federal judge.

However, respondent states that he will show that, although he did appoint G. H. Gilbert as appraiser while he was a State judge, he had no knowledge as to what work was performed by said G. H. Gilbert. And he states that whatever fees he may have allowed while a State judge in this case were reasonable fees that should have been allowed appraisers in such a matter. That if respondent is called upon to explain said matter, he will satisfy the Senate that whatever acts were done by him, and whatever appointments were made by him, were made in good faith. That three appraisers were appointed in an estate. G. H. Gilbert was 1 of the 3. Respondent had no means of knowing the amount of services rendered by each. The fees charged were reasonable and paid by the executor. The respondent only had knowledge of these when the account in the estate was approved.

We have outlined to the Senators, sitting as judges and jurors, what we expect to prove on behalf of the respondent herein. We know that we can establish and will establish the absolute innocence of wrongdoing of any kind or character on behalf of Judge Harold Louderback, the respondent herein. And we confidently expect when the testimony is in, and the case is closed that the Senate will render a verdict acquitting Judge Harold Louderback, respondent herein, of each and every, all and singular, the alleged charges made against him. We confidently expect this. On behalf of Judge Louderback, we thank you for your attention, your kindness, and your patience.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, although under the rules all orders must be submitted in writing, I ask the court to indulge me for a moment on a matter relating purely to the time when the Senate shall sit as a court. Before presenting an order, I want to sound out the sentiment and see what members of the court may have to say or think about the time for convening. If I may have the attention of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] I suggest that the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment convene hereafter at 10 o'clock in the forenoon; but before offering an order to that effect I should like to have some expression from members of the court.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for his courtesy, which is habitual. I had intended to call a conference of the Republican minority for tomorrow to consider this very suggestion, as well as some pending legislation. I would rather not at this time consent to an order being made for a meeting at 10 o'clock until after a conference is had tomorrow. I want to cooperate with the Senator, as he knows. We are anxious to get through. There is a question in my mind, however, whether we should convene at 10 o'clock and continue the trial until 1 o'clock, and then proceed with the consideration of legislative business. That would be one way to handle the matter. Another way would be to meet at 10 or 11 o'clock in the morning and go through the day, completing the trial at the earliest possible date, without the intervention of legislative business. I am not sure which is the wiser course. I would prefer that when we conclude today we adjourn until 11 or 12 o'clock tomorrow, at which time I shall be glad to discuss the subject further with the Senator.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, then I move that when the court concludes its business today it stand in recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow forenoon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arizona.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. ASHURST. Now, Mr. President, the witnesses are on hand, we have 2 more hours of the day, and I send the following order to the desk and ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona proposes an order, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the witnesses shall stand while giving their testimony.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the order will be entered.

The managers on the part of the House may call the first witness.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, I inquire of the Chair whether we shall call the first witness and have him sworn, or call all the witnesses available and have them all sworn at once?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks that the business of the court would be expedited by swearing each witness as he enters the Chamber. The oath can be administered quickly.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. May we inquire where the witness will stand?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair suggests that the witness stand in the center, at the desk, near the reporter, and equidistant from counsel.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I should like to propound another inquiry, if it is not asking too much. Would the Chair prefer that counsel sit or stand while examining the witness?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the judgment of the present occupant of the Chair that counsel may sit or stand, according to their convenience.

EXAMINATION OF FRANCIS C. BROWN

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Call Mr. Francis C. Brown. FRANCIS C. BROWN, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Mr. HEBERT. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. HEBERT. Would it be in order to call a quorum at this time? A number of Senators are absent from the Chamber, and it seems to me that it would be in order to call a quorum at this time, since the first witness is just starting to give his testimony.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would be in order.

Mr. HEBERT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. How long have you practiced law in San Francisco?—A. Since 1924.

Q. With whom were you associated in March 1930 in the practice of the law?—A. With De Lancey C. Smith.

Q. As such were you counsel for the Russell-Colvin Co. at that time?—A. We were.

Q. What is the Russell-Colvin Co.?—A. The Russell-Colvin Co. was a copartnership which was then engaged in the business of stock brokerage—a general stock-brokerage business.

Q. What was their financial condition at that time?—A. Their financial condition became very unliquid in March 1930.

Q. What steps were determined on by counsel to try to get them out of their difficulties?—A. Early in March or late in February 1930, an effort was made to liquidate some of the company's frozen assets, consisting of real estate and stocks and bonds and other securities which they had underwritten. These efforts were partially successful and partially unsuccessful. The San Francisco Stock Exchange notified the company that unless they raised a certain amount of money, $200,000, by Monday, March 9 or 10, 1930, a suspension would take place. The company was suspended from the stock exchange on March 9, 1930. We then directed our attention to placing the company in receivership in the Federal court.

Q. What steps did you take?—A. We conferred with the firm of Thelen & Marrin, composed of Max Thelen and Paul S. Marrin, who are likewise attorneys, who represented a plaintiff known as Gardner M. Olmstead in an equity receivership proceeding. The proceeding was initiated in the northern district of California by Messrs. Thelen and Marrin by filing a petition, to which we filed an answer admitting the allegation, and then proceeded before Judge Louderback, to whom one of these matters was assigned for the appointment of a receiver.

Q. When was the first time you went to the district court clerk's office in connection with this matter?—A. It was on Monday, March 10, 1930. I think that was the date.

Q. What was done about it on that date?—A. On that date we took out a petition and a verified answer and tendered it for filing. We were informed by the clerk that a number had been drawn which was assigned to the department of Judge A. F. St. Sure. We were further informed that Judge A. F. St. Sure was sitting in Sacramento, Calif., which is north of San Francisco, and that he would not preside at the appointment of a receiver unless we went to Sacramento. We were then informed that no other judge of the three judges sitting there would preside on the matter in the absence of Judge St. Sure, and Mr. Marrin, of the firm of Thelen & Marrin, then decided not to file the petition. It was the next day that the petition was finally filed.

Q. The next day did you take one or two petitions to the district court clerk's office?—A. I personally did not take any, but Mr. Marrin, representing the plaintiff, did.

Q. Were you with him?—A. I was with him; yes.

Q. Were both of those petitions filed?—A. My recollection is that both the petitions were filed approximately at the same time, or one shortly after the other.

Q. And the names of the judges were drawn to consider these petitions?—A. The first petition was again assigned to Judge A. F. St. Sure, who was still absent in Sacramento. The next petition was assigned to Judge Louderback.

Q. Will you explain why the two petitions were filed on that second day, on March 11?—A. The two petitions were filed, according to my understanding, primarily because of the absence of Judge St. Sure in Sacramento, and, secondarily, because it was considered advisable to have two petitions.

Q. After the petitions were filed, and you drew the names of Judge St. Sure and Judge Louderback, what further was done?—A. Mr. Marrin and Mr. Thelen and Mr. Addison G. Strong, who is the one we were proposing for receiver, Mr. Lloyd Dinkelspiel, representing the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe, attorneys for the San Francisco Stock Exchange, went into Judge Louderback's secretary's office and made an appointment to see the judge. He was holding a short session of court in the forenoon. The appointment resulted in our seeing the judge about 11 or 11:30 o'clock—some time in the forenoon shortly before 12 o'clock on that day, which was Tuesday.

Q. Who was Mr. Strong?—A. Mr. Addison G. Strong was a member of an accounting firm of San Francisco, certified public accountants, known as Hood & Strong. They were the auditors for the San Francisco Stock Exchange, and they were likewise the accountants who had had charge of auditing the books of the Russell-Colvin Co., the stock-brokerage firm. Furthermore, Mr. Strong had been for some months prior to March 1930 in immediate supervision of the affairs of the Russell-Colvin Co., which, as I have stated, were in a somewhat muddled condition.

Q. Who sent him to supervise this concern?—A. He was sent by the stock exchange, and with the consent of the copartners constituting the partnership.

Q. What right did he have there? Why was he sent there? What right did the stock exchange have to send him?

Mr. LINFORTH. One minute. I object to that question as calling for the opinion or conclusion of the witness, Mr. President.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I did not hear the counsel.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will counsel please repeat his suggestion?

Mr. LINFORTH. That question is objected to as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness and not binding at all upon the respondent.

Mr. ASHURST. That is to be decided by the Presiding Officer without debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair is of the opinion that at this time the witness has not shown himself to be qualified to answer that question.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Who were Thelen & Marrin?—A. Thelen & Marrin were a firm of attorneys in San Francisco consisting of Max Thelen and Paul S. Marrin.

Q. As attorneys for the Russell-Colvin Co., did you know their relationship to the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. I do not understand your question—the relationship of whom to the San Francisco Stock Exchange?

Q. The Russell Colvin Co.—A. Oh, yes; they were members of the San Francisco Stock Exchange and owned a seat on the exchange. They had, periodically, I think semiannually, or possibly quarterly, to submit to the stock exchange a balance sheet and a financial statement which the auditors for the stock exchange reviewed, and on the basis of the showing in the balance sheet and the financial statement they were either permitted to continue to do business or were notified to improve their condition or were suspended, depending upon what conditions were shown by the balance sheet.

Q. Was it in pursuance of their policy to try to find out the condition that Mr. Strong was in the firm that you represented as an auditor or as a supervisor?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a minute. We object to that question as calling for the opinion or conclusion of the witness, and on a matter which is not binding upon the respondent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair overrules the objection.

The WITNESS. Will you repeat the question, please?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will be read to the witness.

The question was read by the Official Reporter, as follows:

Was it in pursuance of their policy to try to find out the condition that Mr. Strong was in the firm that you represented as an auditor or as a supervisor?

A. Yes. If I may explain my answer, some time in October—I believe it was in 1929—

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I cannot hear the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness will please speak louder.

A. Some time in the fall of 1929 one of these financial statements had been submitted to the stock exchange which showed that the company was in a very weak condition from the standpoint of liquidity. From that date on, as I recall it, the stock exchange insisted that all further business transacted by the firm be reviewed by their representative, so that whatever action the firm desired to take might be vetoed, if necessary, by a representative of the exchange, and Mr. Strong was the designated man acting in that capacity.

Q. Who consented to Mr. Strong or recommended him to the court as a proper person for receiver in this case?—

A. Mr. Marrin and I conferred concerning the man whom we would recommend to the court and agreed, in conjunction with the attorneys for the stock exchange, the attorneys for several of the larger creditors, or several large creditors, I should say, to recommend Mr. Strong, and we were the ones who did recommend Mr. Strong to the court.

Q. Please state what occurred when you and the other parties whom you mentioned a few moments ago went into the chambers of Judge Louderback to confer with him about the appointment of Mr. Strong as receiver.—A. When we arrived in the chambers of Judge Louderback he was there, and Mr. Marrin, representing the plaintiff, summarized to the judge the contents of the petition, stating the financial condition of the company, the fact that they had been suspended on the preceding day from doing any further business on the San Francisco Stock Exchange, and the further fact that attachments had been threatened and other legal proceedings were imminent. He further outlined the nature of the company's business and the need for the appointment of a receiver, either to tide it over the period during which it was lacking money or to liquidate; and he outlined Mr. Strong's qualifications at some length, pointing out that he had been acting in the supervisory capacity which I have mentioned over the firm's affairs. I then supplemented this statement by Mr. Marrin by further stating my opinion as to the qualifications of Mr. Strong.

Q. Did you state to the judge at that time what parties had agreed to Mr. Strong or were asking his appointment?—A. I believe I made the statement directly. In any event, during the course of the interview with the judge he inquired as to what the attitude of certain other creditors or other creditors were, and we pointed out that the receivership proceedings met with the approval of a number of other creditors.

Q. Were they the ones he had asked about that you assured him had agreed to it?—A. I do not recall that any names were mentioned. We did mention the name of another law firm who represented two very large creditors, stating they were agreeable to the selection and were also agreeable to the proceeding, as I remember.

Q. You mean the selection of Mr. Strong?—A. Yes.

Q. Then state what occurred next.—A. The judge interrogated Mr. Marrin and me as to whether or not a bankruptcy was apt to overthrow or supersede the equity-receivership proceeding. I believe we both made comment upon that, the substance of the comment being that the firm had an adequate defense by showing that it was solvent in fact even though it was in an unliquid condition. He then said that it would be necessary to dismiss the first petition which had been assigned to the department of Judge St. Sure before he would act upon the petition which had been assigned to him. He said he would exact a bond of the receiver of $50,000 and would also exact of the plaintiff a bond of $50,000 conditioned to indemnify every other creditor than the party to the proceeding who might be injured by the appointment of a receiver in the event it subsequently appeared that the appointment of a receiver was improvident.

Q. What kind of a bond is that, Mr. Brown?—A. I never heard of a bond of that kind before. I was informed by the clerk, Mr. Naling, that he had never heard of one, and we had great difficulty in getting it written.

Q. Did you actually give the $50,000 indemnity bond by the petitioner?—A. If I may interrupt, it just occurs to me that something else took place when we were in the judge's chambers that I did not refer to. The judge asked Mr. Strong whether any of the attorneys present were his attorney. He mentioned them by name. Mr. Strong said they were not his attorney. He then asked Mr. Strong who his attorneys were and Mr. Strong said he had no regular counsel.

Then we retired from the judge's chambers, and had taken out to the clerk's office a representative of the Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., to write the receiver's bond. We questioned him concerning the bond which the judge said he would exact of the plaintiff and he informed us that the company would not write a bond in the sum of $50,000 unless it had complete collateral, which the plaintiff was not in position to offer.

We then went back into the judge's chambers, as I remember it, also in the forenoon, and told him that the bonding company would not write a $50,000 bond and suggested that a bond in that amount was excessive and asked him to reduce it. He then agreed to reduce it to $10,000. I believe this second interview which I have mentioned took place shortly after the 1st on the forenoon of Tuesday.

Q. Then after that what steps did you take?—A. I went back to my office and Mr. Thelen and Mr. Marrin went back to their office, and we arranged for the dismissal of Mr. Marrin arranged for the dismissal of the petition which had been assigned to Judge St. Sure, and we both collaborated on securing a bond of $10,000 for the plaintiff and later in the afternoon went out again to the judge's chambers—as I remember it, it was rather late, around 4 or 4:30—having with us the dismissal which Mr. Marrin filed and the necessary papers, the receiver's bond and so on, and the order for the appointment of a receiver in the proceeding which had been assigned to Judge Louderback.

Q. Did you see the judge at that time?—A. We did.

Q. Who was present when you saw him on that occasion?—A. Mr. Thelen, Mr. Martin, Mr. Strong, and, I believe, Mr. Dinkelspiel was present, but I am not sure—yes, Mr. Dinkelspiel was present—and I.

Q. Which Dinkelspiel?—A. Mr. Lloyd Dinkelspiel.

Q. With what firm is he connected?—A. He is connected with the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe.

Q. When you went out this time, as I understand it, you had completed the bond?—A. We had not completed the plaintiff's bond because the condition which the bond should contain was not clear in our minds. The judge had not made it clear or had merely made a general statement that he wanted a bond of $10,000 of the plaintiff in case the receivership proceeding was improvident, so we again took out a representative of the Hartford Co., together with a completed receiver's bond and a partially completed plaintiff's bond. I believe at that time the answer of the company admitting the allegations of the complaint was filed, after the judge dictated an addition to be contained in that.

Q. What occurred in this conference with the judge?—A. In this conference the judge looked over the order appointing the receiver and filled in the amount of the bond. He also, as I remember it, dictated the exact wording which he would require in the plaintiff's bond and dictated to me an addition which was to be inserted in the answer and which I specifically, on behalf of the defendant company, consented to the appointment of Mr. Strong as receiver.

The order was signed appointing Mr. Strong receiver. The plaintiff's bond was completed and was given to the judge, who approved it and approved the receiver's bond. The judge told Mr. Strong that after he had qualified or after the qualification matters were attended to that he wanted to see him. After leaving the judge's chambers we went into the clerk's office where Mr. Strong signed the receiver's oath and took the oath, and then bonds and orders were filed and the receiver qualified. Then we left.

Q. What time of day was that?—A. I could not give you the exact time. It was quite late. It was probably between 5 and 6, or around 5:30, I would say, because the clerk had held the office open for several hours to accommodate us on account of the fact that it was so urgent to have the receiver appointed.

Q. At the time you left the judge's chambers and he told Mr. Strong to come back after qualification was over, state whether or not he told him to come back that day.—A. He did not, to my recollection.

Q. Do you recall what occurred there?—A. I recall what occurred perfectly; yes.

Q. At the time Mr. Strong had qualified and you left the clerk's office, to your knowledge had anything up to that time been said with regard to who would be his attorney or his counsel in this case?—A. By whom?

Q. By anyone to your knowledge.—A. No; there was no discussion of any kind at that time.

Q. Had you been in all the negotiations up to that time so far as you know?—A. I had been present on both of the two occasions on which the parties I have mentioned interviewed the judge, and no mention was made at that time other than I have stated.

Q. The first information you had about his seeking counsel or his consideration of who would be counsel occurred at what time?—A. Mr. Strong and Mr. Marrin and Mr. Thelen and I rode down on the street car from the courthouse or the Federal Building to Montgomery Street, which is some 6 or 7 blocks below. On the way down Mr. Strong and I, and, I believe, Mr. Thelen, were sitting on one of the side seats and also participated in the discussion. Mr. Strong asked me what I thought of Mr. McAuliffe.—Mr. F. M. McAuliffe—

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, we submit the witness is not answering the question, but the statement he is making is purely hearsay and not binding on the respondent. We object to it for those reasons.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is overruled.

A. (Continuing.) Mr. Strong asked my opinion of Mr. F. M. McAuliffe, of the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe, as possibly counsel or attorney for the receiver. I told him I thought Mr. McAuliffe was preeminently qualified in every respect. He also asked me my opinion of another attorney in San Francisco, Lloyd Ackerman, and I told him I considered Mr. Ackerman was well qualified also. I may state that both of those attorneys are attorneys for either the stock exchange in the case of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe, or, as to Ackerman, attorney for the eastern members of the San Francisco Stock Exchange—I should say members of the San Francisco Stock Exchange who are also members of the New York Stock Exchange.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. As such, do they specialize in that kind of work?—A. I considered that they were both well qualified in handling the duties of the attorneys for the receiver of this concern.

Q. What was the next that you heard of the relationship between Mr. Strong and the judge after that time?—A. The following day I received a telephone call from Mr. Strong which came to my office in my absence. I called back on the telephone in response to that and made an appointment with Mr. Strong to go to his office and see him. He then informed me of—

Mr. LINFORTH. We submit, Mr. President, that the testimony about to be given by the witness is hearsay, self-serving, not taking place in the presence of the respondent, and not binding upon him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair thinks the objection is well taken.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, if you will pardon me, I do not see how we can prove a conspiracy unless we are permitted to prove the attitude and the effect that this had on the parties directly concerned in this matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair does not intend to proscribe counsel unduly, but he thinks the ruling just made is correct.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Then, in response to this telephone call, you went to see Mr. Strong?—A. And I conferred with him; yes.

Q. Did you ascertain from him then what had occurred between him and the court that morning?—A. Well, he outlined to me at great length—

Mr. HANLEY. Just a moment. We object to what Strong said to this witness as not binding on Judge Louderback, the respondent herein. It calls for hearsay testimony which he had no opportunity to contradict or to make any statement about.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the manager desire to have this witness testify what Mr. Strong told him had been said between Mr. Strong and the judge that morning?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. No. The question was only as to whether he had obtained from Mr. Strong at that time

Mr. Strong's version of what had occurred between him and the judge, but not as to what it was.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, the witness had started to give the conversation which he was about to relate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. After you visited Mr. Strong, what was the next thing you learned about the matter?—A. I had, as I recall it, one other conference with Mr. Strong after this; and on March 13, 1930, I received a telephone call from the secretary to Judge Louderback, asking me to come to his chambers; that is, the next contact that I had with the judge or his secretary was a telephone call which came in on Thursday, I believe it was.

Q. In response to that, did you go to the judge's chambers?—A. I did.

Q. Whom did you find there?—A. I went there in the company of Mr. Marrin and Mr. Thelen, and when we arrived there we were taken into the judge's chambers, and we there saw the judge.

Q. What transpired in that conference?—A. The judge stated that it had not been his custom to appoint receivers with whom he was not personally acquainted; that he had deviated in the instance of Mr. Strong because he had been so strongly urged and highly recommended by us for the appointment. He stated further that he did not understand Mr. Strong; that he had told him the first day to come back and see him, and he waited in his chambers until 6:30, I believe he said, and that Mr. Strong did not come back; that he came back the following day and had seen him the following morning, which would be Wednesday morning, and he had then and there conferred with the judge, and everything had been very pleasant between them in their conversation until it came down to the selection of a lawyer or attorney for the receiver, and that Mr. Strong would not take counsel or accept the judge's suggestion as to who should be the attorney for the receiver. He said furthermore that he had violated the judge's instructions in that on the previous day, or the day before, I forget which, the judge had definitely instructed Mr. Strong not to go near Mr. McAuliffe, and that Mr. Strong had violated his instructions and had signed a petition for the appointment of Mr. McAuliffe's firm as attorneys for the receiver, and that he had further violated the judge's instructions by taking possession of the assets or securities which this stock brokerage firm had in its box, contrary to the judge's instructions, which were to the effect that he should do nothing until his attorney had been finally approved by the court. Then I replied to the judge, and I think Mr. Marrin likewise talked to him.

Q. What was the purport of the conversation you had with him?—A. Well, the general purport of it was that I considered—if I may go back just a moment, the judge also said that he felt that Mr. Strong was not as well qualified as we had said he was, on account of the fact that he had broken faith with the judge.

I pointed out that we had known Mr. Strong for many years, and that his firm enjoyed an enviable reputation in San Francisco; that he was attorney for the Stock Exchange, and that I felt that any misunderstanding between them was entirely a misunderstanding, and was not due to any lack of good faith on Mr. Strong's part. I also said that, in my opinion, it was probably due to a misunderstanding as to what was said in case Mr. Strong had not abided by the judge's instructions; and I believe—yes; the judge also said that he had made up his mind to remove Mr. Strong as receiver unless he would sign a written resignation which the judge had prepared. He said, "I have in my desk a signed order, or an order which I will sign, and which I intend to serve on Mr. Strong unless he resigns." He said, "I suggested that he select as his counsel some of the leading firms in the city"; and he named the firm of Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, who were a well-known law firm there, and the firm of Sullivan, Sullivan & Roche, or Cushing & Cushing; and he said that Mr. Strong would not accept any of these firms as attorneys, but insisted upon Mr. McAuliffe.

Q. Did he state at that time that he had also named John Douglas Short, or Keyes & Erskine, or Erskine & Erskine?—A. He never mentioned the name of Mr. Short, or Mr. Erskine, or either of the Messrs. Erskine. Mr. Keyes is dead.

Q. Then what occurred next in the conversation?—A. There was quite a lengthy conversation.

I stated my position very strongly—that I considered that the removal of Mr. Strong was unjustified, and attempted to dissuade the judge from following through the program. He said that he had summoned Mr. Strong to his office, and that he would be there shortly, as I remember, and that unless Mr. Strong resigned he intended to remove him. In other words, he was adamant in his position.

He said that he had in mind to name as the successor of Mr. Strong a man by the name of Hunter—H. B. Hunter—who, he stated, had been recommended to him by Mr. Sidney Schwartz, the former vice president or president of the San Francisco Stock Exchange; I do not know which. He said that Mr. Hunter had served on a jury in his court, and that he had also acted as receiver in the case of the Security Bond & Finance Co., of Berkeley, Calif.; that he considered that Mr. Hunter was well qualified, and that he would give us until 4 o'clock that afternoon to make inquiry concerning Mr. Hunter's qualifications; that if, during that period of time—in other words, between 12 o'clock and 4 o'clock—we notified him of any legitimate reason why Mr. Hunter should not be appointed, he would consider the objection, but that he was not giving us the opportunity of saying "yes" or "no." He also stated to us that if any of us talked to Mr. Hunter, or communicated with him in any way, he would not appoint him.

Q. Was that the end of the conference? Did he say anything to you at that time about who would represent Mr. Hunter as attorney?—A. Well, he said this: He said that he was determined, in view of the fact that a dispute had arisen between him and Mr. Strong, to appoint someone who was so highly qualified that there could be no question concerning his appointment; and at some time during the course of that conference he said that he had been approached by a man who was high up in the local Masonic circles as a candidate for appointment as receiver in that case, but that he declined to consider his name on account of the fact that he had as his attorneys Shortridge & McInerney; Shortridge & McInerney being a firm of lawyers consisting of Samuel Shortridge, Jr., and, I believe, Joseph McInerney.

I think that is the general substance of that conference.

Q. As you left the judge's chambers, was Mr. Strong there?—A. Mr. Strong was in the judge's anteroom as we went out, and he was ushered in as we left.

Q. How long did you stay after that?—A. As I remember it, we waited outside of the judge's anteroom—in other words, in the corridor—until Mr. Strong came out, and then rode down on the street car with him.

Q. What did you learn at that time had been the judge's action?—A. I believe Mr. Strong showed us a copy of an order removing him. In any event, he informed us that he had been removed.

Q. After Hunter entered upon his duties, or was qualified as receiver, whom did he employ as his attorney?—A. I believe he nominated John Douglas Short as his attorney, and the latter subsequently associated with him the firm with which he was associated, namely, Keyes & Erskine, consisting of Herbert Erskine and Morse Erskine.

Q. Do you know whether he was a partner in that firm?—A. It is my understanding that he was not a partner.

Q. What contract, if any, did you have with the conduct of the receivership under Mr. Hunter?—A. After Mr. Hunter had been appointed, and Mr. Morse Erskine and Mr. Short had assumed the duties of attorneys for the receiver, a conference was called, at which Mr. Marrin and I and the receiver and his attorneys were present. We were then informed that the judge had desired us to supervise or approve, rather, every step that was taken in the receivership; and thereafter periodically during the course of the receivership a great number of petitions were filed for instructions concerning virtually every liquidation, and they were submitted to us, and we perused them, and either approved them or did not approve them, accordingly as they seemed to be satisfactory or objectionable.

Q. What, if any, appreciable amount of work connected with the receivership did you and your firm do?—A. A very substantial amount of work.

Q. What was the nature of it?—A. Well, we had been so intimately connected with the firm's affairs before it went into receivership that there were a great number of matters which were pending, of which we had knowledge—I do not say a great number, but a number of matters of which we had knowledge, and we consulted with the attorneys for the receiver and endeavored to acquaint them with the facts as we knew them; and we were also attorneys for a corporation known as the Consolidated Paper Box Co., the securities of which had been underwritten by Russell-Colvin & Co. There were a great number of transactions concerning the liquidation of Russell-Colvin & Co.'s holdings of the Consolidated Box Securities which were handled almost entirely by us in the negotiating stages and turned over to the receiver and his attorneys, and there were a great number of other matters where we were consulted, and a great many conferences.

Q. Do you recall the time when the fees in this case were allowed to Mr. Short and to Mr. Hunter?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before that allowance did you have any conferences with them with regard to it?—A. We had a conference with Morse Erskine, one of the receiver's attorneys, and with the receiver, at which Mr. DeLancey Smith and Mr. Marrin and I were all present.

Q. Whom did they all represent in this conference?—A. Mr. Smith and I represented the defunct firm and Mr. Marrin represented the plaintiff. I may add that the receiver also informed Mr. Marrin in my presence that the judge desired to have him or his firm exercise the same degree of supervision that we exercised over the conduct of the receivership.

Q. In this conference over fees, what amounts did they suggest to you as their fees in the case?—A. We had been requested to attend the conference for two reasons. One was—

Mr. LINFORTH. One moment. We submit that that is not at all responsive to the question. I will ask the reporter to read the question.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. In this conference over fees, what amounts did they suggest to you as their fees in the case?—A. We had been requested to attend the conference for two reasons. One was—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks the answer thus far is not responsive.

A. The amount of fees which were suggested were $75,000 compensation for the attorneys for the receiver for services performed up to that date, and it is my recollection that that conference took place in the latter part of December or the first week in January of 1931.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING.

Q. Who suggested that amount?—A. Morse Erskine.

Q. What was suggested for the receiver up to that time?—A. A fee of $50,000, against which was to be credited the sum of $1,000 which the receiver had been drawing monthly from the date of his appointment.

Q. Did those of you who had been called into this conference with them at that time agree to those fees?—A. We did not.

Q. What countersuggestion did you make?—A. Mr. Smith—

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment. We submit, Mr. President, that the answer that was given cannot in any way, shape, or form be binding on the respondent unless that matter was called to his attention at the time of the hearing on the application and the making of the order allowing the fees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is overruled. By Mr. Manager BROWNING.

Q. What counterproposal was made by you, if any?—A. I forgot the exact figure. I think Mr. Smith and Mr. Marrin and I had agreed upon a figure which Mr. Smith then suggested at the conference. I believe that was $20,000 for the receiver, and either $25,000 or $30,000 for his counsel.

Q. Do you know on what you based those figures?—A. I based it on our personal knowledge of the services which had been rendered, all of which we had had personal knowledge of. I believe we had been over or had reviewed—no; I withdraw that. Also upon what we understood to be the reasonable value of such services.

Q. For what other purpose were you called into this conference except on this fee proposition?—A. For the purpose of suggesting fees which the attorneys for the plaintiff and the attorneys for the defendant intended to apply for.

Q. Was there any discussion of that at that time?—A. Yes. Mr. Erskine asked Mr. Marrin what fee—or asked Mr. Smith, I believe, what fee they intended to apply for, and Mr. Smith replied that the attorneys for the plaintiff and ourselves had agreed upon a joint application in the sum of $15,000 total compensation for all.

Mr. LONG. I did not understand that. Did you say $15,000 or $58,000?

A. Fifteen thousand. Mr. Erskine declined to commit himself when Mr. Smith refused—when we refused to accept the $75,000 suggestion of his fee.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING.

Q. Did you get any closer together in your agreement than the $30,000 on your part and the $75,000 on their part?—A. No, sir.

Q. There was not any further discussion, as I understand, of the proposition of you and the attorneys for the petitioner making joint application for $15,000?—A. Well, the original understanding which we had had with the attorneys for the receiver at the time they informed us that the judge desired to have us do this work was that we were to be compensated out of the estate, and at various times Mr. Erskine had reiterated that understanding. This conference more or less broke up in a strained condition on account of the fact that we were at loggerheads on the fees which they suggested.

Q. How much was actually allowed at the hearing on these fees?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment. Do you mean allowed to the attorneys for the receiver or to the witness?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Answer the question.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I have the question read?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reporter will read the question.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. How much was actually allowed at the hearing on these fees?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment. Do you mean allowed to the attorneys for the receiver or to the witness?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks counsel may cross-examine the witness on that phase of it when the proper time arrives. The witness may answer the question.

A. The attorneys for the receiver were allowed $46,250, and the attorneys for the plaintiff and the defendant combined were allowed $8,750. I forget the exact amount that was allowed the receiver.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING.

Q. Was this on account, or for the entire service in the case?—A. It was on account.

Q. After that, how much more, if anything, was allowed the attorneys for the receiver?—A. $5,000.

Q. Do you know the total amount that was allowed the receiver in this case?—A. I have not that exact figure in mind, Mr. Browning.

Q. Over what period of time did this receivership run as an active receivership?—A. This application for fees, as I recall it, was heard in April 1931, and the receivership had commenced on March 13—the work of Mr. Hunter had commenced on March 13, 1930. At that time, at the time the fees were allowed, no dividends had been paid, and no securities had been delivered, except safe-keeping securities; in other words, securities which were not subject to any marginal requirements.

Q. Has the receivership been closed yet?—A. No, sir.

Q. Over what period of time was the bulk of the work to be done? How long did it require to do the principal part of the work in this case?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment. We object to that question as calling for the opinion or conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I asked him to state a fact as to what it was.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness may answer.

A. The bulk of the work was accounting work, which was done by a staff of employees whom Mr. Hunter hired for that work. It consisted largely of tracing the securities into the individual pools and determining the respective equities of the various margin customers. That was due to the fact that the firm of Russell-Colvin & Co. had a brokerage account with E. A. Pierce & Co., and also with several other members of the New York Stock Exchange, each of which had been liquidated at or about the time the receiver was appointed, and, according to the system followed by Mr. Hunter and his attorneys, that required tracing, according to their system.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING.

Q. What was the size of this estate? What were the assets of the concern?—A. The assets of the general estate, as I recall it, were approximately $500,000. I would have to refresh my recollection on that. I have not those figures in mind.

Q. Do you have the figures before you?—A. I have not them before me, but I can refresh my recollection and give them to you.

Q. Are they available?—A. They are available. The bulk of the estate consisted of securities which were held in marginal accounts.

Q. What disposition did the receiver make of them?—A. They were ultimately delivered—such securities as remained were prorated against the accounts participating in the various pools, and the securities were delivered back to the persons who were entitled to them upon payment of their proportionate contributions.

Q. What do you mean they were charged for, when you say upon the payment of their proportionate contributions?—A. They were charged for contributions to the losses which had been sustained by other margin customers whose securities had been sold in the process of liquidation by the other stock brokerage firms with which Russell-Colvin & Co. had brokerage accounts, and also were charged with an overriding charge to compensate the receiver and his attorney for work which was estimated to be allocated to that part of the liquidation. In other words, there was a percentage charge fixed against all margin customers which they had to pay, or which their securities had to bear before they could get delivery.

Q. How much cash was realized by the receiver, if you know, in this liquidation for distribution to the creditors?—A. I am sorry, Mr. Browning; I did not understand you would want me to have that information offhand. I did not refresh my recollection.

Q. Is that available?—A. That is available, yes.

Q. Could you bring it tomorrow?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, I really think it is important for us to have those facts which are available, and we could have them in the morning, if the court saw fit to adjourn over until tomorrow.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I be permitted, through the President, to inquire of the honorable counsel whether or not they have some other witness with whom they could proceed this afternoon?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes; we have.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is it the desire of the managers on the part of the House to let this witness stand aside temporarily, and proceed with another witness?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, may we inquire how long the court anticipates sitting this afternoon?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is entirely in the control of the members of the court.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I take the liberty of suggesting that we continue until 6 o'clock?

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, under the rules, I believe, any Member of the Senate has a right to ask a question if he submits it in writing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the understanding of the Chair.

Mr. NORRIS. I have a question in writing which I should like to have propounded to the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will send the question to the desk, and the clerk will read it.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Did the receiver get a salary as receiver in addition to the lump sum you have named?

A. The receiver drew a monthly allowance or salary or drawing account of $1,000 a month. The understanding was that the fee suggested at this conference between the attorneys for the receiver and ourselves, namely, $50,000, was to be credited with the amount which had theretofore been paid to the receiver. Subsequently, when the allowance was made, it is my recollection that the order of allowance provided for the payment of a lump sum which did not include the money theretofore paid to the receiver. I am not entirely certain of that, however.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I submit the following interrogatory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah submits an interrogatory, which the clerk will read to the witness.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Did the respondent say that his objection to McAuliffe was that he was the attorney of the stock exchange?

A. He did not.

Mr. McKELLAR. I desire to propound an interrogatory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee sends forward the following interrogatory, which the clerk will read to the witness.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

How much money was realized from the estate and what was the total amount paid to the receiver and what amount to the receiver's attorneys?

A. The receiver's attorneys received an allowance, as I recall it, in April 1931, of $46,250, which was compensation to the date of their application. Subsequently, the following year, they received a further allowance of $5,000 as a fee, which the receiver himself received. There was so much that took place concerning that, that I really do not remember the exact figures at this moment. I might explain it more fully if you desire to have it explained.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the figures are available, you can get them.

A. I can procure them, but I do not have them at hand.

Mr. KING. I desire to submit two further interrogatories.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah submits the following additional interrogatories, which the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Was it not a proper requirement to have the second application for receiver dismissed?

A. Answering the question, the first petition was the one which was dismissed. That was the one which had been assigned to Judge St. Sure; and the second petition was assigned to Judge Louderback. I do not consider there was anything improper, in my opinion, concerning the dismissal of the first petition. It was merely a circumstance which the judge insisted upon before allowing the appointment on the second petition.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I modify the first interrogatory, as read, in view of the answer of the witness and submit the following.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah submits the following interrogatory, which will be read to the witness by the clerk.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Was it not a proper requirement to have the first application for receiver dismissed?

A. In my opinion, it was.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I submit a further interrogatory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read to the witness the interrogatory propounded by the Senator from Utah.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

What reason did the respondent give for not agreeing to the appointment of McAuliffe or his firm as attorneys for the receiver?

A. I do not recall that he assigned any reason. The objection or the comment which he made was that the receiver had broken faith with him and that he did not understand him and that he did not consider that he was as well qualified as we had outlined to him in our first statement.

Mr. KING. I desire to submit another interrogatory, if I may.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah submits another interrogatory, which the clerk will propound to the witness.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Was not McAuliffe attorney for the stock exchange?

A. Mr. McAuliffe was a member of the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe, which firm was acting at that time as attorneys for the San Francisco Stock Exchange.

Mr. LONG. I had two questions I desired to ask. The Senator from Utah has asked one of them, and I send the second to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana propounds an interrogatory, which the clerk will read.

The chief clerk read as follows:

Were the receiver and attorney appointed men of good character and standing?

A. I do not know anything about the character or standing of Mr. Hunter. In our inquiry we found nothing which we could advance as a legitimate reason why he should not be appointed. I think that Mr. John Douglas Short is a man of good character. I do not consider that Mr. Herbert Erskine is a man of good character or good reputation.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Did you at that time know Mr. John Douglas Short?—A. I had known Mr. Short for some time; yes.

Q. Now, with regard to the stock exchange, will you state what interest they had in the receivership?—A. Well, the firm of Russell-Colvin Co. was the first member firm which went into open liquidation; in other words, which failed; and Mr. Dinkelspiel, representing the governing board of the stock exchange, and the governing board informed us that they desired to see an orderly liquidation so as to prevent any feeling of panic on the part of other customers doing business with other firms. Furthermore, under the rules of the San Francisco Stock Exchange, the members of the exchange have a prior right to resort to the seats in settlement of any obligation to those members. The primary reason that he assigned was that they wanted to see an orderly liquidation and an economical liquidation.

Q. Soon after the receivership was established, or soon after a receiver was appointed and was operating, was there an effort to put the concern into bankruptcy?—A. There was.

Q. What was done about that on the part of the receiver and his attorneys?—A. I think, within a week or within 10 days, in any event, after the equity proceedings had been initiated, a bankruptcy proceeding was commenced by a single creditor, which was subsequently supported by two intervening petitions. They were served upon the firm, and Mr. Erskine—Mr. Morse Erskine—suggested that we appoint or employ or agree to the employment of an attorney in San Francisco who is a known specialist in bankruptcy matters—or was a known specialist in bankruptcy matters—Milton Newmark—and Mr. Erskine stated that Mr. Hunter was very friendly with Mr. Newmark and would like to throw something his way. We agreed to the association of Mr. Newmark with ourselves, and an answer was filed denying insolvency but admitting the other allegations of the petition in bankruptcy with the exception of the statement as to one indebtedness.

Q. Was that petition in bankruptcy sustained?—A. It was subsequently dismissed. One of the asserted claims set forth in the first petition in bankruptcy was, in our opinion, a very weak claim and could not be substantiated at the trial. Later that was compromised by the receiver and his counsel, and, as a condition of settlement, the proceeding was dismissed.

Q. About the middle of last July or last summer, previous to the visit of the committee from the House to San Francisco, did you have any conference with Judge Louderback with regard to this case?—A. I did.

Q. Please state what it was.—A. I received a telephone call from the judge's secretary asking me to come to his chambers, and I went there in response to the call. He then interrogated me as to whether or not Mr. Addison G. Strong, the receiver, had been present on both occasions when the attorneys had been before him concerning the appointment of Mr. Strong as receiver. He also said that he did not understand who was instigating the publicity which had previously been running in the San Francisco newspapers for the attempted impeachment proceedings at that time, and he stated that he did not know whether or not Mr. Thelen had been instrumental in it. He said that he thought he might have been instrumental in it for the reason that Mr. Thelen's younger associate, Mr. Gordon Johnson, was president of the Barristers' Club in San Francisco.

Then he also asked what I thought about the matter in which the receiver had conducted the liquidation, in the first place, and whether it was entirely satisfactory to us; and, in the second place, whether or not the amount of the fees which had been allowed were agreeable to us. I told him that all the proceedings which the receiver had taken were not satisfactory to us. He said, "You should have taken it up with me." I said that I did not know that I enjoyed the privilege of taking the matter up with him. He said that that was the reason that he had requested the receiver and his attorney to submit all petitions to us. That, however, was the first information we had then about the fees. I told him that I considered the fees were quite excessive, and I thought the liquidation might have been made much more economically.

Mr. Manager BROWNING (to counsel for the respondent). You may take the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do counsel for the respondent desire to cross-examine this witness?

Mr. LINFORTH. Yes; but we prefer to wait until the record is concluded with the witness. I will inquire of Mr. Manager BROWNING if he is through with the witness?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, tomorrow we should like to have the witness testify merely to the figures with regard to which the witness has been interrogated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Counsel for the respondent will proceed with the cross-examination.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I should like to ask the witness two more questions. I send them to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana propounds two more questions, which the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. Why did you not take matters up with the judge if, as you testified, you were required to look over all matters?

A. The matters which I had in mind at the time I discussed it with the judge were matters of general policy, which were not made the subject of petition. If I may explain, the petitions were submitted from time to time asking permission to deliver for safekeeping securities or asking for approval of a compromise of this claim or the other claim, and so on—matters of general policy that had not been taken up in that form. The reason, however, that I did not take it up was that I did not understand and neither my associate nor I was ever informed by the judge directly that he desired to have us consult with him concerning any of his statements rather than to consult with the attorneys; and it was only in a very few instances when matters were submitted to us that we did not give our approval because the petitions were carrying out the general program which the receiver had initiated for liquidating the concern. I believe that the general program might have been different, but the detail of the program which he selected was apparently proper.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the second question propounded by the Senator from Louisiana.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. Why did you not object to or appeal the fee order if you thought it improper?

A. For two reasons. One was that insofar as our own compensation was concerned we felt that the finding by the court would undoubtedly be the amount which we were informed by the attorneys the court was prepared to allow us, and that the finding of fact would preclude an appeal on the facts. Secondly, for the reason that insofar as the fees allowed to the receiver and his counsel are concerned, at that time it definitely appeared that the partners in this concern whom we represented had no residuary interest left after settlement, and consequently there was no interest which they had to be saved by an appeal, and we had not been employed by them and were not employed by them or paid by them to prosecute any such objections on appeal.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I submit the following interrogatory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah submits the following interrogatory, which the clerk will read to the witness.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. Did you not state that the judge requested you or your firm to supervise the work of the receiver or his attorney?

A. That is what the receiver and his attorneys informed us, that he desired to have us give our approval to the various petitions which were filed from time to time and to consult with them. We did consult with them from time to time—not to consult with the judge but to consult with the attorneys for the receiver.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Counsel for the respondent may cross-examine.

Cross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Brown, you had two interviews with the judge on Tuesday, the 11th of March 1930?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. One in the morning?—A. One shortly before noon.

Q. And the other toward evening?—A. That is correct.

Q. In the interview toward the noon hour who was present, do you say, at that time?—A. Mr. Thelen, Mr. Marrin, Mr. Strong, Mr. Dinkelspiel, and I.

Q. Mr. Dinkelspiel was the representative of the Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe firm, was he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Strong appeared in person at that time?—A. We had him there so that the judge could see him and interrogate him if he desired.

Q. In the talk that was had on the first occasion, was the judge told of the connection of Mr. Strong with the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. It was outlined at some length to him; yes.

Q. He was told that he was the auditor of the San Francisco Stock Exchange? Is that right?—A. I believe he told us, and also told of his connection with the firm of Russell-Colvin Co.

Mr. HEBERT. Mr. President, we cannot hear the witness over here. If the witness will face the center of the Chamber I think perhaps we can hear him better.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness will speak a little louder so that members of the court may hear.

A. (Continuing.) He was told of Mr. Strong's connection with the stock exchange as auditor and also of his connection with the firm of Russell-Colvin & Co. as a member of the firm of Reed & Strong, who had supervised the audit of their books, and also had supervised for the stock exchange some of the company's activities for the previous month.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Brown, if he was also informed that the Russell-Colvin people were members of the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. I believe he was; yes. He was informed that the firm was a member of the exchange. I do not remember that the San Francisco Stock Exchange was specifically mentioned, but I may say this, Mr. Linforth, that the fact that Mr. Dinkelspiel represented the San Francisco Stock Exchange and was there in its interest was made known to the judge.

Q. Did the judge, on the first visit on the 11th, indicate that he was going to appoint Mr. Strong?—A. Yes.

Q. On that occasion was the question of the amount of the bond discussed?—A. Yes.

Q. On that occasion did the judge say anything on the subject of reserving the right to select the attorney for the receiver?—A. The only thing he said which might even carry that inference was questioning Mr. Strong as to who was his attorney and whether any of the persons present were his attorneys.

Q. He did ask Mr. Strong at the time—that is, on the first visit on the morning of the 11th—whether or not he had already employed counsel?—A. That is not what he asked him; no.

Q. Did he ask him on the first visit on the morning of the 11th whether or not he had already employed counsel?—A. He did not.

Q. Did he ask him on the morning of the 11th whether he had already consulted counsel?—A. He did not.

Q. What did he say to him on that subject on the first visit on the morning of the 11th?—A. He asked him whether—he said to Mr. Strong, "Are any of the lawyers present—Mr. Thelen, Mr. Marrin, Mr. Dinkelspiel, or Mr. Brown—your attorneys?" taking them up one by one. Mr. Strong answered "No." He said, "Who are your attorneys?" Mr. Strong said that he had no regular counsel, as I recall it.

Q. Was that the full extent of the talk that morning on the subject of attorneys?—A. To the best of my recollection that is all that was said.

Q. The fact is that on that morning in answer to what the judge did ask, Mr. Strong did not reply that he had already consulted Mr. Lloyd Ackerman, did he?—A. I do not think that is a fact.

Q. Did Mr. Strong reply that he had already at that time consulted Mr. Ackerman?—A. He did not.

Q. When you returned on Tuesday, the 11th day of March, 1930, was anything said at that time about his employment of attorneys?—A. I believe the entire comment or conversation which I have just related took place in the forenoon and that there was nothing further said on that subject whatever at the afternoon conference.

Q. In the morning conference or the afternoon conference did the judge emphasize the proposition that Mr. Strong, if appointed, would be an officer of the court?—A. I do not think he did; no.

Q. Is your recollection clear on that subject, Mr. Brown?—A. My recollection is as clear on that subject as it is on everything else, Mr. Linforth.

Q. Did the judge at either the first or the second interview on Tuesday, the 11th day of March, tell Mr. Strong that if appointed he would be an officer of the court and that he must confer with the judge in the matter of the selection of his attorneys?—A. I have no recollection of it.

Q. Is that as far as you can go?—A. What do you mean by that?

Q. You have no recollection on the subject whatever?—A. I do not recall any such statement having been made.

Q. Are you in a position to say, and will you say, that that did not take place?—A. I would not be prepared to say that something of that kind might not have been said. It is my recollection that it was not said, however.

Q. You were taking part in the conversation, were you not?—A. I took part in the conversation which I myself engaged in, and I listened to the rest of it.

Q. Is it your present frame of mind that while you do not want to go on record as denying that such took place, yet it is your recollection that it did not?—A. My position is that it may have been said, but I have no recollection of having heard it.

Q. Is it not the fact that after the judge had made the statement referred to in the preceding question, the judge then turned to Mr. Strong and asked him had he selected any attorney?—A. May I have the question read to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reporter will read the question to the witness.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. Is it not the fact that after the judge had made the statement referred to in the preceding question, the judge then turned to Mr. Strong and asked him had he selected any attorney?

A. As I stated, I do not recall the judge's having made the statement which your question implies you believe he did make, and I do not recall any such other connection. I do recall the fact that he asked him whether any of the persons present were his attorneys, and I recall Mr. Strong's reply, and that is all.

Q. Did he according to your recollection ask him at that time whether or not he had selected any attorney?—A. By that do you mean selected an attorney in the proceeding or for the proceeding?

Q. In the receivership matter in the event of his being appointed as receiver?—A. Not to my recollection; no.

Q. Is it your recollection that Mr. Short did not answer he had not?—A. You mean Mr. Strong?

Q. Mr. Strong, yes; pardon me.—A. I do not recall the question having been asked, and, therefore, I certainly do not recall any such answer as that.

Question. Will you deny that the judge made such a statement to Mr. Strong?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, are we permitted to object on the ground that questions have already been answered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Such an objection is permissible.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. We offer that objection to repetition of the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks the witness has answered the question.

Mr. LINFORTH. If the Presiding Officer thinks so, we shall not repeat it.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. On Thursday—I believe you have stated that was the 13th, Mr. Brown?—A. Monday was the 10th, Tuesday the 11th, Wednesday the 12th, and Thursday the 13th. That is my recollection.

Q. That is correct, is it not?—A. That is my recollection.

Q. Who was with you at the time you called at the chambers of the judge in answer to the telephone message from the secretary?—A. Mr. Thelen, Mr. Marrin, and I.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I respectfully suggest to the honorable managers and the honorable attorneys on the part of the respondent that we would be willing to take a recess of the court at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona so move?

Mr. ASHURST. I move that the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment take a recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow morning, and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of legislative business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona moves that the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment take a recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow morning and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of legislative business.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 30 minutes p.m.) the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment took a recess until 11 o'clock a.m. Tuesday, May 16, 1933.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate several messages from the President of the United States submitting nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. STEPHENS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back favorably the nomination of Francis A. Garrecht, of Washington, to be United States circuit judge, 9th circuit, to succeed Frank H. Rudkin, deceased.

Mr. TRAMMELL, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported back favorably sundry nominations for promotion in the Navy.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The nominations will be placed on the calendar.

Are there further reports of committees? If not, the calendar is in order.

THE CALENDAR—UNDER SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Dean G. Acheson, of Maryland, to be Under Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, when the Senate adjourned on Friday the Senator from Michigan [Mr. COUZENS] was in the middle of a speech in connection with this nomination. I should not want to proceed with it in his absence.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may I say to the Senator from Oregon that I have talked with the Senator from Michigan, and I told him I did not think this matter would come up this afternoon. He has left the Chamber; so let the nomination be passed over for the present, with the hope that tomorrow we can have an executive session and take up the matter and dispose of it.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I ask that the nomination be passed over, and that the clerk proceed with the call of the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, that order will be made.

FOREIGN AND DIPLOMATIC SERVICE

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Dave Hennen Morris, of New York, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to Belgium, also Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Luxembourg.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of George Bliss Lane to be secretary, Diplomatic Service.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

GOVERNOR OF PUERTO RICO

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Robert Hayes Gore, of Florida, to be Governor of Puerto Rico.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

MARINE CORPS

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

THE ARMY

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Army.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask unanimous consent that these routine Army nominations may be confirmed en bloc.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

There being no objection, the nominations were confirmed en bloc.

Mr. REED. There are two nominations of general officers that are not routine matters.

REAPPOINTMENT IN THE OFFICERS' RESERVE CORPS

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of John Ross Delafield to be brigadier general, Ordnance Department Reserve.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

APPOINTMENT IN THE OFFICERS' RESERVE CORPS

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Edward Caswell Shannon to be major general, Reserves.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

GREAT LAKES-ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY TREATY

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, while we are in executive session, I wonder if we cannot get the St. Lawrence Waterway Treaty taken off the calendar, so that we will not have to watch it every day. Nearly everybody in the Senate is against it, but there is danger of its going over some day because of all of us not being here. Would there be any objection to its being eliminated from the calendar for the time being, so that we will not have to worry around here and watch it all the time? I should like to move that it be eliminated from the calendar until it is restored by motion.

Mr. VANDENBERG. There would be rather violent objection, I fear.

Mr. President, while we are on the subject, and pursuant to a rather familiar Senate custom, I should like to announce that at the first legislative or executive session when there is time I shall ask to be recognized for the purpose of laying before the Senate the argument in behalf of the St. Lawrence Treaty; and I hope that may be done at an early day this week.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the President be notified of the confirmations this day made, especially of Mr. Eugene R. Black, of Georgia, as a member of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President—

Mr. GEORGE. May I explain to the Senator from Oregon that the reason why the request is made is that I am advised that there is not at present in office a necessary quorum of the Federal Reserve Board. For that reason it is highly desirable that the President be notified of Mr. Black's confirmation, so that there may be a quorum actually in office and ready to function.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I always like to accommodate the able Senator from Georgia; but many Members of the Senate have requested that procedure of this kind not be had, and that we follow the usual rule. Therefore, while I know this is a very important matter, I should like to have it go over until tomorrow.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

The Senate resumed legislative session.

EXTENSION OF GASOLINE TAX

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. HARRISON. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. HARRISON, Mr. KING, Mr. GEORGE, Mr. REED, and Mr. COUZENS conferees on the part of the Senate.

REGULATION OF BANKING

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1631.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, what is the motion?

Mr. GLASS. That the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bank bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the title of the bill for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 1631) to provide for the safer and more effective use of the assets of Federal Reserve banks and of national banking associations, to regulate interbank control, to prevent the undue diversion of funds into speculative operations, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I assume that a motion to take up this bill will be made tomorrow. To be very frank, indeed, with the Senator from Virginia, I have called a conference of Republican Members for tomorrow to discuss the bill, and I should not want it made the unfinished business this afternoon. The Senator will have a perfect right, in due course tomorrow, to move to take it up. At this time I shall have to object.

Mr. GLASS. I am not disposed to press the motion, in view of the statement of the Senator from Oregon.

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I move that the Senate take a recess until the conclusion of the sitting of the Court of Impeachment on tomorrow.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arkansas.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 38 minutes p.m.) the Senate took a recess until the conclusion of the proceedings of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment on tomorrow, Tuesday, May 16, 1933, the hour of meeting of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment being 11 o'clock a.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, MAY 15, 1933

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D.D., offered the following prayer:

We thank Thee, merciful Father, that with the birth of each day there comes the breath of freshness and life, full of wonder and growth to be revealed, and thus we know that all is well. By our fellowship in this Chamber may our ministries be helpful and our characters made stronger and nobler and purer. With all this world about us with its ebbs and tides, may we learn to know Thee in the hidden places of our breasts. Give us the heart, O God, to lift all labor above drudgery into a blessed, patient service. Bless us all with rejoicing and with the assurance of this day. At evening time, when its veil has begun to thicken, may we be conscious that we have put no cloud upon it and that our shadow has been love, our speech music, and our step a benediction. Through Jesus our Savior. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday, May 12, 1933, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 5040. An act to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had ordered that Mr. TOWNSEND be appointed a member of the committee of conference on the part of the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill of the House (H.R. 5480) entitled "An act to provide full and fair disclosure of the character of securities sold in interstate and foreign commerce and through the mails, and to prevent frauds in the sale thereof, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendment to the bill (H.R. 5390) entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1933, and June 30, 1934, and for other purposes", disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. BRATTON, Mr. GLASS, Mr. McKELLAR, Mr. HALE, and Mr. KEYES to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a joint resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S.J.Res. 50. Joint resolution designating May 22 as National Maritime Day.

MUSCLE SHOALS

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, by direction of a majority of the conferees on the part of the House, I present a conference report upon the bill (H.R. 5081) to provide for the common defense; to aid interstate commerce by navigation; to provide flood control; to promote the general welfare by creating the Tennessee Valley Authority; to operate the Muscle Shoals properties; and to encourage agricultural, industrial, and economic development, for printing under the rule.

SUSPENSIONS

The SPEAKER. This is suspension day.

CONFERRING DEGREE OF BACHELOR OF SCIENCE UPON GRADUATES OF NAVAL ACADEMY

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 753) to confer the degree of bachelor of science upon graduates of the Naval Academy, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Superintendents of the United States Naval Academy, the United States Military Academy, and the United States Coast Guard Academy may, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of War, and the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, confer the degree of bachelor of science upon all graduates of their respective academies.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia is entitled to 20 minutes and the gentleman from Texas to 20 minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, this is a most important matter, while it looks trivial. I think the Membership of the House ought to be here during the discussion. I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and twenty-six Members present, not a quorum.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The doors were closed.

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and thirty-nine Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

The doors were opened.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, for the benefit of the Members who came in after this motion to suspend the rules was made, I think it is important to call attention to the nature of the measure now before us for consideration. I have moved to suspend the rules and pass a bill which will confer upon the boys who graduate at West Point, at the Naval Academy, and at the Coast Guard Academy the degree of bachelor of science. This does not entail any cost whatever to the Government. When a boy graduates at either one of these academies today he receives nothing but a diploma. The purpose of this measure is to give to each one of them who passes his examination the degree of bachelor of science. That is all the bill does, nothing more and nothing less.

I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. McSWAIN], the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, the proposal here is to amend the bill reported by the Committee on Naval Affairs by substituting for it the language of a bill introduced by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON] and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, seeking to confer the degree of bachelor of science upon the graduates of all three of the academies, the Military Academy, the Naval Academy, and the Coast Guard Academy. The advantage to the graduates of these academies, if that be done, is that those who will not be commissioned in the service for which they are being trained—and there will be many in that group because of the necessity for economy—will find, when they go into private life to seek perhaps to continue their professional studies, in universities and colleges, it will be an advantage to have actually a legally conferred degree of bachelor of science.

In my humble judgment the conferring of this degree upon these graduates is amply justified by the course of instruction given in these institutions. I happen to know from long contact something about the course of study required in private, denominational, and State institutions for the degree of bachelor of science. I know something, also, about the courses of study relating to scientific subjects prescribed by these three academies in question. I say with complete confidence, with the course of study, thoroughness of instruction, and the comprehension of scientific subjects involved, that the graduates of these academies are undoubtedly entitled to academic honors equal to the graduates of most of the private, denominational, and State institutions now conferring that degree. Therefore it is no entrenchment upon academic circles, it is no invasion of academic honors to give this. It will be of convenience to the graduates, and it will not involve one dollar of expenditure from the Treasury. I cannot see any just reason why this should not be done.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. Yes.

Mr. HASTINGS. How does the course of study at the Coast Guard Academy compare with the course of study at West Point and Annapolis?

Mr. McSWAIN. While it is true that perhaps the course of study at the Coast Guard Academy is not as far advanced in certain subjects, particularly what we might term the liberal arts, and perhaps not quite so thorough, yet even the course at the Coast Guard Academy and its thoroughness is, in my judgment, equal to the course of study prescribed in some of the institutions in the gentleman's State and in my State which do now confer the degree of bachelor of science.

Mr. HASTINGS. Is it a 4-year course at the Coast Guard Academy?

Mr. McSWAIN. Oh, yes.

Mr. HASTINGS. And do they require an examination to enter, like Annapolis and West Point?

Mr. McSWAIN. Exactly. They have certain minimum standards of education for entrance, and of course after they come in the course is very thorough.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. The question has been raised with reference to the Coast Guard course of study. The only difference between the curriculum in the Coast Guard and the Naval Academy is that the Naval Academy gives higher gunnery. It would seem that at this particular time, when perhaps half the graduates of these academies will go out into private life, it would assist them materially. For instance some of them would engage in teaching if they would give them a degree. It would not cost the Government a cent if this bill is passed.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, where did Professor KNUTSON get all that information?

Mr. McSWAIN. The gentleman from Minnesota has been in contact evidently with some other gentleman of great intelligence like himself.

I think this legislation is entirely justified. It costs nothing. It will be a great convenience to these graduates who do not go into the services, and I favor the legislation.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. McSWAIN] has expired.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] to use some of his time.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, probably I shall be the only Member here who will vote against this bill. Nevertheless, I shall vote against it, even if I stand up alone, because I am convinced that it is not a wise governmental policy. I am as good a friend of the midshipmen at Annapolis and of the cadets at West Point and of the Coast Guard, as is any other Member of this House. I have been just as active for them and just as sympathetic with their work and their problems as any other colleague. It so happens that one of my appointees at Annapolis came from one of the poorest families in the United States, and yet he was the first honor man in his graduation class at Annapolis.

I am not seeking to do an injustice to any of those men. I want to do them absolute justice, but at the same time I want to do justice to all the other thousands of thousands of young men all over the United States. And I want to do justice to all of the institutions of learning in the United States.

The trouble with this Nation today is due, more than anything else, to the fact that Congress has been voting "yes" to too many bills of this kind. Congress has been passing measures without giving them serious thought. Things are continually brought up here and passed by unanimous consent. Members cannot see "where they will do any harm" and they vote "yes", and the bill is passed, and the country suffers on account of it. I think at this time, more than at any other period in our history, we ought to hesitate before passing these pet schemes that are continually brought up here to favor particular classes.

The boys who get to go to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis and to the Coast Guard Academy and to the United States Military Academy at West Point are favored over all of the other boys in the United States. They get their appointments and their examinations free. Other boys going to other colleges have to pay to be examined. Our cadets are paid their expenses up to these academies. It does not cost them one penny. Other boys have to pay their way to their schools. Our cadets are granted hospital service, free nurses, free doctors, and free medicine. All other boys going to other schools must pay for these services. Our cadets are given a full course of study at these Government academies, with splendid training, a course that other boys must work hard at night for and pay for themselves. In addition, our cadets are allowed at Annapolis $780 a year allowance and, in addition to that, 75 cents commuted ration allowance per day. At West Point they are given $800 a year allowance and also commuted ration allowance of 75 cents a day. In the Coast Guard they are given $780 a year allowance and also commuted ration allowance of 75 cents a day. And when they graduate they have usually about $1,000 to their credit, besides 4 full years of training and education. Other American boys have nothing left but to start life flat broke. When our cadets graduate they get a diploma from Annapolis, they get a diploma from West Point, and they get a diploma from the Coast Guard. Is that not sufficient? Why should they want something else? It is because they will need it in the commercial world. It is not fair to the thousands of boys in every State who have to work their way through universities, who have to study hard at night, who often even have to wait on the table in a menial position in dining rooms to pay their way through college and get their degree.

It is not fair to them if you give our cadets this diploma from these institutions and then confer upon them the degree of bachelor of science. It is not treating the other boys fair. It gives our cadets an advantage over all of the other boys of this country. They can say, "I have a bachelor of science degree and I also have a diploma from the military establishment at West Point", or they can say, "I have a diploma from the Naval Academy at Annapolis and a degree of bachelor of science. You should prefer me over these other boys from Columbia, from Michigan University, from Chicago University, from Leland Stanford, from Princeton, Yale, and Harvard. You should prefer me, forsooth, because I have two degrees. I have a diploma from the academy and I have the degree of bachelor of science." Why should we do that for our cadets?

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. As my time is so very limited, I want my friend to get his time from the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON].

Mr. BRITTEN. I do not want time, but we cannot hear what the gentleman is saying. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BLANTON. Certainly.

Mr. BRITTEN. I may say to the gentleman from Texas that because his face has been turned that way most of the time we on this side of the Chamber do not know whether he is for or against this resolution.

Mr. BLANTON. I did not think the few votes left on the Republican side mattered. So I was talking over here to our numerous Democrats. [Laughter.] I am going to come over to the gentleman's side of the Chamber and talk in a minute.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman tell this side of the House whether he is for or against this resolution?

Mr. BLANTON. I will do that in a minute, and I will not take it out of the gentleman's time but will use my own. It is quite likely that I may be the only Member here who votes against this bill. But I am against it, and am going to vote against it. It is popular because all the cadets want it and their professors want it. But I am thinking of all of the rest of the American boys back home.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2 more minutes.

Mr. Speaker, the great trouble with all these admirals, Admiral BRITTEN, Admiral VINSON, and the various generals, General McSWAIN and General HILL, is that they have been associating with admirals and generals so long they now think and speak their language. The retired admirals and generals have taken over the great commercial positions of life. Of these retired admirals and generals, drawing for life their retired pay as admirals and generals, many are holding positions with big corporations paying as high as $50,000 a year in the commercial enterprises of the United States. It is because of their prestige, if you please, they have gotten free from the Government. It is not fair to the other men and the other boys of the United States who have not been so favored by the Government.

If you get an Army pay bill or a Navy pay bill and read it, you cannot tell what it means as to the emoluments they receive, but have to employ the services of an auditing expert to find out. Why, even CARL VINSON, our present great chairman of our great Naval Affairs Committee, a few minutes ago could not even tell me what allowances these boys got, did not even know they got a commuted ration allowance. These Army and Navy pay bills are written in technical language so no one outside the service can understand them. The great trouble is they do not want to let Congressmen know what these bills mean; they do not want the public to know what they draw.

I think we have done enough for these boys, and I do not think we ought to pass these bills.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. GLOVER].

Mr. GLOVER. Mr. Speaker, not more than 2 weeks ago I had the privilege of serving on a committee appointed by the President of the United States, by the Vice President, and by the Speaker of the House to visit Annapolis and make an inspection of that institution.

I may say as one who has had some experience in teaching—I was a teacher myself for 10 years—that the Academy at Annapolis is one of the finest institutions of learning in the United States. It is thorough and is doing its work well.

To my surprise when I went there I found a sad expression on the faces of a number of the pupils. Having studied there 4 years, and expecting to graduate this year, not knowing that Congress would pass the statute we recently did, they are naturally disappointed for they expected to be commissioned. We are responsible for the fact that we must pass this legislation. We passed an act which provided that not more than half of those graduating could be commissioned. Half the class are now deprived of the opportunity of being commissioned and they will not receive a penny. More than that they will be turned out of the institution without any showing of the achievement they have made in the 4-year course of study.

They are very anxious that at least this little courtesy be shown them by Congress. They want at least to have something to show for what they have accomplished in point of education.

If my good friend the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] should go over to Annapolis and associate with the 1,700 or more boys now there studying and marching to the tap of discipline, I do not think he would stand on this floor and oppose this measure of simple justice.

Mr. BLANTON. I was over there the other day. I saw everything there that my friend from Arkansas witnessed. I conferred with all of my appointees there, and also had a pleasant visit with several officers.

Mr. GLOVER. I do not believe the gentleman was there long enough to learn anything. [Laughter.]

I imagine the gentleman from Texas went over there in order to be prepared to criticize this bill, because it would have been the law now but for the gentleman from Texas. It passed the other body and came here last session of Congress. Unanimous consent was asked for its consideration, and the gentleman from Texas is the man who stopped its speedy passage.

Mr. BLANTON. I stopped it because I thought it was unwise. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. GLOVER. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. When the gentleman went to Annapolis did he pay his way? I paid all of my own expenses, when I went to Annapolis, just as I pay my own expenses when I check up other Government institutions.

Mr. GLOVER. I may say to the gentleman that I paid my own hotel bills, $4 a day. [Applause.]

I may further say to the gentleman that if he thinks he can make any money out of a 3-day trip over there to try it, then come back and count his money. [Laughter.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. GLOVER. Mr. Speaker, I certainly hope no man in this House will follow the leadership of the gentleman from Texas and vote against this bill. I do not believe there ought to be a vote against it in this House. I do not believe any man who would go to Annapolis and study the situation, and realize what an efficient institution it is, would vote against this bill.

This does not cost the Government 1 penny, not 1 penny. On the other hand it saves the Government money.

If these men were commissioned they would go out and draw their pay as ensigns, but in this way they do not draw such pay. They are just as capable and just as ready for service as if they had been given a commission and they can be called out at any time the Government wants them.

I say this is a fine solution of the question, because the time may come when we will need to call out every one of these boys, and the degree which they are to get, bachelor of science, is no greater degree than they are entitled to. It is not a higher degree than that given by some of our universities or some of our colleges that are issuing such degrees now. I say this because I know what I am talking about.

I do not know so much about the Coast Guard school, but I do know that the schools at Annapolis and West Point certainly reach the standard of bachelor of science in their teaching, and go much further than that. I certainly hope that this House will not slap these boys, who have stayed there and toiled and studied for 4 long years, in the face, when they thought they were to be given a commission. Let us at least say to these boys that they are entitled to the standard of efficiency and education that they have actually attained by hard study. [Applause.]

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. McCLINTIC], who is a former chairman or ranking member of the Naval Affairs Committee.

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker, I hope I may have the attention of the House for just a few minutes. I served long enough on the Naval Affairs Committee to learn that whenever they brought in a bill and said it did not cost the Government anything to immediately begin to hunt for the joker.

On occasions prior to this I have called attention to the enormous cost of maintaining the Annapolis Academy in comparison with West Point. I venture to assert that we use over there three times as many employees as any other educational institution in the United States that has the same number of pupils.

I do not say that I particularly object to this provision, but I want to tell you why it is being done. They know and you know that unless you can hold out some inducement to the boys who graduate that it will mean a decreased enrollment, and a decreased enrollment means a curtailment of expenditures. You may not know it, but I do, that the cost of the maintenance of this institution is practically as high as it was during the World War; and you know as well as I that we have so many Army and Navy officers in Washington that in order to keep them from wearing out their right arms saluting each other there is an order to keep them from wearing uniforms; and you know further that prior to the World War we housed all of these officers in the State, War, and Navy Building, but now it takes about 10 acres of room to take care of the set-up. We have another set-up now, and if I could have my way I would send these officers out to the posts where they belong rather than have them congregate here in Washington.

I believe in economy at a time when the country is in a bad condition. I have no particular objection to giving these boys this kind of a degree; but as sure as you do this it means we have got to maintain these expensive set-ups in the future. So I feel it is my duty to bring these facts to the attention of the House and then let you do as you please.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. ALLGOOD].

Mr. ALLGOOD. Mr. Speaker, I think we are really doing the graduates of Annapolis and West Point an injustice by merely holding out to them the opportunity to get a little B.S. degree, when we promised them a commission, which means to them a job. That is what we promised them and this promise is wrong and we ought to correct it by reducing the scholarships.

This wrong should have been corrected in the bills as they came up this year. I had an amendment written out to be offered to the West Point provision of the bill when that appropriation bill was up for passage, but I was invited by President Roosevelt to go on the inspection trip to Muscle Shoals, Ala., and the bill was passed while I was away.

We are graduating more men from these institutions than can be commissioned. What we need to do is to cut down on the number of men who can go there and thereby reduce the expenditures for these institutions. It is, to a certain degree, political favoritism. If we Members of Congress had to pay for these scholarships at Annapolis and West Point we would not do it, and yet we take credit for it back home by saying that we sent so-and-so to Annapolis or to West Point.

I think that in view of the fact that Congress has cut down on Government wages and on soldiers pensions, we ought to come along and economize in every possible way.

I am bringing this point to your attention and to those who will be in charge of the bills for the Army and Navy at the next session of Congress, that if the number of cadets and midshipmen who are permitted to enter West Point and Annapolis are limited to the number that can be given commissions, it will cause a saving of approximately a million dollars a year at these institutions.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON].

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, there seems to be some misapprehension on the part of the House as to the relative standings of these institutions. Several Members with whom I have spoken were under the impression that the Coast Guard Academy has a 3-year course. Let me say that it was changed to a 4-year course 2 years ago, and the curriculum at the Coast Guard Academy is on all fours with the Naval Academy at Annapolis, save in this one particular. At the Coast Guard Academy the students get more maritime and customs law than they do at the Naval Academy. They get more navigation and maritime law, while at the Naval Academy they get more instruction in higher gunnery. That is the only difference between the two. As far as the other qualifications are concerned they are practically identical to all intents and purposes.

The reason for this legislation is this. Two years ago a young man graduated from the Naval Academy. He was not commissioned because of physical disability incurred in athletics at that institution. He applied for position as instructor in mathematics at a high school in the Middle West.

The faculty wanted to employ him as he was in every way competent, but found that they could not do so because he did not have a degree.

Is there anyone here who will deny that a graduate of any of these academies is not fully qualified to teach mathematics in any form in any school? We are simply helping these boys who are not going to be commissioned. It is not going to help those who are commissioned, but it is going to help the boys who are not commissioned, because it will enable them to get positions in those institutions of learning where they cannot now be employed without a degree.

I fail to agree with the logic of the gentleman from Oklahoma. We are simply proposing to grant this degree to those boys who are not commissioned in order to help them make a living and be self-sustaining. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut, Colonel Goss.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I am not going to vote for H.R. 2834 this morning because of the Coast Guard.

The gentleman from Minnesota said that 3 years ago they had a 3-year course. Within the last few years they have built a new Coast Guard station in my State. I do not think it is fair to give these boys a degree in the Coast Guard at the present time. I am for it for the Military Academy and the Naval Academy, but I am not for it for the Coast Guard.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOSS. Yes.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Does not my friend think that this is in the interest of economy and would be a wise thing to do, and not in the interest of the curriculum at all?

Mr. GOSS. What is the reason for doing that?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. It is in the interest of economy.

Mr. GOSS. If this bill included the Military Academy at West Point and the Naval Academy at Annapolis, only, I think the situation would be far different from what it is right here today. Until the Coast Guard matter is taken out, I hope the bill will be defeated.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I realize that this bill will pass. But if I am the only one to stand up, I shall vote against it. It is a most unwise measure. It is a bad governmental policy. It is unsound economically.

I have done my duty in trying to stop it. The responsibility is upon the shoulders of those who vote for it.

For my last appointment, last December, I had the Civil Service Commission hold a competitive examination in Texas in 12 cities in my district. Fifty-six high-school graduates were applicants for that appointment. That shows the great desire of the American youth to go to one of these free Government academies, where everything is furnished plus a handsome yearly allowance.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I regret that I cannot just now, as my time is limited. When I conclude I will gladly yield. I ask gentlemen who intend to vote for this popular bill whether they are treating the other boys of the United States fairly when they do so. You are not carrying on any free Government university of the first class for the other boys down at Graham, in Young County, or over in Benton County or in Wise County or in Throckmorton County, in my friend's district—and I believe he asked for time to speak for this bill. What are you going to say to those other boys down in Texas who cannot go to Annapolis or to West Point?

Mr. McFARLANE. I will tell the gentleman in a minute.

Mr. BLANTON. How is the gentleman going to explain to them that when they go to a university to get a bachelor of science degree they have to pay everything—their own way—they have to pay to be examined, and they have to buy their own food and clothing and their own instruction and books, and they have to pay for their own doctors and nurses and medicines and hospitals; and then, if they can worry through the 4 years, they may get a degree.

In this matter we are furnishing our cadets with their examinations free, with their traveling expenses to go to the academy from their homes, with their food and lodging, and clothing and instruction and hospital treatment, doctors' bills, nurses, medicines, and special training in social arts—everything free, and allowing them $780 a year for Annapolis and the Coast Guard and $800 for the Military Academy at West Point. When they graduate, all of them have about $1,000, more or less, to their credit. They are taught how to dance, just how they should put their arms around the girls, and are given a full course in social etiquette. But other American boys are denied all these privileges. Is that treating the other boys of the country fairly? I am not for giving them more than their diploma.

The Naval Academy was created for one purpose only, and that was to prepare and train naval officers for naval defense. The United States Military Academy at West Point was created to prepare Army officers for military defense, and the Coast Guard Academy is to prepare them for Coast Guard service. They are not academic institutions; they are military institutions, pure and simple. This whole idea of granting degrees was gotten up by a bunch of professors over here, not by the boys. These professors want to keep their personnel intact, and want to have their salaries raised; they want to have their teaching force increased; they want to retain the ones they already have there. As the gentleman from Oklahoma said, they are top heavy now in the teaching staff. They will say if you are going to confer bachelor of science degrees, you will have to give us the necessary equipment so that our bachelor of science degree may be recognized by the colleges and universities of the country.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman speaks about the great number of applicants for these positions. Is that not because of economic conditions, because these boys have not the money to go to ordinary colleges and universities?

Mr. BLANTON. No; not altogether. I had applications from them in war time, from boys 16 and 17 years old, who knew that they were going to be equipped for war purposes. I have had many applications every year. While I realize full well that there is no chance whatever to defeat this bill, I have done all within my power to stop it. I have done my full duty according to my judgment and conscience.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. McFARLANE].

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I was amused at the statement of my colleague from Texas [Mr. BLANTON], who seems to be so worried about the great cost involved in this measure and the degree that we are going to give to these boys who spend 4 years there making the fight of their life to finish at these wonderful schools. I know and you know that these schools are second to none in the world, and when a man has finished his work and completed his course at any one of these schools, he is on a parity, so far as education is concerned, with that received at any school in the world, especially from a scientific standpoint. My friend and colleague from Texas would have you believe that we should not grant them this degree. Let us examine that thought for a minute. A boy goes to the trade school. Do they turn him out without a degree? Certainly not. They give him a degree. The trade schools are all Nation-wide, mostly supported by taxpayers of the country. The same is true of our State colleges and universities. Do they turn boys out without a degree? Certainly, they do not. Why should we be unfair to the boys who fight the battle and attend our academies of the Army and the Navy schools?

The gentleman would have you believe that we are doing too much for these boys in granting them the degree of bachelor of science, which they richly deserve. These schools are members of the American Association of Universities and Colleges. They are on a parity with any school in the country. They do the work. There is no question about that. Then why should they not receive their proper recognition? This Congress is very largely responsible for this condition existing at this time.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. In just a moment. My time is very limited. If I have time after I finish, I will be glad to yield.

This situation is due to a measure put through in the last Congress, and I understand my colleague was in a large way responsible for the 50-percent cut, and I understand 50 percent or thereabouts of these boys will go out into the world without receiving a commission. What do we find the situation to be?

If the business world knew what this Congress knows and what those familiar with the work of the academies know, this bill would not be necessary, but when one of the graduates of those schools goes out into the business world to apply for a position they ask him, "What degree do you hold?" Or if he applies for a teaching position, they ask him, "What degree do you hold?" He is forced to tell them, "I do not have a degree. I have a diploma that shows I am a graduate of this school." In all fairness to the graduates of these schools I believe you will agree with me that we should support this bill. We ought to vote for it unanimously, to keep faith with these boys. These boys are working their way through school, working every minute of the day from dawn until dark, just as the boys are working their way through other schools. They work for every thing they get. Let us not break faith with those boys. In time of trouble we look to these boys to defend our country; certainly they are entitled to this little degree of consideration. Let us vote for this bill and give them the degree they so richly deserve.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. I yield.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. The truth is this bill has passed the Senate, and it has been favorably reported by the House Committee on Military Affairs, and the Naval Committee as well.

Mr. McFARLANE. Unanimously.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. If this Congress would vote down this bill today, it would be a reflection on the fine work of those young men in the academies.

Mr. McFARLANE. That is exactly right. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I agree with the purpose of the bill, but I think the gentleman has misstated a fact. The gentleman said these boys work their way through. They work to get through school, but the gentleman knows the United States Government, once he enters the school, takes care of that boy until he is discharged, and it does not cost him a 5-cent piece.

Mr. McFARLANE. Perhaps the gentleman did not understand my view of the situation. I say they worked every minute of the day during the curriculum, better qualifying themselves to carry on the work of the United States when they become officers and enter into the kind and character of work they are called upon to do.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. I yield.

Mr. BRITTEN. There is being scattered about the House a copy of the bill, S. 753, and most of the Members are of the opinion that that is the bill to be voted upon. The fact of the matter is that it has been very materially amended, so as to include the Military Academy at West Point and the Coast Guard Academy. If most of us had an opportunity to do so, we would vote against including the Coast Guard Academy, because the Coast Guard Academy is no school, never has been a school, comparable to the Military Academy or the Naval Academy. It is a 3-year course.

Mr. McFARLANE. I only yielded for a short question.

Mr. BRITTEN. I wanted the gentleman to make clear to the House that this bill, S. 753, is not being voted upon at all, but a substitute, where everything was stricken out but the enacting clause.

Mr. McFARLANE. In answer to the gentleman, I think it is understood that the chairman of the committee, Mr. VINSON, has offered an amended bill, which provides that the graduates of these three schools, each of which has 4-year courses to do the work, are to receive this degree. They are doing the scientific work involved which qualifies them for the bachelor of science degree which they will receive, and they would receive that same degree if they did the same kind and character of work in any school of the United States. The requirements of these academies, I believe, meet the requirements of any school in the United States granting this degree.

This bill if enacted into law will not cost the Government a penny. It merits your unanimous support. [Applause.]

Under the amendment offered by Mr. VINSON, Chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, all graduates of the United States Naval Academy, the United States Military Academy, and the Coast Guard Academy are to be entitled to receive the degree of bachelor of science. Under the present law graduates of these schools receive nothing but a diploma other than those fortunate graduates who are selected to the rank of ensign in the Navy or second lieutenant in the Army or ensign in the Coast Guard, which in 1933 and for several years in the future will likely not be more than 50 percent of the graduating class of each school.

The curriculums of the schools are on a parity with those of the leading engineering and technological schools of the country and are amply high and sufficient to warrant the granting of the bachelor of science degree to its graduates.

The act of May 6, 1932 (Public, No. 122, 72d Cong.) authorizes the President to commission at least 50 percent of the graduates of these schools. It is anticipated that in June 1933, one half of the graduating class will receive commissions and the other one half will have to go into civilian life. It is estimated that in future years about the same ratio of the graduating class will be unable to get a commission. In addition to these there are each year several graduates who are required to resign on graduation by reason of physical defects or injuries received while in school, such as defective vision, broken teeth, etc.

The degree of bachelor of science will be of great benefit to these graduates in civil life. Considering the entrance requirements and the curriculums in the different schools, these institutions as technical schools are comparable with our leading engineering schools which confer such degrees upon their graduates. Their courses are equal to 4-year college courses and are so considered by the universities and colleges to which their postgraduate students are sent.

The diploma alone from these academies is assurance of ability and worth along lines of mental, physical, and character development to those acquainted with the activities of the academies; but those graduates who leave the service will come in contact with many people unacquainted with these institutions and who will not place the value upon the diploma that it justly deserves. A degree of bachelor of science will materially assist such graduates in seeking employment as well as their admission into schools of higher education. Such a degree will give graduates something to strive for when a commission is unlikely, and will without question raise the efficiency of these schools.

The enactment of this legislation will result in no cost to the Government.

Similar legislation was proposed by the Navy Department in the Seventy-second Congress.

The following letters addressed to the Speaker of the House and the chairman of the committee from the Secretary of the Navy set forth the Navy Department's views and favorable recommendation of this bill:

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, November 26, 1932.

THE CHAIRMAN COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS,
House of Representatives, Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: There is enclosed herewith a copy of a letter, together with a copy of a proposed bill to confer the degree of bachelor of science upon graduates of the Naval Academy, this day forwarded to the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Sincerely yours,

C. F. ADAMS,
Secretary of the Navy.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, November 26, 1932.

THE SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR MR. SPEAKER: I have the honor to transmit herewith a draft of bill to confer the degree of bachelor of science upon graduates of the Naval Academy.

The act of May 6, 1932 (Public, No. 122, 72d Cong.), authorizes the President to commission as ensigns at least 50 percent of all future graduates of the Naval Academy. It is anticipated that in June 1933 one half of the graduating class only will receive their commissions, the remainder will have to go into civilian life. In future years it is probable that a number of each graduating class will be unable to get commissions as ensigns. In addition to these there are each year several graduates who are required to resign on graduation by reason of physical defects, such as defective vision.

The degree of bachelor of science will be a great aid to these graduates in civil life.

Considering the entrance requirements and the curriculum at the Naval Academy, that institution as a technical school is comparable with our leading engineering schools which confer such degrees upon their graduates. Its course is equal to a 4-year college course and is so considered by the universities and colleges to which its postgraduate students are sent.

The Naval Academy diploma alone is assurance of ability and worth along lines of mental, physical, and character development to those acquainted with the activities of the academy, but those graduates who leave the service will come in contact with many people unacquainted with that institution and who will not place the value upon the diploma that it justly deserves. A degree of bachelor of science will materially assist such graduates in seeking employment as well as their admission into schools of higher education. Such a degree will give these graduates something to strive for when a commission is unlikely and will without question raise the efficiency of the Naval Academy.

The enactment of this legislation will result in no cost to the Government.

For the reasons stated, it is recommended that the proposed legislation be enacted.

Sincerely yours,

C. F. ADAMS, Secretary of the Navy.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. McFARLANE] has expired.

All time has expired.

The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON] to suspend the rules and pass the bill, as amended.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BLANTON) there were—yeas 211, noes 4.

So, two thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, COLUMBUS, OHIO

Mr. LAMNECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting a set of resolutions passed by the Columbus (Ohio) Chamber of Commerce with reference to the work of Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LAMNECK].

There was no objection.

Mr. LAMNECK. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD I include the following resolutions adopted by the Columbus (Ohio) Chamber of Commerce expressing confidence in President Roosevelt and pledging itself to help business and industry:

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1933.

The Columbus Chamber of Commerce, by action of its board of directors, expresses complete confidence in President Roosevelt, appreciates fully the conditions which exist at this time in this country, appreciates the tremendous efforts on the part of the Government in this emergency, and reaffirms its desire to cooperate.

The Columbus Chamber of Commerce fully recognizes the seriousness of unemployment in industry generally, and realizes also that industry should cure itself of the evils of unfair competition.

The Columbus Chamber of Commerce heartily approves of President Roosevelt's plan of correcting these evils through industry itself, and by trade associations, without projecting Government into business further than it is necessary.

The Columbus Chamber of Commerce, representing the business interests of this community, pledges itself to help industry and business in this area, to organize its trade associations for the purpose of correcting these evils and instituting these reforms, and for that purpose we stand ready and willing to assist the President in every possible way in his program to restore industry and relieve unemployment.

Respectfully submitted.

AMENDMENT OF BANK CONSERVATION ACT

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I call up Senate bill 1410, to amend section 207 of the Bank Conservation Act with respect to bank reorganizations, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I have submitted this unanimous-consent request purely in the interest of time, and the comfort and convenience of the House.

I am going to explain what the bill does.

In the emergency bank bill passed on the 9th day of March, I believe it was, provision was made setting up methods for the reorganization of closed banks. In that legislation the phrase "National Banking Association" was used. It is found that some of the banks in the District of Columbia that were chartered under State laws do not come within the provisions of that legislation as embodied in section 207, in which the phrase "National Banking Association" was used. The bill before us changes this language so as to substitute the word "banks" for the phrase "National Banking Associations."

It will facilitate the reorganization of banks in Washington that embrace banks that were chartered under State laws.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. BRITTEN. Of course, the bill, S. 1410, has not been printed. Therefore it is impossible to get a copy of the matter the gentleman desires to take up.

Does it involve simply the change in language the gentleman has indicated?

Mr. STEAGALL. That is all.

Mr. BRITTEN. So as to take care of certain banks in the District of Columbia.

Mr. STEAGALL. That is the only thing there is in it, and that is the purpose of it. It was unanimously reported by the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency. It has been passed by the Senate. It was reported unanimously by the House Committee on Banking and Currency, and I am asking for consent to its consideration at the present time in the interest of saving time.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Have hearings been held on it by the Committee on Banking and Currency?

Mr. STEAGALL. No hearings were thought necessary.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Has that committee acted upon it?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes. It was unanimously reported by the committee. It had passed the Senate.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS. Inasmuch as the gentleman has another bill to come up under suspension of the rules from the same committee, would it inconvenience him if he deferred consideration of this bill until the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LUCE], the ranking minority member of the committee, can be present?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I feel constrained to object at this time because the minority representative is not here. I do not want to take upon my shoulders to permit the bill to go through without his seeing the bill at least.

Mr. STEAGALL. I can assure the gentleman that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LUCE] will not object to the passage of this bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Why not delay it a little? Why not call up the other bill and come back to this one later?

Mr. STEAGALL. The bill was unanimously reported from the committee. Of course, we can take it up later.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Why not take up the bill H.R. 1415 and then come back to this one? By that time we will have had an opportunity to communicate with the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LUCE].

Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill, S. 1410, to amend section 207 of the Bank Conservation Act with respect to bank reorganization.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman withhold his motion a moment?

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I withhold it.

EXTENSION OF GASOLINE TAX AND MODIFICATION OF POSTAGE RATES

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax 1 year, modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the so-called "Whittington amendment", requiring power companies to pay the Federal tax on power used by consumers, was changed and rewritten in the Senate. Before the House conferees yield from the position of the House on that amendment will the gentleman from North Carolina agree to bring this amendment back to the House for a separate vote?

Mr. DOUGHTON. As far as I am concerned personally, I am always pleased to have the House express itself upon any matter in which it is interested. I am perfectly willing to do this if it is agreeable to the other members of the conference committee. As far as I am concerned, I have no objection.

Mr. COLLINS. Will the gentleman assure the House of a vote on the Whittington amendment before the House conferees recede from the position of the House on that amendment?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I do not know that I can go that far. A majority of the conference committee might not agree with me, but I will favor it, I may say to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLLINS. With the assurance that the gentleman will insist upon the House amendment, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, it is utterly impossible for anyone 10 feet away from the gentleman from North Carolina to hear what he is saying. I think we ought to know a little about what is going on before we give unanimous consent to proceed.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees:

Messrs. DOUGHTON, RAGON, SAMUEL B. HILL, TREADWAY, and BACHARACH.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I find that the minority membership of the Banking and Currency Committee is in favor of the bill S. 1410 and I therefore withdraw my objection.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1410) to amend section 207 of the Bank Conservation Act with respect to bank reorganizations.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object for the purpose of asking a question. The Chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee a few moments ago was understood, at least by me, to say that this slight change in the banking act is being presented in the interest of the banks of the District of Columbia.

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes.

Mr. BRITTEN. I have been told by a member of the gentleman's committee that it applies to the banks throughout the United States.

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes, it does; but it uses the word "bank" as a substitute for "National Banking Association" in section 207 of the Emergency Act, which will make possible the reorganization of banks in the District of Columbia, where they are ready to act today if this legislation is passed. I have no such information at the moment, but probably there will be other instances where such situations may develop; but in any event the word "bank" will embrace every purpose of the original legislation and will make possible the action that is so much desired in the District of Columbia now.

Mr. BRITTEN. I am told that this legislation is also desired for the Cleveland, Ohio, banks.

Mr. STEAGALL. That is probably true.

Mr. BRITTEN. And will changing the words "national banking association" to "bank" take in State banks?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes; that is the purpose of it—banks and trust companies everywhere and of all kinds.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 207 of the Bank Conservation Act is amended by striking out "national banking association" wherever it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof the word "bank."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. STEAGALL, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

REMOVAL OF CERTAIN LIMITATIONS ON NATIONAL BANKS

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, in the interest of time, I am going to submit another unanimous-consent request.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1415) to amend sections 5200 and 5202 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, to remove the limitations on national banks in certain cases.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, may we have the bill read?

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5200 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9) Obligations representing loans to any national banking association or to any banking institution organized under the laws of any State, or to any receiver, conservator, or superintendent of banks, or to any other agent, in charge of the business and property of such association or banking institution, when such loans are approved by the Comptroller of the Currency, shall not be subject under this section to any limitation based upon such capital and surplus."

Sec. 2. Section 5202 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"Ninth. Liabilities incurred on account of loans made with the express approval of the Comptroller of the Currency under paragraph (9) of section 5200 of the Revised Statutes, as amended."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, so I may ask the chairman of the committee or the ranking member on the Republican side to explain this bill.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, let me say that this bill removes the limitation of the national banking law which restricts loans in certain cases to 10 percent of the amount of capital and 10 percent surplus of the lending bank. The limitation is removed as to—loans to any national banking association or to any banking institution organized under the laws of any State, or to any receiver, conservator, or superintendent of banks, or to any other agent in charge of the business and property of any such association or banking institution—

With the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency.

The purpose of the legislation is to liberalize the lending facilities of banks, based upon assets of closed banks. It is designed to make practicable the unfreezing of assets in banks that are closed or in the hands of conservators or liquidating agents by new banks that are being organized.

That is the purpose of the legislation. I may say that the bill has passed the Senate, is unanimously reported by the Banking and Currency Committee, and it is thought that helpful work could be accomplished by liberalizing the national banking law so as to remove the limitation in the manner to which I have referred.

Mr. WATSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. WATSON. Then would it be possible for a borrower to obtain 15 or even 20 percent of the surplus and capital of a bank, if it were agreed to by the Comptroller?

Mr. STEAGALL. It would be.

Mr. WATSON. I thought we were endeavoring to limit loans.

Mr. STEAGALL. It is the desire to limit them in a general way, but it is very desirable in the work of reorganizing closed banks that a new bank may be able to use a part of its assets and its new capital in undertaking to unfreeze a portion of the assets of banks that have been closed.

Mr. WATSON. I thought one of the troubles has been with the banks' lending too much money, and for this reason we had a financial break-down.

Mr. STEAGALL. There is quite a number of exceptions to the limitations in section 5200, which limits loans to 10 percent of the capital and 10 percent of the surplus of a lending bank. I may say to my friend that the business of the country would be seriously hampered if the 10-percent limitation were universally applied.

Mr. LOZIER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes.

Mr. LOZIER. Did I understand the gentleman to say that this law will amend the present law which prohibits loans to one individual or corporation in excess of 10 percent of the capital and surplus of any going concern?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes.

Mr. LOZIER. Does the gentleman think it is a wise provision to repeal the present limitation and make it easy for a comparatively few favored customers of a bank to monopolize the credit and obtain practically all the money the bank has to lend?

Mr. STEAGALL. This is an unusual situation that we are undertaking to meet. Many banks are closed, and efforts are under way to reopen them. Exceptions to the general limitations are necessary in supporting commerce and to aid in moving the agricultural crops of the country. It is important that the general limitation be liberalized, and it has been done in numerous cases. In this measure we are liberalizing it for loans to conservators and liquidating agents for closed banks in the hope of being able to unfreeze some of the assets of these institutions. It also affords an opportunity for the employment of some portion of the new capital of newly organized banks, a thing helpful to a bank in its initial stages. So it serves a dual purpose.

Mr. LOZIER. May I suggest that you are not confining this liberalization to reorganized banks or banks that take over the assets of failed banks. But under the cover of affording relief to banks that are in liquidation, or to banks helping banks that are being reorganized, you are increasing the amount of loans that a bank may make to one individual, firm, or corporation. No bank should be allowed to loan to one person in excess of 10 percent of the capital and surplus. I want to say to you that a violation of the 10-percent limitation and a manipulation of loans to favor a few customers are responsible for many of the bank failures and for the deplorable condition of the banks in the United States. I think the bill ought not to be enacted. It is bad legislation. The 10-percent limitation should be kept in the law.

Mr. WATSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. WATSON. The gentleman made the statement that it would be necessary to increase from 10 to 20 percent the borrowing power when a citizen applied to make a loan.

Mr. STEAGALL. I did not intend to so state.

Mr. WATSON. Within a very few years national banks have joined together for that purpose. They have increased their capital stock and surplus in order to make increased loans. In Philadelphia we had not enough money to meet the demand, and borrowers had to go to New York. Therefore, two banks joined so that they might have a greater capital and surplus in order to make these loans. I think it is a great error to pass this bill.

Mr. McFADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. McFADDEN. I think there is some confusion in the minds of Members on the floor as to the purpose of the bill. As I interpret it, it gives the banks the right to borrow from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to facilitate reorganization and gives to the receivers and conservators the right to borrow. This does not affect the borrower from a bank in any sense, but it enlarges the right of the bank to borrow from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to facilitate the reorganization and consolidation of other banks. Am I right or wrong?

Mr. STEAGALL. It amends section 5200.

Mr. McFADDEN. That limits to 10 percent the amount that it may borrow. This amends it and gives the bank, with the consent of the Comptroller, the right to borrow in order to consolidate with other banks.

Mr. STEAGALL. That is a different way of stating the same thing—that is what we are trying to do. It applies both to borrowing banks and loaning banks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. HOEPEL. Under the statement of the chairman, I object.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 1415) to amend sections 5200 and 5202 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, to remove the limitations on national banks in certain cases.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

S. 1415 (Rept. No. 122)

An act to amend sections 5200 and 5202 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, to remove the limitations on national banks in certain cases

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5200 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9) Obligations representing loans to any national banking association or to any banking institution organized under the laws of any State, or to any receiver, conservator, or superintendent of banks, or to any other agent, in charge of the business and property of any such association or banking institution, when such loans are approved by the Comptroller of the Currency, shall not be subject under this section to any limitation based upon such capital and surplus."

Sec. 2. Section 5202 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"Ninth. Liabilities incurred on account of loans made with the express approval of the Comptroller of the Currency under paragraph (9) of section 5200 of the Revised Statutes, as amended."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama is entitled to 20 minutes and the gentleman from Missouri to 20 minutes.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I have spoken in brief of the purpose of this legislation. For the moment I do not care to say any more. I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LUCE].

Mr. LUCE. Mr. Speaker, I do not want one tenth of 10 minutes. The whole story can be told in half a dozen sentences. This is a measure to make it possible for the Comptroller of the Currency, when in his judgment he thinks it wise, to permit a relaxation of the law about loans in order to help out closed banks. That is the sole purpose of the bill. It is the desire of the Comptroller of the Currency, and opens the door to no serious danger. The matter does not demand long discussion. With that explanation I hope that my friend the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN] will understand the situation.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I demanded a second in order to get some information. What benefit will this be to a bank in course of reorganization?

Mr. LUCE. It will permit it to get more money from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. That is exactly what I want the RECORD to show. That is the sole reason I demanded a second.

Let me cite section 304, title III, of the act of March 9, 1933:

SEC. 304. If in the opinion of the Secretary of the Treasury any national banking association or any State bank or trust company is in need of funds for capital purposes either in connection with the organization or reorganization of such association, State bank or trust company or otherwise, he may, with the approval of the President, request the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to subscribe for preferred stock in such association, State bank or trust company, or to make loans secured by such stock as collateral, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation may comply with such request. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, sell in the open market or otherwise the whole or any part of the preferred stock of any national banking association, State bank or trust company acquired by the Corporation pursuant to this section. The amount of notes, bonds, debentures, and other such obligations which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and empowered to issue and to have outstanding at any one time under existing law is hereby increased by an amount sufficient to carry out the provisions of this section.

This section was enacted, I am sure, for one purpose, and that is to assist banks in course of reorganization. It is not so easy to get the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to purchase preferred stock under this section. I have interviewed members of the Committee on Banking and Currency and they tell me that it was their understanding that the enactment of this section was demanded to meet the emergency and to help closed banking institutions to reorganize. They further tell me that such was the intent of the Congress in agreeing to the section. We all know that this section was included in the law passed to provide relief in the national emergency in banking that confronted President Roosevelt when he took office. I have heard of several cases where the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has not acted in accord with the intent of Congress, if I understand the intent of Congress correctly.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been liberal in dealing with corporations. I do not blame them as the law was passed for that purpose. It should be remembered, however, that in dealing with banks the corporation is not only dealing with the officials but when it grants relief it is extending relief to thousands of depositors. Frankly, it seems to me that preferred stock in a solvent banking institution is equal to any collateral that the Corporation has received for loans. A liberal interpretation of this section will help many banks now closed. I would not ask that any assistance be rendered a bank until the new set-up had been passed upon by the Comptroller or his representatives, but when the national-bank examiners are willing to place their O.K. on the new set-up, that surely should justify the Corporation to extend aid. Nothing is delaying a return to normal more than the failure of hundreds of banks to resume operations. Many banks will be able to resume business, in my opinion, if as I stated before a liberal interpretation will be placed upon section 304 of the act of March 9.

In conclusion, I want to repeat I am pleased to receive the assurance of the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL], and the ranking member of the committee, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LUCE], that this legislation is designed to help the situation that I refer to.

If the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will accept the verdict of the Comptroller of the Currency, I think the corporation will be able to come to the rescue of many banks anxious to open, and in so doing will be coming to the rescue of hundreds of thousands of our citizens, business men, whose funds are still tied up in these banks. A bank that is insolvent has no business resuming business, but a bank that presents a new set-up approved by the national-bank examiners should receive assistance. [Applause.]

That is all I have to say, Mr. Speaker. I propose to support the bill in view of the assurance I have received that the legislation will be beneficial to such banking institutions as I have referred to. I yield back the balance of my time and suggest to the chairman of the committee that he move the previous question. [Applause.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH].

Mr. SABATH. As I understand this bill, it will remove in some instances the limitations on bankers with respect to loans they can make to large corporations.

Just now I secured a Washington paper showing that the report of the Federal Trade Commission, as ordered by this House, on the so-called "chain stores" has been made. The paper gives the chain stores a boost by showing that they are selling at a lower figure than independent stores. The advantages that those chain stores have over independents naturally make it possible for them to sell a little cheaper, but the paper does not say to what extent the chain stores are responsible for lowering the prices of all commodities, whether they are manufactured or agricultural commodities.

I have maintained for years that the tremendous purchasing power of the chain stores makes it possible for them to control and dictate prices of commodities which they are purchasing, and consequently they can at times undersell the small man, whom they are gradually putting out of business and ruining in every section of the country. I do not think we should make possible still greater credits to those large institutions at the expense of the small dealers, the small manufacturers, and the general public of America. I think the large institutions have received in years gone by altogether too much from our Government. Instead of granting them additional aid the Government ought to curtail their activities. As it is, chain stores are financed and controlled, as is practically everything else, by the Wall Street manipulators who brought about the destruction of our Nation. [Applause.] I, for one, feel that we should not extend further and greater credit to those destructive forces than that which we have already granted them heretofore.

I am just bringing this to the attention of the House because from this time on people will try to show that the chain stores are underselling the independents. This may apply to a few leading commodities but not to all. Personally I do not believe that they undersell the independents, because the things they sell are inferior to those handled by the independents. I think it would be well for the women of this country, the consumers, to patronize their neighborhood stores, and thereby aid and give protection to their own sections of the country.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] has expired.

Mr. PIERCE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. My time has expired.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL].

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Speaker, I think we are entitled to know just what this bill does provide. We had one statement by the gentleman from Pennsylvania—

The regular order was demanded.

Mr. STEAGALL. I will say to the gentleman that this bill is designed, and all that can be accomplished by its provisions, is to aid in the reorganization of banks and communities that are left without banking facilities and help the depositors to realize on assets that are now tied up in closed banks. That is all there is to this bill.

Mr. PIERCE. Does it raise the loaning limit?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes; it removes the limit as to loans that may be made and applies to both a borrowing and a loaning bank.

Mr. Speaker, I ask for a vote on the bill.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The question was taken; and two thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

Mr. HOEPEL. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count.

Mr. HOEPEL. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the point of order.

PAYMENT OF CLAIMS TO INDIAN PUEBLOS

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H.R. 4014) to authorize appropriations to pay in part the liability of the United States to the Indian pueblos herein named, under the terms of the act of June 7, 1924, and the liability of the United States to non-Indian claimants on Indian pueblo grants whose claims, extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924, have been found by the Pueblo Lands Board to have been claims in good faith; to authorize the expenditure by the Secretary of the Interior of the sums herein authorized and of sums heretofore appropriated, in conformity with the act of June 7, 1924, for the purchase of needed lands and water rights and the creation of other permanent economic improvements as contemplated by said act; to provide for the protection of the watershed within the Carson National Forest for the Pueblo de Taos Indians of New Mexico and others interested, and to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to contract relating thereto, and to amend the act approved June 7, 1924, in certain respects.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. JENKINS. Reserving the right to object, I think I shall object, Mr. Speaker, because this is a very important bill. This bill calls for the expenditure of a million dollars and I should much prefer to have the distinguished gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Howard] bring this bill up under suspension so that we may have time to discuss it. I do not know that there is very much opposition on this side, but I know there is considerable opposition to taking up a bill of this magnitude under unanimous consent, and if I am pressed I shall object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Howard]?

Mr. JENKINS. I object.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4014) to authorize appropriations to pay in part the liability of the United States to the Indian pueblos herein named, under the terms of the act of June 7, 1924, and the liability of the United States to non-Indian claimants on Indian pueblo grants whose claims, extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924, have been found by the Pueblo Lands Board to have been claims in good faith; to authorize the expenditure by the Secretary of the Interior of the sums herein authorized and of sums heretofore appropriated, in conformity with the act of June 7, 1924, for the purchase of needed lands and water rights and the creation of other permanent economic improvements as contemplated by said act; to provide for the protection of the watershed within the Carson National Forest for the Pueblo de Taos Indians of New Mexico and others interested, and to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to contract relating thereto and to amend the act approved June 7, 1924, in certain respects.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in fulfillment of the act of June 7, 1924 (43 Stat. 636), there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sums hereinafter set forth, in compensation to the several Indian pueblos hereinafter named, in payment of the liability of the United States to the said pueblos as declared by the act of June 7, 1924, which appropriations shall be made in equal annual installments as hereinafter specified, and shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States and shall be expended by the Secretary of the Interior, subject to approval of the governing authorities of each pueblo in question, at such times and in such amounts as he may deem wise and proper; for the purchase of lands and water rights to replace those which have been divested from said pueblo under the act of June 7, 1924, or for the purchase or construction of reservoirs, irrigation works, or other permanent improvements upon or for the benefit of the lands of said pueblos.

SEC. 2. In addition to the awards made by the Pueblo Lands Board, the following sums, to be used as directed in section 1 of this act, and in conformity with the act of June 7, 1924, be, and hereby are, authorized to be appropriated:

Pueblo of Jemez, $1,885; pueblo of Nambe, $47,439.50; pueblo of Taos, $84,707.09; pueblo of Santa Ana, $2,908.38; pueblo of Santo Domingo, $4,256.56; pueblo of Sandia, $12,980.62; pueblo of San Felipe, $14,954.53; pueblo of Isleta, $47,751.31; pueblo of Picuris, $66,574.40; pueblo of San Ildefonso, $37,058.28; pueblo of San Juan, $153,863.04; pueblo of Santa Clara, $181,114.19; pueblo of Cochiti, $37,826.37; pueblo of Pojoaque, $68,562.61; in all, $761,954.88: Provided, however, That the Secretary of the Interior shall report back to Congress any errors or omissions in the foregoing authorizations measured by the present fair market value of the lands involved, as heretofore determined by the appraisals of said tracts by the appraisers appointed by the Pueblo Lands Board, with evidence supporting his report and recommendations.

SEC. 3. Pursuant to the aforesaid act of June 7, 1924, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum to compensate white settlers or non-Indian claimants who have been found by the Pueblo Lands Board, created under said act of June 7, 1924, to have occupied and claimed land in good faith but whose claim has not been sustained and whose occupation has been terminated under said act of June 7, 1924, for the fair market value of lands, improvements appurtenant thereto, and water rights. The non-Indian claimants, or their successors, as found and reported by said Pueblo Lands Board, to be compensated out of said appropriations to be disbursed under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior in the amounts due them as appraised by the appraisers appointed by said Pueblo Lands Board, as follows:

Within the pueblo of Tesuque, $1,094.64; within the pueblo of Nambe, $19,393.59; within the pueblo of Taos, $14,064.57; within the Tenorio Tract, Taos Pueblo, $43,165.26; within the pueblo of Santa Ana (El Ranchito grant), $846.26; within the pueblo of

SEC. 4. That for the purpose of safeguarding the interests and welfare of the tribe of Indians known as the Pueblo de Taos of New Mexico in the certain lands hereinafter described, upon which lands said Indians depend for water supply, forage for their domestic livestock, wood and timber for their personal use and as the scene of certain of their religious ceremonies, the Secretary of Agriculture may and he hereby is authorized and directed to designate and segregate said lands, which shall not thereafter be subject to entry under the land laws of the United States, and to thereafter grant to said Pueblo de Taos, upon application of the governor and council thereof, a permit to occupy said lands and use the resources thereof for the personal use and benefit of said tribe of Indians for a period of 50 years, with provision for subsequent renewals if the use and occupancy by said tribe of Indians shall continue, the provisions of the permit are met, and the continued protection of the watershed is required by public interest. Such permit shall specifically provide for and safeguard all rights and equities hitherto established and enjoyed by said tribe of Indians under any contracts or agreements hitherto existing, shall authorize the free use of wood, forage, and lands for the personal or tribal needs of said Indians, shall define the conditions under which natural resources under the control of the Department of Agriculture not needed by said Indians shall be made available for commercial use by the Indians or others, and shall establish necessary and proper safeguards for the efficient supervision and operation of the area for national-forest purposes and all other purposes herein stated, the area referred to being described as follows:

SEC. 5. Except as otherwise provided herein, the Secretary of the Interior shall disburse and expend the amounts of money herein authorized to be appropriated, in accordance with and under the terms and conditions of the act approved June 7, 1924: Provided, however, That the Secretary be authorized to cause necessary surveys and investigations to be made promptly to ascertain the lands and water rights that can be purchased out of the foregoing appropriations and earlier appropriations made for the same purpose, with full authority to disburse said funds in the purchase of said lands and water rights without being limited to the appraised values thereof as fixed by the appraisers appointed by the Pueblo Lands Board appointed under said act of June 7, 1924, and all prior acts limiting the Secretary of the Interior in the disbursement of said funds to the appraised value of said lands as fixed by said appraisers of said Pueblo Lands Board be, and the same are, expressly repealed: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to disburse a portion of said funds for the purpose of securing options upon said lands and water rights and necessary abstracts of title thereof for the necessary period required to investigate titles and which may be required before disbursement can be authorized: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized, out of the appropriations of the foregoing amounts and out of the funds heretofore appropriated for the same purpose, to purchase any available lands within the several pueblos which in his discretion it is desirable to purchase, without waiting for the issuance of final patents directed to be issued under the provisions of the act of June 7, 1924, where the right of said pueblos to bring independent suits, under the provisions of the act of June 7, 1924, has expired: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior shall not make any expenditures out of the pueblo funds resulting from the appropriations set forth herein, or prior appropriations for the same purpose, without first obtaining the approval of the governing authorities of the pueblo affected: And provided further, That the governing authorities of any pueblo may initiate matters pertaining to the purchase of lands in behalf of their respective pueblos, which matters, or contracts relative thereto, will not be binding or concluded until approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 6. Nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent any pueblo from prosecuting independent suits as authorized under section 4 of the act of June 7, 1924. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to enter into contract with the several Pueblo Indian tribes, affected by the terms of this act, in consideration of the authorization of appropriations contained in section 2 hereof, providing for the dismissal of pending and the abandonment of contemplated original proceedings, in law or equity, by, or in behalf of said Pueblo Indian tribes, under the provisions of section 4 of the act of June 7, 1924 (43 Stat. L. 636), and the pueblo concerned may elect to accept the appropriations herein authorized, in the sums herein set forth, in full discharge of all claims to compensation under the terms of said act, notifying the Secretary of the Interior in writing of its election so to do: Provided, That if said election by said pueblo be not made, said pueblo shall have 1 year from the date of the approval of this act within which to file any independent suit authorized under section 4 of the act of June 7, 1924, at the expiration of which period the right to file such suit shall expire by limitation: And provided further, That no ejectment suits shall be filed against non-Indians entitled to compensation under this act, in less than 6 months after the sums herein authorized are appropriated.

Sec. 7. Section 16 of the act approved June 7, 1924, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 16. That if the Secretary of the Interior deems it to be for the best interest of the Indians that any land adjudged by the court or said Lands Board against any claimant be sold, he may, with the consent of the governing authorities of the pueblo, order the sale thereof, under such regulations as he may make, to the highest bidder for cash; and if the buyer thereof be other than the losing claimant, the purchase price shall be used in paying to such losing claimant the adjudicated value of the improvements aforesaid, if found under the provisions of section 15 hereof, and the balance thereof, if any, shall be paid over to the proper officer or officers, of the Indian community, but if the buyer be the losing claimant, and the value of his improvements has been adjudicated as aforesaid, such buyer shall be entitled to have credit upon his bid for the value of such improvements so adjudicated."

Sec. 8. The attorney or attorneys for such Indian tribe or tribes shall be paid such fee as may be agreed upon by such attorney or attorneys and such Indian tribe or tribes, but in no case shall the fee be more than 10 percent of the sum herein authorized to be appropriated for the benefit of such tribe or tribes, and such attorney's fees shall be disbursed by the Secretary of the Interior in accordance herewith out of any funds appropriated for said Indian tribe or tribes under the provisions of the act of June 7, 1924 (43 Stat. L. 636), or this act: Provided, however, That 25 percent of the amount agreed upon as attorneys' fees shall be retained by the Secretary of the Interior to be disbursed by him under the terms of the contract, subject to approval of the Secretary of the Interior, between said attorneys and said Indian tribes, providing for further services and expenses of said attorneys in furtherance of the objects set forth in section 19 of the act of June 7, 1924.

Sec. 9. Nothing herein contained shall in any manner be construed to deprive any of the Pueblo Indians of a prior right to the use of water from streams running through or bordering on their respective pueblos for domestic, stock-water, and irrigation purposes for the lands remaining in Indian ownership, and such water rights shall not be subject to loss by nonuse or abandonment thereof as long as title to said lands shall remain in the Indians.

Sec. 10. The sums authorized to be appropriated under the terms and provisions of section 2 of this act shall be appropriated in three annual installments, beginning with the fiscal year 1937.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it may be in order on tomorrow to call the Consent Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, is there any other business scheduled for tomorrow?

Mr. BYRNS. I am hoping it may be possible, if this consent is granted, to also get up the Muscle Shoals conference report, but I am not altogether certain.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. There is no other business aside from that?

Mr. BYRNS. None that I know of now, unless some conference report is brought in.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, can the gentleman tell the House for its benefit just what the next order of business is likely to be as reported from the fraternity brothers at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue?

Mr. BYRNS. I suppose the gentleman is serious.

Mr. BRITTEN. Yes, I am serious. I am wondering whether it will be the public-works program. I know the fraternity is very busy.

Mr. BYRNS. I do not know to whom the gentleman refers when he speaks of a fraternity.

Mr. BRITTEN. I mean the collegians who have been preparing all this legislation for us.

Mr. BYRNS. Of course the gentleman is facetious.

Mr. BRITTEN. No, I am not.

Mr. BLANTON. Is not our President the gentleman's President also? It is the President of the United States who has been sending us his emergency bills. And I know that our distinguished, able colleague from Illinois is always patriotic.

Mr. BRITTEN. I have said nothing about the President. I merely wanted to know from the distinguished leader for whom I have the very highest regard, if he knows what the next order of business is likely to be that is to come from the fraternity brothers at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue?

Mr. BYRNS. I do not know what the gentleman means by the fraternity brothers, but I may say the President will probably send down a message on the public works bill tomorrow or next day.

Mr. BRITTEN. The gentleman means the President will if he gets it from the fraternity.

Mr. BYRNS. The President of the United States makes up his own mind with reference to the legislation he recommends, and the people of the country have confidence in that ability.

Mr. BLANTON. And when his stenographers get through writing up what he dictates the President will send it down to us.

Mr. BRITTEN. Oh, well, of course, the gentleman from Texas does not realize that all this legislation is prepared by the fraternity brothers in advance and is then sent to the President to check over.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, no. The gentleman is wrong. The entire program that comes to us comes from the President and nobody else. This is one administration whose President has his own ideas, his own program, his own policies, and he knows how to put them into effect by having us pass his bills he prepares and sends us.

Mr. ALLGOOD. Did not the gentleman from Illinois graduate from some institution himself?

Mr. BRITTEN. I am only sorry to say I did not.

Mr. ALLGOOD. At least he graduated from a high school?

Mr. BRITTEN. No; I am sorry to say I did not even do that.

Mr. BLANTON. Our distinguished friend from Illinois [Mr. BRITTEN] is a graduate of one of the greatest schools in the world—the school of experience. He is one of the most effective debaters in this House. All of us have enjoyed his brilliant thrusts and his inimitable repartee. But withal, he is a partisan Republican, and naturally he does not relish the great fraternity brothers of democracy who are now running this Government.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

PAYMENT OF CLAIMS TO INDIAN PUEBLOS

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, this bill which I have called up is the final adjustment of a controversial subject which has pending in Congress long years.

The pending measure has been agreed upon by every contending interest; that is, interests heretofore contending. It is agreed upon by the representatives of the Indians themselves, by the Interior Department, and by every interest of which I know.

It simply is a proposition to carry out the plain provisions of an act of this Congress passed 7 years ago.

Mr. Speaker, I now ask my colleague the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], who has had more to do with this legislation than anybody else, and who, when it shall have been passed, will be entitled to more credit than any other, may be pleased to explain the details of the bill to any inquiring Member. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] such time as he may desire.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question before he starts his remarks?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I yield.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Has the Secretary of the Interior approved this measure?

Mr. CHAVEZ. The Secretary of the Interior has approved it and asks that Congress take action.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I yield.

Mr. CULKIN. Can the gentleman tell the House how much irrigation and reclamation is involved in this?

Mr. CHAVEZ. About 98,000 acres of Indian lands altogether.

Mr. CULKIN. What is the status of that work now? How far has it progressed?

Mr. CHAVEZ. It has been progressing for the last 300 years. It has been irrigated and in use for the last 300 years.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am glad the gentleman from Ohio requested that the bill be considered under suspension of the rules rather than under the unanimous-consent request. The purpose of the gentleman from Nebraska in asking unanimous consent to consider the bill was in the interest of saving time, but I am glad it is being considered this way, because I feel sure I can explain to the entire satisfaction of the gentleman from Ohio that it is a meritorious measure and that we should take some action here this afternoon.

The purpose of the measure is to end once and forever a controversy which has existed between 15 Pueblo Indian tribes and some 5,545 white claimants who, together with their families, make around 20,000 white people affected.

The title to the Indian lands was derived from the Crown of Spain, Charles V, granting to the Pueblo Indians in New Mexico a grant of land in 1551. During the time Spain had possession of that section of what is now the United States the Indians had absolute title to this land.

In 1848, under the treaty between the United States and Mexico, the United States recognized the title of the Indians in the particular lands we are talking about.

In 1859 the Congress of the United States confirmed that title.

In 1864 President Lincoln called the tribal heads of the 17 pueblos from New Mexico to Washington and delivered to those tribal heads patents to the original grant of land from the King of Spain, together with a silver-headed cane that has been used up to this time and is now being used as the insignia of office by each successive governor of the Pueblo Indians in New Mexico.

After 1848, due to the fact that the definite boundary lines of the different grants were not definitely known, many white men commenced to encroach, in good faith, on the lands of the Indian pueblos, and on many occasions the land that he is now claiming was purchased at a valuable price. This continued. The Government of the United States did not protect the Indians from the encroachments, whether they were in good faith or otherwise, and this continued until 1913, when a case came to the United States Supreme Court, known as the Sandoval case, reported in 231 United States, page 27, by which the Supreme Court of the United States decided that the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico were wards of the Government and could not dispose of their property without the consent of the Government. Of course this threw all the settlers who had been in adverse possession, actually living on the land within the pueblo land grants, in a turmoil. They found out, after being in possession for 60 or 75 years and after paying taxes for this number of years that they did not have any title to their land. They appealed to the Congress. The Congress of the United States, after 3 or 4 years of study, in 1924 passed what is known as the Pueblo lands bill—Forty-third Statutes at Large, page 636. It was approved on March 7, 1924.

The pueblo lands bill created what is known as the "Pueblo Lands Board", composed of 3 men, 1 to represent the President of the United States, 1 to represent the Department of Justice, and another to represent the Department of the Interior.

The bill authorized the Pueblo Lands Board to go into New Mexico and examine each and every claim where there was any controversy. It was also authorized to report its findings back to Congress and to make awards either to the whites or to the Indians, as the case may be, based upon the fair market value of the property.

Where the Indian lost the land to a white man, who had title under the provisions of the act of 1924, it was intended by Congress, and so stated in the act of 1924, that the Indian should be compensated for what he had lost. On the other hand, where the white man, in good faith, had been in adverse possession and had paid taxes, but did not have the legal title, the act of Congress said they had to compensate him for his improvements.

In some cases men who had been there for 100 years or 50 or 60 years, and on down the line, were involved.

The Pueblo Lands Board went into New Mexico and commenced its work in 1924 and finished on July 1, 1932. The Board was there for 7 years and examined 5,545 claims. In some instances the decision went to the Indians and in some instances to the whites. The Board spent several hundred thousand dollars under authority of Congress and has reported back to the Congress, in effect, this is our work and this is what should be done.

All this bill does is this. It provides for payment to the whites of some $232,000 that the Pueblo Lands Board decided was the amount of improvements on the lands assigned to the Indians.

Mr. JENKINS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS. The gentleman has made a statement to the effect that Abraham Lincoln gave these Indians their title or their charter rights.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Delivered a United States patent.

Mr. JENKINS. If that is true, by what process, if these Indians had this charter and if they were wards of the Government, could anyone go in there and claim any right or have any right or get any right that any court would have to recognize, such right now having grown to the proportions of $232,000.

Mr. CHAVEZ. For this reason: The Congress of the United States realized that there were some moral and equitable rights involved on the part of people who in good faith had adverse possession against the Indians, or thought they had bought from the Indians property that the Indian could not sell; who had paid taxes on the land; who had built their homes on the land; and had helped create communities within the land.

Mr. JENKINS. To whom would they pay taxes if it were Indian lands?

Mr. CHAVEZ. They thought it was their land. They did not know it was Indian land until after the decision of the Supreme Court in 1913 in the Sandoval case.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Yes.

Mr. GILCHRIST. At that time the lines had not been established.

Mr. CHAVEZ. The lines were not defined until 1917.

Mr. GILCHRIST. So the white settler could go there thinking he had the right to go on the land.

Mr. CHAVEZ. And he paid taxes and made improvements for a long period of years.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Yes.

Mr. TABER. The situation is somewhat like this, is it not? Everywhere, throughout the United States, folks have bought property or they think they have bought property where they thought they were getting title, but did not get it, and this is just like such cases. These folks went on the land there and thought they were buying a title, but did not take the proper steps to protect themselves, so the Government is making it good. Therefore we should go ahead and do this everywhere in the United States where anybody has bought property thinking he was getting title to it and did not.

Mr. CHAVEZ. No; I think the gentleman is mistaken. There is a difference between the proposition he has in mind and the actual conditions that exist in New Mexico.

Mr. JENKINS. Does the gentleman know whether or not any consideration was given to the fact that these whites have occupied this land and have had the use of it all these years?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Yes, certainly; and all they are getting is the value of the improvements based upon an appraisal made under oath.

Mr. JENKINS. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Howard] made a statement that everybody involved in this matter was satisfied. Is it not a fact that if there is any satisfaction urged here it is the satisfaction that Uncle Sam is going to pay $1,000,000 to satisfy the Indians who have neglected their rights and to a group of citizens who had no rights?

Mr. CHAVEZ. This bill was passed by Congress in 1924. If Congress had not thought then that it was a meritorious proposition and should be straightened out they would not have passed that act.

Mr. PEAVEY. Will the gentleman yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I yield.

Mr. PEAVEY. Is it not a fact that this whole question comes before Congress upon moral and equitable grounds imposed on the United States because the Indians were under the guardianship of the United States?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Yes; both moral and equitable grounds.

Mr. JENKINS. Is not it a fact that we have had numerous Indian cases here ever since the Government took the Indians as wards? Is not this a case gotten up at the instigation of a lot of lawyers who expect to get large compensation out of it?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I assure the gentleman that that is not the fact. This is the fact, that 5,545 white claimants in New Mexico honestly believed that they were the owners of property and are being dispossessed. There are numerous suits pending before the United States courts seeking to evict these people who have been there from sixty to a hundred years.

Mr. ALLGOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I yield.

Mr. ALLGOOD. Is there anything in the report to show that they are simply squatters on the land? I have not had time to read the report.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I can state this to the gentleman and to the House. Everyone knows that the Secretary of the Interior is a friend of the Indians. Everyone knows that the new Commissioner of Indian Affairs is a friend of the Indians. Everyone knows that the Solicitor for the Department is a friend of the Indians.

Now, the Secretary of the Interior has this to say in reference to the emergency down there. I want to read it because it covers the whole subject. Speaking of the emergency, he says:

A number of suits in ejectment are now pending in the United States District Court of New Mexico, and others may be brought, on behalf of the Pueblo Indians, involving several thousand defendants who will be subjected to large expense through years of litigation unless an early adjustment can be had through this or similar legislation. In addition, in the absence of this legislation the Government will be compelled to bring suits in ejectment against several hundred non-Indians in possession of a portion of the lands involved. This bill will end the entire controversy and provide the needed lands for these Indians, and for these reasons and others is properly emergency legislation.

The bill, if enacted, will effectuate the terms of the act of June 7, 1924, and will discharge an obligation to Indians and whites which was assumed by the Congress 8 years ago. It will bring to an end the most vexed and ancient of land controversies affecting Indian lands under the jurisdiction of the United States. It will conserve the effect of the work done from 1925 to 1932, at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars, by the Pueblo Lands Board and the Department of the Interior and the Department of Justice. It will procure and thereafter will insure the basis for economic self-support of the several Pueblo tribes. Failure to enact the bill at the present session of Congress would have results vexing and possibly disastrous to several thousands of Indians and to a greater number of their white neighbors. I recommend the prompt and favorable consideration of the bill.

The Director of the Bureau of the Budget has advised that the legislation proposed by the bill would not be in conflict with the financial program of the President.

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD L. ICKES,
Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. CULKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I yield.

Mr. CULKIN. Is it not a fact that adverse possession does not run against the United States or the Government's wards?

Mr. CHAVEZ. That is true.

Mr. CULKIN. Why do not the squatters reimburse the Indians?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Because they have been there so long without being dispossessed and have paid the taxes and made improvements and homes that they feel that they have a moral and equitable right to the land.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I want to yield first to my colleague from Wisconsin [Mr. PEAVEY].

Mr. PEAVEY. I would prefer that the gentleman first answer the question of the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Very well.

Mr. HOPE. The gentleman has indicated that part of the titles of the whites are derived from purchases from Indians.

Mr. CHAVEZ. And some by encroachment.

Mr. HOPE. And some from some other source. What is that other source? Has the United States Government ever patented any of these lands on these Indian reservations to the whites?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Yes; the United States Government has on more than one occasion issued patents on homesteads and mining claims to lands that the Board found belonged to the Indians who are being compensated under this bill.

Mr. HOPE. In that case then this Board has found that the lands really belong to the Indians and that the Government had no right to issue those patents. Is that the case?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Yes; but the Board is carrying out the intent of Congress, pure and simple. The Board is the one recommending these payments to the whites and to the Indians with the exception that the awards made by the Board to these Indians have been increased under the provisions of this bill.

Mr. HOPE. Are any of the whites who are being compensated under the terms of this bill men who went in there and got squatters' rights, or did they all have some valid basis for claim of title?

Mr. CHAVEZ. They had a claim of title under the provisions of the act of June 7, 1924.

Mr. HOPE. I mean an original claim of title.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I do not know the original claim, but the act of 1924 authorized the Board under certain conditions to decide in favor of the Indians, or if the white claimants had had possession for a certain number of years either with color of title or without color of title, to decide in favor of the whites. In other words, in the act of 1924 Congress said under certain conditions the land should go to the Indians, and under other conditions it must go to the whites. It is in order to settle that controversy, affecting 25,000 whites and practically that many Indians, that this legislation is desired. You can go to the city of Taos, N.Mex. It is a town of about 3,000 people, and there is not a single town lot or a business lot where the legal title is in the white man, though he and his predecessors may have occupied the land for many years.

Mr. HOPE. Will this bill settle all those claims, for all time?

Mr. CHAVEZ. This is the final settlement and will carry out the provisions of the 1924 act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from New Mexico has expired.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, this bill in various forms has been before Congress for several years, and every time it presents itself there, has been found to be vulnerable, and good reasons have been shown why it should not have passed. In the Seventy-second Congress it was recommitted. I do not blame the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] for his advocacy of this proposition. It will take $1,000,000 into his State. I do not know the present value of all the property involved, but I very much doubt that it is worth $1,000,000.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS. Yes.

Mr. CHAVEZ. The gentleman speaks of a million dollars. The bill does not provide an appropriation of $1,000,000. It provides an authorization of $700,000 for the Indians, to be paid in three installments, commencing in 1937.

Mr. JENKINS. It provides for an eventual appropriation of $232,000 to the white people and $761,000 to the Indians, which makes approximately $1,000,000.

Mr. CHAVEZ. The $232,000 will probably be paid anyway, because it will likely be in the next Budget, whether we authorize it here or not.

Mr. JENKINS. I have no personal interest in this matter at all, but I have been here for years, and have watched these Indian bills come and go, and the result is that millions of dollars are dragged out of the Federal Treasury upon some pretext or another. The United States Government has been humane with the Indians as everybody knows. The Indian is the ward of the Government, and the Government never fails to respond charitably and with all compassion toward those people. They come before us and make us believe that this is an emergency measure, that something must be done this year. If you will follow that argument out, you will notice that nobody says that if it is not done somebody will perish. The fact that the payments are deferred for years proves that there is no emergency. The distinguished gentleman from New Mexico told us about the town of Taos. There is a town, a municipality, and the white people claim to own that property. They, no doubt, pay the taxes and exercise all right of ownership. Are we going to pay the white people for that property and give it to the Indians? Why do we not make them pay for it themselves? Or why not compel them to adjust their rights in court? Practically all of this property is now in the courts. The report shows that many lawsuits are pending in the United States courts now. The Government is not guilty of any negligence or contributory negligence. The Government did not do anything that could be construed as responsibility. The United States Government has fully equipped the Department of Justice.

Why not permit these people to go into court and there present their claims and counterclaims, and let the judge and jury say who shall pay and who shall not pay, and who is responsible and who is not responsible. If someone owns a lot that belongs to the Pueblo Tribe, let him pay for it. Why should we drag out $1,000,000 from the United States Treasury?

Mr. CHAVEZ. It is a proposition that can and has been decided by the courts, along with the efforts of the Pueblo Lands Board.

Mr. JENKINS. If it cannot be decided by the courts then that is a sign that somebody has no right in court. This proposition is a legal one or a moral one. If a man has a right in court, the doors of the court are open and he has a right to step into that court. If it is a moral one, then I must be convinced.

But this is a lawyers' contest with each other and they find that if the Indian is defeated they cannot get any money from him, but if they can involve and inveigle the United States Government into this controversy, then it will be settled satisfactorily to everybody concerned, providing Uncle Sam pays out a million dollars.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS. In just a moment.

Now, if you want to spend a million dollars of the Government's money and wish to indicate your inclination so to do by your vote, that is your privilege; but I am opposed to an economy that takes from the soldiers and pays to others who have no legitimate claim. That is the reason I objected to the matter being taken up under unanimous consent. I have for years maintained that any bill which calls for the expenditure of a large sum of money should not be taken up under unanimous consent.

A bill of this magnitude should not be taken up under 40 minutes' debate. You can easily see this carries with it implications that would ramify in various directions, and we should have 2 or 3 hours' discussion of a proposition like this. We should have ample opportunity for discussion after due notice. The membership of the House had no advance notice that this bill would come up today.

I am a friend of the Indian, but here is the Indian on one side and Uncle Sam on the other. I also feel that Uncle Sam needs a friend once in awhile. Of course, I notice the Secretary of the Interior has recommended the passage of this bill and the Director of the Budget has recommended the passage of the bill, but the Director of the Budget comes from Arizona. That may have something to do with it. The Director is seeking to make a great reputation as a money saver and I agree with him generally, but where is he justified in cutting the soldiers and at the same time recommending the payment of this enormous sum? I would like to ask you Democrats over there if this is in line with our economy program, to vote out a million dollars just on 20 minutes' discussion, with nobody making objection to it except a few of us Republicans, and we are unprepared.

I am not a member of the committee and I have had no opportunity to know the facts, but I can appreciate what a million dollars is and I am sure that the United States Treasury feels the shock when a million dollars moves out of the United States Treasury.

There are United States judges and United States attorneys who have been and are being paid to adjudicate such controversies and they should do so thereby relieving the Treasury of this terrible drain.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS. Yes; I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I assure the gentleman from Ohio that the United States Court for the District of New Mexico has passed on each of these 5,545 cases.

Mr. JENKINS. And what has been the decision?

Mr. CHAVEZ. The decisions have been in support of the Board in some instances and against it in others. Every one of these cases went before the United States District Court. That is probably why the Board was there for 7 years.

Mr. JENKINS. But the United States District Court did not find that Uncle Sam owed these people the money. They found that those two people owed each other, but Uncle Sam did not owe those people anything.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Then the gentleman has not read the act of 1924.

Mr. CARTER of Wyoming. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS. I yield.

Mr. CARTER of Wyoming. Did I understand the gentleman to say that, because the Director of the Budget comes from the State of Arizona, that might induce him to pass favorably upon this bill?

Mr. JENKINS. Yes; I said it and I think it would, and I know that the gentleman agrees with me that it would, and I thank him for his interruption.

Mr. CARTER of Wyoming. I just wanted to know if the gentleman said that.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. PEAVEY], a member of the committee, although he is in opposition to my view on this proposition. I want to be fair and I yield to the gentleman 5 minutes.

Mr. PEAVEY. Mr. Speaker, I want to say to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS] who I know would not do any injustice to the Indians, that I am perfectly satisfied if the gentleman had had an opportunity to sit on the Indian Affairs Committee with me for the last several months while we have been considering this proposition, he would be the last one today to oppose this bill.

The gentleman said that no one is to be injured directly and no one is to suffer directly if this bill is not enacted into law. I take issue with that statement because witnesses appeared before our committee that proved the contrary to be true. Thousands of dependent Indians who always have been loyal to the United States, who always have been peaceable, who have supported the United States during every Indian controversy on the border before the Civil War and since, are going to be dispossessed, not only of their homes but of an opportunity to raise crops and make a living, if this bill does not pass, thereby making it possible to revest these Indians with lands that have been taken up by the whites. That is the prime purpose of this bill, to revest these Pueblos with the irrigated lands taken from them by whites while under the guardianship of the United States.

Mr. JENKINS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PEAVEY. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS. If the white man has taken Indian lands, is there not any opportunity for that Indian to go into court and defend his rights?

Mr. PEAVEY. I will answer the gentleman in this way: I am not a lawyer, and therefore I cannot answer the gentleman in legal phraseology, but as a practical proposition, he cannot from this standpoint: The white man is there. He is in possession of the land. He is able to hire lawyers to represent him in the courts. Those lawyers are in the courts today representing the white man. The Indian is destitute. Cases of the very nature which the gentleman spoke of are now before the United States Supreme Court. The Indians have not a dollar with which to defend themselves. What is the practical result of that situation? The gentleman knows as well as I do; the whites will get the land and the Indian will be dispossessed. I am not here fighting the whites nor fighting to raid the Treasury, but I am fighting to do justice to these Pueblo Indians, because the Government of the United States took over the guardianship of those Indians without their wish or consent, and have held it since 1848, and I maintain the Government owes the Indian that duty—to protect him in the ownership and possession of his land. That is simply a matter of justice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. PEAVEY] has expired.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. ALLGOOD].

Mr. ALLGOOD. Mr. Speaker, this legislation might have been good legislation back in 1924, but we are not now legislating in 1924. The conditions that confront the people of this Nation today are not the conditions that confronted us in 1924. We are running a tremendous deficit, and there are thousands of claims throughout this Nation, which claims are before the committees of this Congress, claims of individuals who have been done an injustice, and it has been proven, and yet we are not attempting to get these claims up and have them passed at this extra session of Congress.

I do not think at this time we should bring up and pass in 40 minutes a measure taking $1,000,000 out of the Treasury, because this is no more an emergency than the difficulties confronting hundreds of other people who have claims against the Government. This session of Congress was called to take care of the entire Nation, not individuals, or States.

I am going to vote against the measure because it is not on the President's program of relief.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALLGOOD. I yield.

Mr. HOWARD. Does not the gentleman know that instead of taking $1,000,000 out of the Treasury at this time the bill provides that no payment shall be made under this act until the fiscal year 1937, and only one third of it then?

Mr. ALLGOOD. Then why not wait until 1937 to pass it? If the money is not to be spent until 1937, why not wait and bring it up at a regular session of Congress, when we can have a full discussion of the facts?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Is the gentleman more anxious than the Director of the Budget to save money for the country at the present time?

Mr. ALLGOOD. The Director of the Budget cut the soldiers deeper than we thought he would. If we are going to take money from the soldiers to balance the Budget, I am going to vote to take it from the other fellows, many of whom are not as much entitled to it as were some who lost a part or all of their pension.

Mr. CHAVEZ. The gentleman voted to cut the soldiers' benefits.

Mr. ALLGOOD. Yes; I voted for it.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I did not.

Mr. ALLGOOD. The fact that I did vote for the economy bill causes me today to stand here and oppose this measure. The soldiers and Government employees have been given reductions, and I intend to speak and vote against questionable appropriations of every nature. I dare say that 90 percent of the soldiers who were drawing pensions will uphold Congress in the Economy Act if this administration succeeds in bringing back prosperity, so that men and women will have jobs and so that farm products bring fair prices. The passage of measures of this kind, however, will keep the Budget unbalanced and will retard the return of prosperity.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, it appears that in 1924 we passed a law which I have not had time to read since this debate started. It is about eight pages long. That law contained a provision under which this committee is seeking this further authorization. I have not had time to read the provision.

It appears that in a great many cases white folks went onto Indian lands and settled on them without authority of law. Although they paid them some money, they did not get good title. Now, is it up to the Government of the United States to protect those white folks any more than folks in New York City who buy land without taking pains enough to see they are getting good title?

Is it up to the Government of the United States to pay Indians for land which white folks paid them for in the first place, perhaps illegally, but paid them?

What is the situation? I tried to bring out just exactly what the situation was.

If this bill were confined to an authorization to pay people who went on this land and received patents for it from the United States Government, I should not object to it, but it does not appear what part of it is that way and what part of it is any other way.

It also appears that none of this money is to be paid under any circumstances until 1937. So 4 years will intervene between now and then. Why not wait until we can go into this situation carefully and have all the facts presented to Congress before we attempt to consider a piece of legislation of such importance?

One million dollars today is as great as, if not greater than, $15,000,000 was in 1924.

We must not pass so important a bill as this with such brief consideration.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. I see from the report on this bill that on page 5 one of the claimants is a man named A. Dockweiler, who is to be paid $11.12. Later on the name appears again as the recipient of $230.50.

I shall vote for this bill but I want to admonish the House that this is no relative of mine; I do not know him. In order to defend myself on this account and my seven brothers, I want to say that this man Dockweiler is no relation of ours. [Applause.]

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. HASTINGS. This is a controversy that has been pending in Congress for many years. It resulted finally in the act of June 7, 1924, I think it was, under which a board was created.

If the Membership of the House would take time to read the four pages of the report of the Secretary of the Interior and carefully consider it and the recommendation he makes, I do not believe there would be a single vote against this bill in the House.

It is an old controversy. It has extended over a period of years. Of course, on the floor of Congress, we cannot take up all the details of the controversy, but after the most mature consideration, after having a full report made by the Indian Bureau and the Secretary of the Interior, who is the one who administers the affairs of the Indians, this bill is presented. Further, may I say, it is approved by the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I cannot yield further.

I call attention to page 17 of the report which speaks of the increase of compensation to the amount of $761,954.88 for the parcels of land in question as being the difference between the appraised unimproved, present market value of the lands and the amount previously awarded. May I call attention to the fact that, instead of going up in value at this time, land has gone down in value?

Mr. HASTINGS. Will the gentleman permit me to say further that the prior Secretary of the Interior under the last administration, after giving detailed consideration to all of the facts, recommended favorable action upon this bill?

So, the former Secretary of the Interior, the present Secretary of the Interior, the former Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and the present Commissioner of Indian Affairs recommend favorable action upon this bill.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the suspension of the rules and the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. JENKINS) there were—ayes 80, noes 26.

So (two thirds having voted in favor thereof), the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE FLORIDA STATE LEGISLATURE

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GREEN. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask to revise and extend my remarks and to include therein resolutions from the Florida State Legislature.

There was no objection.

Mr. GREEN. Now, Mr. Speaker and my colleagues, Florida State Senate concurrent resolution no. 4 urges that Florida State road no. 82, from Lake City, Fla., to the Georgia State line, be included in Florida's allotment of roads entitled to Federal aid as a military road or otherwise. This is one of the most important highways in my State. It leads from the upper central portion of the State to northern points. It is important not only to Florida, but to other States.

Senate concurrent resolution no. 5 asks federalizing of State roads no. 2 and no. 23. It leads from Ocala, Fla., to Palmetto and Bradenton. While senate concurrent resolution no. 10 requests the same for Florida State road no. 50. It leads from near Jasper, Fla., to the Georgia State line. These last-named highways are also main highways in Florida and will add considerably to our national highways system.

The resolutions calling for these designations follow.

Senate concurrent resolution 4

A concurrent resolution requesting that State road no. 82 from Lake City and Columbia County, Fla., to the Georgia line, be included in the State of Florida's allotment of roads entitled to Federal aid as a military road or otherwise.

Whereas State road no. 82 running from Lake City in Columbia County, Fla., to the Georgia line is an existing highway, which has been substantially graded and improved as included in the designation of State highways in the State of Florida in its State highway system, and

Whereas the location and route of said road is such as to make the same extremely valuable for the use of a military road in time of war and for use as a commercial highway at other times: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of Florida (the house of representatives concurring), That the Legislature of the State of Florida respectfully calls the attention of the Senators and Representatives of the State of Florida in the Congress of the United States to said road no. 82 running from Lake City in Columbia County, Fla., to the Georgia line, and request the Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States from this State to present to the proper Federal bureau or department and to the Congress of the United States the advisability of having said road included in the system of roads in the State of Florida entitled to Federal aid as a military road or otherwise; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution under the great seal of the State of Florida be forwarded to each of the Senators and Representatives of Florida in the Congress of the United States, to be filed with said Congress of the United States and with the proper Federal bureau or department having jurisdiction of matters hereinbefore referred to.

Approved by the Governor of Florida May 10, 1933.

STATE OF FLORIDA,

Office Secretary of State, ss:

I, R. A. Gray, secretary of state of the State of Florida, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of senate concurrent resolution no. 4 as passed by the Legislature of Florida, session 1933, and filed in this office.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State of Florida, at Tallahassee, the capital, this 12th day of May A.D. 1933.

Senate concurrent resolution 5

Whereas State road no. 2 and State road no. 23 running from Ocala, Fla., to Palmetto and Bradenton, Fla., by the way of Belleview, Bushnell, Dade City, Plant City, and Oak Park, also from Coleman to Lakeland, via Bevilles Corner, Webster, is an existing highway which has been substantially graded and improved as included in the State highways in the State of Florida in its State highway system; and

Whereas, the location and route of said road is such as to make the same extremely valuable for use as a military road in time of war, and for use as a commercial highway at other times, and a valuable and useful highway for the transportation of vegetables throughout the section through which it traverses, enabling better marketing conditions for the growers of such fruits and vegetables; be it therefore

Resolved by the Florida State Senate (the house of representatives concurring), That the Legislature of the State of Florida respectfully calls to the attention of the Senators of the State of Florida and their Representatives in Congress of the United States to said State road no. 2 and State road no. 23, running from Ocala, Fla., to Palmetto and Bradenton, Fla., by way of Belleview, Bushnell, Dade City, Plant City, and Oak Park, also from Coleman to Lakeland, via Bevilles Corner and Webster, and request the Senators and Representatives in Congress of the United States from Florida to present to the proper Federal bureau or department and to the Congress of the United States the advisability of having said road included in the system of roads in the State of Florida entitled to Federal aid as a military road or otherwise; be it further

Resolved by the Florida State Senate (the house of representatives concurring), That the State Road Department of the State of Florida shall make request to all proper Federal boards, engineers, or commission to have placed upon and in the allotment State road no. 2 and State road no. 23, entitling such highway to Federal aid as a military road or otherwise; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution under the great seal of the State of Florida be forwarded to each of the Senators and Representatives of Florida in the Congress of the United States to be filed with said Congress of the United States and with the proper Federal bureau or department having jurisdiction of matters hereinbefore referred to and that a copy be forwarded to the membership of the State Road Department of the State of Florida for their immediate action and consideration.

Approved by the Governor of Florida, May 10, 1933.

Senate concurrent resolution 10

Whereas State road, that part of the State road no. 50, being the certain road beginning at State road no. 2 just west of Jasper, Fla., and running in a northerly direction to the Georgia line in the most direct and practical route, same being a part of the Suwanee Scenic Highway, is an existing highway which has been substantially graded and improved as included in the State highways in the State of Florida in its State highway system; and

PER CAPITA PAYMENT TO THE MENOMINEE TRIBE OF INDIANS

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H.R. 4494) authorizing a per capita payment of $100 to the members of the Menominee tribe of Indians of Wisconsin from funds on deposit to their credit in the Treasury of the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to withdraw from the fund in the Treasury of the United States on deposit to the credit of the Menominee Indians in the State of Wisconsin a sufficient sum to make therefrom a per capita payment or distribution of $100, in two equal installments of $50 each, immediately upon passage of this act, and on or about October 15, 1933, to each of the living members on the tribal roll of the Menominee tribe of Indians of the State of Wisconsin, under such rules and regulations as the said Secretary may prescribe.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 8, strike out "two equal installments of $50 each" and insert "three installments, $50"; in line 9, strike out the word "and" and insert "$25"; and on page 2, line 1, after "1933", insert "and $25 on or about January 15, 1934."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HOWARD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

CLAIM OF DISTRICT NO. 13, CHOCTAW COUNTY, OKLAHOMA

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 73) to authorize the Comptroller General to allow claim of district no. 13, Choctaw County, Okla., for payment of tuition for Indian pupils.

The Clerk read the Senate bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General is hereby authorized and directed to allow payment of claims of the public school district no. 13, Choctaw County, Okla., for tuition of Indian pupils during the fiscal year 1931, in the sum not to exceed

$3,435.61, from the appropriation entitled "Indian schools, Five Civilized Tribes, Oklahoma, 1931."

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Will the gentleman explain what this is?

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Yes. It authorizes the Comptroller General to allow a claim of district no. 13, Choctaw County, Okla., for payment of tuition of Indian pupils. In other words, the bill provides an authorization for the Comptroller to approve a contract for the payment of the tuition of 100 or more orphan Indian children who are now taken care of in a little orphan home in my district in Oklahoma. The money has already been appropriated, and this is simply an authorization.

Mr. HASTINGS. With the permission of my colleague from Oklahoma, let me say that this bill has passed the Senate. It passed the Senate at the last session of Congress. It was favorably recommended by the House Committee on Indian Affairs at the last session of Congress, and this identical Senate bill has been favorably reported by the House Committee on Indian Affairs and is H.R. 3853.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. What does the bill do?

Mr. HASTINGS. Let me say to the gentleman that it has a unanimous report from the House Committee on Indian Affairs, and the bill does this:

In Oklahoma and throughout the West where Indian pupils attend white schools there is an appropriation for a certain per capita allowance. This is true in all of the Western States. This is true in Oklahoma and was true in 1931, when this appropriation of $350,000 was made to supplement the taxes of white schools for the attendance of Indian pupils, and is made in lieu of taxes not collected from nontaxable Indian lands.

The gentleman may not be as familiar as the Members from the West in this matter, but this appropriation has been made for a number of years.

In this particular case a certain number of Indian children were living at the old Goodland Orphan School. The school had been discontinued, but they were boarding there. They were sent over and attended an Indian district day school, and this is permitting the payment out of this appropriation that was made for that year the same amount that was paid for other Indian pupils who attended the same school.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. This comes out of the general Indian fund?

Mr. HASTINGS. It comes out of that appropriation.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. How much does it amount to?

Mr. HASTINGS. Three thousand four hundred and thirty-five dollars and sixty-one cents.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I have no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING SECTION 1025 OF THE REVISED STATUTES

Mr. KURTZ. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 1582) to amend section 1025 of the Revised Statutes of the United States and consider the same.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

S. 1582

An act to amend section 1025 of the Revised Statutes of the United States

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1025 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 1025. No indictment found and presented by a grand jury in any district or other court of the United States shall be deemed insufficient, nor shall the trial, judgment, or other proceeding thereon be affected by reason of any defect or imperfection in matter of form only, which shall not tend to the prejudice of the defendant, or by reason of the attendance before the grand jury during the taking of testimony of one or more clerks or stenographers employed in a clerical capacity to assist the district attorney or other counsel for the Government who shall, in that connection, be deemed to be persons acting for and on behalf of the United States in an official capacity and function."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. JENKINS. Reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the gentleman whether or not this bill had the thorough consideration of the Judiciary Committee—whether or not the membership of the Judiciary Committee was full when it was considered.

Mr. KURTZ. This is a bill passed by the Senate. We considered a similar bill and there was not a single vote against it.

Mr. McFARLANE. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania explain the provisions of the bill?

Mr. KURTZ. I shall be glad to. Under the common law a district attorney was not permitted to be before the grand jury when a vote was taken on any indictment. Frequently a district attorney, unskilled in the practice, would remain before the grand jury while the vote was being taken. In cases of that kind the defendant's attorney could move to quash the indictment. Sometimes the statute of limitations was about to run and frequently the defendant would escape.

So most of the jurisdictions within the United States have passed laws permitting the district attorney to be in the grand jury room when the vote is taken on a particular bill. Some jurisdictions have not passed any laws providing for permission of any clerk or stenographer to be before a grand jury.

Frequently, it is absolutely essential in this day, and so this bill provides that a clerk or a stenographer may be present when the vote is taken.

Mr. GLOVER. Does the gentleman say that this provides that a stenographer or clerk may be present when a vote of the grand jury is taken?

Mr. KURTZ. Yes. This permits the clerk or a stenographer to be present.

Mr. GLOVER. While the vote on the indictment is being taken?

Mr. KURTZ. Yes. How could that have any influence on the vote by the grand jury.

Mr. GLOVER. Because it is a sacred place where they are dealing with the rights of the individual. The law does not allow the prosecuting attorney to be present in the grand jury room when the vote is taken. I think it is a safe rule. I have been a prosecuting attorney for 4 years, and I do not believe that the prosecuting attorney ought to be allowed in the grand jury room when the vote is being taken.

Mr. KURTZ. The prosecuting attorney in most jurisdictions today is permitted to be in the grand jury room when the vote is taken.

Mr. GLOVER. As far as I know, that is not the fact.

Mr. KURTZ. It could not be done, of course, under the common law.

Mr. McKEOWN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KURTZ. I yield.

Mr. McKEOWN. There is no purpose here by this bill to influence any vote but to prevent irregularities.

Mr. GLOVER. Whenever any irregularity comes up in a grand jury room an indictment can be quashed and returned again in 10 minutes.

Mr. McKEOWN. The main purpose of this bill is simply to give the prosecuting attorney an opportunity to have a clerk or stenographer to take the testimony before the grand jury.

Mr. GLOVER. Oh, for the taking of testimony, yes; but this the gentleman says is to provide for their presence when they are voting on an indictment.

That is the gentleman's statement, and I am not going to vote for anything that will allow a stenographer or a prosecuting attorney or anybody else to be present when the grand jury is voting on the liberties of our people. What is the haste for taking this bill up at this time?

Mr. KURTZ. The chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary happens to be one of the managers on the part of the House and is in the Senate on the Louderback impeachment.

Mr. GLOVER. I thought that that impeachment was to proceed from 9 o'clock until 12 o'clock every day.

Mr. KURTZ. It began at 12:30 o'clock today.

Mr. HOOPER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KURTZ. Yes.

Mr. HOOPER. Has this bill been reported out during this session by the Committee on the Judiciary?

Mr. KURTZ. This is a bill that was passed by the Senate. We had a similar House bill, and it was reported out at this session.

Mr. HOOPER. When?

Mr. KURTZ. About 10 days ago.

Mr. HOOPER. I do not recall being present, and I think I have been present every meeting of the committee.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, as far as I can see, after reading this particular bill, there is nothing in it that could be construed to mean that a prosecuting attorney or clerk or stenographer could be present at the time the grand jury is voting on an indictment.

Mr. KURTZ. Not when they are voting, but when the testimony is being taken.

Mr. GLOVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask to see the bill. Since reading the bill I find that it does not correspond with what I understood the gentleman to state and what he did state to the House. The bill does not provide that they shall be there when the vote is being taken. Under the bill as I have read it, it only provides for taking testimony. I have no objection to it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

THE JOURNAL

The legislative clerk proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of May 15, when, on request of Mr. ASHURST and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

HOURS OF DAILY SESSION

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I ask the attention of the senior Senator from Oregon to an order which I am going to propose for consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arizona presents an order, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the daily sessions of the Senate sitting for the trial of the impeachment of Harold Louderback, United States district judge for the northern district of California, shall, unless otherwise ordered, commence at 10 o'clock in the forenoon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to consideration of the order?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, there is no implication that there will be a separation of the legislative business and the impeachment trial by reason of this proposal?

Mr. ASHURST. There is no suggestion of that kind; but, Mr. President, I am of opinion that from time to time there will arise the necessity for legislative business being transacted. I believe that the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment should convene at 10 o'clock and proceed with the taking of the testimony for at least 3 hours a day, and then, as necessity may arise, the Senate may proceed to the consideration of legislative business. It is not intended to have the trial of the impeachment wholly interrupt and suspend legislative business.

Mr. McNARY. It is the purpose, I understand, of the Senator to have the impeachment proceedings commence at 10 o'clock a.m. each day?

Mr. ASHURST. Yes; and run as long as conditions will permit.

Mr. McNARY. And that applies only to the matter now before the Senate?

Mr. ASHURST. Yes, sir.

Mr. McNARY. I have no objection to that.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will suggest that, of course, the order could be changed at any time the Senate sitting as a court may desire.

Mr. HEBERT. Mr. President, may I suggest to the Senator from Arizona that, unless necessity otherwise requires and a motion to the contrary be made, this case proceed throughout the day from the convening of the Senate at 10 o'clock in the morning without interruption.

Mr. ASHURST. I believe that is a very sensible and practical suggestion and a helpful one. It is the intention, I am sure, of the Senate to proceed with the trial with all possible decent haste and to suspend proceedings of the impeachment only when imperative legislative business shall require. I thank the Senator for his suggestion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the order submitted by the Senator from Arizona?

There being no objection, the order was considered and agreed to.

PROCLAMATION

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Sergeant at Arms will make the usual proclamation.

The Sergeant at Arms made the usual proclamation.

DEPOSITION OF W. S. LEAKE

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, respondent's counsel was cross-examining the witness yesterday at the time of adjournment. I take it that it will be in order to resume the cross-examination this morning.

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. President, prior to proceeding with the witness, there was a matter pending yesterday upon the question of having a commission issued for taking the deposition of W. S. Leake. That matter was continued until today. We are prepared to present the matter as to why a commission should issue. If the Senate and the Presiding Officer desire us to be heard upon that matter, we are willing now to be heard.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. The managers on the part of the House resist the motion to take the deposition of Mr. Leake on the ground, first, that the matter was fully anticipated both by the counsel for the respondent and by the managers and a stipulation entered into that in case Mr. Leake could not be present by reason of illness his deposition taken heretofore would be read. The stipulation entered into provides that upon the trial of the above-entitled matter before the Senate of the United States—

The testimony of W. S. Leake, taken at the hearing above referred to, may be read upon said trial by either party hereto, with the same force and effect as if the said witness were present and testified in person. This stipulation, however, insofar as said Leake is concerned, is without waiver by either party hereto to insist upon the attendance of said Leake before the court above referred to, and shall become operative only in the event of the nonappearance of said Leake at Washington before said Court of Impeachment.

The application is made merely on the affidavit of the respondent based on information and belief that Leake cannot be here. It is of prime importance in the trial of this matter that if this man Leake's testimony be taken, it be taken before the trial body.

If I may be permitted to do so, I would refer to a telegram received by the Vice President from Leake's doctor which does not in any way indicate that it is impossible for him to be here, but merely that it is impractical, the telegram saying:

Mr. Leake, under subpoena Loudnerback trial, quite weak physically, due age and cerebral arteriosclerosis. Been his family doctor many years. Travel to Washington impractical, but if imperative should be accompanied by a nurse. Please instruct.

So we resist on the ground, first, that there is no medical testimony here that Leake cannot be here; that it is of prime importance in the trial of this case that this witness, who is charged with being a coconspirator of the respondent, be in the presence of the trial body and his demeanor and testimony examined here rather than to take his deposition far away, where no one knows the circumstances. Furthermore, there is no person on the part of the managers who could examine this man in California. In order to properly further examine Leake it is necessary to have a complete knowledge of the case.

We therefore insist the matter was fully concluded by the stipulation entered into when both parties knew it was possible that Mr. Leake could not be present.

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. President and members of the court, this is a very important matter to the respondent, Judge Loudnerback. The situation is just this: At the time of the special hearing and the alleged deposition of W. S. Leake no charges were filed against Judge Loudnerback, no question of conspiracy was made, and it was only subsequent to the filing of the impeachment articles that we knew for the first time that he was charged with conspiracy. Leake is alleged to be a conspirator. Without the testimony of Leake, how are we going to meet that situation?

The two managers were out upon the coast in the early days of May, this month, and at that time we wished to take the deposition of Leake, anticipating the conditions here. It is true we have received a stipulation, but it does not go far enough. It was "Hobson's choice" with us. We wanted what they had, but we wanted more. We were entitled to more. This trial cannot be completed with the number of witnesses now here, and we can have the deposition taken. There is no great amount of learning involved to take the deposition of Leake. Our friend from New Jersey who just spoke is a flyer. He came out to California in 30 hours. He could do it again over the week-end and take the deposition and could be back here in another 48 hours with the deposition, which would be upon Tuesday next.

In justice to Judge Loudnerback, it is of importance that this deposition be taken. We stand upon our subpoena to have him here. If we cannot get an order by reason of his physical condition, we surely ought to have his deposition, and therefore we are insistent upon the right, fairness, and justice to the respondent to have Leake's deposition taken.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks this is a matter that ought to be submitted to the court. It seems to the Chair, from the statement and the telegram to the Chair, that Mr. Leake could come to Washington if he was accompanied by a nurse. It seems to the Chair that it is a question for the court to determine whether or not they want to ask him to come to Washington accompanied by a nurse, or to authorize the deposition to be taken, or to take the position of the House managers with reference to the reading of the deposition already taken.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, may we have the telegram read again?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the telegram.

The legislative clerk read the telegram, as follows:

Hon. JOHN N. GARNER,

Vice President of United States and President of Senate,
Washington, D.C.:

Mr. Leake, under subpoena Loudnerback trial, quite weak physically, due age and cerebral arteriosclerosis. Been his family doctor many years. Travel to Washington impractical, but if imperative should be accompanied by a nurse. Please instruct.

RUSSELL C. RYAN, M.D.,
Fairmont Hotel.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Sergeant at Arms advises the Chair that he could wire to San Francisco and ask that Mr. Leake come to Washington accompanied by a nurse. What is the pleasure of the Senate?

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, if it be in order, I move that the Vice President be authorized to arrange for Mr. Leake to attend the trial accompanied by a nurse if that is deemed necessary.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, that order will be issued. Counsel will proceed with the cross-examination of the witness Brown.

Cross-examination of Francis C. Brown (continued):

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Brown, at the interview had with Judge Loudnerback—

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will counsel for the respondent speak louder? It is impossible to hear him in this part of the Chamber.

Mr. HEBERT. Mr. President, may I suggest that counsel stand near the center of the Chamber, so that when the witness answers the interrogatories we may hear what he says?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Counsel will kindly comply with the suggestion of the Senator from Rhode Island, and both counsel and the witness will endeavor to speak louder so they may be heard.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Brown, at the interview had with Judge Loudnerback on Thursday, March 13, did Judge Loudnerback, in substance, say to Mr. Thelen, Mr. Marrin, and yourself that inasmuch as he had appointed Mr. Strong at the solicitation of you gentlemen he had sent for you to advise you what had happened since?—A. He did.

Q. And after he had advised you of what had happened after the appointment, did he then, in substance, say to each one of you that it would be entirely agreeable to him for you gentlemen to dismiss the proceeding then pending before him and in that way get rid of the unfortunate situation that had arisen?—A. He did not advise us of everything which had happened subsequent to the appointment of Mr. Strong. He did, however, inform us that the petition could be dismissed if desired. That, however, was impossible, due to the urgent need for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of this company's affairs and to stave off attachments and other threatened legal proceedings.

Mr. LINFORTH. I move to strike out the last part of the answer of the witness as in no way responsive to the question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is of the opinion that this is a very intelligent jury before which the case is being tried. The extra remarks by the witness hardly would influence the Senate of the United States in the trial. However, if counsel desires to submit it to the membership of the court, the Chair will do so.

Mr. LINFORTH. I am perfectly satisfied with the ruling of the Chair. I may add, Mr. President, that my examination will be shortened considerably if the witness will answer the questions as directly as possible upon cross-examination.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The witness will answer the questions as directly as possible.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Brown, what did Judge Louderback say at that time, if anything, with reference to you gentlemen making an investigation as to who Mr. Hunter was?—A. He told us he would allow us from the time of the interview, which was approximately noon, until 4 o'clock in the afternoon to ascertain if there existed anything about Mr. Hunter's past which we could submit to him as a legal reason why he should not be appointed, but he added that he was not allowing us the privilege of saying yes or no at our desire.

Q. And did he thereafter, and before he appointed Mr. Hunter, again communicate with you to ascertain whether or not you had any objection to Mr. Hunter?—A. About 3:30 or a quarter of 4 in the afternoon, I believe, I received a telephone call from the judge's secretary, in response to which I spoke to the judge personally over the telephone.

Q. Did you at that time advise him as to whether or not you and your associates had ascertained if Mr. Hunter was a proper person to be appointed receiver?—A. I told the judge that I had ascertained nothing which I could advance as a legal reason why Mr. Hunter should not be appointed, but that I would not under the circumstances consent to Mr. Hunter's appointment.

Q. Did you at that time say to the judge, and this before he appointed Mr. Hunter, that he was probably a competent man as far as you could ascertain?—A. I said that in effect; yes.

Q. Did you at that time consent to his appointment?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you at any time thereafter, and before he was appointed, consent to his appointment?—A. I never at any time consented to the appointment of Mr. Hunter.

Q. Is your recollection positive on that question?—A. My recollection is very positive.

Q. I hand you a paper filed in the matter of Russell-Colvin & Co. on the 7th day of March 1931 and which is entitled "Application of De Lancey C. Smith and Francis C. Brown for allowance of compensation"; and I call your attention to the signatures on the third page over the word "petitioners", and ask you whose signatures those are.—A. The signature of De Lancey C. Smith written by him, and the signature of Francis C. Brown written by Mr. Smith.

Q. I call your attention to the verification before Lulu P. Loveland, appearing on the next page, and ask you if that is the signature of De Lancey C. Smith to that verification.—A. That is the signature of De Lancey C. Smith.

Q. And did you prepare this petition?—A. I aided in the preparation; yes.

Q. At the time you signed it, and at the time your partner swore to it, did you know the contents of it?—A. I did not sign it personally. I knew the contents of it in substance, however.

Q. Is the signature on page 3, "Francis C. Brown", your signature?—A. It is written in the handwriting of De Lancey C. Smith, and it is not my signature.

Q. But you did know the contents of that paper prior to its filing, did you not?—A. I knew the general nature and contents of the paper; yes.

Q. Calling your attention to the following language on page 2—

That all the services rendered by petitioners and shown in schedule A were rendered for the benefit of and did benefit the administration of the estate of the defendant by the receiver—

And then turning to that exhibit and calling your attention to page 8, under date of March 13, detailing the services which you had rendered, I call your attention to the following:

I also discussed various features of the receivership with the attorneys for other creditors and gave my approval to the appointment of H. B. Hunter as receiver of the company's affairs.

Were you aware of that language in that petition at the time it was filed?

A. I cannot say whether or not I was aware of that language in the petition at the time it was filed. It is not, however, meant to say or to be construed as any consent on my part to the appointment of Mr. Hunter.

Just a minute; if I may explain my answer, I can point out how I know this to be true.

Subsequent to the appointment of Mr. Hunter a petition was filed by Mr. Addison G. Strong, represented by other attorneys, in which he sought to revoke the order removing him, and setting aside the appointment of Mr. Hunter as his successor. At that time Mr. Morse Erskine, one of the then attorneys for Mr. Hunter, came to me with a written—typewritten, prepared form of consent to Mr. Hunter's appointment, and requested my signature to it on behalf of the defendant corporation. The original of that document was delivered to Mr. LaGuardia at the time of the committee hearing in San Francisco, and it is unsigned, and it is on the stationery of Keyes & Erskine. That I refused to sign for the reason, as I stated to Mr. Morse Erskine, that it was entirely inconsistent with the position which I had theretofore taken; and inasmuch as I considered the removal of Mr. Strong wholly unjustified and outrageous, I would not sign it.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, I move to strike out the entire answer of the witness commencing with the paper that he gave to Mr. LaGuardia as in no way responsive to the question that I have asked him. I am directing my inquiry at the present time to the meaning of the language contained on page 8 of the statement that I called to his attention.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair recalls that the witness suggested that he might be permitted to explain his answer. It seems to the Chair that counsel at that time should have objected to the explanation. However, the Chair does not see any reason why that part of the answer should not be stricken out. He calls attention, however, to the fact that if counsel on the part of the respondent permits the witness to explain his answer, he would seem estopped from asking to have it stricken out.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I add, Mr. President, that in courtesy to the witness and in courtesy to the court itself I did not desire to interrupt the witness in the middle of the answer; but if it is the wish that where the witness is, in the opinion of counsel, not responding to the question, we should interrupt, I shall be glad to follow that course in the future.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That part of the answer will be stricken out.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Were you aware, at the time this petition was filed, that it contained this language?

And I also discussed various features of the receivership with the attorneys for other creditors, and gave my approval to the appointment of H. B. Hunter as receiver of the company's affairs.

A. I have no specific recollection of that language. The first time that it was called to my attention was at the committee hearing. I did, however, have general knowledge of the contents of the entire petition, together with the exhibits, at the time it was filed.

Q. Did you dictate this portion of the petition that I have read to you?—A. It is entirely possible that I did. I do not remember at this time.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, we offer at this time, as part of the cross-examination of the witness, the document to which I have just referred.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be filed as part of the record.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Yesterday you referred to a conversation which you had with the receiver and Mr. Morse Erskine before the application for fees had been presented to Judge Louderback, and if I understood you correctly at that time you stated that you people had suggested as attorney fees twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars. Merely for the purpose of refreshing your memory, was the amount that you suggested as attorney fees greater than that?—A. I do not believe so.

Q. Did you not suggest at that time $35,000 as attorney fees?—A. I personally made no suggestion. The suggestion, however, was made by Mr. Smith, and it was my recollection that the fee was either $25,000 or $30,000.

Q. Was Mr. Short present at that conversation?—A. I believe he was. He did not participate in the conversation, however.

Q. Were you in court March 17, 1931, when the application for fees was on hearing?—A. If that is the date on which the testimony was being taken, I was present; yes.

Q. That is the last day of the hearing, Mr. Brown, according to my information.—A. Yes; I was present.

Q. And was your partner, De Lancey Smith, also present at that time?—A. Mr. Smith was present also.

Q. And was Mr. Thelen also present at that time?—A. Mr. Thelen was present also.

Q. Was Mr. Marrin, Mr. Thelen's partner, also present?—A. Mr. Marrin was not present. He was absent from the city.

Q. Were you present in court at that time on that hearing when a Mr. Scampini was there, representing certain creditors, and objecting to the allowance of fees?—A. I was.

Q. Were you there when Mr. Scampini stated to the court the arrangement that the parties had entered into, namely, that $46,250 should be allowed to Short & Erskine, $8,750 to your firm and to Messrs. Thelen and Marrin, and $20,000 to the receiver, in addition to the monthly allowance that he had already received?—A. I believe that is the statement, in substance, which he made; and I was present at the time.

Q. And you heard him make that statement, did you?—A. Yes; I did.

Q. Did you say anything in objection to that statement at the time that statement was made to his honor, Judge Louderback?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you hear Judge Louderback say, after that arrangement and statement had been made by Mr. Scampini, "I see Mr. Thelen, and I believe Mr. Brown is also here. You are satisfied with what has been done?" Did you hear the judge make that statement at that time?—A. I heard him make a statement to that general effect; yes.

Q. And when he made that statement, did either you or your partner, Mr. Smith, say "Yes, sir"?—A. My recollection is that Mr. Smith made the reply—said "Yes."

Q. And after Mr. Smith, in your presence and hearing, had answered "Yes, sir", did you then hear the court say this:

And I presume these arrangements are satisfactory to both of you gentlemen?

Referring to you, as well?

A. The arrangements were not satisfactory to me, and I did not—

Q. Just a moment; answer the question.—A. I did not understand his question to mean that.

Mr. LINFORTH. I submit that the answer is not responsive, and I move to strike it out.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Answer the question directly.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, I object to the question if counsel is going to insist on giving his construction of whom the judge referred to, when he did not say whom it was that he referred to. I think it is unfair to the witness for counsel to insist on his construction of what the judge said.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The witness can answer whether or not he gave the answer suggested by counsel.

Mr. LINFORTH. The question, Mr. President, is this: Did he, at that time, hear the respondent say:

And I presume these arrangements are satisfactory to both of you gentlemen?

Referring to the witness and to his partner, Mr. Smith.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, that is the part of the question to which I object, because the judge never said to whom he referred.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The objection is sustained. Counsel cannot conclude that the judge had in view the witness because he said "both of you gentlemen."

Mr. LINFORTH. I will follow the suggestions of the Vice President, and I will read from the record, with your permission (p. 9).

Did you hear Judge Louderback at that time make this statement?—

I will allow the sums which have been mentioned—$20,000 to Mr. Hunter in addition to the money he has already received in monthly payments; I will allow $46,250 to the attorneys, John D. Short and Erskine & Erskine; and I will allow to the plaintiff's attorneys and to the defendant's attorneys the sum of $8,750; and I presume everybody present signifies their acceptance of that arrangement, and all join in its approval. I see Mr. Thelen, and I believe Mr. Brown is here. You are satisfied with what has been done?

Mr. BROWN. Yes, sir.

The COURT. And I presume these arrangements are satisfactory to both of you gentlemen?

Mr. BROWN. Yes, sir.

Did you hear the court make those announcements, and did either you or your partner answer as shown by the record that I have just read from?

The WITNESS. I heard the court make a statement to that effect, and I heard, according to my recollection, Mr. Smith make the reply which the record indicates was made by myself.

Q. In other words, what I have read to you agrees with your present recollection, except that it was Mr. Smith instead of Mr. Brown that made the replies, "Yes, sir"? Is that correct?—A. In substance and effect it agrees; yes.

Q. Mr. Smith was at that time, and still is, your partner?—A. Mr. Smith was at that time, and still is, associated with me, or, rather, I am associated with him jointly in this case.

Q. And you and Mr. Smith, and Messrs. Thelen and Marrin, were the attorneys to whom the court awarded the $8,750?—A. Joint compensation for all parties; yes, sir.

Q. After this sum of $46,250 was allowed, was there a further application for fees made on behalf of Keyes, Erskine & Short?—A. According to my recollection, there was.

Q. How much was that application for; do you recall?—A. $5,000 for the attorneys, and around $8,000 for the receiver.

Q. Merely to refresh your memory, if I may, was the application for attorney fees $7,500 instead of $5,000?—A. My recollection is that it was $5,000. It may, however, have been larger.

Q. Did you know of the making of that application?—A. I was requested to consent to it, and I declined to do it.

Q. Were you present in court when the application came on for hearing?—A. I was not.

Q. Had you received notice of the time of the hearing of the application?—A. I did.

Q. And you did not attend?—A. I did not attend; no.

Q. You say the court at that time allowed $5,000 on that application?—A. That is the information which I subsequently received.

Q. Did you and your partner receive part of that $5,000?—A. I did not receive any part of it. I understand that Mr. Smith received some portion of it from Keyes & Erskine.

Q. Mr. Smith was your partner?—A. Mr. Smith—

Q. And your partner received some part of it, but not you. Is that what you say?—A. Mr. Smith and I were associated in the case. We were not in a general partnership.

Q. Was not that part of the understanding that was entered into by you people at the time the $46,500 was allowed, namely, that if any further applications were made and granted, your firm, and the firm of Thelen & Marrin, would receive 20 percent of what the court allowed to Keyes & Erskine and Short?—A. That is not a correct statement of the understanding.

Q. You say there was no such understanding?—A. I say that is not a correct statement of what the understanding was.

Q. I am asking you, was there such an understanding?—A. Not an understanding such as you have stated; no.

Q. Were you in court at the time the application for the original fees was on hearing, and did you at that time hear Mr. Erskine make the following statement to the court, page 6 of the record?—

MR. ERSKINE. We might add, if Your Honor please, in order to be entirely candid with the court, in order to bring about this arrangement we have agreed with the attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant that if any additional compensation is allowed us in this estate for services to be rendered in the future we will pay them 20 percent up to the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars. We want the court to be fully advised of that arrangement in order to be entirely candid about it.

Did you hear that statement made to the court at that time?—A. I do not remember hearing that statement. That, however, as you just read it, is substantially a correct statement of the understanding.

Q. And did your firm, and the firm of Thelen & Marrin, to your knowledge, receive 20 percent of the additional $5,000 subsequently awarded by the court to Keyes, Erskine & Short?—A. My best recollection is that the remittance was made in the sum of $1,000 to Mr. Smith, who in turn made some settlement with Thelen & Marrin.

Q. Do you tell the Senate and His Honor that you accepted that money knowing that the original allowance of $46,250 was excessive?—A. I personally did not accept any of the money. However, my definite feeling and conviction, and my present feeling is—

MR. LINFORTH. Just a moment. I submit the witness is not responding to my question. May my question be read?

THE VICE PRESIDENT. The reporter will read the question.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. Do you tell the Senate and His Honor that you accepted that money knowing that the original allowance of $46,250 was excessive?

MR. BROWNING. Mr. President, we except to the question, as the counsel undertakes to put into the mouth of the witness the statement that he did accept the money, and I insist that he has a right to deny that in his answer. His answer was in response to his right to deny that he ever received that $1,000.

MR. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I add that the witness has stated that while he did not receive the money, his partner received and retained half of it and turned the other half over to Thelen & Marrin?

MR. BROWNING. No; that is not in the record.

MR. LINFORTH. I submit that is his answer.

THE VICE PRESIDENT. You can get the record, but I think counsel is mistaken. I think the witness said part of it, not all of it.

MR. LINFORTH. May I withdraw the question for the time being?

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. How much of that 20 percent, or $1,000, did your partner retain?—A. I do not know; and, if I may add, several times I have made the observation that Mr. Smith and I were not general partners. You are referring to him as my partner. That is the understanding.

Q. You and he were partners insofar as the Russell-Colvin matter was concerned, were you not?—A. Mr. Smith associated me in the case with him at the time he departed for New York.

MR. LINFORTH. I submit the witness is not answering the question.

THE VICE PRESIDENT. I think that is a fair answer.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Did you receive a portion of the $8,750 that was allowed to the attorneys for the plaintiff and the defendant in that matter?—A. I did.

Q. Did you receive the full half of what was allowed to your firm, or the portion which your firm received, of the $8,750?—A. I believe I did.

Q. I hand you what purports to be a typewritten copy of a letter of date November 30, 1931, from Keyes & Erskine, addressed to your partner, De Lancey C. Smith. Had you, on or about that date, seen that letter [handing witness letter]?—A. I do not recall that I did see it. I knew, however, that the remittance had been forthcoming.

Q. But you did not know it came in the letter to which I have called your attention?—A. I knew that it came. I do not recall—I do not believe I ever saw the letter, Mr. Linforth.

Q. Yesterday in your testimony you made some reference to the employment of Milton Newmark in the bankruptcy proceeding. Do you recall that?—A. I do.

Q. I think you said that Mr. Hunter preferred Mr. Newmark because, on account of his friendship, he would like to throw something his way. Do you recall making use of that expression?—A. No; I did not use that expression. I can tell you what I said.

Q. Pardon me. You did not make use of the expression that Mr. Hunter preferred Mr. Milton Newmark because he would like to throw something his way?—A. I said that Mr. Morse Erskine told me that Mr. Hunter would like to throw something Mr. Newmark's way; yes.

Q. When Mr. Newmark was employed, was it not understood between all of you, your firm, the Thelen & Marrin firm, and the attorneys for the receiver, that whatever his compensation should be, the attorneys would pay it, and not the Russell-Colvin estate?—A. That was understood.

Q. And is it not a fact that the fees that were paid to him were paid by the attorneys out of the allowance which the court had made to them?—A. I do not know what fees he received other than from Mr. Smith and myself. He received the proportion which we agreed to pay him.

Q. You do know that no fees were paid to him out of the Russell-Colvin estate?—A. My recollection is that no express court order allowing him expressly a fee was made.

Q. Were you present in court upon the hearing to which I have called your attention, on the 17th of March, when the application for fees was on hearing, and when it was stated to the court that the compensation of Mr. Newmark would be taken care of by the attorneys out of their allowances, and would not be a charge against the estate?—A. I have no recollection of that statement being made. It may have been made. There was no secret about the arrangement with Mr. Newmark.

Q. Were you in court and did you hear the court at that time make this statement?—

That leaves nothing in question except the thousand dollar claim which is pending; and it is understood, if Mr. Newmark makes any claim, the firm of Erskine & Erskine will see that it is properly attended to.

Did you hear His Honor make that statement?—A. I do not recall the statement. It may have been made, however.

Q. Was there not a statement made at that time, in the presence of His Honor, and before His Honor made this remark, to the effect that the compensation of Mr. Newmark would not come out of the Russell-Colvin estate?—A. I do not recall that the subject of Mr. Newmark was mentioned at that hearing at all.

Q. You stated yesterday that Judge Louderback informed you and your associates on the meeting of March 13 that he had suggested various attorneys to the receiver from which he might select his counsel. You have that in mind, Mr. Brown? And among those counsel you mentioned Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, Sullivan, Sullivan & Roche, and Cushing & Cushing. Do you recall that?—A. They were the firms which, it is my recollection, were mentioned by the judge.

Q. Yes, sir. Did the judge tell you that he had recommended those firms to the receiver before he made any order removing the receiver?—A. At the time he told us that, he had not removed the receiver.

Q. Did the judge at that time, in the same connection, tell you that the receiver had refused to accept his suggestions in regard to the employment of any of those men?—A. He did.

Q. And did he also at that time tell you that the receiver told him that he would employ no one except the regular attorneys for the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. He did not put it that way.

Q. What did he say in that regard?—A. He said that everything was very pleasant between the receiver and himself until they came to the subject of the receiver's counsel, and that Mr. Strong would have no one except Mr. McAuliffe.

Q. Of course, you knew that Mr. McAuliffe was a member of the firm who were the regular attorneys for the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. Everyone knew that.

Q. When the judge made the order appointing Mr. Strong as receiver, you said it was about 5 o'clock?—A. My recollection is that it was around 5 o'clock, sometime.

Q. And at that time the judge knew from what was said, did he not, that the receiver was then and there going to qualify?—A. I do not believe any statement was made to that effect.

Q. At that time you had presented the bond to the judge for his approval, had you not?—A. Yes.

Q. After the bond was presented to the judge for approval and after he had approved it, did not the judge then say to Mr. Strong that after he qualified he wanted to see him?—A. He said, in substance, "After the business of qualifying is over, I want you to come back and see me."

Q. You know that Mr. Strong did not return that day to see the judge, do you not?—A. That same afternoon?

Q. Yes; that same afternoon.—A. That is my opinion; yes.

Q. Well, did you not tell us yesterday that he went down town with you on the car?—A. That is correct.

Q. You also said yesterday that the various petitions and the various orders made in this proceeding were all approved or O.K'd. by your firm; is that right?—A. No, sir; a great number of them were consented to by us; a few of them were not consented to by us.

Q. But most of them were examined by your firm and O.K'd by you?—A. Yes; that is correct.

Q. Is that also the situation so far as Thelen & Marrin are concerned, who were the attorneys for the plaintiff?—A. I believe that is true also.

Q. So that the judge took the precaution to require all of these papers to be O.K'd by both of you before he acted upon them, did he not?—A. If you are asking my opinion, my opinion was that the judge was endeavoring to compromise us, in view of the dispute which had arisen between Mr. Strong and himself, and in view of our attitude concerning Mr. Strong's removal.

Q. But you understood, did you not, that the judge had required this sort of checking up by you people representing the defendant and Thelen & Marrin representing the plaintiff?—A. Mr. Morse Erskine or Mr. Hunter, one or the other, gave me the only information I had about it.

Q. Was the information he gave you, that the judge desired both of you to check up on all proceedings of that kind that took place?—A. The information or the statement which one or the other of these men made to me was that the judge had requested them to submit all papers to us for our consent or rejection before they were filed.

Q. Do you know how many petitions prepared by Keyes, Erskine & Short were submitted to you for your approval? I do not mean to be exact, but about how many?—A. Well, I do not think I could give you a fair estimate; it was well over a hundred.

Q. Well over a hundred? Would I be wrong in saying over 300?—A. In my opinion you would.

Q. I understood you to say yesterday that the reputation of Mr. Short was good. Is that correct?—A. I personally considered Mr. Short to be a man of good character.

Q. I understood you to say that you did not consider the reputation of Mr. Herbert Erskine to be good?—A. That question was asked me, and that is my opinion; that was my answer.

Q. You made no reference to his partner, Morse Erskine?—A. No.

Q. Do you consider him a reputable attorney?—A. I prefer not to answer the question.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Herbert Erskine?—A. I have either known or known of Mr. Herbert Erskine ever since I have been in San Francisco.

Q. Did you know him when the firm was Keyes & Erskine?—A. I did.

Q. Did you know Mr. Keyes?—A. I knew Mr. Keyes very well.

Q. Was he one of the most reputable lawyers in San Francisco?—A. Mr. Keyes was one of the most reputable lawyers in San Francisco.

Q. And how many years had Mr. Herbert Erskine been his partner?—A. For a great many years; long prior to my coming to San Francisco.

Q. And he was his partner at the time that Mr. Keyes died, was he not?—A. He was.

Q. Mr. Herbert Erskine, whom you speak of, was one of the directors of the bar association of San Francisco in 1932, was he not?—A. He may have been; I do not know.

Q. One of the governors, I think, is the proper term. You knew Mr. Erskine when Keyes & Erskine were the attorneys for the Humboldt Bank in San Francisco?—A. I knew Mr. Keyes quite well. I knew Mr. Erskine slightly at that time. I met him several times.

Q. But you knew him when that firm represented the Humboldt Bank, did you not?—A. Mr. Keyes was president of the Humboldt Bank and majority stockholder of the bank.

Q. After Mr. Keyes' death you knew, did you not, that Mr. Herbert Erskine was one of the attorneys for the Bank of America in California?—A. I knew that he was employed in connection with some of the stock of the Humboldt Bank as attorney for the Bank of America.

Q. How long, to your knowledge, has Mr. Herbert Erskine been one of the attorneys for the Bank of America in California?—I believe between 1928 and 1932. I do not know whether he is still attorney for the bank or not.

Q. Have you had any personal differences with him?—A. I personally have not had any differences with him, but I have known a great many people who have.

Mr. LINFORTH. I move to strike that out as not responsive to my question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The witness will answer the question direct.

Q. (By Mr. LINFORTH.) Have you had any personal differences with him?—A. I have never had any personal differences with him.

Q. Has your partner, to your knowledge, had any personal differences with him?—A. My partner, Mr. Smith, used to be a very close friend of Mr. Erskine.

Q. I am asking you, to your knowledge, has your partner had any differences with Mr. Herbert Erskine?—A. If you are referring to Mr. Smith, not to my knowledge. He has never had any differences.

Mr. LINFORTH. I think that will conclude the cross-examination, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Do the managers on the part of the House desire to further examine the witness?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes, Mr. President.

Redirect examination by Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Mr. Brown, when the respondent suggested that the petition in the Russell-Colvin case could be dismissed, will you state why it could not have been dismissed at that time?—A. For two reasons: One was that it was absolutely necessary to have a receiver in charge of that company's affairs on account of the fact that a large number of margin customers were asking delivery of their securities and tendering payment on their balances. If those deliveries had been made, it would have resulted in a great many preferences. Other legal proceedings were threatened, such as attachments and replevin suits, and so on. We contemplated at one time filing a petition for the appointment of a receiver in the State court, but concluded against that, in view of the fact that we felt that bankruptcy proceedings would follow and a receiver in bankruptcy would be appointed who would supersede the State court receiver. Mr. Marrin and I discussed the matter, and concluded that we would make an issue of the case and see it through.

Q. Did the respondent know at that time that there was danger of a bankruptcy proceeding?—A. He had asked us if it was not possible or probable that a bankruptcy proceeding would supersede a Federal equity receivership proceeding.

Q. What effort was made to get you to consent to the appointment of Mr. Hunter as receiver?

Mr. LINFORTH. One minute. We object to that as being thoroughly incompetent and unless connected with the respondent, hearsay, and not binding on him.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. In view of the cross-examination, I think it is thoroughly competent to let the witness explain the very thing that counsel for respondent brought out.

Mr. LINFORTH. I submit he has a right to explain anything, but his explanation can only be by means and by ways of competent testimony.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The witness will not testify to hearsay, if he has not the information of his own knowledge.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. My question is, What effort was made to get you to consent to the appointment of Mr. Hunter as receiver and who made the effort?

Mr. LINFORTH. We make the same objection, that it is calling for his opinion or conclusion as to whether there were efforts or not, not limiting the question to anything that took place with reference to the respondent or in his presence or hearing. We are not bound by what this witness or any other witness may have done out of the presence and out of the hearing of the respondent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair stated before—and he reiterates now—that the jury trying this case is an intelligent jury, and the Chair does not believe any statement made by the witness in response to a direct question will influence the jury.

Q. (By Mr. Manager BROWNING.) In order to satisfy counsel, I will ask it in this way: What effort did the respondent make with you to get you to consent to the appointment of Mr. Hunter as receiver?—A. In the late afternoon of Thursday, March 13, after Mr. Strong had been removed, I talked to the respondent over the telephone, and he asked me if I would consent to Mr. Hunter's appointment. I told him that I would not consent to Mr. Hunter's appointment. While I found no objection which I could advance as a legal reason why he should not be appointed, I could not, in view of the fact that I considered Mr. Strong's removal unjustified, consent to the appointment of a successor.

Q. After that time, who else made an effort with you, if anybody did, to get you to consent to the appointment of Mr. Hunter as receiver?

Mr. LINFORTH. One moment. We object to that as incompetent, as hearsay, and not binding on the respondent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. After that time, did the counsel for the receiver request of you to consent to the appointment of Mr. Hunter?—A. They did.

Q. When the fee of $8,750 was allowed, was that to you and your associate, Mr. Smith, or were you getting a division of that?—A. That $8,750 was the entire allowance for Messrs. Thelen & Marrin and Mr. Smith and myself.

Q. And what part of it came to you and your associate, Mr. Smith?—A. Approximately 50 percent—slightly over 50 percent, I believe.

Q. At the time you saw the respondent about noon the day that Mr. Strong was discharged as receiver, and he mentioned to you that the firms that he had submitted to Mr. Strong as his suggestion for attorneys, did he at that time mention the fact that he had suggested John Douglas Short?—A. He told us that he had suggested the other attorneys, but he did not tell us that he had suggested Mr. Short, and Mr. Short's name was never mentioned nor were the names of Keyes & Erskine.

Q. Did you, one Monday in March, in company with other attorneys and Mr. Strong, go to the chambers of the respondent and present to him a petition for receivership?—A. Not on Monday.

Q. Why were the defendants not the same in the two petitions that were filed on Tuesday, March 11, 1930?—A. My information on that is indirect.

Mr. LINFORTH. Just one second. If the information is based on hearsay, Mr. President, we object to it as being incompetent.

Mr. HANLEY. The record is the best evidence. Both of the complaints are here with the clerk and the jury can see them without his opinion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. We will not insist on it if the witness did not know of his knowledge. In either of your conferences with the respondent, while Mr. Strong was present, did he say this or this in substance, "If I appoint you, will you consent to take my suggestion as to who the attorney shall be?"—A. He did not.

Q. Did you and those associated with you in filing the case fail to make the bond the first day the petition was presented to the respondent?—A. Will you have the question repeated?

Q. Did you and those associated with you fail to make the bond required by the court the first day the petition was presented to the respondent?—A. No. The first day the petition was actually presented to the respondent was on Tuesday, and on that same day the bonds were procured. We were, however, unable to procure a plaintiff's bond in the sum of $50,000, and the respondent, reduced the requirement to $10,000.

Q. Did you and those associated with you in filing the petition request the respondent to keep the clerk's office open after closing hours?—A. I do not believe so. I think that request was made directly of the clerk, Mr. Maling.

Q. Did you show an unusual interest in connection with this case, and was there great excitement at the time the case was filed? If so, on whose part was it?

Mr. HANLEY. We object to the question as calling for his opinion or conclusion as to whether he showed unusual interest.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The witness may state the facts.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I have read the exact allegation made by the respondent as to the fact in this case, and I request this witness, who was present throughout the proceeding, to state whether or not that is the fact or the condition.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the witness state any facts within his knowledge.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Did you or those associated with you show unusual interest in connection with this case and was there great excitement? If so, on whose part?

Mr. HANLEY. We object to the question as being improper and incompetent and calling for an opinion or conclusion of the witness as to what the great interest was and as to whether there was great excitement.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks it is for the court to determine whether there was great excitement. The witness may state the facts.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. With all deference, I want to make this statement. The question I have read to the witness is the exact allegation made by the respondent of the conditions surrounding the filing of this case, and I have read it in his language. I desire to ask the witness if that is the fact.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the witness state what the facts are, and whether that constitutes great excitement is for the court to determine. The respondent would have to state the facts in order to sustain his allegation.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. You may answer the question.—A. We proceeded in a quiet and orderly manner into the judge's anteroom. We spoke to his secretary and asked for an appointment. We spoke in a quiet and orderly manner to the judge, and, in my opinion, I personally was not excited and I observed no excitement on the part of Mr. Thelen or Mr. Marrin or Mr. Strong. I did, however, observe some excitement on the part of some of the court attachés.

Q. On the afternoon that Mr. Strong was appointed and left to qualify, state whether or not the respondent at that time told him to return that same day.—A. He did not.

Q. To your knowledge, did Mr. Strong pick Heller, Erhmann, White & McAuliffe as his attorneys in this case prior to his appointment?

Mr. HANLEY. We object to that as calling for his conclusion or opinion and not binding upon the respondent.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I said, "State whether or not, to your knowledge."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the witness state what is within his knowledge.

The WITNESS. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair appoints the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] to preside over the court for the balance of the day.

(Thereupon Mr. KING took the chair.)

Recross examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Just a question or two. Did you represent any creditor or creditors of the Russell-Colvin Co.?—A. I do not believe so.

Q. Do you recall whether or not your firm were creditors of that company?—A. Yes. Mr. Smith was a creditor.

Q. Just one other matter and I am through. Counsel asked you as to why you could not have dismissed this petition upon which the receiver was appointed, in accordance with the judge's suggestion. You have that in mind, have you?—A. Yes.

Q. How long would it have taken you to have filed a new petition?—A. We had a new petition all prepared and it would not have taken very long.

Q. You could have dismissed this petition, filed a new one, and had another receiver appointed within 24 hours, could you not?—A. When I say we had another petition prepared, I mean it was a State court petition prepared, but we would not have gotten anywhere by dismissing the first petition, but would have been right back where we started.

Q. How long would it have taken you, after dismissing this particular petition, to have filed another?—A. Several hours, I suppose; half a day.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I send to the desk a question I would like to have propounded to the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Give us the entire amount of expense of the receivership, itemized so far as you can, and the nature and amount of the services rendered in each case.

The WITNESS. The fees which were awarded to the attorneys for the receiver were, first, $46,250, and a second allowance of $5,000. The first allowance to the receiver personally, Mr. H. B. Hunter, was $33,000, including the $1,000 per month which he had theretofore been drawing for a period of 13 months. In October 1931 he received a further allowance of $7,500. The fees which were allowed to the attorneys for the plaintiffs, Messrs. Thelen & Marrin and Mr. Smith and to myself, totaled $8,750.

In addition to that there were other expenses, accounting expenses for services rendered by accountants employed by the receiver, and other administrative expenses, the exact figures of which I could not give you. I think the accounting expense was approximately $14,000. That is my recollection. Those figures are available, I believe, in the report which was filed by the receiver, a copy of which was printed in the committee report of the House of Representatives.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. What amount of cash, if you know, was taken in by the receiver in this case, collected from all sources?—A. I made a memorandum according to my best recollection, which I believe is fairly accurate. There was received from the sale of the stock of Coen & Co. $25,000. The sale of the stock exchange seat brought $75,000. The sale of the stock and debentures of the Consolidated Paper Box Co. brought approximately $115,000. The sale of miscellaneous assets brought approximately $9,000. In addition to that there was some cash in bank or on hand or turned back from the brokers who had liquidated more than the amount needed to settle their indebtedness. I think that was approximately $11,000. Then there was the sale of the Anchorage Power & Light securities, the exact amount of which I have not at hand.

Q. Can you give what the total is of the items you have enumerated?—A. Two hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars approximately, not including the Anchorage securities.

Q. At the time these initial fees were allowed, had any dividends been paid?—A. Not at that time.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I did not hear the witness' answer to the question I propounded. I did not hear him tell how much the attorneys for the receivers received.

The WITNESS. The attorneys for the receiver received a first allowance of $46,250 in March or April 1931. Later in the fall of 1931, October or November of 1931, they received a further fee of $5,000, making their total compensation $51,250.

Mr. NORRIS. I call the attention of the witness to a further part of the question: What services were rendered for the various fees? That was included in the question.

The WITNESS. The services which were rendered, as I observed them, consisted of the consideration of a few, approximately 100, petitions which they prepared requesting instructions from the court, authorizing the receiver to make delivery of securities and prescribing the conditions which should be fixed for the delivery of securities under certain circumstances; the preparation of claims, aiding in the preparation of a form of claim which was submitted to the receiver, and which the receiver circulated among the creditors to be filled out in the blank form; the general advice which was given to the receiver as to his own rights, I assume—I personally was not present at all those conferences—and consultations with us and with the receiver concerning the sale of the stock-exchange seat and of the Consolidated Paper Box Co. securities. As I stated yesterday, the sale of the Consolidated Paper Box securities was largely handled by Mr. Smith and a creditor named Littler and by me. The closing negotiations, however, were reduced to writing by the receiver. Then they appeared in court on a hearing on a number of those petitions and secured a court order, and also prepared the first accounts and the second accounts, and petitions for allowance of fees, and so on.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, I desire to submit three brief questions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will transmit them to the clerk to be read.

The legislative clerk read the first question, as follows:

Do you have any feeling of ill will, prejudice, or malice toward the respondent?

The WITNESS. No.

The legislative clerk read the second question, as follows:

Do you have any feeling or desire in these matters under consideration that the Court of Impeachment shall return the findings one way or the other?

The WITNESS. It is my opinion that the charges which have been made in the case of the Russell-Colvin Co. are justified.

The legislative clerk read the third question, as follows:

Are your feelings toward the respondent kind or unkind?

The WITNESS. My feelings toward the respondent are indifferent so far as he personally is concerned.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other questions to be propounded to the witness?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, just one more question:

Q. What proportionate part of the legal work connected with the administration of this receivership was done by the attorneys for the receiver on the one hand, as against the attorneys for the petitioner and the defendant on the other hand?—A. It is very difficult to apportion the services. A great many of the services were handled by both parties at the same time, all working together, in concert. As I recall it, at the time of the first allowances, in April of 1931, the record which was submitted to the court showing the time devoted by the attorneys for the receiver as against the attorneys for the defendant and the attorneys for the plaintiff showed that the latter had put in about 50 percent of the time put in by the attorneys for the receiver, and I believe that the work which was done by Mr. Marrin and Mr. Smith and myself was in many instances of equal importance to the work done by the receiver's attorneys.

Q. What part of the time listed in the reports of the attorneys for the receiver was legal work, and what part of it was clerical work?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a minute. We object to that as calling for the witness's opinion or conclusion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness may state if he knows.

The WITNESS. I do not believe I could give you an estimate of how much. I would say that a large part of the work was, in my opinion, clerical work rather than purely legal work.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all, Mr. President.

Mr. LONG. I have a question, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question submitted by the Senator from Louisiana will be read.

The legislative clerk read the question as follows:

If you did not agree to that settlement in open court when your partner, Smith, said he did, then why did you not say something?

The WITNESS. The explanation of that is this: It is rather a long explanation:

For several days during the course of that hearing we had been sitting in court observing the way in which the hearing was being directed, and in my opinion the opposition which was being put up was not effective opposition. Then we came back after the noon recess on either the second or the third day, and I was informed by Mr. Smith, in the presence—

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment. The President invited us to interrupt when anything was objectionable, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. State the ground of your interruption.

Mr. LINFORTH. We object to the witness stating what Mr. Smith informed him as being hearsay and not binding on the respondent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair holds that it is hearsay; but, in view of the question which is propounded, the witness is giving the reasons upon which he acted. Whether those reasons were sound or unsound would be for the court to determine. Proceed.

The WITNESS. I was informed by Mr. Smith, in the presence of Mr. Herbert Erskine, that in our absence the attorney for the objectors to the allowances which were being requested had consented to an allowance of $45,000 for the attorneys for the receiver, $33,000 for the receiver, and $10,000 combined for the attorneys for the plaintiff and the attorneys for the defendant. I stated to Mr. Smith that I considered that to be entirely insufficient insofar as we were concerned, and to be excessive insofar as the attorneys for the receiver were concerned, and he reiterated my view.

Then we went into a conference with Mr. Thelen; and as the judge had stated that no continuance would be allowed for the hearing, and Mr. Marrin, Mr. Thelen's partner, who had done the bulk of the work for their firm, was out of town, and consequently Mr. Thelen had no person whom he could put on the witness stand to testify as to those services, and in view of the fact that there was some question under the authorities as to whether or not the attorneys for the defendant had an absolute legal right to compensation other than a right which might be wholly within the discretion of the court, Mr. Smith concluded, and Mr. Thelen very reluctantly concluded, that the proposal would be accepted.

Then Mr. Erskine came back and said that his brother, Morse Erskine, would not accept the fee of $45,000, but wanted an additional $1,250; and there was only one place to take it from, so they took it from the $10,000 which was to be allowed to Mr. Smith, Mr. Thelen, Mr. Marrin, and myself, cutting our compensations under this proposed settlement to $8,750.

All during this conference, on at least two or three occasions, I had observed either the attorney for the receiver, Mr. Short, and in at least one instance the receiver himself, consulting with the respondent in his chambers either before or after or during the intermission at this hearing; and on account of the fact that we understood that he was a friend—the receiver's attorney, Mr. Short, was a friend—of the judge, and on account of the fact that he had removed Mr. Strong, and on account of the further fact that Mr. Herbert Erskine said that the judge was prepared to make allowances which he suggested, we felt that it would be futile under these circumstances to prosecute an independent inquiry or an independent application, in view of the uncertainty under the authorities as to our own compensation.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have tried to elicit an answer, and probably my question was a little too broad to get it. I send another question to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will be read. The legislative clerk read the question, as follows:

In view of your answer, will you please tell me why now you let your partner say that matters were agreeable to you both, and you remained silent? Were you afraid to speak?

The WITNESS. I felt that it was personally entirely unsatisfactory to me, and I was prepared to take my chances on prosecuting my application independently. Mr. Smith, however, felt differently. He felt that he did not want to run that chance, and consequently he felt that he was forced to acquiesce, and that any objection would be futile.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other questions?

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, there is a question or two further that we desire to propound to the witness.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. In addition to the amount of assets which you have referred to this morning, how much was collected by the receiver on accounts and notes due from customers?—A. There was very little collected up to the time that first application was filed.

Q. Was there, in all, $512,944 collected on accounts and notes due from customers?—A. I do not believe so; no.

Q. What amount was collected on accounts and notes due from customers, if you know?—A. I have previously stated that I did not have the exact figures. I do, however, know that there was great delay in prosecuting the collections on accounts receivable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The answers should be responsive to the questions. Do not make suggestions.

Q. Then you do not intend, by the answers that you have given, to create the impression that the assets handled by the receiver were only the amounts that you have referred to?—A. The amounts which I have referred to were the principal assets of the general estate. The other collections, I believe, that you are referring to were collections from margin customers, were they not?

Q. Yes, sir. Do you know how much that was that was collected?—A. I could not give you that figure; no.

Q. You also referred to some $10,000 cash on hand. Was that a guess on your part?—A. That was my recollection.

Q. Was the amount over $16,000 instead of $10,000?—A. Over $16,000?

Q. Yes.—A. My recollection is that it was between 10 and 11 thousand dollars.

Q. And instead of being about $10,000 from sale of miscellaneous things, was the amount collected by the receiver from that source over $30,000?—A. The amount collected from the sale of the furniture and furnishings which I referred to as miscellaneous things, as set forth in the receiver's account, was $9,083.61.

Q. Was there $21,870 in addition to that received by the receiver from the sale of miscellaneous assets?—A. What do you refer to when you say "miscellaneous assets"?

Q. Those not specified as accounts and notes due from customers, cash on hand, firm securities, sale of furniture, and sale of stock-exchange seat.—A. It may have been. I do not remember.

Q. Was not the amount actually received by the receiver, including the amount collected on accounts and notes due from customers, over $1,000,000?—A. The amount of the general estate was considerably less than $1,000,000.

Q. Mr. Brown, I am trying to shorten this. Will you please follow my questions and see if you can answer directly?—A. I do not remember the exact figure.

Q. Was not the amount actually received by the receiver over $1,000,000?—A. I do not remember the exact figures.

Mr. LINFORTH. I have no further questions.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, in view of that question, I should like to ask this:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. How much of this total amount was actually a part of the estate, and how much did they hold as bailee in relation to bailor?—A. My recollection is that they held well over $1,000,000, according to their book value, of securities as bailee.

Q. What disposition was made of those securities?—A. They were either ultimately sold to satisfy the indebtedness, margin indebtedness, due the firm, or were delivered upon payment of those balances.

Q. Was the amount of money collected on these marginal accounts in reality a part of the estate?

Mr. LINFORTH. One minute.

The WITNESS. Not in my opinion.

Mr. LINFORTH. One minute. We object to that, Mr. President, upon the ground that it calls for his opinion and conclusion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is sustained. State the facts.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I desire to propound the interrogatory which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will be read.

The legislative clerk read the question, as follows:

Do you know how the fees allowed to the attorneys for the receiver compared with the fees allowed in other similar cases?

The WITNESS. I could not make a comparison, because I know of no other case of the same general nature—in other words, a stock-brokerage failure presenting the same problem—except one which occurred subsequently, and in which no fees have thus far been allowed, so I am informed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do counsel for the respondent desire to ask any further questions?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just one further question, Mr. President.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. From your knowledge as attorney for this company, is it not a fact that upon the books they had assets of $1,521,096.54 book value?—A. The assets as listed on March 11, book value, were $1,722,960.

Q. And is it not a fact that they had in customers' accounts securities, some pledged and some unpledged, to a total of $1,538,879.81?—A. I did not get the first part of that figure. One million and how much?

Q. $1,538,879.81.—A. I think that is approximately correct; yes.

Q. So that the value of the assets held by them belonging to others, plus the book value of their own assets, was three million fifty-nine thousand and odd dollars, was it not, approximately?—A. Is that the total of the two?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. It is a matter of addition. I should say that is correct.

Mr. LINFORTH. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further questions?

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Did those two amounts overlap, and were they included, part of them, in the same thing?—A. My understanding was that the assets of $1,722,000 included the marginal customers' accounts receivable, but counsel implies that that was not the case.

Q. And the difference between the two was the actual estate?—A. That was my understanding of it up until this time.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I desire to submit an interrogatory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

What is the largest fee you have known to be allowed in a receivership or bankruptcy case in that vicinity, outside of the fee in the Colvin case?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness will answer, if he knows.

The WITNESS. I have searched my recollection, and I could not give you an accurate reply on that. I have had the figures in mind, and I know they were considerably less than the allowance in this case, but I could not give you the exact figures or mention the exact sum.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I want to make an inquiry about procedure. Is there anything that requires the witness to stand? Why could not the witness have a seat, and be comfortable?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Answering the interrogatory of the Senator, a rule has been adopted that the witness shall stand.

The witness will retire.

(The witness retired from the stand.)

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, if I may be heard a moment, the expenses of witnesses are very great to the Government, and I am assuming that counsel for the respondent and the managers themselves are finally through with the witness who has just left the stand and that he will proceed to his home and thus save the expense of his subsistence.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator inquires of the managers upon the part of the House and also counsel for the respondent, as to whether or not the further attendance of this witness is desired.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, we should like one intermission to give us time to determine whether we will need him for rebuttal testimony, and then we will advise the court.

Mr. ASHURST. The expense for the subsistence of witnesses is very considerable. Of course, no expense will be spared in affording the respondent a fair trial, but I hope that the honorable managers and the honorable counsel for the respondent, when they finish with a witness, will let the court know that they are finally through with the witness, so that he may proceed to his home.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request of the managers, the Chair thinks, is quite reasonable. The managers on the part of the House will call their next witness.

EXAMINATION OF PAUL S. MARRIN

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Call Mr. Paul Marrin.

Paul Marrin, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Is this Mr. Paul Marrin?—A. That is correct.

Q. Are you a practicing attorney in San Francisco?—A. I am.

Q. For how long?—A. For about 13 years.

Q. Of what firm are you a member?—A. Thelen & Marrin.

Q. Mr. Marrin, what was your first information with regard to the Russell-Colvin receivership?—A. On Friday, the 7th of March, Mr. Francis C. Brown advised me that the Russell-Colvin Co. were in difficulties, that they had been advised—

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, there is so much disorder in the galleries that we cannot hear the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The ladies and gentlemen in the galleries must preserve order. They are here by the courtesy of the court, and unless they shall preserve order the Sergeant at Arms will be instructed to remove those who are creating the disorder.

The WITNESS. Mr. Brown advised me that Russell-Colvin Co. had received a letter from the stock exchange advising them that unless they raised the sum of $200,000, and placed it at the disposal of their business by the following Monday, which was the 10th of March, the exchange would suspend the firm. He stated that negotiations were proceeding by certain of the partners to raise this money, but that there was not a great deal of hope of success; that in case they were unable to raise the money and the firm was suspended on the following Monday, he anticipated that there would be a run on the firm by its customers and creditors which would perhaps result in suits being filed and attachments levied, and because of the badly frozen condition of the firm would inevitably result in bankruptcy, and that he believed in case it was impossible to raise the money and avoid the suspension an equity receivership was the best solution of the difficulty, and would result in an orderly liquidation.

He stated that, in his opinion, the firm was solvent, but that because of the market conditions, its assets were frozen and could not be liquidated quickly, but that if under a receivership they could be liquidated in an orderly manner, and sufficient time could be given, that the firm could realize a sufficient amount on its assets to pay its creditors in full.

The next day we had further conferences concerning this matter. I was also requested to attend a conference at Mr. Brown's office on the following Sunday. I attended the conference at Mr. Brown's office on the following Sunday, and there were present at that time Mr. Brown, Mr. Addison Strong, Mr. Guy Colvin, Mr. Ronald Berlinger, Mr. Rock, and I believe certain other members of the Russell-Colvin Co. partnership. I was at that time also introduced to Mr. Gardner Olmstead, who subsequently became the plaintiff in this case.

At this conference the question was further discussed as to the possibility of raising the $200,000, and I believe two members of the partnership were absent from the room a considerable portion of the day, and I was told that they were attempting to negotiate the raising of this money. I believe that Mr. Rock was one of the members of the firm.

The situation was explained to Mr. Olmstead, and he requested me, on his behalf, in case the firm was unable to raise the money and prevent the suspension, to file an application for a receiver in Federal court on the succeeding day. That Sunday afternoon I drafted a form of complaint in preparation for filing an application for receiver the succeeding day if they were unable to raise the money. On the following Monday morning, I think, I was advised that the firm had been unable to raise the money, and was requested to proceed with the filing of the complaint. I then completed the form of the papers.

Q. What was done with this petition on Monday?—A. On Monday morning I first—Mr. Brown advised me first that the firm had been unable to raise sufficient funds to avoid suspension, and that the suspension would be announced that morning. That Monday morning, also, I first met Mr. Lloyd Dinkelspiel, who stated that he represented the San Francisco Stock Exchange, which was interested in the matter because Russell-Colvin Co. was a member of the exchange. Mr. Brown, Mr. Dinkelspiel and myself, and Mr. Thelen went to the office of the clerk of the United States district court for the purpose of filing the petition for the appointment of a receiver. We went there sometime during the morning of March 10. Mr. Thelen had previously known nothing about this matter, but he was an older man, and we requested him to go along with us on that Monday morning.

When we arrived at the clerk's office, we told the clerk that we desired to file a petition. He asked us the nature of the proceeding, according to my recollection, and we told him that it was an application for a receivership. I laid the complaint down on the desk, and the clerk drew a card from under his desk, which was a blue card, as I recall it, with the letter "S" on it, and told us that the petition would be assigned to Judge St. Sure. We asked the clerk if we could see Judge St. Sure immediately. I told him that the firm had been suspended that morning, that it was essential, in order to preserve the assets, that a receiver be appointed immediately, and that we would like to see the judge as soon as possible. The clerk told us it would be impossible to see Judge St. Sure because he was in Sacramento holding court. We asked the clerk how long Judge St. Sure would be in Sacramento, and he told us for about a week. We then asked the clerk if one of the other judges, either Judge Louderback or Judge Kerrigan, would take up the petition in the absence of Judge St. Sure, and we were told by the clerk that they would not. This left us in a position, apparently, of not having a judge whom we could consult in the matter for a period of a week, so we hesitated somewhat about the matter, and finally decided not to file the petition at all, under those circumstances, until we could think the matter over further.

We then went back to our offices and, after discussing what would be done under the circumstances, we decided that we would prepare a second petition. The first petition had named as parties defendant only Russell-Colvin & Co., a copartnership. A question had been raised as to the sufficiency of this petition in that it did not name the individual partners as such. We then decided to prepare a second petition naming the individual partners as such. We did that for two reasons: In the first place, because by the system they have of assigning judges in the District Court for the Northern District of California we might very well have gotten Judge St. Sure again at the second time of filing another petition, because, as I understand the system, they place cards in a box or under the desk and they are shuffled, and when a petition is filed they are drawn out by the clerk without knowing who the judge is going to be. We felt that it would be disastrous to this concern and its creditors if we again drew Judge St. Sure as he was still out of town and we would be effectively blocked from taking any action in this matter for a period of a week; but that by filing two petitions we stood a chance of getting one judge who was in town, either Judge Louderback or Judge Kerrigan, before whom we could present this matter and proceed.

We did not file the two petitions on Monday, because the Russell-Colvin Co. had a matter pending at that time—a sale of certain real estate, as I understand it, upon which it expected to realize a substantial sum of money; and it was represented to us that if this money could be realized in cash and used to repurchase some of the securities which had been pledged, the affairs of the copartnership would be placed in better position before a receiver was appointed, and that the appointment of a receiver would effectively block the real-estate deal and would leave another frozen asset in the hands of the receiver.

That deal was closed on the afternoon of Monday; and on Tuesday morning Mr. Brown, Mr. Dinkelspiel, Mr. Thelen, Mr. Colvin, Mr. Berlinger, and myself and a representative of the Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., Mr. Jansen by name, went to the office of the clerk of the United States District Court.

I do not believe that anyone other than the attorneys actually went into the clerk's office, the others remaining out in the hallway. We filed both petitions simultaneously. The clerk drew two of the cards from under the table. One of the cards contained the letter "S", the other had on it the letter "L", and one petition was assigned to Judge St. Sure and the other to Judge Louderback. The attorneys then proceeded to the office of the secretary of Judge Louderback with the complaint which had been filed and assigned to his department, and asked his secretary when we could have an appointment to see Judge Louderback. The secretary told us that Judge Louderback was on the bench, but, as I recall it, he expected to adjourn court rather early that day, and that she thought we could see him between 11 and 12 o'clock. We then stayed at the courthouse until about 11:30. In fact, I think we went into Judge Louderback's court room, where he was holding court, and sat in the spectators' chairs until he adjourned court.

When he went into his chambers, we went back into the secretary's office, and after a short delay were told that we could see Judge Louderback. We went into his chambers. There were present at that time, to the best of my recollection, besides myself, Mr. Max Thelen, Francis C. Brown, Mr. Lloyd Dinkelspiel, Mr. Addison G. Strong, Mr. Colvin, and Mr. Berlinger.

I explained to Judge Louderback that I had just filed an application for the appointment of a receiver for the Russell-Colvin Co.; that the firm had been suspended from the stock exchange on the preceding day; that it could not continue its business; that the fact that its suspension had been announced in the newspapers would inevitably lead to demands and had led to demands by numerous creditors and customers; that we had given the matter consideration and believed that the only way in which the affairs of the partnership could be successfully wound up was by the appointment of an equity receiver.

Judge Louderback asked us if we did not think that upon the appointment of a receiver a petition in bankruptcy would be filed. We told him that perhaps such a petition would be filed, but that we felt that we could successfully defend against such a petition because, in our opinion, at that time the firm was not insolvent, but was simply in such a frozen condition that it could not liquidate the assets on hand sufficiently rapidly to meet the demands of its various creditors.

I then told Judge Louderback that the parties would like to suggest as the appointment of a receiver, if he decided to appoint a receiver, Mr. Addison G. Strong, who was present in the room. I explained to the judge that Mr. Strong was a certified public accountant, a member of the firm of Hood & Strong, that he had been auditor for the stock exchange for some time; that Mr. Strong had been auditing the affairs of this particular partnership; that he was thoroughly familiar with all the accounts and all the business; that he was a man of high reputation and ability, and we believed that because of his familiarity with the matter he was the best qualified man whom the parties knew to act as receiver in this matter.

Mr. Brown, then, after I had spoken, talked to Judge Louderback further about Mr. Strong's qualifications and explained them more fully. I think he also explained, perhaps more fully, the situation with regard to the affairs of the partnership. The judge then asked Mr. Strong if he were represented by any of the attorneys in the room. Mr. Strong told him that he was not. The judge then said to Mr. Strong, "If you are appointed receiver by me, you realize that you will be an officer of the court, representing the court and not any of the parties, and if you are appointed as receiver will you consult me with reference to the employment of your counsel?" Mr. Strong said that he would.

The judge then said that he would fix a bond for the receiver in the amount of $50,000 and that he would also fix a bond to be put up by the plaintiff in the amount of $50,000. We were somewhat surprised at the requirement for a plaintiff's bond, and we asked Judge Louderback the reason for this requirement. The judge said that he required the filing and the posting of plaintiff's bond in order to protect the other creditors of the estate against injury on account of the appointment of a receiver if the appointment were subsequently found to have been wrongfully made.

I believe that was the substance of everything that occurred, according to my recollection now. I do not recall anything else particularly that occurred.

We then left Judge Louderback's chambers and went out in the hallway. There we consulted with Mr. Jansen, the representative of the Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., concerning the bond. Mr. Jansen said they would write the receiver's bond; there was no question about that, but they would not write the plaintiff's bond for the protection of other creditors in the amount of $50,000 without having collateral security in that amount deposited with the surety company. This condition it was impossible to meet. So, Mr. Thelen, Mr. Dinkelspiel, Mr. Brown, and myself returned to the judge's chamber—I believe that was within about 10 minutes after we had left—and we explained to the judge the impossibility of securing plaintiff's bond in this amount. The judge thereupon concluded to reduce the bond to $10,000.

Q. What was the amount of the plaintiff's claim?—A. The amount of the plaintiff's claim, according to my recollection, was about $3,900. We then left the judge's chambers.

I did overlook one fact in connection with our first conference with Judge Louderback. I believe that the judge had before him the other petition which had been filed; at least he knew of the filing of the other petition, and he asked us about it. I do not recall exactly the conversation that was had, but, anyway, it was to this effect: That he would not act upon this petition unless we would consent to dismiss the other petition; and we agreed to dismiss the other petition. We left the conference with the judge—the first conference—with the understanding that when we had secured the bonds and had them ready for filing and approval, we may return, and the judge would then appoint Mr. Strong as receiver.

After we left the second conference, at which the judge reduced the amount of the plaintiff's bond, we returned to our offices and got in touch with the surety company and made arrangements for the writing of the bonds. The receiver's bond presented no difficulty whatever, because that is the usual form of bond. We could not, however, find any record of there ever having been any requirement in any other case of a plaintiff's bond, and we consulted the records of the clerk's office, and the clerk was unable to give us any information with reference to it. The surety company had no record of ever having written any such bond, and we could find no form which had been followed in any other proceeding as to that form of bond. However, we took the form of order and during the course of the afternoon, working, I think, principally in the clerk's office, because it was there we were attempting to get information as to the form of the bond, we prepared a bond for presentation to the judge in a form that we believed would be satisfactory to him. My recollection is that we had incidentally during the course of the afternoon dismissed the complaint which had been filed and which had been assigned to Judge St. Sure. During the course of the afternoon we completed forms of bonds or at least completed a form for submission to the judge, and it is my recollection that about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Tuesday, March 11, we returned to the judge's chambers, or returned, rather, to the office of his secretary, and requested a further interview with him concerning the appointment of the receiver.

It is my recollection that we were told that the judge was sitting with the circuit court of appeals that afternoon and that we would have to wait, but that he would see us when he came off the bench of the circuit court of appeals. We did wait and saw the judge later that afternoon, my recollection being that this conference was held at about 5 o'clock in the afternoon on the 11th of March. There were present at that conference Mr. Strong, Mr. Dinkelspiel, Mr. Thelen, Mr. Brown, and myself, and I believe that the representative of the surety company was present at that time, because we were there in the matter of getting the bond approved. We presented to the judge the form of order for the appointment of the receiver. He made a slight change in the form of the order, my recollection being that he wrote in a phrase requiring that the bond be filed before the receiver should take possession of the property. We then presented the form of bonds, and my recollection is that on the plaintiff's bond, because of the uncertainty as to the form, we had not at that time written in the penalty clause. We had the frame of the bond prepared and had a penalty clause prepared, but I do not believe we had written it in at that time, but desired to submit it to the judge for his approval before we placed it in the bond. The judge approved the form of the penalty clause and approved the bond, and the clause was then written into the bond, according to my best recollection, and the judge approved the bond at that time. He also signed the order appointing Mr. Strong as receiver.

We then left the judge's chambers, and just as we were leaving the judge's chambers he said to Mr. Strong, "When this business of qualifying is over, I should like to see you."

We then went out into the clerk's office and filed the bond and the order appointing the receiver, and also Mr. Strong took the oath as receiver and qualified. We were quite some little time in the clerk's office, because we wanted to make out complete copies of all the instruments we were filing, with all the interlineations and signatures and dates. I also desired to procure certain certified copies of the order appointing the receiver so that he would have evidence of his authority to take possession of the assets of the firm.

We then left the clerk's office, my recollection being that this was about a quarter to 6 or 6 o'clock; and I returned to my office. We rode on the street car down Market Street from the Post Office Building, in which the Federal courts are located, and I recall only riding down with Mr. Strong and Mr. Thelen. There may have been others present. I returned to my office. I saw some of the parties on the following day, which was Wednesday. I did not see the judge again on this matter until Thursday following. During the morning of Thursday I was out of my office part of the day, and when I got back before noon my secretary advised me that Judge Louderback's secretary had phoned and had requested Mr. Thelen and Mr. Brown—Mr. Thelen or me, I believe—and Mr. Brown to have a conference with Judge Louderback at noon. At noon Mr. Thelen, Mr. Brown, and I together went to the chambers of Judge Louderback and we were shown into his chambers. When we came in Judge Louderback told us that he had decided to remove Mr. Strong as receiver. He stated that Mr. Strong had failed to keep an appointment with him, that he was insubordinate, that he had shown disrespect for the court, and that he intended to discharge him as receiver. He stated that he had requested Mr. Strong to return to see him, I believe, about the appointment of counsel; and that instead of doing so Mr. White, of the firm of Heller, Ehrman, White & McAuliffe, had called to see the judge.

Q. What time was this that Mr. White had called in relation to the time Mr. Strong came back after his appointment?—A. Mr. White had called before Mr. Strong had returned to see the judge. The judge stated that he regarded this as an effort to force him to approve Heller, Ehrman, White & McAuliffe as attorneys for the receiver, and that he resented it and did not like the attitude of Mr. Strong.

I then stated that I felt that if Mr. Strong had failed to keep an appointment that it was undoubtedly due to a misunderstanding; that I did not believe Mr. Strong would deliberately defy the court, and that I felt that if the parties should get together and talk the matter over that it could all be adjusted.

Incidentally, Mr. Brown also spoke up, and we argued with the judge for quite some little time, attempting to get him to reverse his decision and retain Mr. Strong, again pointing out Mr. Strong's qualifications and the necessity for a competent man in charge of this firm, which was a stock brokerage firm, and the affairs of which were very involved. The judge, however, stated that he had made up his mind and that he did not intend to change it; that he had asked Mr. Strong to call and see him at a quarter to 1, and that he was going to request his resignation; that if Mr. Strong did not resign, he was going to discharge him as receiver. My recollection is the judge told us at that time that he had already prepared an order of discharge.

He then stated that a number of—that he had been approached by a number of different persons requesting that he appoint various parties as receiver in this case, and he turned to me and said "You know these receiverships are the plums and sugar in this business." Then he said that two parties had approached him in the hall requesting that he appoint a man by the name of Sherman who, according to his statement, had some connection or former connection with a masonic lodge in San Francisco; but he said "Of course I cannot appoint Mr. Sherman because his attorneys are Joseph McInerney and Samuel Shortridge, Jr." But he said in thinking the matter over there had just occurred to him the name of a man who was on his jury panel in his court, a Mr. H. B. Hunter; that he had ascertained that Mr. Hunter was connected with the stock brokerage firm of William Cavalier & Co.; that he believed for that reason that he would be qualified to handle this particular receivership and was a man who would be familiar with the problems of this business. He stated that Mr. Hunter was formerly a receiver of the Security Bond & Finance Co., of Berkeley, and had been recommended to him by Mr. Sidney Schwartz, a former president of the San Francisco Stock Exchange. He said he was going to hold the matter of the appointment of Mr. Hunter open until 4 o'clock that afternoon in order to give us an opportunity to look up Mr. Hunter and see if we found out anything against Mr. Hunter which we would desire to report to the judge.

He stated that he had purposely selected Mr. Hunter because he did not know him; that he desired, because of the trouble which had arisen in this case, to make an appointment which would not subject him to any criticism, and that he desired to appoint a man with whom he was not personally acquainted and whom he did not know, but who had ability and integrity which could not be questioned. He stated that if he appointed Mr. Hunter that he would not have anything to say about the selection of counsel by Mr. Hunter, but would let Mr. Hunter employ his own attorney of his own selection.

We then left the judge's chambers and I returned to my office. I made some inquiry concerning Mr. Hunter's ability and integrity. I had no personal knowledge of Mr. Hunter prior to that time. From my inquiry I was advised that he was a man of fair ability and, so far as I could ascertain, a man of integrity. I then gave this information to Mr. Thelen, and I understand—but I cannot testify of my own knowledge to this—that Mr. Thelen made independent inquiry. I asked Mr. Thelen to phone Judge Louderback the results of what we had ascertained, and I understand that he did so; but I cannot say this of my own knowledge, because I was not present when he phoned.

I was present with Mr. Francis C. Brown when he telephoned to Judge Louderback about 3 o'clock that afternoon and stated that he had recommended Mr. Strong as receiver for the position and that he could not consent to the appointment of anyone else.

This is my best recollection of what occurred during those 2 days. I did not see the judge again, I think, for perhaps several months. I believe it was on the day following Mr. Hunter's appointment that I was called on the telephone by Mr. Hunter's secretary and asked to be present at a conference between Mr. Brown and Mr. Hunter and others at Mr. Hunter's office in the Russell-Colvin & Co. former offices.

I attended this conference, at which conference I met Mr. John Douglas Short. I also met Mr. Erskine, of the firm of Keyes & Erskine, who stated they were attorneys for the receiver, and Mr. Hunter. We had a short conference about the conduct of the receivership. Mr. Hunter told us, according to my best recollection, that he had been requested by the judge to confer and have his attorneys confer with attorneys for the plaintiff and the defendant in matters concerning the receivership; that he would undoubtedly call upon us frequently. That is about all I recall occurring at that time.

Q. Mr. Marrin, at the first conference which you had with Judge Louderback in this case on the morning of the 11th of March 1930, did you at that time on that day fail to make the bond as required by him that day?—A. No. The bond was made, filed, and approved on that day.

Q. Was there any petition presented by you on Monday of that week?—A. No; that is, the petition was taken out to the clerk's office, but no petition was filed on that day.

Q. On the afternoon of the 11th of March, when you left there after Mr. Strong qualified, state whether or not the respondent at that time told Mr. Strong to return that day.—A. No; he did not. My recollection of what he told Mr. Strong is that "when this business of qualifying is over, I should like to see you", without specifying any date or any particular time.

Q. Was there any understanding between those who were interested there that he was to come back that day?—A. No.

Q. On the occasion when you were sent for by respondent and told that he was going to discharge Mr. Strong, was there any complaint made by him at that time about the connection of the stock exchange with the attorneys he had selected?

Mr. HANLEY. Objected to. What happened is the best evidence, and not what complaint was made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness will state what was said.

The WITNESS. To the best of my recollection, the stock exchange was not mentioned. The judge complained about the fact that Mr. Strong had not kept the appointment; that instead of keeping the appointment with him he had sent a member of the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe to see him.

Incidentally I omitted something in my recitation of what occurred at that conference. The judge did state to us that he had suggested as possible attorneys for Mr. Strong the firm of Pillsbury, Madison & Sutra, and Sullivan, Sullivan & Roche, but that Mr. Strong would not have anything to do with those firms, but insisted upon the appointment of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe. The judge did not mention the name of Mr. Short nor of Keyes & Erskine.

Q. Did he ever suggest Short to you as having been recommended by him to the receiver, Mr. Strong, as attorney for the receiver?—A. No. The judge never suggested Mr. Short's name to me at any time.

Q. Was there any effort on the part of the stock exchange to control the receivership?—A. Not to my knowledge. I may say that I did not at that time personally know the attorneys for the stock exchange. The first time I ever met a member of that firm personally was when I met Mr.

Dinkelspiel on the Monday morning when we first took the complaint to the office of the clerk for filing on the day when it was not filed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair takes the liberty of suggesting to the witness that we might proceed a little more rapidly if the witness would answer the questions propounded.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Before the qualification of Mr. Strong, had you heard any discussion of who his attorney was going to be?

Mr. HANLEY. We object on the ground that that would not bind the respondent and calls for hearsay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is a part of the res gestae. While it may not be so important, it is for the court to decide. Answer the question.

The WITNESS. No; there was no discussion whatever as to who his attorney should be.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. The first time you heard it mentioned was at what time?—A. My best recollection is on Wednesday following the appointment of Mr. Strong as receiver.

Q. Who suggested or who requested that the clerk's office be held open that afternoon for the qualification of Mr. Strong as receiver, if you know?—A. The attorneys—myself, Mr. Dinkelspiel, and Mr. Brown—requested Mr. Maling to hold his office open until we could get the bond approved and the receiver appointed, so that we could qualify the receiver that night.

Q. Did you, or any of the attorneys connected with it in your presence, request the judge to hold the clerk's office open?—A. No.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Take the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Proceed, gentlemen.

Cross-examination by Mr. HANLEY:

Q. Mr. Martin, you were not a witness at the hearing had in San Francisco in September last?—A. No.

Q. And you have given us your memory of the affair as you remember it from its inception?—A. To the best of my recollection.

Q. Who refreshed your memory upon that?—A. I refreshed my own memory. I had a rather vivid recollection of those events, and also after I was subpoenaed in this case I went back over my files and looked at the various papers and proceedings that occurred, letters and memorandums written, and refreshed my own recollection. No one refreshed my recollection.

Q. Did you read the testimony that was taken at the preliminary hearing of this matter in San Francisco between the dates of the 6th and the 12th of September of 1932?—A. I have read part of the testimony.

Q. What part?—A. I believe that I have read substantially all of the testimony which had to do with the Russell-Colvin case.

Q. By that do you mean that you read your partner's testimony, Mr. Max Thelen, that he gave at that hearing?—A. Yes; I did.

Q. Did you help Mr. Max Thelen prepare his memoranda of the events that took place?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you read the memoranda of Max Thelen that he made as to what transpired immediately following the removal of Strong?—A. I read those memoranda which are set forth in the transcript of the proceedings in San Francisco.

Q. And in San Francisco between the 6th and the 12th days of September 1932 did you consult with Mr. Browning or Judge Sumners or Mr. LaGuardia?—A. At that time?

Q. Yes.—A. I did not. I was not present in San Francisco.

Q. Were you in San Francisco at any time, and did you give any statement in relation to the matters at that time?—A. The first time I ever met Mr. LaGuardia, Mr. Browning—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will you answer the question "yes" or "no"?

The WITNESS. May I have the question read?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reporter will read the question.

The Official Reporter read the question, as follows:

Q. Were you in San Francisco at any time, and did you give any statement in relation to the matters at that time?

The WITNESS. Yes; I was in San Francisco.

Q. Did you give a statement to any of the three managers, or, rather, the three special committeemen coming from the House to San Francisco in September of 1932?—A. No.

Q. Did you talk with any one of the three?—A. In September 1932?

Q. Yes.—A. No.

Q. Were you present in San Francisco at that time?—A. No.

Q. When was the first time that you talked with anyone on behalf of the house?—A. About 3 or 4 weeks ago, when Mr. BROWNING was in San Francisco.

Q. And that is the first time that you met him?—A. The first time I ever met him.

Q. And was that the time that you refreshed your memory, or when?—A. At that time I was requested to meet Mr. BROWNING at a conference of witnesses. The day preceding that I went over my files in this case. When Mr. BROWNING told me he wanted me to come to Washington, and I was subpoenaed, I further went over the files carefully to be sure of my recollection.

Q. When you said that that was 4 weeks ago, you mean it was about the 29th of April, less than 3 weeks ago; do you not?—A. I would not fix the date with certainty. It was when Mr. BROWNING was in San Francisco.

Q. Can you tell me what date of April or May it was that you talked with BROWNING in San Francisco? When I say "BROWNING", I mean Congressman BROWNING. I say that for shortness.—A. I could not fix the date accurately. I think it was probably 3 weeks ago Monday. That is my best recollection.

Q. But you do recollect distinctly everything that took place in 1930, in March; do you not?—A. I keep a diary, Mr. Hanley.

Q. Have you your original notes of your diary of March of 1930?—A. No; I have not.

Q. Did you bring it with you?—A. I have it at the hotel.

Q. Did you discuss that with Mr. BROWNING when you met him in San Francisco?—A. No; I do not think I did.

Q. Did you have it with you when you discussed it in San Francisco?—A. I had it with me; yes.

Q. I mean at the interview that you had.—A. Yes; I had it with me.

Q. And you refreshed your memory from that; did you?—A. I had refreshed it the day or so preceding that.

Q. Did you refresh it on your way over on the train since you left San Francisco?—A. No; I do not believe I looked at it.

Q. Did you discuss it with Mr. Brown?—A. Mr. Brown was not on the train.

Q. Did you discuss it in San Francisco or any other place with Mr. Brown?—A. I have discussed it briefly with Mr. Brown in Washington.

Q. When?—A. Yesterday.

Q. Who was present at that conversation?—A. Mr. De Lancey Smith and Mr. Brown's wife.

Q. And you went over your testimony that you were to give here today; did you?—A. I told Mr. Brown my recollection of what happened.

Q. You had been associated with Mr. Brown and also with De Lancey Smith as one of the attorneys upon some matters of the Russell-Colvin firm heretofore, had you not?—A. I had approved a form of trust indenture on which debentures were issued in connection with the Consolidated Paper Box Co.

Q. Anything else?—A. Nothing else to my recollection.

Q. How about the Coen Products Co.?—A. I know nothing whatever about that.

Q. Would you say that the firm of Thelen & Marrin were not employed by De Lancey Smith upon the writing or underwriting of the Coen Co., Inc.?—A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Would you say that you did not render any bill or services to that concern or to De Lancey Smith with reference to that proposition, the Coen Co.?—A. No; I did not.

Q. What is your best memory as to whether you did or you did not do any work with the Coen Co.?—A. My best memory is that I did not do anything whatever.

Q. Do you ever recall the name of the Coen Co., Inc., in any business of any kind or character that your firm did for De Lancey Smith or Russell Colvin?—A. I knew there was such a concern, but I do not recall having done any work for them at all—any legal work.

Q. As a matter of fact, Gardner Olmstead in this case was introduced to you by the defendants in the case; was he not?—A. That is correct.

Q. You never met Gardner Olmstead until one of the partners who were going into receivership wanted to use you as the attorney for the plaintiff. Is not that true?—A. No; that is not true.

Q. When you met Gardner Olmstead, what member of the firm was it—Ronald Berlinger, or was it Guy Colvin—that introduced you to him?—A. My recollection is that Guy Colvin introduced Mr. Olmstead to me.

Q. Was Brown present?—A. I do not think he was in the same room.

Q. Was he there at the time?—A. He was in the same offices, the same suite of offices; yes.

Q. Had you a close relationship with this firm of De Lancey Smith and Francis C. Brown that you called each other in upon various matters that they were interested in and that you were interested in?—A. No. Our firm has absolutely no connection with their firm.

Q. You were called in by what party in the early days of March 1930?—A. Mr. Brown first talked to me.

Q. And he made the contact for the conference; did he?—A. Yes; he did.

Q. And you met then—had you known Ronald Berlinger or Guy Colvin at that time?—A. I had met Mr. Berlinger. I do not believe that I knew Mr. Colvin before that time.

Q. Did you know at that time, or did anyone inform you at the conference had, that Russell-Colvin had borrowed from brokers and banks $330,000 more than the customers had borrowed from them?—A. I do not recall that anyone made that statement to me.

Q. Did anyone give you a set-up of the condition of the company that showed that Russell-Colvin & Co. had borrowed some three hundred or odd thousand dollars from the banks and the brokers more than the customers had borrowed, or any such amount?—A. I do not recall that detail, Mr. Hanley.

Q. When you filed this petition for the appointment of a receiver, did you prepare it?—A. I prepared it; yes.

Q. Did you send it over to Brown's office to have him O.K. it—the attorney for the defendant?—A. No. I prepared that petition myself, and—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Can you not answer that "yes" or "no"?

The WITNESS. No.

Q. Did Brown prepare any part or amend any part of your draft of the proposed complaint?—A. He suggested one amendment. According to my recollection, he suggested one amendment.

Q. Did he prepare the amendment and attach it to the complaint?—A. No. According to my best recollection, the amendment consisted simply of an interlineation so that the complaint would be brought in behalf of all of the creditors instead of simply this plaintiff.

Q. Russell Colvin was introduced to you by Guy Colvin upon the statement that he was a resident of the State of Nevada, was he not?—A. You mean Mr. Olmstead?

Q. Yes; Mr. Gardner Olmstead. Is that right?—A. Yes; I was told that he was a resident of Reno.

Q. And the reason for that was diversity of citizenship, to give the Federal court jurisdiction, was it not?—A. Yes.

Q. The only reason they picked out Gardner Olmstead was the fact that the partner introduced him to you as a man resident of our friend's town here at Reno, Nev., is it not?—A. I do not know what their reasons were. I know that the plaintiff must be a resident of another State in order to confer jurisdiction on the Federal court.

Q. Well, the partner in the matter, Guy Colvin, told you, "Here is Mr. Gardner Olmstead, who wants to sue us for receivership", did he not?—A. I do not recall that he made any such statement.

Q. There was no question about why he was introduced, to your mind, was there?—A. No.

Q. You knew that Guy Colvin introduced Mr. Gardner Olmstead for one purpose, and one purpose only, namely, to sue that company, did you not?—A. Yes.

Q. And the very object of meeting these people in Brown's office or your office with these partners was to have this receivership appointed, was it not?—A. Yes.

Q. There was no question about that, was there?—A. No.

Q. Who gave you the facts, outside of Gardner Olmstead, which caused you to prepare the two complaints in equity?—A. I believe Mr. Brown; I would not be certain.

Q. The last witness, Francis C. Brown?—A. I think so; yes, sir.

Q. You said the first meeting took place on Saturday, the 8th; or was it Friday, the 7th?—A. Friday, the 7th.

Q. You had conferences, then, on Saturday?—A. Yes.

Q. And then you determined to draw the complaint, and you drew in a draft form upon Sunday what would be the complaint in the matter?—A. I did not determine to draw the complaint until Sunday afternoon.

Q. Then you dictated the complaint Sunday afternoon, did you?—A. Yes.

Q. And you had it typed that same afternoon in regular form; or did you wait until Monday?—A. I had a draft of it prepared on Sunday.

Q. Did you turn that over to Brown on Sunday, or on Monday?—A. My recollection is that I did not turn it over to Brown.

Q. Did you send it over to Brown?—A. No.

Q. How did it get in his office and return to you, if you know?—A. Mr. Brown came to my office and looked at it.

Q. And it was while at your office that he prepared the amendment to it, was it?—A. He did not prepare it; he suggested it.

Q. You are sure, now—and I do not want to trap you—that Brown did not at any time take to his office and amend the draft as you prepared it?—A. My best recollection is that he did not.

Q. When did you prepare the second complaint?—A. During the noon hour on Monday the 10th of March.

Q. You went out upon the 10th of March; are you sure that both verifications to the two complaints were not sworn to simultaneously, the one that went to Judge Louderback and the one that went to Judge St. Sure?—A. I am practically sure of that.

Q. That they were?—A. That they were not.

Q. Again I do not want to trap you. I am asking you if you have any recollection—and if you have not, say so—that the two verifications, the one to the Louderback and the one to the St. Sure complaint, were not sworn to upon the same day before the same notary?—A. They were both sworn to on the same day before the same notary.

Q. Simultaneously?—A. My recollection is that they were not.

Q. What time intervened between?—A. I do not recall distinctly the time. I know the reason why I do not think they were subscribed and sworn to at the same time.

Q. After the complaint was filed, you went to the clerk's office per appointment with this number of people. Is that true?—A. Appointment with whom?

Q. At the clerk's office; you went there on the 10th, I understand; Monday?—A. Yes; but not by appointment with the clerk.

Q. The clerk had nothing to do with it?—A. No.

Q. But you did find out from the clerk, without paying the fee, who the judge would be to whom that case would be assigned, did you not?—A. Yes.

Q. And before you paid the fee you withdrew the complaint, and did not file it. Is not that true?—A. That is correct.

Q. And after you had ascertained the name of the judge without paying the fee, you withdrew the filing, did you not?—A. Yes; it had never been filed.

Q. Ah, but you placed it upon his desk, and you showed him that you were about to file a complaint, did you not?—A. Yes.

Q. And you told him you were ready to file it, did you not?—A. We told him we had a complaint to file, sure.

Q. And he drew from the box the assignment to St. Sure, and then you withdrew and did not file. Is not that true?—A. That is correct.

Q. Now, with reference to the appointment of the meeting of the parties. You say that Mr. Max Thelen and Lloyd Dinkelspiel and Francis Brown and Ronald Berlinger and Guy Colvin all went to the clerk's office on the 10th. That is true, is it not?—A. Mr. Colvin and Mr. Berlinger did not go into the clerk's office. They may have gone to the building.

Q. You went to the post office or Federal court building with the parties, did you not?—A. Yes.

Q. And that was per appointment either the day before or that very morning, was it not?—A. That morning, yes.

Q. Can you tell us whether it was a man or a woman who gave you the information that no one would act without Judge St. Sure being present?—A. My recollection is that Mr. Maling himself gave us that information.

Q. That morning?—A. Yes; that morning.

Q. Did you have with you at that time the two complaints prepared to file?—A. No.

Q. Will you say that you prepared the second one, which had gone into Judge Louderback's court at the time, from Monday, when you went to the clerk's office, until the actual filing on Tuesday, the 11th?—A. Yes; that was prepared subsequently.

Q. Then, if it was prepared subsequently, what day was it prepared?—A. Monday.

Q. What time on Monday?—A. Between 12 and half-past 1.

Q. Was it verified on Monday?—A. My recollection is that it was.

Q. The next morning you say you had some real-estate transaction to close. Is that true?—A. I was told that there was one Monday afternoon; yes.

Q. And that was the reason for not going and making the double filing at the post-office building, the clerk's office, was it?—A. The reason they were not filed Monday afternoon; yes.

Q. Who told you that? You said Brown, did you?—A. I believe Mr. Brown told me that.

Q. Did he tell you what the transaction was, the nature of it, or the amount of money that was to go to Russell-Colvin?—A. Not in detail; no.

Q. So, with reference to the situation, you were following Brown upon it, were you?—A. No; I would not say that.

Q. Did you dictate an answer, when you were dictating the complaint, to be signed by Brown?—A. I did not.

Q. Will you say that it was not upon your stationery, that the same typewriter that prepared the complaint did not prepare the answer?—A. I do not know anything about the typewriter. I know I did not dictate the answer.

Q. Did you prepare the answer at the time you prepared the complaint in both actions?—A. I never prepared the answer.

Q. Who told you about the system of how the cases were assigned, and when, for the first time?—A. The first time I was aware of it was when we filed this complaint.

Q. You did not know the manner in which the judges had the clerk draw the assignments, did you?—A. I knew nothing about it.

Q. Do you know now the manner?—A. Not except from what I saw in this case.

Q. What is that?—A. Not except from what I saw in this case.

Q. You mean you read the transcript of the clerk, Mr. Fouts, as to the manner in which the assignments were made?—A. I did not read his testimony.

Q. Did you talk to anybody as to how the assignments were made?—A. No.

Q. You said here that Judge St. Sure might get the two in succession. Who gave you that information?—A. We were told that at the clerk's office that day.

Q. So that when you went out, did you know the number, upon Monday that was alleged to be the next number of the filings that were to be had?—A. No.

Q. Did you know that criminal, bankruptcy, and equity have different numbers in that clerk's office?—A. No.

Q. Did you see the number at all as it was drawn from the slip that you were to get if you paid your fees?—A. No.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will counsel permit the Chair to ask whether there is any controversy as to the question of the filing of the two complaints, or the preparation of the two complaints, the time when they were prepared, and the time when they were presented, and who were present in the clerk's office?

Mr. HANLEY. They wanted to pick a judge. Is not that evident to the jurors? That is what we are trying to show.

By Mr. HANLEY:

Q. Did the same array who went out upon Monday present themselves to the clerk's office on Tuesday?—A. Do you mean the same parties?

Q. Yes.—A. The same attorneys. I am not clear in my recollection as to whether Mr. Colvin and Mr. Berlinger were present on Monday or not.

Q. Did you not say that upon Monday Mr. Berlinger—we call him different ways, but it is the same thing; I think I have known him longer than you have—Mr. Ronald Berlinger and Mr. Colvin were there upon Monday?—A. I would not be sure about that. My recollection is that they were there on Tuesday when we first saw Judge Louderback; but as to Monday I am not sure.

Q. But Dinkelspiel and your partner, Thelen, were there?—A. Yes.

Q. On both days?—A. On both days.

Q. And Strong was there on both days?—A. I think he was; yes.

Q. Brown also?—A. Brown was there, I know.

Q. Finding the judge engaged upon Tuesday, as you stated in the opening, you went around the corridors, and finally went into his court until he was through, did you?—A. We made an appointment to see him first, and then we had an hour or so to wait, so we went in and sat down in his court room.

Q. When, as to time, between the opening hour of 9 and the hour of noon did you actually make the double filing?—A. I believe that it was between 10 and 11 o'clock.

Q. So that the double filing was made after the usual court hour of commencing at 10 o'clock, the session in the Federal court?—A. I am not certain about the exact hour, but I think it was about 10 o'clock.

Q. Did you not know, Mr. Marrin, that in the whole history of the Federal filing this is the first double filing that was ever made in any action there?—A. No.

Q. Can you name one other before this that established a precedent?—A. I do not know anything about it.

Q. Did you know that there never had been up to this time a double filing for the same defendant with the same plaintiff?—A. No.

Q. You did not know that. Did you think that unusual to make the double filing?—A. I cannot say that I gave it any thought.

Q. You had the point made to you there was some question about whether the partnership ought not to have included all of the members of the partnership, was there not, after you had prepared the first complaint?—A. Yes.

Q. Why, then, was it necessary to file two complaints?—A. The reason it was necessary to file two complaints is that it was absolutely necessary to get one of the judges who was in San Francisco to act upon this matter. We did not care which one.

Q. Do you not know that at that time, and for a long time prior thereto, there was an understanding between Judge St. Sure and Judge Louderback that, in the absence of one, the other would do his work?—A. I do not.

Q. Had you been in the habit of making double filings, or was this the first time that you, as attorney in the matter of filing a suit, had made a double filing?—A. This was the first time I had ever filed similar complaints in the same action.

Q. But you filed a double filing simultaneously, did you not?—A. Yes.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I think he has been over that about six times, but I do not want to be captious about it.

Mr. HANLEY. I think he has answered it.

Mr. President, is there any objection to my examining from this point? I think it is a better position. If there is any objection, I will keep in the well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Members of the Senate sitting as a court can hear, there is no objection.

Mr. HANLEY. That is the purpose I have in view, my voice being a little husky today.

By Mr. HANLEY:

Q. Mr. Marrin, is it not true that after you told the judge that you had Strong selected and agreed upon by all that was the first time you said to him there was a double filing?—A. No. My recollection is that the judge asked about the other filing.

Q. The moment the judge arrived in his chambers from the bench you went into his chambers, did you not?—A. Not at that moment; no. I think there was some delay.

Q. "Some delay"; but when you went in there—without detailing what you have already given us—you and Brown had this general talk, as it were, "selling" Strong to the judge as a competent receiver, had you not?—A. Recommending him to the judge; yes.

Q. So that the judge would be impressed with the brilliancy of Strong and his integrity; you were giving his qualifications to the judge, were you not?—A. We gave him qualifications in full.

Q. And you had him agree to appoint him, did you not?—A. No; I do not think we did. The judge indicated that he would appoint him if he secured the necessary bond.

Q. And is it not true, after he had indicated that he would appoint him, then, for the first time, either you or Brown, said, "Well, we had already filed one and it is before Judge St. Sure"?—A. No.

Q. That did not take place?—A. No.

Q. Did not the judge, then and there, send for the papers out in the clerk's office to be brought in to find out about the matter?—A. I do not recall that he did; no.

Q. Did he not tell you that the number of Judge St. Sure was first in time, and that you would have to go to Sacramento or he would get him on long distance phone for you?—A. He did not.

Q. Was anything said at that time to the effect that the judge would get him on long distance phone and agree upon a receiver if you could, then and there?—A. No.

Q. Nothing was said about that?—A. No.

Q. And finally you insisted that it needed immediate attention and you could not go to Sacramento? Is not that true?—A. I do not think we said anything about going to Sacramento; I do not recall that we did.

Q. You learned that Judge St. Sure was sitting in Sacramento in the middle of the day of the 15th, did you not?—A. Yes.

Q. And you knew that by flying it was an hour from San Francisco, and you knew that by train it was 3 hours; why did you not go over on Monday to get Judge St. Sure to sign and fix the receiver?—A. We were not advised that Judge St. Sure would act on the matter in Sacramento.

Q. What is that?—A. In the first place, we were not advised that Judge St. Sure would act in the matter while sitting in Sacramento. In the second place, after the receiver was appointed it was required that we get bonds and have them filed and approved and those orders by him, and we wanted a judge who was in town.

Q. The reason that you did not take this trip by automobile in about 2½ hours or on the train in 3 hours or fly in an hour was that you wanted a judge in San Francisco? Is that your reason?—A. That is the reason.

Q. What is that?—A. That reason, and the reason that we were not told that Judge St. Sure would act on the matter while sitting in Sacramento.

Q. Who told you that Judge St. Sure would not act on the matter while sitting in Sacramento?—A. Nobody told us that.

Q. Did you not know that the northern district of California was all one district and that he could act on an order at any point in the district?—A. I knew that he could; yes.

Q. But you did not go, did you?—A. We did not.

Q. On Tuesday the judge did tell you that when he appointed Strong he was an officer of the court, did he not?—A. He told Mr. Strong that.

Q. Now let us see if your memory has not been somewhat refreshed by the exact memorandum of Thelen that was made immediately at the time when he testified at the other hearing. See if this corresponds with your memory:

Judge Louderback emphasizes the proposition that Mr. Strong will be an officer of the court and that he must confer with the judge in the matter of the appointment of his attorney. The judge asked Mr. Strong whether he had selected any attorney, and particularly whether he had selected any of the attorneys who were there present in the room. Mr. Strong said no, that he had not. Judge Louderback also insisted upon the dismissal of case no. 2594, which had preceded case no. 2595, before the receiver would appoint in the latter case. After leaving Judge Louderback's court room the attorneys conferred, and it seemed that it would be impossible to raise a bond of $50,000 for the plaintiff, so the attorneys return to Judge Louderback's chambers and he thereupon consented to reduce the amount of the plaintiff's bond to $10,000.

Is not that what refreshed your memory today—by reading what your partner wrote immediately at the time and that you had no independent memory at all?—A. No.

Q. It is not?—A. No.

Q. Can you tell us the exact language you used in your testimony in narrating here this morning almost verbatim, as if a speech had been prepared, that Judge Louderback emphasized the proposition that Mr. Strong will be an officer of the court and must confer with the judge in the matter of the appointment of the attorneys?

Mr. MANAGER BROWNING. Mr. President—

Mr. HANLEY. Just a moment. Let me finish the question.

Q. Will you say that you did not use the exact language that your partner wrote in his memorandum of March 1930?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness may answer the question.

The WITNESS. I should like to hear what I said this morning before answering that.

Q. Time will not permit us to do that. There are about four reporters here shooting in and out, and I will take my memorandum. Will you deny that you did in almost exact language at this very session use the language I have quoted from the memorandum of Mr. Max Thelen?—A. Yes; I will, because my recollection is not identical with Mr. Thelen's.

Q. When did you know for the first time that Lloyd Dinkelspiel, of the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe, was a member of that partnership?—A. I knew that, I believe, for the first time on Sunday or Monday preceding the filing of the complaint.

Q. You said that when Judge Louderback went into the matter of the receiver and had him qualify he made the statement in substance and to this effect, "When you qualify I want to see you", did he not?—A. Yes.

Q. And you attempted to interpret it here to the managers that it meant any time, did you not?—A. I did not intend to interpret it at all.

Q. So that the language stands as given that when he qualified he was to see him?—A. My recollection of the language is that he said, "When this business of qualifying is over I should like to see you."

Q. Did you expect that to be 2 weeks from then or did you expect it to be immediately?—A. I had no particular expectation about it.

Q. Well, he said he had no attorney, in the talk he had with the judge as to whether he had selected an attorney, did he not?—A. I do not remember that the judge asked him whether he had selected an attorney.

Q. Did you not know from the equity rules of that court that no attorney in any estate of any kind or character involving a receivership could be ratified and paid unless the judge confirmed the particular selection?—A. Certainly I knew that.

Q. Did you not know, when the judge talked to him, that he had that rule in mind?—A. I do not know what the judge had in mind; I assumed that is the rule he had in mind.

Q. For the purpose of the record, because some Senators have been there and others have not, the post office is at Seventh and Mission, is it not?—A. Yes.

Q. It is one block from Market to Seventh, the next street, is it not?—A. Yes.

Q. And down to Montgomery about seven?—A. Approximately.

Q. In other words, a car ride of about 6 or 7 minutes?—A. That is right.

Q. In the open street car do you recall that Lloyd Dinkelspiel was with you?—A. I do not recall anyone except Mr. Strong and Mr. Thelen and myself.

Q. Can you remember a conversation that was had on that street car before he got off at Montgomery?—A. Between whom?

Q. Between Mr. Strong and Mr. Brown.—A. No.

Q. Where were they seated relatively—on the outside of one of our electric Market Street cars or were they inside? I mean by that a car not having glass on the outside in front and back?—A. My recollection is that I stood on the inside of the car.

Q. And Thelen and Strong and Brown were seated or standing with you?—A. Mr. Thelen and Mr. Strong and I were together, to the best of my recollection. I do not remember whether Mr. Brown was even on the car.

Q. Will you tell us whether you heard a conversation on that car between Brown and Strong about who was to be attorney or who would be a fine attorney?—A. No; I do not.

Q. Will you say that no conversation took place there with relation to the qualifications of Florenz M. McAuliffe or the disqualifications of Lloyd Ackerman?—A. I did not hear it.

Q. Did you hear either of the names mentioned on the six- or seven-block ride from Seventh and Market down to Montgomery and Market?—A. I do not recall it.

Q. Where did you get off?—A. I got off at Sanson and Market.

Q. You rode one block beyond?—A. One block beyond.

Q. At about what time did you get there?—A. I think it was about 6 o'clock, or a little after.

Q. Did Strong leave before or after you?—A. I believe Mr. Strong got off before I did.

Q. He got off at Montgomery, one block before you. Where were his offices then—in the Hunter Building?—A. I do not know.

Q. Your office was then in the Balfour Building?—A. That is true.

Q. Were you going back to your office?—A. I was.

Q. Did Thelen go with you?—A. Yes.

Q. No one went with Strong?—A. Not that I know of.

Q. And immediately at the corner of Market and Montgomery and Post is the Wells Fargo Building, is it not?—A. Yes.

Q. That is where McAuliffe's office is—almost within 50 or 60 feet of the car line, is it not?—A. Yes.

Q. It was after 6 o'clock—that is true?—A. Yes; it was.

Q. What is the usual time law offices in San Francisco close, from your experience?—A. My experience has been they do not have any regular hours.

Q. What is your usual hour?—A. All the way from 9 in the morning until 10 at night sometimes.

Q. What are your stenographer's hours? Let us see how they conform to the workmen's compensation and women's work hours' measures?—A. The stenographer's hours are from 9 to 5.

Q. What?—A. From 9 to 5.

Q. The clerks get away at 5, do they not?—A. The law clerks?

Q. Yes.—A. Not always.

Q. Well, the lawyers work when there is business?—A. Yes.

Q. As a matter of fact, it is unusual for clients to meet attorneys at 6 o'clock, the dinner hour, is it not?—A. I would not say with reference to anyone else. I occasionally meet clients in the evening, but not as often as I do in the daytime.

Q. What are your usual office hours; let me put it that way?—A. My usual office hours are from 9 to about 6:15.

Q. You did not see Strong the next day at all, which was the 12th, did you?—A. Yes; I saw Strong on the 12th.

Q. When did you see Strong on the 12th? Give us the hour, because he was out with the judge and I do not want any doubt about it.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, I do not think this is necessary. I think these gratuitous insults to the witness are unnecessary, and I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Counsel will not argue with the witness.

By Mr. HANLEY:

Q. What time did you see Mr. Strong on the 12th?—A. I could not fix the hour.

Q. Have you no memory on that? Your memory has been good upon the hours of March or the Ides of March, as we say. What time was it you met him that day?—A. My best recollection is it was around 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. That was after he had his conference that morning with the judge, was it not?—A. Yes.

Q. We will not go into the conversation. Did you have any business dealing with him about the estate?—A. No.

Q. With whom did you meet him and where?—A. My best recollection is it was in Mr. Brown's office. I cannot be sure about it.

Q. Is it not true that you went to the offices of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe?—A. I went there late in the afternoon; yes.

Q. Of the 12th, is it not?—A. Of the 12th; yes.

Q. At the time that Strong told you that firm of attorneys was not going to be selected, was it not?—A. He did not tell me that.

Q. You had a conference with him about that, did you not?—A. I had no particular conference with Strong about his attorneys; no.

Q. That is the first time up to that time in your practice of the law that you had ever been in the offices of the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe?—A. I think it was.

Q. And you went there upon the invitation of Lloyd Dinkelspiel, did you not?—A. I forget whether Mr. Dinkelspiel or Mr. Brown asked me to go over there late that afternoon around 4 or 5 o'clock.

Q. You had a conference about the refusal of the judge to confirm the attorney, did you not?—A. I did not have a conference with anybody. I was told then as to what had occurred when Mr. Strong went to see Judge Louderback.

Q. You heard that from Mr. Strong, did you?—A. My recollection is that Mr. Strong told me or stated in my presence what had occurred.

Q. Let us get the parties present on the afternoon at 3:30 of the 12th.—A. I would not say it was exactly 3:30, but on that afternoon there was Mr. Strong—I believe he was present—Mr. Florenz McAuliffe, Mr. White, Mr. Stephens, Mr. Dinkelspiel, and Mr. Brown.

Q. As far as the firm was concerned, you had no personal relations and knew none of them at that time; is not that true?—A. I had met Mr. Dinkelspiel on Monday of that week.

Q. But you did not know Stephens?—A. No.

Q. You did not know Jerome White?—A. No.

Q. And you did not know Florenz McAuliffe?—A. No.

Q. You knew Brown and you knew Dinkelspiel only, did you not?—A. Yes.

Q. They were all put out because Judge Louderback would not appoint their firm as attorneys; is not that true?—A. I would not say they were put out; no.

Q. Did you meet McKenzie there, James by name?—A. I met Mr. McKenzie there one day, but I do not believe it was on that day. I think it was a day or so later.

Q. Strong told you at that time that the judge was going to remove him unless he resigned, did he not?—A. No; I do not think he did.

Q. Was there any proposition at that time to employ an assistant attorney who had been connected with newspapers for the purpose of contesting it, in that interview?—A. No; I do not think so.

Q. Were you present at any such conference, whether it was upon the 12th or 13th after the removal?—A. After the removal I was present at a conference for a short time, and at that conference Mr. McKenzie was present. My recollection is that there was discussion about the employment of John Francis Neylan by Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe, and Strong. I was there only a short time, and I left.

Q. You knew at that conference where McKenzie was present that the Heller firm were about to employ John Francis Neylan, then and for a long time the personal attorney for the Hearst interests and former editor of the Call, did you not?—A. I do not know whether they were about to employ him. They were talking about it.

Q. You knew they did it?—A. I saw it in the newspapers afterward that Mr. Neylan filed a petition for them.

Q. Do you not know as a matter of fact, and were you not consulted, that that had actually been done?—A. I was not consulted; no. I knew they had done it.

Q. You knew they were then attempting to appeal from the order that he had made removing Strong, did you not?—A. I do not know what steps they followed because I did not follow that matter at all.

Q. Did not Lloyd Dinkelspiel tell you he had prepared the papers to have Neylan make the signature?—A. He did not.

Q. You did not know that, did you?—A. I did not.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I ask that we have a recess for about 5 minutes?

Mr. LONG. I make that motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Counsel for the respondent suggests that the court take an informal recess for a few moments. Without objection, the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment will take a recess until 2:30 o'clock p.m.

Thereupon the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment took a recess until 2:30 o'clock p.m., at which time it reassembled.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment will resume its session. Are counsel for the respondent ready to proceed?

Mr. HANLEY. Yes, Your Honor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is going to take the liberty of suggesting to counsel on both sides that so far as possible they expedite the proceedings.

By Mr. HANLEY:

Q. Mr. Marrin, you recall that you returned at the request of Judge Louderback just prior to the time that the judge had removed Strong as receiver? Do you recall that?—A. Yes.

Q. And you have narrated here your memory of that at this session; have you not?—A. Yes.

Q. Let us see if I can refresh your memory, and see if it corresponds with the testimony of Mr. Thelen that you said you read:

The judge told us that he was dissatisfied with the attitude of Mr. Strong, and that he had failed to keep an engagement to return to see him the afternoon before, and that instead of that, a member of the Heller firm had called upon the judge, and then said that he regarded Mr. Strong's signature to a petition to have the Heller firm appointed as his attorney as an attempt to force the judge's hand, and thereupon the judge said that he had suggested to the receiver the possible appointment of other counsel besides the firm of Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, or the firm of Sullivan, Sullivan & Theodore J. Roche, but that the receiver did not regard either of those suggestions favorably.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, may I inquire what record the counsel is reading from?

Mr. HANLEY. I am reading from the verbatim testimony of Mr. Thelen to see if that refreshes his memory.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. Thelen's testimony is not in the record.

Mr. HANLEY. I am asking him if that refreshes his memory, and if that is not why his memory was refreshed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks the question is proper. It seems to the Chair, though, that we are spending rather too much time on matters that may be relevant but do not require so much time in their elucidation. Proceed.

By Mr. HANLEY:

Q. Will you answer that question, Mr. Marrin?—A. You asked me two questions.

Q. Answer them both, if you can.—A. First, as to whether that refreshes my recollection.

Q. Yes.—A. I will say this: That my recollection, while in substance the same as Mr. Thelen's, is not in all respects identical. Secondly, as to whether that is what refreshed my recollection, the answer is "no."

Q. You had an independent recollection of it?—A. I did.

Q. But you made no detailed memoranda from which you refreshed it except notes in a diary?—A. I made a memorandum—yes—that week of what had occurred.

Q. But you made it after the occurrences, did you not?—A. Within 2 or 3 days afterward.

Q. And after you talked with all the parties concerned?—A. I made that memorandum independently.

Q. No; but it was after the talk that you had with Strong and with Brown and with Dinkelspiel and all the others before you put it down in writing. Is not that true?—A. Yes; it was after all of these conferences.

Q. But it was not dictated simultaneously with the occurrence, was it, or written simultaneously with the occurrence?—A. About 3 or 4 days afterward.

Q. But that was after everybody had gotten together and chewed it over, was it not?—A. No; I would not say that.

Q. There was a great deal of talk about it, as to what was said and what was done, and that is your memorandum; is it not?—A. I do not think we ever discussed between ourselves what had happened at these conferences.

Q. You never discussed that at all, would you say?—A. Prior to the writing of this memorandum; no.

Q. You never did?—A. Except insofar as matters were reported to me as having happened at conferences at which I was not present.

Q. Just a few more questions. Did you not know that there was a rule of court that they could exact from plaintiffs bonds in receivership matters, or did you ever hear of such a rule?—A. I had not at that time; no.

Q. Did you ever read the equity rules to find out whether or not the court could so do?—A. You mean prior to filing this complaint?

A. Yes.—A. No; I did not.

Q. Is it not a fact that in State practice the statute provides it?—A. Where a receiver is appointed without notice, the statute provides that a bond must be given to the defendant. This was a different bond.

Q. In State practice it is statutory; is it not?—A. Not where the defendant appears and consents to the appointment of the receiver.

Q. But in this particular matter the defendants had gathered the plaintiff for you, had they not? It was really the defendants' action. Is not that true?—A. No.

Q. Will you say that the judge is not the party who sent out to Mr. Maling or to the officers there to keep the clerk's office open?—A. I do not know what action the judge took, or whether he took any action, in that respect. I do know that we did not make that request of the judge.

Q. In your presence, you mean?—A. I do not know what action the judge took.

Q. I say, you do not know what kept the clerk's office open from its usual 4-o'clock closing time to the extension of the time when the bonds were filed and the order filed and the receiver qualified?—A. No. All I know is that we requested Mr. Maling to keep it open.

Q. And you do not know whether or not Mr. Maling requested the judge whether he would allow him so to keep it open, do you?—A. I do not.

Mr. HANLEY. May I have just a little conference on one point, as to whether I will go into it or not? [After a brief conference.] I think that is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further questions?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes, Mr. President.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Mr. Marrin, why were you not present in San Francisco last September when the investigating committee was there?—A. I had just got married, and I was away on my honeymoon.

Q. Did you use the memo of Mr. Thelen in any way in preparing or refreshing your memory with regard to the statements that you have made here today?—A. No; I used my own memorandum.

Q. Counsel for respondent asked you if in the conference you had with Mr. Strong on the afternoon of the 12th of March 1930 he did not tell you at that time that the judge had told him that if he did undertake to appoint the firm of Heller, Heller, White & McAuliffe, he would force him to resign; and your answer was that he did not tell you that. I will ask you to state what he did tell you in that conversation.—A. Mr. Strong told me that—

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment, Mr. President. We want to object to any conversation with Mr. Strong, not in the presence and hearing of the respondent, as hearsay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is sustained, and for the further reason that the matter has been gone into, and the witness has testified with regard to this matter before.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. May I have just a word, if the President will indulge me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I understand the rule to be that possibly it would not be competent had not the respondent's counsel opened the question; but he asked the witness if he did not say certain things in this conversation, and the witness never has testified as to that conversation. His answer was that he did not say that. Now, I think under the rule we have a right to ask him what the conversation was which they undertook to show was a certain thing. He says it was not that. Since they opened it, under the rule we insist that we have a right to show what Mr. Strong said to him on that occasion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks the counsel is right if this is an entirely different conversation from that as to which the witness was interrogated by counsel, and also cross-examined by respondent's counsel.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, of course we did not have a right to ask the witness in the original examination what Strong said to him. I concede that; but on cross-examination he was asked if Strong did not say certain things. He denies that he said them. Now, my insistence is that under the rule we have a right to ask him what Strong did say to him.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, we said we did not want the conversation that took place between the parties.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. O Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair adheres to his ruling. Proceed.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Mr. Marrin, is there any State statute that requires, in equity proceedings, in an application for a receiver, a bond to be given to indemnify other creditors by the petitioner?—A. No. You mean, any State statute of California?

Q. Any State statute of California. Do you know of any rule of equity that requires that, either in State or in Federal courts?—A. No.

Q. As I understand, this was not that kind of a bond?—
A. This was a bond to the other creditors, yes; not to the defendant.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Stand aside. Call the next witness.

Mr. LINFORTH. In accordance with the suggestion, Mr. President, we announce that we do not wish to keep this witness any longer. So far as we are concerned, he may be excused.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, we should like one intermission after the session before we determine that, if we may be granted that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request is reasonable.

Addison G. Strong, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. This is Addison G. Strong?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Strong?—A. My residence is in Berkeley. My office is in San Francisco.

Q. What is your business?—A. Certified public accountant and member of the firm of Hood & Strong.

Q. Who compose that firm?—A. I have three partners—Walter Hood, Edward Lamont, William Doyle, and myself.

Q. In October 1929 was your firm the auditor for the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. We were.

Q. As such, were you sent to the Russell-Colvin Co. to audit that firm?—A. No; I was not. I was engaged by Russell-Colvin & Co. They were my clients for several years, and according to the practice of the stock exchange every member has to submit a questionnaire—

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I interrupt and suggest that the answer is not responsive, and under the suggestion of the Vice President this morning we should interrupt.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, his answer is entirely responsive.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will be read; and may I say to the witness that we will make greater progress if the witness will answer the questions, and answer as directly as possible. If explanations are necessary in order to explain a categorical reply, leave may be granted if deemed necessary.

The reporter read as follows:

As such [that is, as auditor for the San Francisco Stock Exchange] were you sent to the Russell-Colvin Co. to audit that firm?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Answer that "yes" or "no."

The WITNESS. No, sir.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Under what capacity were you there, if you went to that firm to audit?—A. I was engaged by them, who were my clients, to prepare a questionnaire for the San Francisco Stock Exchange, to exhibit their financial position, which I did as of October 31, 1929.

Q. After that time what, if any, connection did you have with Russell-Colvin?—A. In the early part of January 1930, on account of the crash in the market, they found themselves to be in somewhat—the working capital was somewhat depleted, and they asked me to come in and prepare a statement about the middle of January in order to show what their financial position was, which I did.

Q. Who asked you to come in and prepare this statement?—A. The partners of the firm.

Q. Did the stock exchange assign you to this Russell-Colvin Co. at any time, for any purpose?—A. The information—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Answer "yes" or "no", if you can.

The WITNESS. Subsequently, yes.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. When was that?—A. That was in the—about the 1st of February.

Q. What assignment did they give you there?—A. The stock exchange had been in very close touch with this company on account of their financial position; and due to the fact that they felt that they could reorganize the company by putting more capital in there, they were watching them closely, and on account of my close connection, they asked me—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is too much noise in the galleries. Those who are in the galleries are guests of the court and will preserve order.

The WITNESS. They asked me to watch out and see that they did not become any more extended, and report to them frequently the progress of the reorganization.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Did you do it?—A. I kept in touch with them almost every day.

Q. Do you recall, about the 10th of March 1930, when this concern was suspended by the New York Stock Exchange?—A. I do. The San Francisco Stock Exchange. Pardon me.

Q. Yes; the San Francisco Stock Exchange. What connection did you have with the firm at that time, if any?—A. I was still engaged by them as my clients.

Q. When did you first hear of the application for receivership?—A. That was on Monday, the 10th of March.

Q. Who approached you about it?—A. Mr. Francis Brown acquainted me with the fact that they were about to file a petition for receivership in equity—an equity receivership.

Q. Please state what insistence was made to you at that time for you to take the receivership, if any.—A. Mr. Brown, and also Mr. Guy Colvin, and Mr. Ronald Berlinger, who were partners of the firm, came to me and asked me to accept the position as receiver. I told them I did not wish to do so; that I felt that it would hurt me in my private business more than it would do me good. They kept—they talked to me several times, and the stock exchange also requested me to take the position on account of my knowledge of the company. I told them the same thing, and subsequently they prevailed upon me to accept the position.

Q. And you gave your consent on the 10th of March?—A. On the 10th.

Q. Did you go with the attorneys to the courthouse on the 10th of March?—A. I did.

Q. Did you go back with them on the 11th of March?—A. I did.

Q. The 11th was on Tuesday, I believe?—A. On Tuesday.

Q. Was that the day when the petition was filed in the case?—A. That was the day the petition was filed.

Q. Were you in the conference that was had with Judge Louderback that morning?—A. I was.

Q. About what time was it?—A. I would state about half past 10 or 11 o'clock.

Q. Where did this occur?—A. In the chambers of Judge Louderback.

Q. Before this conference in his chambers, where did you wait for the engagement?—A. Are you speaking of the time on Monday or on Tuesday?

Q. On Tuesday.—A. On Tuesday—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Where did you wait?

The WITNESS. In the court room of Judge Louderback.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. State what transpired in this conference.—A. The petition was submitted to Judge Louderback by Mr. Marrin, and Mr. Francis Brown spoke in regard to the company. I did not pay particular attention to that, and my memory is rather hazy, because that was outside of my province. But during the course of that conference Judge Louderback turned to me and asked me if I had any person present in the room in mind as my counsel, and I told him I did not. That was about all that was said, as far as I was concerned.

Q. You left then to undertake to make the bonds that were required by the court?—A. That is right.

Q. When did you see the judge the next time?—A. Later on that afternoon, about 4:30, at which time the bonds had been arranged, we returned to Judge Louderback in his chambers to have the petition signed and the bonds accepted. We were only there for a short time.

Q. What, if anything, did respondent say to you at that conference?—A. As I recall it, the only statement that Judge Louderback made to me was when we had finished and were leaving the room, I think there were about five of us present, and I was about the third or fourth person going out the door, and Judge Louderback turned to me and said, "When you have made your qualification, come back and see me."

Q. Did he tell you at that time to come back that same day?—A. He did not.

Q. What time of the day was that?—A. That was about 5 minutes or 10 minutes past 5.

Q. Where did you go from there?—A. We went from there to the clerk's office to file the papers.

Q. What time did you get through with the qualification?—A. We got through there about 5:45; about a quarter of 6.

Q. Where did you go after that?—A. When we left the clerk's office, in the hall, someone suggested that we were all through, and that we would go back to our offices, and I mentioned to the gentlemen present that Judge Louderback had asked me to return to see him, and they all agreed that it was too late in the evening, being a quarter of 6, that Judge Louderback had not stressed the fact to return that night, and after some little discussion it was agreed that I should return the first thing in the morning to see Judge Louderback.

Q. Up to that time had you had any discussion with those who were present with regard to who would be your attorney in the case?—A. I had not.

Q. Up to that time, whom, if anybody, had you consulted about an attorney, if you were appointed receiver?—A. I had talked the matter over with my partner, Mr. Hood.

Q. Anyone else?—A. Not up to that time.

Q. Did you contact any attorney?—A. Yes.

Q. Who was it?—A. I phoned to Mr. Ackerman on Monday night.

Q. Is that Mr. Lloyd Ackerman?—A. Mr. Lloyd Ackerman.

Q. What was the purport of your telephone message to him?—A. Mr. Lloyd Ackerman was one of the outstanding attorneys who specialized—

Mr. LINFORTH. Just one moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Answer the question, please.

Mr. LINFORTH. We move to strike that out as not responsive.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be stricken out. The reporter will read the question.

The reporter read as follows:

Q. What was the purport of your telephone message to him?

The WITNESS. To find out whether Mr. Ackerman was in a position whereby he might become my counsel in case I desired him.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Did you agree at that time to appoint him as your counsel?—A. I did not.

Mr. LINFORTH. We object to that as calling for the opinion or conclusion of the witness and not calling for any fact.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is certainly a fact.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In view of the opening statement of counsel for the respondent, as well as some of the testimony that has been presented, the objection is overruled. Proceed.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Did you agree in that conversation to employ Lloyd Ackerman as your counsel if you were appointed receiver?—A. I did not.

Q. Why did you call Lloyd Ackerman?—A. Because Lloyd Ackerman was the attorney for E. A. Pierce & Co., who were the largest correspondent of Russell-Colvin, and I did not know but what on account of his connection in that capacity he might not feel free to serve as my counsel, and that is what I wished to assure myself of.

Q. Is Lloyd Ackerman a specialist in any kind of litigation?—A. He is the secretary of the Pacific Coast Association of the New York Wire Houses, and he has a number of stock-brokerage houses as his clients.

Q. Was he your personal attorney?—A. No.

Q. Why did you select him?—A. Just because of his reputation, and on account of his connection with these—and on account of his intimate knowledge of stock-brokerage problems.

Q. After you left the clerk's office what, if anything, did you do with regard to the employment of your counsel?—A. I left there about a quarter of 6. Going down to my own office I stopped in and saw Mr. Florenz McAuliffe.

Q. Why did you do that?—A. Because, in thinking the matter over, I decided that I had known Mr. McAuliffe more intimately than I knew Mr. Ackerman, and I decided that I would rather have him as my counsel, and I called on him to find out whether he was in a position to serve as such.

Q. At that time were you acquainted with the order of the court appointing you as receiver?—A. I had read it.

Q. I will ask you if you understood from that order that you had a right to employ your counsel?—A. It so stated.

Q. The order so stated?—A. Yes.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, we should like to offer a copy of that order which was marked as an exhibit in the hearing before the committee of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be received and filed with the clerk. You may proceed.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. What time did you get to Mr. McAuliffe's office?—A. About 6 o'clock.

Q. Did you have any prearranged engagement with him?—A. I had none.

Q. Did you know whether or not he was there before you reached the office?—A. I did not.

Q. When did you see the respondent next?—A. I saw the respondent the next morning at 9:30 at his chambers.

Q. I wish you would describe now the conference you had with the respondent at that time on the morning of the 12th?—A. When I went into the chambers of Judge Louderback, he asked me why I had not returned "last night", and I told him that I did not know that I was supposed to return the previous night. He told me that he had insisted—had told me to return the previous night, and I told him that apparently there was a misunderstanding, that I did not understand it as such, and, therefore, I came out the first thing in the morning to see him. There was considerable—some statements made by Judge Louderback relative to my delinquency. Then he turned to me and told me that he had accepted me as receiver on the recommendation of the plaintiff and the defendant in this case; that he ordinarily desired to have someone whom he knew in the matter; that inasmuch as he had appointed me receiver, that he felt that I should appoint as counsel someone whom he should suggest, and he named Mr. John Douglas Short. I told Judge Louderback that I did not know Mr. Short; that I felt, on account of the complex problems in this brokerage work, that I should want an attorney as counsel who was familiar with these stock brokers, who had them as their clients, and also that I felt that I should have somebody whom I knew personally.

Judge Louderback said, "Just exactly what I was afraid of. You went away and thought this matter over. If you had come back last night, the whole thing would have been obviated. In fact, I had Mr. Short here last night for you to meet him." I again told Judge Louderback that I was sorry, that apparently there was a misunderstanding. Judge Louderback then asked me whom I had in mind, and I said Mr. McAuliffe. With that Judge Louderback became very indignant, and threw his pencil on the table. He said, "That is just exactly what I thought. You went down and made your arrangements and I wished to see you before you had made any arrangements."

We then discussed the matter at some length. I assured the judge that the only thing I had in mind was to have competent counsel, one whom I knew and who understood these problems; and, on account of my bond, I thought I could not take the risk of somebody whom I did not know, because if they gave me improper advice I was the one who would take the responsibility. We discussed the matter at some length. Finally the judge came up to me and took me by the coat and said, "I do not know whether you realize what a plum you have picked; do you realize that your fees will be somewhere between ten and eighty thousand dollars." I told Judge Louderback that I did not; in fact, I did not know even how they were based; that I was not concerned with my fees at that particular time; that I was only interested in the counsel. He then said to me, "Do you realize that I am the one who is going to set your fee?" I said, "I understand that."

We then discussed Mr. McAuliffe. He turned to me and said, "If I should send for your friend McAuliffe and tell him that there were not any fees in this case for him, I do not think he would be so anxious for the position." I told him that that was a matter between him and Mr. McAuliffe. He then asked me if I knew that he appointed receivers at frequent intervals. I told him that I understood that he did. He then said, "If you do this work properly, and something of a similar nature comes up, your name will undoubtedly be considered." I still talked to Judge Louderback and tried to explain to him the contracts and bonds that a brokerage office has in connection with full-paid securities, with their margin account and safe-keeping items and various other matters. I told him that I did not wish to take the time to talk with an attorney who was not familiar with the problems, because I wanted to start in immediately on the work. It was about 10 minutes past 10 at that time. Judge Louderback said he could not talk with me any longer, that he had to go on the bench. Leaving his chambers, he said to me, "Think the matter over for 2 or 3 days, come back and see me; there is no hurry about it." He also said, "Do not go to see any attorney or take any legal advice."

I walked with Judge Louderback from his chambers to the door of his court, and tried to explain to him how imminent this matter was, how important it was to have legal advice in order that I could take action. He again told me there was no hurry, to think the matter over and come back in 2 or 3 days' time and talk to him.

Q. What attorneys, if any, did he offer you in that conference?—A. John Douglas Short only.

Q. Did he mention the names of Pillsbury, Madison, and Sutro to you?—A. He did not.

Q. At that or any other time?—A. At that or at any other time.

Q. Did he offer Keyes & Erskine to you then?—A. He did not. He told me that John Douglas Short was in Keyes & Erskine's office, and I understood from his conversation that he was a clerk and not an associate in the firm.

Q. Did he offer you the firm of Sullivan, Roche?—A. He did not.

Q. Or Cushing & Cushing?—A. He did not. I know all those firms and I would have been only too happy to have had any one of them.

Q. Did he have anything to say about the qualifications of the attorney for this work?—A. When I stressed the matter of my counsel, he told me that I exaggerated the importance of it. He said any attorney in San Francisco could handle these matters.

Q. Did you observe his admonition not to talk to counsel about it before you saw him again?—A. I did.

Q. What time did you come back?—A. I came back at 12 o'clock with my partner, Mr. Hood.

Q. Did you see the respondent at that time?—A. I saw him as soon as he came off the bench. I followed him into his chambers.

Q. Did Hood go in with you?—A. No; he did not. He stayed in the anteroom.

Q. Did he try to go in with you?—A. He wanted to go in but he could not go.

Q. Why?—A. The judge would not permit him.

Q. What occurred between you and the respondent in that conversation?—A. I told Judge Louderback that I had thought the matter over ever since I left him that morning and that it was a matter of supreme importance and extreme urgency; that there were so many customers who were clamoring at the doors requesting permission to do certain things which required legal advice that I felt that I could not wait any longer, and I came out to him to see if we could not get the matter settled in regard to counsel. Judge Louderback turned to me and said, "If you cannot have your friend as counsel, do you wish to resign?" I told him that I understood that my name was put up by the petitioners and that the defendant in the case had agreed to the petition on condition that I should be receiver, and under the circumstances I felt in duty to them I should not resign. He then insisted that I should resign, and told me if I would step outside to his clerk that she would prepare my resignation and have me sign it. I told Judge Louderback that I felt in fairness to the persons who had put up my name that I should be permitted to go back and see them first and acquaint them with the conditions. I also told him that I felt under the circumstances that I should be permitted to talk to Mr. McAuliffe and explain the matter to him.

Q. In the conversation, did you try to talk with any other attorneys except Heller, Erhmann, White & McAuliffe?—A. We discussed that matter for a few moments and then Judge Louderback asked if I had any other attorney in mind. I named Lloyd Ackerman. He said, "It is all in the same family; not satisfactory."

Q. Was Lloyd Ackerman attorney for the stock exchange?—A. He was not.

Q. What instructions did you have from the respondent when you had that second conference on the 12th?—A. We talked about various things, and when I came to leave, inasmuch as we had been talking about other subjects, I again repeated to Judge Louderback my understanding that "I am to be permitted to go to Mr. Francis Brown and advise him of your request for my resignation, and also that I be permitted to talk to Mr. McAuliffe." He said, "I know exactly what is going to happen; if you talk to McAuliffe, he is going to come here to see me, and it is going to be very embarrassing for me." I left with the understanding that I was to be permitted to talk to both of these gentlemen.

Q. Did the judge in that conference offer you any other attorneys except John Douglas Short?—A. The only attorney that was offered to me by Judge Louderback was John Douglas Short.

Q. When did you next see or hear from the judge?—A. The following morning I received a telephone message from his secretary, Miss Berger, asking me to come out to see Judge Louderback at 12:45. That was on Thursday.

Q. Did you go there on that occasion?—A. I went out there and saw Judge Louderback in his chambers.

Q. What occurred in that conference?

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the witness speak a little louder so that we may hear him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair admonishes the witness to speak so that all Members of the Senate may hear. The Chair suggests that the witness lift his voice.

The WITNESS. What was the question?

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. What occurred in the conference that you had with respondent at 12:45 on the 13th?—A. Judge Louderback told me that he was very much disappointed; that he was not going to talk any longer, and he asked me if I wished to resign. I told him the same answer; that I thought, in view of the persons who had appointed me, that I could not resign. He then asked me if I had talked to Mr. McAuliffe, and he had advised me not to resign, and I said "yes." With that the judge stood up and opened his desk drawer and pulled out a paper all prepared and signed and handed it to me and said, "I now hand you herewith a formal notice of discharge as receiver for good cause." He said, "Do you understand?" I said, "No." He said, "In other words, you are 'fired'; you are 'canned'; you are out." Then he took me by the arm and thrust me out of his room and presented the copy to his secretary and asked that it be filed immediately in the clerk's office and went back to his chambers and slammed the door, and I was out.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I offer at this time, Mr. President, a certified copy of the order of discharge.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The order will be received and filed with the clerk.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. In the evening after you left the clerk's office when you had qualified and went to see Mr. McAuliffe, did you go to your office any more that evening?—A. I did.

Q. Did you receive any telephone message from either the judge or the judge's secretary?—A. I had no telephone call there.

Q. The next morning, what time did you leave your office?—A. I left my office about 8 o'clock and went over to Russell-Colvin & Co.

Q. Before you left did you receive any telephone message from the judge or the judge's secretary?—A. I did not.

Q. After that time did you get any notice of any telephone message coming to your office from them?—A. My secretary did not phone me and tell me I had any message.

Q. When you went to the court room on the 11th at the time the petition was filed and you were appointed did you see H. B. Hunter there?—A. I saw him in the court room; yes.

Q. When did you see him with reference to the time that you were appointed by Judge Louderback?—A. While we were waiting, because Judge Louderback's court was in session. We all went into the court room to wait until court was adjourned. It so happened I sat down next to Mr. Hunter.

Q. Were you well acquainted with him?—A. I had known him for some time before that time.

Q. What was his business?—A. At that time he was the junior partner in the firm of William Cavalier & Co., stock brokers.

Q. What, if any, conversation took place between you and Mr. Hunter then?

Mr. LINFORTH. We object to that, Mr. President, as being hearsay and not binding on the respondent here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do counsel contend that that is admissible?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes; we do; on the theory that we have alleged a conspiracy that involves the judge, this man Hunter, and the man Leake, who, we contend, was the intermediary, and we think it is competent for us to show the attitude of this man Hunter at that time.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I add that after there has been some proof of conspiracy offered, then declarations of any one of them may be admissible; but until that foundation is laid and there is some proof tending to establish conspiracy, then, of course, the matter is purely hearsay; and I maintain that up to the present time no evidence has been offered in this case tending to show a conspiracy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do the managers allege a conspiracy between the respondent and Mr. Hunter?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes, sir.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I say I think counsel is mistaken in that. The only conspiracy alleged is a conspiracy between Mr. Leake and the respondent, and none whatever in regard to Mr. Hunter. I think if counsel will look at the pleadings he will find that to be so.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Our allegation covers that, I am quite sure.

Mr. LINFORTH. If you will refer to it—or I will refer to it, if the Presiding Officer desires me to do so—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is not able to read through the pleadings at this time to acquaint himself with all the allegations. The Chair will hear the testimony; and if it is not properly connected and the present occupant is in the chair, a motion to strike out the testimony will be received and will be ruled upon at that time.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Proceed.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. What was said to you at that time with regard to this case by Mr. Hunter, if anything?—A. Mr. Hunter asked me what I was out there for, explaining that he was—

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have been listening very attentively to what counsel said. What time is he talking about now?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. It is the occasion when the parties went to the judge for the first time and were waiting in his court room to get their audience to apply for the receivership on the morning of the 11th of March 1930.

Mr. HEBERT. Mr. President, the conspiracy alleged appears in article I, on page 5, of the print of the proceedings of the Senate which I have before me, wherein it says:

In that the said Harold Louderback entered into a conspiracy with the said Sam Leake to violate the provisions of the California political code.

There appears to be no mention of anybody else, unless there is reference to it in some other part of the articles of impeachment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair announced that he did not have time to read the articles of impeachment; but if at the conclusion of the testimony there is no connection between Mr. Hunter and the respondent tending to show a conspiracy, of course, the testimony will be stricken from the record.

Mr. LINFORTH. It will save some considerable time, no doubt, in the cross-examination of this witness if counsel at the present time is required to call attention any such allegation of conspiracy with Mr. Hunter. We maintain most respectfully that there is nothing in the articles of impeachment from beginning to end, as amended, other than the charge of conspiracy between Mr. Leake and the respondent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will adhere to the ruling; but unless the House managers show allegations warranting introduction of the testimony, if the present occupant of the chair is in the chair at the time, he will entertain a motion to strike from the record all of this testimony.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. The question is, What conversation took place between you and Mr. Hunter at that time with regard to this case?

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, would it be proper to ask counsel, for the benefit of the court, to indicate that part of the article of impeachment which alleges a conspiracy involving Mr. Hunter?

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska will state the point of order.

Mr. NORRIS. As I understand, members of the court should not be allowed to participate in any argument.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sustained. Proceed, Mr. Manager.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. State the conversation between you and Mr. Hunter at that time with regard to this case.—A. Mr. Hunter asked what I was doing out in that court and explained he was there as a member of the trial jury. I told him I was out there in connection with the Russell-Colvin matter, that my name had been presented as receiver and we were waiting to have an audience with Judge Louderback in the matter. He turned to me in a laughing way and said, "You do not want a good man as receiver?" I said, "I do not think that is necessary. That is taken care of."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness is again admonished to speak louder so that members of the court may hear him.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Repeat what he said to you with regard to it.—A. Mr. Hunter turned to me and asked in a laughing manner if they did not want a good receiver, and I told him I thought it had already been taken care of.

Q. When did you take possession of the assets of the concern, if at all?—A. Wednesday morning, the 12th, immediately after my appointment I went to the office of Russell-Colvin and took possession of all the assets.

Q. Was that before you went back to see the respondent?—A. Before I went back.

Q. What assets did you take possession of at that time?—A. I advised the officers that I was in control, and I took over the safe deposit box in the bank covering the securities.

Q. How long after you were discharged before you were called on to turn over to the receiver the assets of the company?—A. About two weeks; I received an order of the court.

Q. Did you have any demand made on you before that time?—A. No.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Strong, had you at any time prior to this been appointed receiver in any matter?—A. I never had.

Q. This was your first appointment in any receivership matter?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before you were appointed in this particular matter you had been working in the capacity you stated for the Russell-Colvin Co.?—A. That is correct.

Q. And you had also been working in the capacity that you have stated for the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. That is correct.

Q. Were you in the employment of the San Francisco Stock Exchange at the time you were appointed receiver, regularly employed by it?—A. They were one of my clients; yes.

Q. And had been one of your clients for some years prior thereto?—A. That is correct.

Q. Had the San Francisco Stock Exchange—that is, the governing board of that exchange—prevailed upon you to act as receiver in this matter?—A. They had. They requested me to act.

Q. Did they do more than request you to act? Did they prevail upon you to act?—A. They requested me to act in the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Did they do more than request you to act?

The WITNESS. No; I would not say so.

By Mr. LINFORTH.

Q. Then I am not correct in saying that they prevailed upon you to act as such receiver?—A. They finally prevailed upon me; yes.

Q. They finally did prevail upon you to act?—A. Yes.

Q. In other words, when they first spoke to you about acting you did not want to act on account of your own personal engagements; is that right?—A. That is correct.

Q. Then the governing board of the stock exchange prevailed upon you to change your opinion and to act?—A. Simply on account of my intimate knowledge of the firm.

Q. No matter what the reason was, they did prevail upon you to act?—A. Yes.

Q. And you finally consented after they had so prevailed upon you?—A. That is correct.

Q. In addition to the governors of the San Francisco Stock Exchange Board prevailing upon you to act, you were also consulted by Mr. Francis Brown on the subject, were you not?—A. That is correct.

Q. He was then one of the attorneys for Russell-Colvin Co.?—A. That is right.

Q. Your relations with the stock-exchange board at this time and for some time prior thereto had been that at its request you were making daily reports to it of the condition of the Russell-Colvin Co.; is that right?—A. I have so stated.

Q. You knew at the time that you were appointed receiver that the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe were the regularly employed attorneys of the stock exchange, did you not?—A. I did.

Q. When it came to the question of attorneys whom did you first consult, Mr. Lloyd Ackerman or Mr. McAuliffe?—A. Mr. Lloyd Ackerman.

Q. Did you see him personally about the matter or was your communication by phone?—A. By phone.

Q. And that was the day before you were appointed receiver?—A. That is correct.

Q. That would be on Monday the 10th, Mr. Strong?—A. That is correct.

Q. Do you recall what time it was on Monday the 10th that you talked with Mr. Lloyd Ackerman on that subject?—A. Some time in the evening. I talked from my office.

Q. Did you ask him at that time in the event of your appointment as receiver if he would act for you?—A. Not in that language; no.

Q. What did you say to him on the subject?—A. I told him my name had been suggested as receiver and I wished to know whether he was in a position to act as my counsel in case I desired him.

Q. What did he say?—A. He said he would have to think whether there was any connection which would prevent him from acting as such.

Q. Did he tell you whether or not he would let you hear from him the next day?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you hear from him the next day on that subject?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did not he communicate with you the next day and tell you that he could and would act?—A. No, sir.

Q. You are positive of that?—A. I am absolutely positive of that.

Q. To refresh your recollection, Mr. Strong, if possible—A. To help you I will tell you what took place that night.

Q. No; I should rather you would answer my question. We will get at it in our own way. Did he, before you had spoken to anyone connected with the attorneys for the stock-exchange board, tell you that he would be glad to represent you as attorney for the receiver if you were appointed?—A. He did, on Monday night.

Q. My question was limited to whether or not he told you at any time before you had talked with anyone representing the stock-exchange board.—A. Who do you mean by representing the stock-exchange board?

Q. Mr. McAuliffe, Mr. Heller, Mr. Ehrmann, Mr. White, and Mr. Lloyd Dinkelspiel.—A. Yes; he talked to me before I spoke to any of them.

Q. He talked with you before you had talked with any of them and told you that he could and would act for you if you wished?—A. That is correct.

Q. Is that right?—A. That is correct.

Q. So that before you had talked with anyone connected with the firm of attorneys for the stock-exchange board you had not only talked to Lloyd Ackerman but you had also had his reply?—A. That is correct.

Q. After you had received word from Mr. Lloyd Ackerman that he could and would represent you, who talked to you about employing the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe, the attorneys for the stock-exchange board?—A. No one at any time.

Q. Had anyone representing the stock-exchange board, its board of governors, or anyone else, spoken to you on the subject of employing their law firm?—A. No, sir.

Q. What happened in the meantime, between the time that Mr. Ackerman reported that he was willing to accept the appointment and your calling on Mr. McAuliffe, that caused you to change your mind?—A. I have known Mr. McAuliffe much more intimately than I have Mr. Ackerman. After thinking the matter over and turning it over in my own mind, I decided I should prefer to have Mr. McAuliffe.

Q. You knew, when you first spoke to Mr. Lloyd Ackerman, that you had known Mr. McAuliffe for many years.—A. I had.

Q. And you knew at that time that he was one of the attorneys for the stock board, did you not?—A. That is right.

Q. Have you given us the full reason why, after getting word from Mr. Lloyd Ackerman that he could represent you, that you changed your mind and went to Mr. McAuliffe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the time that you were in the chambers of the respondent, Judge Louderback, did not the judge tell you that if he appointed you, you would be an officer of the court?—A. I do not recall.

Q. You have no recollection on that subject? Did the judge at that time also say to you that if he appointed you as receiver, you must confer with the court on the appointment of your attorney?—A. He may have done so. I do not recall.

Q. You have no recollection on that point, either?—A. No.

Q. Did he not also at the same time ask you if you had already selected an attorney?—A. No, sir.

Q. He did not?—A. No, sir.

Q. And did he not also say to you at the same time, "And particularly any of the attorneys who are present here"?—A. He did.

Q. And what did you answer?—A. I told him I had no attorneys who were present in mind.

Q. Mr. Lloyd Dinkelspiel was present at that time, was he not?—A. He was.

Q. And he was one of the members of the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe?—A. He was; but I was naming Mr. McAuliffe, not the firm.

Q. Do you recall, at the time that you saw the respondent, Judge Louderback, on Wednesday, the 12th of March, that you told him that one of the reasons why you wanted Mr. McAuliffe as your attorney was because his firm represented the San Francisco Stock Board?—A. No, sir.

Q. You never told him that?—A. I told him he probably represented the San Francisco Stock Board, but that was not the compelling reason.

Q. No; but did you tell the judge at that interview that one of the reasons why you wanted Mr. McAuliffe was because his firm were the attorneys for the San Francisco Stock Board?—A. No; sir.

Q. Are you quite positive about that?—A. Quite positive.

Q. Have you read recently the testimony that was given by you in San Francisco in September of last year before the investigating body?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Calling your attention to page 46, toward the bottom of the page—

Q. Did you ask him then if he had any personal objection to Mr. McAuliffe or the firm with which he was connected?—A. I did not ask that direct question; no.

Q. Did you offer any other counsel?—A. Judge Louderback asked me why I picked Mr. McAuliffe and I told him that I picked Mr. McAuliffe because I knew he was the attorney for a number of stockbrokers, was very familiar with their procedure and the rules and the law, and also their firm represented the stock exchange—

Do you remember giving that testimony?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it correct that you told the judge at that time that one of the reasons why you wanted McAuliffe was because his firm represented the stock exchange?—A. The sole reason in mentioning the name of the stock exchange was simply to show his familiarity with the transactions, but it was not the impelling reason, because he was.

Q. Was one of the reasons why you wanted Mr. McAuliffe as your attorney because he was one of the attorneys that regularly represented the stock exchange?—A. Not in itself, but it might be of some assistance.

Q. Did you tell the judge at the time I have referred to that that was one of the reasons why you wanted Mr. McAuliffe?—A. It may have been. I do not recall.

Q. Would you care to read what I have read to you?—

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, I insist that counsel is undertaking to put into the mouth of the witness what he never said on the former occasion. He did not say in that testimony that he told the judge that about Mr. McAuliffe at that time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks the cross-examination is proper. Proceed.

Mr. LINFORTH (to the Official Reporter). Will you read the last question?

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. Did you tell the judge at the time I have referred to that that was one of the reasons why you wanted Mr. McAuliffe?—A. It may have been. I do not recall.

Q. Would you care to read what I have read to you?

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Would it refresh your memory if I handed you the record on that subject, Mr. Strong?—A. I do not think it is necessary.

Q. When you made that statement to the judge, did he not then say to you, in words or substance, "The whole matter is in a family circle. It is all the same family, the same people"?—A. I believe he did.

Q. That was after he had appointed you as receiver, you being an employee of the stock exchange, and after you had asked permission to employ its attorneys as yours. That is right; is it not?—A. May I correct that? I was not an employee of the stock exchange.

Q. Your firm was; was it not?—A. They were my clients; yes.

Q. Your firm was?—A. Yes.

Q. And it was after the judge had been so advised that he said to you, "The whole matter is too much of the same family. It is too close a proposition." Did not the judge tell you that?—A. I believe he did.

Q. And he gave you that as the reason why he did not want you to employ the regular attorneys of the stock exchange as your attorneys. That is correct; is it not?—A. That was the reason he gave; yes.

Q. That is what I am asking you, Mr. Strong. He gave you that as the reason why he did not want to accede to your request. That is correct; is it not?—A. Correct.

Q. Did not the judge, the respondent here, at that time in substance say to you this: That Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe were the attorneys for the exchange; that you were sponsored by the exchange; that if the exchange was mixed up with this situation, both you and the exchange would be in a position or feel that you would not want to bring it to light. Do you recall his telling you that?—A. Yes; and I told him that it was possible but highly improbable.

Q. The judge was telling you at that time, was he not, that the relations being so close, Russell-Colvin also being a suspended member of that firm, complications might come up, and it would be embarrassing to you and to him to appoint that firm? Did he not, in substance, tell you that?—A. He made that statement that you have repeated before.

Q. Yes, sir; and is it not a fact that when the judge reasoned with you in that way, you replied that what he said was possible, but it was not probable?—A. It was highly improbable.

Q. Did you not say, after the judge had reasoned in this way with you, that such a condition was possible, but it was not probable?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness has answered the question. Answer it again, though. Proceed.

A. I said it was possible but highly improbable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Proceed.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, I send forward a question to be propounded to the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will be read.

The legislative clerk read the question, as follows:

Q. You asked Mr. Ackerman to represent you, and he agreed to do so. You later selected Mr. McAuliffe. Why did you make the change, and why did you fail to tell Mr. Ackerman about it?

The WITNESS. As I stated, I knew Mr. McAuliffe more intimately than I did Mr. Ackerman. Both of them were very high gentlemen. It was my knowing Mr. McAuliffe more intimately that was one of the chief reasons why I decided to take Mr. McAuliffe. I phoned to Mr. Ackerman on Wednesday and told him of my change of my selection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Proceed.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, does that answer the question? I understood the question to be why he did not tell Mr. Ackerman that he was going to get Mr. McAuliffe.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will pardon the Chair if he reminds the Senator that under the rule questions must be submitted in writing.

Mr. LONG. I am talking about this question. Perhaps I misunderstood the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair suggests, if the Senator will pardon him, that the Senator prepare the question that he desires submitted. Proceed as fast as you can.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. When Mr. Ackerman had advised you that he was willing to accept the employment, what did you say to him then—that that was satisfactory to you?—A. I told him that I would let him know.

Q. What time elapsed between the time that he told you he was willing to accept the appointment and the time you went down and talked with Mr. McAuliffe?—A. About 24 hours.

Q. You had heard from Mr. Ackerman 24 hours before your appointment that he was willing to act for you? Is that your present recollection?—A. About that; yes—the night before.

Q. And how long was it before you saw Mr. McAuliffe that you notified Mr. Ackerman that you did not want him?—A. I believe it was the following afternoon.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, I send forward another question to be propounded to the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If it will not interrupt counsel, the question will be read.

Mr. LINFORTH. No; it will not interrupt me.

The legislative clerk read the question, as follows:

Q. At the time you telephoned Mr. Ackerman asking him to represent you, and he agreed to do so, you knew then that you were better acquainted with Mr. McAuliffe than you were with Mr. Ackerman; did you not?

The WITNESS. I did.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Proceed, Mr. Counsel.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. What was the comparative length of your acquaintance with the two gentlemen—Mr. Ackerman and Mr. McAuliffe?—A. I do not recall exactly; a number of years in both instances.

Q. I do not want to be exact; but approximately how long had you known Mr. Florenz McAuliffe?—A. About 5 or 6 years.

Q. Five or six years before that time?—A. Right.

Q. And how long had you known Mr. Ackerman?—A. About the same length of time.

Q. Then in saying that you knew one better than the other, you did not mean with reference to time?—A. No, sir.

Q. Had you had Mr. McAuliffe as your attorney on prior matters?—A. Not any of my affairs; no.

Q. Had you had Mr. Ackerman as your attorney on prior matters?—A. No, sir.

Q. But you knew that, during all of your acquaintanceship with Mr. McAuliffe, he or his firm were the regular attorneys of the stock board?—A. I have so stated.

Q. I understood you to say that in none of his talks with you did the judge, the respondent, suggest any counsel except Mr. Short.—A. That is quite correct.

Q. Had you, before you talked with Mr. McAuliffe about his employment, talked with the other partner, Mr. Dinkelspiel, on the subject?—A. Yes; I had mentioned it to him after I had qualified, and when I was leaving the post-office building. He was in a group with other persons, and I believe he overheard me.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Lloyd Dinkelspiel of that firm about their probable appointment before you talked to Mr. McAuliffe?—A. Yes; he was present and heard me talk about it.

Q. Did you tell him that you had already talked with Mr. Ackerman on the same subject?—A. I do not believe I had; no.

Q. Do I understand you to say, Mr. Strong, that at no time did the respondent judge suggest to you that either one of the firms mentioned here would be satisfactory to him?—A. Which firms have you in mind?

Q. Sullivan, Sullivan & Roche have been mentioned; Cushing & Cushing have been mentioned; and Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro have been mentioned.—A. Positively at no time was any attorney mentioned to me except John Douglas Short.

Q. Your recollection is clear?—A. Absolutely clear.

Q. And definite on that subject? I understood you to say that you did not understand the judge's reference to coming back after you had qualified to mean that afternoon. Is that right?—A. He simply suggested in an offhand manner, "When you have qualified come back and see me", with no reference as to time.

Q. Did you understand that to mean that afternoon or the next day?—A. At any time after I had qualified.

Q. Did you understand, from what was said, that you were not to come back that afternoon?—A. Not necessarily; no.

Q. After you qualified you talked with the lawyers who were along with you as to whether you should go in at that time and see the judge, did you not?—A. I did.

Q. You have said that today here, have you not?—A. I have.

Q. So you had in mind at that very time, did you not, the possibility that the judge meant that very afternoon after you qualified, had you not?—A. He asked me to come back and see him; but on account of the lateness of the hour, I came back the next morning.

Q. Yes; but you have said, have you not, Mr. Strong, that when you finished qualifying, and before you left the building, you talked with Mr. Brown and Mr. Dinkelspiel and the other gentlemen about whether you should go in and see the judge that afternoon?—A. That is correct.

Q. Is not that true?—A. That is correct.

Q. So you had the thought in mind at that time, did you not, that that was the time to see the judge?—A. If the hour permitted.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will counsel permit me to send up a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Would it disturb counsel to have a question propounded?

Mr. LINFORTH. Not a particle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. Is it not a fact that you wanted Mr. McAuliffe for attorney because his firm were attorneys for the stock exchange, and the stock-exchange officers asked you to not employ Ackerman, but McAuliffe?

The WITNESS. That is absolutely not so.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I resume?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. You may proceed.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Did you take up with the stock exchange, or anyone connected with it, the appointment of Lloyd Ackerman?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you take up with the stock exchange, or anyone connected with it, the fact that you had already talked to Mr. Ackerman on the subject?—A. I had not.

Q. When the judge in chambers suggested to you the name of John Douglas Short, did he at that time tell you he was connected with the firm of Keyes & Erskine?—A. I understood that he was connected with Keyes & Erskine in a minor capacity.

Q. You told the judge at that time you did not know that firm?—A. I told him I did not know John Douglas Short. I knew of the firm.

Q. You knew of the firm. Did you know whether or not that firm had represented stockbrokers in stock transactions for years before?—A. I did not at that time.

Q. Did you know that they had represented Cavalier & Co. for some years before?—A. I did not know that at that time.

Q. Did you tell the judge that you would make some investigation and see whether or not Mr. Short of that firm was satisfactory?—A. I did not.

Q. In other words, you told the judge, without making any investigation whatever, you would not accept him. Is that right?—A. I did not tell him that I would not accept him at any time.

Q. You told him that you would not accept anyone but Mr. McAuliffe, did you not?—A. I did not.

Q. Whom did you qualify that by?—A. I told him that all I wanted was a man whom I knew and who had the reputation and the experience in stock-brokerage work; that that was all I was after.

Q. Did he not tell to you at that time that Mr. Erskine, of Keyes & Erskine, was regularly doing that work?—A. He did not.

Q. Did you ask him whether they were?—A. I did not.

Q. When you called on him Wednesday morning following your appointment, and after you told him that you had been down and employed the stock-exchange firm, the judge did say to you, "That was the very thing I was trying to avoid", did he not?—A. Let me correct the statement. I had not employed Mr. McAuliffe at that time. I could not.

Q. I am calling attention, Mr. Strong, to the day after your appointment.—A. Right.

Q. I understood you to say you were appointed late on Tuesday.—A. Right.

Q. And the judge at some time late on Tuesday had requested you to return after you had qualified?—A. Right.

Q. And you did not return until the following morning, Wednesday. Is that right?—A. Right.

Q. Then Wednesday morning when you called you told the judge that you had been down the night before employing the stock-exchange firm, did you not?—A. I told the judge that I had been down and saw Mr. McAuliffe.

Q. With a view of employing his firm, did you not?—A. Right.

Q. Did not the judge then say to you, "That is exactly what I tried to avoid by requesting you to come back last night"?—A. That is correct.

Q. I understood you to answer just a moment ago that you had not employed the stockbrokers' attorney on Tuesday night. Is that right?—A. I had not employed him. I could not without the approval of the judge.

Q. But had you gone as far as you could in the appointment?—A. I asked him if he would be willing to represent me as my counsel.

Q. And he told you what?—A. He told me he would.

Q. And you told him that was satisfactory if the court would approve it?—A. Right.

Q. So that that was done on Tuesday, the very day you were appointed, was it not?—A. Correct.

Q. And the judge said to you, upon your telling him what had taken place, that if you had returned the night before, that unfortunate situation would not exist, did he not? I do not mean in words, but in substance, Mr. Strong.—A. He told me that if I had returned the night before, that that would have been obviated.

Q. That that would have obviated that situation. That is what he told you?—A. Correct.

Q. Did he tell you, when you went there Wednesday morning, the day after you were appointed, that already, before you got there, Mr. White, of the Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe firm, had been to see him over your appointment?—A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. You made some reference here today to the judge saying something to you about what could be done on fees. I did not quite catch that. Would you be kind enough to repeat it?—A. He stated to me, "I do not think you realize what a plum you have picked. You know your fees will be somewhere between ten thousand and eighty thousand dollars."

Q. That is sufficient for my purpose. He stated to you that your fees would be somewhere between 10,000 and 80,000?—A. That is correct.

Q. That was the range he made, between 10 and 80?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are quite sure of that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you left the courthouse on the night of your appointment without going back to see the judge, what time did you get to Mr. McAuliffe's office?—A. About 6 o'clock.

Q. You did not go to see the judge because, I think you said, it was too late?—A. That is correct.

Q. But not too late to see Mr. McAuliffe?—A. Mr. McAuliffe is a late worker.

Q. Had you an appointment with McAuliffe for that evening?—A. I had not.

Q. You just took a chance on finding him in, Mr. Strong?—A. That is it exactly.

Q. There is not any question in your mind, is there, but what the judge did say to you after he had approved your bond in words substantially this, "When you qualify, come back and see me"?—A. That is correct.

Q. And you qualified about what time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is in the record several times.

Mr. LINFORTH. Is it in? Pardon me, Mr. Chairman.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. I understood you to say today that when you called on the judge on Thursday, the 13th, which was the day of your removal, he asked you whether McAuliffe told you not to resign.—A. He asked me if I had asked Mr. Auliffe and if he advised me not to resign, and I said he did.

Q. And that was the fact, Mr. McAuliffe had advised you not to resign?—A. That is correct.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, may I send a question to the desk?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Would counsel consent to be interrupted for the propounding of a question?

Mr. LINFORTH. Certainly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The interrogatory will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. In view of your last answer, please answer this question "yes" or "no." Did you not tell the judge you would not employ any of the lawyers present, including a member of the McAuliffe firm? Then did you not, after having consulted Ackerman and receiving his acceptance, go and employ McAuliffe, a member of whose firm was present when you agreed to exclude attorneys present from consideration?

Mr. BROWNING. Mr. President, I suggest that the question should be divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is for the witness to determine. If it is not intelligible to him and he desires to have it divided, it may be done.

The WITNESS. I would appreciate that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the first part of the question.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. In view of your last answer, please answer this question "yes" or "no." Did you not tell the judge you would not employ any of the lawyers present, including a member of the McAuliffe firm?

The WITNESS. Yes.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Q. Then did you not, after having consulted Ackerman and receiving his acceptance, go and employ McAuliffe, a member of whose firm was present when you agreed to exclude attorneys present from consideration?

The WITNESS. I was engaging Mr. McAuliffe and not his firm.

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a question or two further and I am through. From the work that you had done for the Russell-Colvin Co. you knew, did you not, that their records were not of the best?—A. They were pretty good.

Q. But you knew they were not of the best, did you not?—A. I have seen better; yes.

Mr. LINFORTH. I think that is all.

Redirect examination:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further reexamination?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes, Mr. President.

In view of the question asked by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Long] I will ask the witness if the judge in his statement to you asked you if you had employed any attorney who was present or if you would employ any attorney who was present?

Mr. LINFORTH. I ask to have that question read. I did not get it.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I will ask the question again.

At the time the judge referred to the attorneys who were present, did he ask you if you had employed any attorney present or if you intended to employ any attorney present?—A. He asked me if I had in mind any of the persons present as my attorneys; that is true.

Q. And you told him you did not?—A. I told him that I did not.

Q. Did you employ Lloyd Ackerman in your telephone conversation with him on the night of the 10th, on Monday, or did you ascertain whether he would be available?

Mr. LINFORTH. We object to that. That is calling for the opinion of the witness or his conclusion. He may state the fact, but he should not be permitted to go beyond that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The record shows that the witness has answered that question several times, so it is unnecessary to repeat it. Proceed with the questioning.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, with all due deference, there is some misunderstanding on the part of the witness as to the question asked by the Senator from New Mexico. We have a feeling that he should have a chance to clear that up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness answered very succinctly about his interview with Mr. Ackerman and stated what occurred, and the kind of arrangement which was entered into. If there is something other that he desires to elaborate, the Chair will permit it; but that question was fully answered.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. When you testified that, after you had fully qualified, you talked to Lloyd Dinkelspiel with regard to the employment of Mr. McAuliffe, I will ask you to state whether or not at that time you inquired if there would be any conflict between his acting as attorney for the stock exchange and representing you as the receiver?—A. I discussed the matter myself with the three or four persons who were present and told them I had in mind Mr. Ackerman or Mr. McAuliffe, that I thought that possibly, on account of the fact that Mr. Lloyd Dinkelspiel was present in the room, Mr. McAuliffe might be disqualified. I was told by the persons present that they did not believe so. I asked them if Mr. McAuliffe was not of that firm. I had not known Mr. Dinkelspiel up to that time.

Q. Was anything said to you at that time as to whether or not there was a conflict between his representing the stock exchange and also the receiver?—A. I had asked Mr. Dinkelspiel whether he thought there might be any conflict at all between the interests of his firm as representative of the stock exchange and as my counsel, and he assured me that he could not understand any reason why there should be.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness is excused. Do the managers or counsel for the respondent desire that the witness be retained or may he be excused?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We should like to notify him in the morning.

Mr. LINFORTH. We announce on behalf of the respondent that we do not desire to retain the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness will return tomorrow morning.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, pursuant to the stipulation entered into by counsel for respondent and the managers on the part of the House, we desire at this time to read the testimony given by W. S. Leake at the hearing in San Francisco last September.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the testimony offered is in pursuance of a stipulation already entered into, the manager may proceed.

Mr. LINFORTH. We have not the slightest objection to it, Mr. President, with the understanding that Mr. Leake will appear in obedience to the subpoena which is being served upon him. We do not want merely a part of his testimony in the record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair cannot make a ruling with those qualifications. Do counsel for the respondent insist that the paper which has been signed by their respective parties, the stipulation, permits the reading of that testimony regardless of the attendance of Mr. Leake, or is it conditional?

Mr. LINFORTH. The stipulation provides that it shall only be operative in the event that Mr. Leake is not here.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes; but Mr. President, I do not feel that we should be hampered in the orderly presentation of our case because Mr. Leake in fact is not here. I think that the terms and qualifications of the stipulation have been fulfilled when he failed to appear as subpoenaed. He was subpoenaed to be here yesterday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will counsel read the stipulation?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. It is as follows:

It is further stipulated that the testimony of W. S. Leake taken at the hearing above referred to may be read upon said trial by either party hereto with the same force and effect as if the said witness were present and testified in person. This stipulation, however, insofar as the said W. S. Leake is concerned, is without waiver by either party hereto to insist upon the attendance of said Leake before the court above referred to, and shall become operative only in the event of the nonappearance of the said Leake at Washington before the said Court of Impeachment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That it shall be operative only upon his nonappearance.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes, sir.

Mr. HANLEY. The stipulation, we claim, Mr. President—I am not speaking loud, for the Chair is to rule on this point—means that the testimony will only be read in the event Leake is not present. Who says he will not be present? Do counsel say so? No. I understood this morning that the Vice President was taking up the question of having Leake, with a trained nurse, appear here. Why not make one bite of the cherry, when we will have the whole matter here? Let us have Leake here, and then, if he is not here, let us live up to the stipulation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In view of the statement of counsel that the matter has been brought to the attention of the Vice President, the Chair will not rule upon the question and will ask the managers on the part of the House to proceed with some other witness.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, in the orderly presentation of our case we feel that it is almost imperative for us to present Leake's testimony at this time. The event, as we understood it, was his absence when he was subpoenaed to be here. We are not in any way responsible for his failure to appear. Counsel for the respondent will have opportunity to cross-examine him and present any further testimony if he does appear, of which we have no assurance at all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. May the Chair ask counsel if the witness, because of illness or untimely death, should not be present, if he would insist that the testimony would be admissible?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes, sir; under the stipulation it would be because it is agreed that either party may read his testimony in the event of his nonappearance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If counsel have some other witness, they had better proceed with him. The Vice President having in part considered this matter, the Chair feels a delicacy in going further in the matter.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Very well. Call Mr. White.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, if the court desires to suspend the impeachment proceedings, I think we might follow that course and proceed with legislative business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is that agreeable to the managers on the part of the House and is it agreeable to counsel representing the respondent?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. It is absolutely agreeable to us.

Mr. LINFORTH. It is agreeable to us.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, then, the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment will stand adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, at which time it will reconvene.

Thereupon (at 4 o'clock and 10 minutes p.m.) the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday morning, May 17, at 10 o'clock a.m.

H.R. 4494. An act authorizing a per capita payment of $100 to the members of the Menominee Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin from funds on deposit to their credit in the Treasury of the United States.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a petition of 245 citizens of the State of California, praying for the passage of legislation to restore to all veterans who were actually disabled in the military or naval service the former benefits, rights, privileges, ratings, schedules, compensation, presumptions, and pensions heretofore enjoyed by them and existent prior to the passage of the so-called "Economy Act", which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the executive board of the Georgia Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, deploring the removal of Miss Jessie Dell as United States Civil Service Commissioner and commending Miss Dell "for her highly ethical conduct in not participating in partisan politics during the recent Presidential campaign", which were referred to the Committee on Civil Service.

He also laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a memorial from L. M. Fournet, superintendent of the Louisiana State Penitentiary, Angola, La., opposing continuation of the investigation by the Special Committee of the Senate to Investigate Campaign Expenditures of the Louisiana Senatorial Election of 1932, which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the Tennessee Valley Association (composed of 25 cooperating business, fraternal, and civic organizations), of Chattanooga, Tenn., favoring the passage of legislation to completely carry out the program of the President relative to the conservation and development of water-power resources, and deploring modification of proposed Muscle Shoals legislation so as to restrict the Tennessee Valley Authority with respect to the construction of power dams, the acquiring, condemning, or construction of transmission lines, or the engaging in such other undertakings as may be necessary, in the judgment of the President, to the full development of the Tennessee Basin's resources for the benefit of all the people, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. COPELAND presented a resolution adopted by Hollis-Bellaire Post, No. 980, the American Legion, Department of New York, Jamaica, N.Y., favoring increase in second-class postage rates to such extent as may be necessary to defray the actual cost of handling this class of mail matter and the discontinuance of subsidies in the form of contracts for carrying the mails by steamship and air transport companies, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

JOHN BOYD THACHER COLLECTION—OPINION OF COURT OF APPEALS

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, in 1927 the widow of John Boyd Thacher, of Albany, N.Y., died. She had made a will leaving to the Library of Congress a very valuable collection of books which had belonged to Mr. Thacher. That collection includes, in addition to books, many very valuable autographs and manuscripts and documents, and so forth, which are generally estimated to be worth about $500,000. There was a condition in the will that the collection had to be kept together and named the "John Boyd Thacher collection"; also that in case any provision of the will was not respected the books should revert to the estate.

There was an effort to set aside the will on the ground that its provisions had not been carried out. In the lower court the Government was sustained on the ground that the conditions of the will had been carried out. The case was appealed to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia and a decision has just been rendered upholding the position of the lower court and sustaining the position of the Government that the conditions of the will had been respected. Consequently the very valuable collection will be retained in the permanent possession and ownership of the Library of Congress.

The opinion of the court is a most valuable statement, and the country generally will be interested in reading it, I am sure. Rather than leave it to the limited files of the court records, I would like to have it printed in the RECORD so that readers of the RECORD may have the opportunity to read it. I ask unanimous consent that the opinion of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the opinion was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA No. 5728

GEORGE CURTIS TREADWELL AND HUGH REILLY, AS EXECUTORS OF THE WILL OF EMMA TREADWELL THACHER, AND LAURA BUTLER TREADWELL, EXECUTRIX OF THE WILL OF GEORGE CURTIS TREADWELL, DECEASED, APPELLANTS, v. HERBERT PUTNAM, APPELLEE

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

(Argued April 3 and 4, 1933. Decided May 15, 1933)

Richard H. Wilmer, Douglas L. Hatch, and Bethuel M. Webster, all of Washington, D.C., and C. Dickerman Williams, of New York City, for appellants.

Leo A. Rover, John W. Fihelly, and John J. Wilson, all of Washington, D.C., for appellee.

Before Martin, chief justice, and Robb, Van Orsdel, and Groner, associate justices.

Groner, associate justice: The parties occupy the same position here as below, and we shall speak of them as plaintiffs and defendant.

Mrs. Emma Treadwell Thacher, the widow of John Boyd Thacher, formerly lived in Albany, N.Y. She died February 18, 1927, leaving a last will dated in 1925, in which she bequeathed to the United States a valuable collection of books, autographs, manuscripts, and documents, then in the possession of the Library of Congress, where she had deposited it as a loan some 15 years prior to her death.

The fifth paragraph of her will is as follows:

"I give and bequeath to the United States of America all the books which formerly composed that part of the library of my late husband, John Boyd Thacher, which is now contained in the Library of Congress in the city of Washington in the District of Columbia; also, all autograph letters, manuscripts, and documents written or subscribed by the kings and queens or other rulers of England, Germany, Spain, and Italy, including the Popes of Rome, and the rulers of France, including the Napoleonic collection; also, all the books and pamphlets on, or relating to, the subject of the French Revolution and the special collection of autographs, autograph letters, and documents relating to that subject, all owned by my late husband, John Boyd Thacher, at the time of his death and thereafter acquired and now owned by me and which have not been otherwise disposed of by me at the time of my death or by any other provisions of this my last will and testament or any codicil or codicils thereto; upon condition, however, that said books, pamphlets, autographs, autograph letters, and documents shall be kept together and maintained as an entire collection to be always included with and as a part of the library formerly belonging to the said John Boyd Thacher now in the Library of Congress in the city of Washington in the District of Columbia, known and to be always known and designated as the 'Collection of John Boyd Thacher' and forever held by the United States of America under such name and designation in said Library of Congress in the custody of its Librarian; provided further, that said Librarian of Congress shall prepare and publish, in such form as shall be approved of by my executors, a catalog of said books, pamphlets, autographs, autograph letters, and documents, unless a satisfactory catalog of the same shall be so prepared and published by me during my lifetime; and provided further, that all possible precautions necessary for the preservation and safety of the same shall be applied and observed at all times by the proper officials and representatives of the Government of the United States of America."

In October 1930 this replevin suit was instituted in the court below to recover from the defendant, the Librarian of Congress, the collection of books and documents referred to in the above paragraph of the will. The declaration alleges that the collection was at the time of Mrs. Thacher's death and since in the possession of defendant; that defendant had been notified by the executors of the will of its terms; that he assented to the conditions of the legacy but had not fulfilled them; and that demand for return of the collection had been made and refused.

Paragraph 7 of the will specifically provides for a reversion of the legacy in the event the United States shall not faithfully and fully observe the terms and conditions prescribed by the will, or perform any of the requirements imposed for the care, preservation, and safety of the collection; and paragraph 14 of the will gives the residue of the estate to George Curtis Treadwell, the nephew of the testatrix and one of the executors of the will.

The case was tried to a jury, but at the conclusion of the evidence, on motion of both parties for a directed verdict, the court instructed the jury in favor of the defendant. Prior to this action, the court had made special findings of fact; among others, that the United States had observed all proper precautions, necessary for the preservation of the collection; that the executors had never consented, prior to the 6th day of September 1929, to the United States retaining as its own the articles bequeathed; that on that date demand for the return of the articles having been made by the executors and refused by the defendant, the complete title passed to the United States; that prior thereto the defendant neither understood nor believed, nor had reasonable cause to understand or believe, that complete title had passed to the United States. The court concluded from this that the duty with relation to the segregation and cataloging of the collection did not arise until September 1929. The court also found that the collection, consisting of five groups, was up to September 1929 in various parts of the Library building, but that at all times since Mrs. Thacher's death had been known and designated as the "John Boyd Thacher collection"; that since March 1930 it had all been kept together and maintained as an entire collection in the Thacher room; that the catalog published by the Library of the incunabula was a satisfactory compliance with the terms of the will in relation to that subject; and that the catalog of the other articles had been begun within a reasonable time and copies submitted to the executors, and the whole finally published in 1931.

We find in the record 170 assignments of error, and these we have examined patiently, but we do not need to refer to them each separately, if for no other reason, because counsel have condensed the argument so that it is really only necessary to decide whether there was evidence sufficient to raise an issue of fact for the jury as to compliance with the terms of the will, which, of course, involves deciding whether the court below was correct in taking the case from the jury and entering judgment for the defendant.

We have carefully read all of the evidence and have reached in the main the same conclusion reached by the lower court.

As we have already had occasion to say, the Thacher collection had been turned over by Mrs. Thacher to the Library of Congress many years prior to her death. She visited the Library on a number of occasions and inspected the arrangement of the different groups in the building. She therefore knew how the collection was arranged. Some 10 years before her death the Librarian caused to be prepared a catalogue of the incunabula, as to which she expressed her enthusiastic approval. In her will carrying out a purpose she had previously expressed, she gave the collection to the United States on the conditions mentioned in her will. The conditions were that the collection should be maintained as an entirety and be designated as the "Collection of John Boyd Thacher", and that the Librarian should prepare and publish with the approval of the executors a catalog of the books, pamphlets, autographs, and documents, unless such catalog had been previously prepared and published during her lifetime, and also that the safety of the collection should be preserved at all times in all proper ways.

In the early part of March 1927 counsel for the executors sent defendant a copy of Mrs. Thacher's will. To this letter defendant replied that the conditions of the bequest would be met. His attitude in this respect has never changed. The will was probated some 2 months later, in the early summer of 1927. Between these two dates there was some correspondence between counsel for executors and defendant, the purpose being to determine whether all the papers, autographs, etc., bequeathed in the will were then in the possession of the Library, and, particularly in the later correspondence, whether the Library had possession of articles not bequeathed under the will. In this exchange of communications counsel for the executors wrote to the defendant that if the Library already had in its possession all the things bequeathed, there would then remain only the formal transfer to be made; and the defendant on his part, acknowledging on behalf of the United States possession of all the property bequeathed, agreed that nothing more remained to be done than the formal transfer. Obviously at this time both parties contemplated some method of transferring complete title, but the formality never was observed. In the meantime the property remained just as it had been for more than 15 years. About this time counsel for the executors requested the defendant to furnish a list of all the property in the hands of the Librarian for the purpose of assisting the executors in the preparation of an inventory and appraisal, stating that at a later time it would be necessary to obtain an expert evaluation of the property for the purposes of administration. In midsummer of 1927 the correspondence with relation to the appraisal continued and defendant was notified that the executors and their counsel contemplated a visit to Washington after the inventory and appraisal had been finished. Equally obviously the executors still considered as of this time some further duty on their part to make the bequest effective. The record discloses that though the inventory was finished and a tentative appraisal made, the promised visit of the executors was postponed until midsummer of 1929, when, to quote from the testimony of counsel for the executors, "the trouble started." The date was August 1929.

From this brief statement of the facts we think it is clear that up to the time the breach is alleged to have occurred nothing was done by the executors of Mrs. Thacher to vest complete and absolute title in the United States, and in this view the court below was quite correct in thinking the Librarian of Congress was justified in his belief that when the administration of the estate was sufficiently advanced the executors would deliver to the Government some sort of instrument formally relinquishing claim of the executors to the property. We are not able to find in the record a statement of the executors' accounts with the probate court in New York, and we are therefore not informed when the estate was settled, but it is perfectly clear that in the latter part of 1927 and near the beginning of 1928 they were in correspondence with the Librarian for the purpose of getting data to include in the report to enable them to close the administration. After that time they continued inactive, so far as the bequest here is concerned, until the visit in the summer of 1929 and the demand in September of that year.

All of the parties agree that under the law title to a specific legacy vests in the legatee upon the death of the testator. All agree likewise that the title which then vests is not complete, as the property is subject to contribution for the testator's debts; that it only becomes complete upon the assent by the executor; and that this assent may be express or implied. Undoubtedly this is the rule. When the property is in the possession of a legatee, acquiescence by the executors in continued possession is ordinarily sufficient to imply assent. Here we have a case in which it is not claimed there was an express assent and in which, as we have seen, there was in the early stages of the administration correspondence between the representative of the legatee on the one hand and the executors on the other—the one located in Washington and the others in New York—looking to the appraisal of the property in the proper settlement of the estate.

These things tended to delay the formal transfer and equally to delay the operation of the rule of implied transfer. In these circumstances it would be going very far to say that the silence and inaction of the executors during all of this period were sufficient to authorize defendant to proceed to carry out at once the provisions of the will. And we think the record clearly contradicts the idea that the executors themselves so understood, for after the trouble began in the summer of 1929 there were three or four demands by the executors for the delivery of specific articles then in the possession of the Librarian. The Librarian complied with these demands to the extent of over 250 items. All of this merely tends to prove the uncertainty that surrounded the final carrying out of the terms of Mrs. Thacher's will. While by the terms of the will the United States is required to maintain the collection in the way designated by the testatrix, the will itself sets no specific time for the performance of these conditions, and in such circumstances the universal holding is that the law will imply a reasonable time. Appellant does not deny that this is true but insists that the reasonable time had expired at the time of the demand. This position, we think, should not be conceded.

The preparation of the catalog which the will provides should be made was completed in 1931. It took nearly 2 years in its preparation. The collection has been brought together as directed by the will and marked as directed by the will, and though most of this occurred subsequent to the demand in 1929, and though concededly some of the things required to be done might have been done within a shorter period, yet, in view of the circumstances, we think the Librarian was wholly justified in delaying final and complete compliance with the exact terms of the will until he was assured that no claims from any source would be asserted against the collection in his possession. In this view it is unnecessary, we think, to draw any dead line as to which to say that delivery and vesting of title was complete. Obviously such a time was not, as insisted by appellant, a few months after the probate of the will. If the question were necessary to a decision of the case, it would not be going too far to say that until after the expiration of a year from the probate of the will (the usual period for settlement), or until after the final settlement of the accounts of the executor in the court of administration, no implied assent on their part to the transfer could be said to arise. And if we should adopt one or the other of these dates as the period when the bequest definitely and finally vested, the time between either and actual compliance with the conditions was entirely reasonable. To reach a different conclusion would be unjustifiable and would have the effect to frustrate the obvious intention of the testatrix.

It is impossible to read the evidence and correspondence between Mrs. Thacher and the defendant and not be struck with evidences of her pride in the collection by her distinguished husband of these historical papers and equally of her desire to maintain in his honor the collection entire for the benefit of posterity. She could have chosen no better instrumentality for this than the great Library to which she committed the property, and it is unthinkable, if she had been alive, she would ever have complained, much less canceled her gift and abandoned her purpose because the designated arrangement of the collection in the Library was delayed. But, as we have already said, we are not even prepared to go to the extent of saying there was any delay, or, if there was, that it was the fault of defendant. On a fair consideration of his attitude and actions we see nothing to criticize, and certainly nothing to condemn. He was eager to have the collection of Mrs. Thacher preserved, and received the bequest with the purpose of discharging fully the terms on which she gave it. He has done so, and it would be wholly arbitrary to say that the time required for this, in the circumstances we have narrated, was unreasonable.

Having reached this conclusion, we find it unnecessary to discuss the question as to whether this is in fact a suit against the United States, or another question, discussed elaborately at the bar, whether, on the motion by each side for a directed verdict, defendant is not now foreclosed by the findings of fact of the lower court.

The judgment of the lower court is affirmed.
Affirmed.

INTERNATIONAL PROBLEMS THAT FACE PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT— ADDRESS BY FREDERICK J. LIBBY

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, Mr. Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, a consistent and effective friend of peace, delivered an address in Denver, Colo., March 13, 1933, on the subject of international problems. I ask leave to have that address printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The world is the economic unit. This is the central fact of our times. It is a fact to which our national policies and those of other nations must be adjusted before any of us can prosper. It needs to become central in our thinking before we can justify call ourselves realists. It is a factor with which the new Chancellor of Germany will find eventually that he must reckon. It will prove in the long run to be of far greater importance to Japan than her present leaders have yet recognized. A blind economic and militaristic nationalism has been reeking its will on the world and the appalling consequences are felt in every household. Unemployment not only destroys material values; it attacks human values.

We have been defying economic law. A thousand economists warned the President and Congress that the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill was fundamentally wrong, but the bill was passed. Other nations followed our lead. Economic warfare has been raging throughout the world. It has been nearly as ruinous as military warfare. A reversal of policy is now generally recognized as necessary.

THE ECONOMIC DEPENDENCE OF THE UNITED STATES

We must establish beyond peradventure of a doubt this central fact of the world's economic unity. The research department of the National Council for Prevention of War has prepared an economic survey of our dependence upon other countries, both by States and cities and by industries. I will quote from the study by industries, since it is the more dramatic of the two.

Our automobile industry is generally regarded among us as peculiarly American. Yet our automobile industry depends upon 18 countries for essential materials that go into the automobile. From Algeria and Spain comes cork; from Asia Minor, mohair; from Australia, molybdenum; from Bolivia and Borneo, tin; from Borneo and Brazil, rubber; from Brazil and Russia, manganese; from Canada, nickel, as well as arsenic, an ingredient of the glass; from China, more molybdenum, which is used in giving hardness to steel, and tungsten; from France, aluminum and talc; from India, shellac; from New Caledonia, chrome; from Peru, vanadium; and so on. Some of these imported materials could be obtained, though at a higher cost, in the United States, and some of the essential ones do not exist here. But the net result is that our automobile is in reality a world automobile, which our factories put together.

The same situation holds for practically all our important industries. Our clothing industry uses imported materials from 21 countries. Even the buttons come mostly from abroad. Our electrical industry depends upon 17 countries for its raw materials. Our furniture industry uses imported materials from 25 countries, our leather industry from 22, our hardware industry from 25, our drug and tobacco industries from 27, our stationery-supplies industry from 24. Our grocers sell imported foodstuffs from 21 countries or more. A simple little luncheon was set upon the table recently in Tacoma, Wash., the ingredients of which came from 24 countries. Our radio industry uses imported materials from 18 countries and our telephone instrument contains material from 15 countries. There are those who have thought that building a spiritual tariff wall, if one may so term it, on top of our present material tariff walls with a "buy American" campaign would improve our condition. This campaign comes a century too late. If we were willing to give up our telephone, our radios, our electric lights, our automobiles, a large share of the contents of our tables and of our clothing, and go back to the simplicity of the log cabin and homespun days, we might be successful in "buying American." But we are not looking toward such a lowering of our standards of living. We want rather to improve them.

OUR EXPORT TRADE TELLS THE SAME STORY

Our economic nationalists have been inclined to tell us that a reduction of 10 percent in our production would make us self-contained. It is true that in dollars our exports have been approximately one tenth of our production, but they are unevenly distributed. Fifty percent of our cotton was exported in 1929 and it ranges around that figure every year. No one can expect the Southern States to reduce their cotton production 50 percent in an attempt to produce nationally only what we consume.

In the same year 41 percent of our tobacco was exported, 33 percent of our lard, 18 percent of our wheat, 36 percent of our copper, 35 percent of our kerosene, 31 percent of our lubricating oil.

The same is true of our machinery. Twenty-three percent of our agricultural machinery was exported that year; 29 percent of our printing machinery; 30 percent of our sewing machines; 41 percent of our typewriters; 50 percent of our motorcycles.

Even the machine with which "Buy British" is stamped upon the letters of our English friends in a similar campaign is made in America. "Buy American" is printed by the Hearst press largely on paper made from Canadian wood pulp. The world is the economic unit; and if we wish to maintain and improve our present standards of living, the world will be the economic unit increasingly as the years unroll. The frank acceptance of this central fact must be the background of the Roosevelt foreign policies, just because escape from our present economic conditions is the primary task that we have laid upon the new administration.

HOOVER'S "THREE ROADS" TO RECOVERY

President Hoover in his valedictory address in New York on February 13, in what seemed to me to be a generous and patriotic preparation for his successor, pointed the way to a policy of international cooperation with tariff reduction, which makes non-partisan support of the Roosevelt program easy. Mr. Hoover said:

"Daily it becomes more certain that the next great constructive step in remedy of the illimitable human suffering from this depression lies in the international field. * * *

"The American people will soon be at the fork of three roads. The first is the highway of cooperation among nations, thereby to remove the obstructions to world consumption and rising prices. This road leads to real stability, to expanding standards of living, to a resumption of the march of progress by all peoples. It is today the immediate road to relief of agriculture and unemployment, not alone for us but the entire world.

"The second road is to rely upon our high degree of national self-containment, to increase our tariffs, to create quotas and discriminations, and to engage in definite methods of curtailment of production of agricultural and other products, and thus to secure a larger measure of economic isolation from world influences. It would be a long road of readjustments into unknown and uncertain fields. But it may be necessary if the first way out is closed to us. Some measures may be necessary pending cooperative conclusions with other nations.

"The third road is that we inflate our currency, consequently abandon the gold standard, and with our depreciated currency attempt to enter a world economic war, with the certainty that leads to complete destruction, both at home and abroad."

1. REDUCTION OF TARIFFS BY INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT

Having built now our solid foundation, we are in position to rear the superstructure; and first comes reduction of tariffs by international agreement, removing the first of what President Hoover calls "the obstructions to world consumption." Every nation has surrounded itself with a tariff wall as if it were a unit. But the world is the unit. Tariff walls are competitive. We build; they build. There is no winning this race. I remember going once for $90 round trip from Portland, Maine, to California. Our railroads were engaged in a rate war. It profited none of them. No more has the economic war of the past few years profited any nation. Economic laws are as inexorable as God's moral laws are. You can't defy God in any field and win. Reduction of tariffs, first by negotiation with a nation at a time and later in a general economic conference, is in the very nature of things the first item on the Roosevelt program of permanent recovery.

2. STABILIZATION OF CURRENCIES

As a necessary accompaniment of reduction of tariffs comes stabilization of currencies. Fluctuating currencies are a deadly foe to international trade. More than 40 nations are off the gold standard. Stabilization of currencies is the second necessary item in an intelligent program for world recovery. President Roosevelt, to improve our economic condition, has the task not only of increasing the purchasing power of our own farmers but of increasing the purchasing power and therefore the prosperity of the entire world.

3. DEBT READJUSTMENT

It is my belief that Secretary Cordell Hull is right in believing that the war debts have been exaggerated among the obstructions to world trade. Senator BORAH said the same thing last summer in Minneapolis. He was probably correct in saying that the outright cancellation of the debts would hardly touch the worldwide depression if it were an isolated act.

But that reduction of the debts is an essential part of a general program of world recovery, no one can deny. The shells have been fired, the food has been eaten, for which the debts stand. Now they constitute a great mountain at one end of what is normally a two-way road. We don't want the goods that we should have to take, over and above our normal imports, to pay these debts.

President Roosevelt has indicated that he will use these debts in bargaining. Three nations have "nuisances" to trade. We have the debts; the British have their depreciated and controlled currency; the French, their armaments. President Roosevelt evidently intends that all three nuisances shall be abated together as a part of a general program of world recovery.

4. DISARMAMENT

There is no argument against the drastic reduction of the world's present armaments by international agreement. Four thousand million dollars a year is too much for the world to be spending on what it vainly calls "national defense." Armaments, like tariffs, are competitive. We build; they build. No one can win this race any more than one can win a race in tariffs. And it has always led to war.

President Hoover proposed in June a one-third cut in armaments with abolition of the weapons of attack. He named specifically for abolition bombing planes, poison gas, disease germs, tanks, heavy mobile artillery, and submarines.

Other proposals have been made to the Disarmament Conference. The latest is that of Prime Minister MacDonald, which deals with the reduction of the armies of Western Europe to a maximum figure of 200,000 men each, with an extra allowance of colonial troops.

President Roosevelt has recognized the crucial importance of success in the reduction of armaments by giving Mr. Norman H. Davis the rank of an ambassador and pledging him strong support in his efforts.

Success in reduction of armaments is economically of vital importance from two standpoints. In the first place, no nation, not even the United States, can afford to spend what is now being spent upon competitive armies and navies. The United States is leading the world in its outlays for national defense, outstripping its nearest rival, Great Britain, by more than $100,000,000 a year. We need this money now for constructive purposes.

Still more important economically is the instability that results from competitive armaments. Even Mussolini has recognized this, and, despite his provoking speeches, he has volunteered to join with Great Britain, France, and Germany in guaranteeing the peace of Europe for 10 years. He wants Italy to prosper and no one knows better than he does that only a stable Europe can recover from this depression.

There is another reason why success in the Disarmament Conference has become of great importance to all nations. This is the fact recently publicly recognized by the British Government, that an economic conference cannot succeed unless the Disarmament Conference succeeds. The powerful interests in whose behalf tariffs have been imposed will fight tariff reductions. Success at Geneva must precede success at London.

5. ADHERENCE TO THE WORLD COURT

Only a stable world can be a prosperous world. Only an organized world can be a stable world. If the use of war as a method of settling disputes is to be prevented, law must be established in its place. This has been the position taken by American statesmen and by all the American Presidents for 35 years. Ever since the American delegation worked at the first Hague conference for the setting up of a World Court similar to our Supreme Court. International disputes are bound to be frequent in our kind of world. Conflicts of interest are inevitable as far as one can see ahead into the dark. Our Supreme Court was set up, not after the disputes between our States had been settled but as a method of settling part of them—that part that is susceptible of judicial settlement.

All political parties in the last campaign endorsed America's adherence to the World Court. There is no important opposition to it in the country outside the Hearst press. Few Senators now oppose it. It is a step in international cooperation on which the country is thoroughly prepared to go forward.

President Roosevelt has already indicated, through Senator ROBINSON of Arkansas, that he includes adherence to the World Court in his program of world recovery to be adopted at this session. The stabilizing effect of our adding our full moral support now to this branch of the international-peace machinery will be obvious to anyone who reads the newspapers. It is reasonable to hope that this long-drawn-out fight is to be pushed by the President to an early conclusion. A successful vote under his leadership is assured.

6. RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA

Frequent rumors are coming from Washington to the effect that our Government will soon recognize Russia. This step is long overdue. As I said here a year ago, recognition of Russia involves no approval of communism. It makes possible, on the other hand, our sitting down with Russia at the table and settling our very real differences.

Secretary Hughes in 1923 laid down three conditions for Russian recognition: That Russia pay her governmental debts to us; that Russia pay for confiscated American property; and that Russia agree to abstain from carrying on communistic propaganda in our country. Russia replied at once that she was prepared to negotiate with us on this basis, but that she had a little debt of her own to present. It was the bill for our illegal expedition to Archangel, where for more than a year we maintained an army without declaration of war, killing Russian citizens and destroying Russian property. You will remember that a year or so ago we brought home the American dead.

There are three reasons why we should recognize Russia now: First, we need Russia's trade. Russia's purchase of American goods has fallen off $100,000,000 between 1930 and 1932. Germany and Great Britain have got this trade. France and even Italy are trading with Russia officially.

More important than this, however, although this is not unimportant in our present economic condition, is the stabilizing influence that our recognition of Russia now would have upon conditions both in Europe and in the Orient. The reasoning that makes it important that we adhere to the World Court applies equally to our recognition of Russia. We need a stable world in which to recover economically; and for two great nations like Russia and the United States to be unable to speak to each other encourages chaos and not stability.

In the third place, we are committed by the Paris Pact to the principle of settling all our disputes at the table. Our issues with Russia can be settled by negotiation. They can never be settled by the methods which we have been pursuing.

It is strongly to be hoped, therefore, that the rumors that our policy toward Russia is to be reversed in the near future are justified.

7. AMENDMENT OF THE PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE BILL

The Filipinos hope to secure improvements in the Philippine independence bill which Congress passed in the last session over President Hoover's veto. Have you read the Philippine independence bill? If you have, I believe that you will agree with me that it can be amended with advantage in certain particulars. I will venture to suggest three.

In the first place, in preparing our ward to go into business for itself, we certainly want at least to be just and if possible generous in the financial arrangements. When you examined the tariff relations that are to subsist between the Philippines and the United States during the next 10 years or more, you were undoubtedly aware of the fact that the program is more favorable to us than to the Philippines. In other words, we have taken advantage of our power in a manner that, I believe, does not express the true spirit of the American people. Ought we not, rather, to make the tariff arrangements equitable and reciprocal, as we shall undoubtedly try to do with other nations in the approaching Economic Conference? This is my first suggestion.

In the second place, did you observe the inconsistency of reserving a naval and military base for ourselves after independence has been granted, with the provision for the neutralization of the islands under a guaranty from the Pacific powers? If the Philippines are to be neutralized, as I hope they will, then we can have no naval base there.

Moreover, our present naval base in the Philippines is, as every Navy man on the coast will tell you, quite inadequate for their protection from a power like Japan. In the Washington Treaty of 1922 we gave up further fortification of the Philippines or of Guam in the interest of peace and general reduction of naval armaments. Japan could capture the Philippines tomorrow if she wanted to and we could not prevent it. An inadequate naval base is more dangerous, both for the Philippines and for us, than none at all. Its capture by Japan would probably involve both the United States and the Philippines in another war for "national honor."

For these reasons, both because of its inconsistency with neutralization and because of its inherent danger, this provision for a naval base ought to be eliminated from the bill.

In the third place, we are allowing the Philippines an immigration quota of 50 a year during the period of tutelage and then are cutting them off entirely. Wouldn't it be better to continue permanently the quota of 50? We hope to retain the good will of the Philippines after letting them go and to continue our trade with them in the happiest of relations throughout all future time. Is it good business sense, not to stay friendly, to slap their faces when we bid them good-bye? In my judgment, it would be far better in every way if Japan and China, as well as the Philippines, were permitted their small immigration quotas of 186 and 100 a year, respectively, instead of suffering exclusion.

8. OUR POLICY TOWARD JAPAN'S ACTION IN MANCHURIA

It is generally understood that President Roosevelt will continue the policy which President Hoover inaugurated toward Japan's action in Manchuria, involving nonrecognition of any situation growing out of a violation of the Paris Pact and consultation with the other signatories of the pact when faced with the violation or the threat of its violation. In pursuance of this policy the President has appointed Hugh Wilson to sit with the Committee of Twenty-one, though without a vote, in the consultations as to possibilities of common action.

Secretary Stimson, in a prophetic speech which he made on August 8, 1932, before the Council on Foreign Relations in New York City, spoke of the "revolutionary" change in human thought that has taken place toward the war system as evidenced by the Covenant of the League of Nations and the Paris Pact, and then continued:

"War between nations was renounced by the signatories of the Briand-Kellogg Treaty. This means that it has become illegal throughout practically the entire world. It is no longer to be the source and subject of rights. It is no longer to be the principle around which the duties, the conduct, and the rights of nations revolve. It is an illegal thing. Hereafter when two nations engage in armed conflict either one or both of them must be wrongdoers, violators of this general treaty law. We no longer draw a circle about them and treat them with the punctilios of the duelist's code. Instead we denounce them as lawbreakers."

Secretary Stimson, later in the same speech, dated the turning point in the world's history as October 1929, when President Hoover and Ramsay MacDonald declared in a joint statement that the United States and Great Britain will direct their national policies in accordance with the Paris Pact. This passage in Secretary Stimson's speech reads as follows:

"In October 1929 President Hoover joined with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, the Prime Minister of Great Britain, in a joint statement at the Rapidan, in which they declared:

"* * * Both our Governments resolve to accept the peace pact, not only as a declaration of good intentions but as a positive obligation to direct national policy in accordance with its pledge."

"That declaration marked an epoch."

There is no doubt that the decision of the two most powerful countries to live by the Paris Pact is of outstanding importance to the future history of the world. But a more dramatic expression of the revolution that has taken place in the world's thinking about war occurred on February 24 at Geneva. Your children's children's children will study in their history textbooks the story of that day.

After full preparation, after sending an impartial commission to Manchuria, Japan, and China to report authoritatively on the facts and to make recommendations, a report that was received throughout the world, except in Japan and China, as both just and wise; after a Committee of Nineteen had built a report on that report, in which Japan was found guilty of this "illegal thing", going to war, and thus violating her international obligations, a report which was broadcast from the League of Nations radio station to all peoples; then that great town meeting of the world, the Assembly of the League of Nations, met to take action.

More than 40 nations were present. Japan was there, on trial among her peers. A roll call was demanded. The vote, mind you, was on the adoption of this report of the Committee of Nineteen, finding Japan guilty of this "illegal thing", going to war. The votes came, strong and without hesitation: "Aye", "aye", "oui", "oui", "aye." Forty nations voted "yes." Siam, for her own reasons, abstained from voting. Japan voted "no", but her vote was not counted because she was a party to the dispute. Then, found guilty by her peers, guilty of going to war and, therefore, of violating her international obligations, and unwilling to accept the good offices of her colleagues for the peaceful settlement of her disputes with China, Japan walked out alone into the dark.

Her guns have gone on thundering in Jehol, but they have a hollow sound. For Japan, even more than for us, the world is the economic unit. She can win against China on the military front, but she can never win against the world on the economic front. It is not a time for the use of drastic measures against Japan. As Walter Lippmann said in his illuminating column next day, the world can afford to wait better than Japan can. She will need the help of these nations whose good offices she has spurned. She will learn, as the French learned in the Ruhr district and as we learned in Nicaragua, that trade is not advanced by the bayonet. China's good will is essential to Japan's economic recovery. Militarists are driving Japan toward economic ruin. By and by wiser leaders are going to restore her to the only sane path for any nation today—the highway of international cooperation.

President Roosevelt was wise in not making our foreign policies a subject of campaign controversy. He thus left himself free to follow, as he is following, the course laid down by the previous administration of maintaining the sanctity of international obligations as the only possible basis of continuing peace.

SUMMARY

Summing up, the old order was based on the preposition "against." We built tariff walls "against" the rest. We armed "against" the rest. We sought our prosperity at the expense of the rest. We sought national security "against" that of the rest. The consequences of our folly are all about us.

The slogan of the new order is the preposition "with." We must work "with" the rest to lower our tariff walls and to reduce by agreement our intolerable and menacing armaments, to achieve a joint prosperity and joint security.

Not by warfare, military or economic, but only by cooperation can we build a nobler, happier, richer civilization.

SALARY SCHEDULES OF BANKS, RAILROADS, PUBLIC UTILITIES, ETC.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of a resolution which is lying on the table, being Senate Resolution 75, as modified.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Colorado asks unanimous consent for the consideration of a resolution, which the clerk will read for the information of the Senate.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution (S.Res. 75) submitted by Mr. COSTIGAN on the 8th instant, as modified, as follows:

Resolved, That the Federal Reserve Board is requested to prepare and transmit to the Senate as soon as practicable a report showing the salary schedule of the executive officers and directors of each Federal Reserve bank and member bank of the Federal Reserve System; be it further

Resolved, That the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is requested to prepare and transmit to the Senate as soon as practicable a report showing the salary schedule of the executive officers and directors of each bank not a member of the Federal Reserve System to which loans or advances have been made by the Corporation; be it further

Resolved, That the Federal Power Commission is requested to prepare and transmit to the Senate as soon as practicable a report showing the salary schedule of the executive officers and directors of each public-utility corporation engaged in the transportation of electrical energy in interstate commerce and of all other corporations licensed under the Federal Water Power Act; and be it further

Resolved, That the Federal Trade Commission is requested to prepare and transmit to the Senate as soon as practicable a report showing the salary schedule of the executive officers and directors of each corporation engaged in interstate commerce (other than public-utility corporations) having capital and/or assets of more than a million dollars in value, whose securities are listed on the New York Stock Exchange or the New York Curb Exchange.

For the purposes of this resolution the term "salary" includes any compensation, fee, bonus, commission, or other payment, direct or indirect, in money or otherwise, for personal services.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, a number of Senators have left the Chamber upon the theory that no further business would be transacted today other than executive business. Very few, I think, have had an opportunity to read the resolution. I do not know whether there would be any opposition to it; but, in view of the situation which I have just suggested, I shall have to object to its present consideration.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, may I ask that the resolution, in its modified form, be printed in the RECORD?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution has been read as modified and will appear in the RECORD. Objection is made to its present consideration.

WORLD POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC PEACE (H.DOC. NO. 36)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

To the Congress:

For the information of the Congress I am sending herewith a message that I have addressed this morning to the sovereigns and presidents of those nations participating in the Disarmament Conference and the World Monetary and Economic Conference.

I was impelled to this action because it has become increasingly evident that the assurance of world political and economic peace and stability is threatened by selfish and short-sighted policies, actions, and threats of actions.

The sincere wish for this assurance by an overwhelming majority of the nations faces the danger of recalcitrant obstruction by a very small minority, just as in the domestic field the good purposes of a majority in business, labor, or in other cooperative efforts are often frustrated by a selfish few.

The deep-rooted desire of Americans for better living conditions and for the avoidance of war is shared by mass humanity in every country. As a means to this end I have, in the message to the various nations, stressed the practical necessity of reducing armaments. It is high time for us and for every other nation to understand the simple fact that the invasion of any nation or the destruction of a national sovereignty can be prevented only by the complete elimination of the weapons that make such a course possible today.

Such an elimination will make the little nation relatively more secure against the great nation.

Furthermore, permanent defenses are a nonrecurring charge against governmental budgets, while large armies continually rearmed with improved offensive weapons constitute a recurring charge. This more than any other factor today is responsible for governmental deficits and threatened bankruptcy.

The way to disarm is to disarm. The way to prevent invasion is to make it impossible.

I have asked for an agreement among nations on four practical and simultaneous steps:

First. That through a series of steps the weapons of offensive warfare be eliminated.

Second. That the first definite step be taken now.

Third. That while these steps are being taken no nation shall increase existing armaments over and above the limitations of treaty obligations.

Fourth. That subject to existing treaty rights no nation during the disarmament period shall send any armed force of whatsoever nature across its own borders.

Our people realize that weapons of offense are needed only if other nations have them, and they will freely give them up if all the nations of the world will do likewise.

In the domestic field the Congress has labored in sympathetic understanding with me for the improvement of social conditions, for the preservation of individual human rights, and for the furtherance of social justice.

In the message to the nations which I herewith transmit, I have named the same objectives. It is in order to assure these great human values that we seek peace by ridding the world of the weapons of aggression and attack.

THE MESSAGE

A profound hope of the people of my country impels me, as the head of their Government, to address you and, through you, the people of your nation. This hope is that peace may be assured through practical measures of disarmament and that all of us may carry to victory our common struggle against economic chaos.

To these ends the nations have called two great world conferences. The happiness, the prosperity, and the very lives of the men, women, and children who inhabit the whole world are bound up in the decisions which their governments will make in the near future. The improvement of social conditions, the preservation of individual human rights, and the furtherance of social justice are dependent upon these decisions.

The World Economic Conference will meet soon and must come to its conclusions quickly. The world cannot await deliberations long drawn out. The conference must establish order in place of the present chaos by a stabilization of currencies, by freeing the flow of world trade, and by international action to raise price levels. It must, in short, supplement individual domestic programs for economic recovery, by wise and considered international action.

The Disarmament Conference has labored for more than a year and, as yet, has been unable to reach satisfactory conclusions. Confused purposes still clash dangerously. Our duty lies in the direction of bringing practical results through concerted action based upon the greatest good to the greatest number. Before the imperative call of this great duty, petty obstacles must be swept away and petty aims forgotten. A selfish victory is always destined to be an ultimate defeat. The furtherance of durable peace for our generation in every part of the world is the only goal worthy of our best efforts.

If we ask what are the reasons for armaments, which, in spite of the lessons and tragedies of the World War, are today a greater burden on the peoples of the earth than ever before, it becomes clear that they are twofold: First, the desire, disclosed or hidden, on the part of governments to enlarge their territories at the expense of a sister nation. I believe that only a small minority of governments or of peoples harbor such a purpose. Second, the fear of nations that they will be invaded. I believe that the overwhelming majority of peoples feel obliged to retain excessive armaments because they fear some act of aggression against them and not because they themselves seek to be aggressors.

There is justification for this fear. Modern weapons of offense are vastly stronger than modern weapons of defense. Frontier forts, trenches, wire entanglements, coast defenses—in a word, fixed fortifications—are no longer impregnable to the attack of war planes, heavy mobile artillery, land battleships called "tanks", and poison gas.

If all nations will agree wholly to eliminate from possession and use the weapons which make possible a successful attack, defenses automatically will become impregnable and the frontiers and independence of every nation will become secure.

The ultimate objective of the Disarmament Conference must be the complete elimination of all offensive weapons. The immediate objective is a substantial reduction of some of these weapons and the elimination of many others.

This Government believes that the program for immediate reduction of aggressive weapons, now under discussion at Geneva, is but a first step toward our ultimate goal. We do not believe that the proposed immediate steps go far enough. Nevertheless, this Government welcomes the measures now proposed and will exert its influence toward the attainment of further successive steps of disarmament.

Stated in the clearest way, there are three steps to be agreed upon in the present discussions:

First. To take, at once, the first definite step toward this objective, as broadly outlined in the MacDonald plan.

Second. To agree upon time and procedure for taking the following steps.

Third. To agree that while the first and the following steps are being taken no nation shall increase its existing armaments over and above the limitations of treaty obligations.

But the peace of the world must be assured during the whole period of disarmament, and I, therefore, propose a fourth step concurrent with and wholly dependent on the faithful fulfillment of these three proposals and subject to existing treaty rights:

That all the nations of the world should enter into a solemn and definite pact of nonaggression. That they should solemnly reaffirm the obligations they have assumed to limit and reduce their armaments and, provided these obligations are faithfully executed by all signatory powers, individually agree that they will send no armed force of whatsoever nature across their frontiers.

Common sense points out that if any strong nation refuses to join with genuine sincerity in these concerted efforts for political and economic peace—the one at Geneva and the other at London—progress can be obstructed and ultimately blocked. In such event the civilized world, seeking both forms of peace, will know where the responsibility for failure lies. I urge that no nation assume such a responsibility, and that all the nations joined in these great conferences translate their professed policies into action. This is the way to political and economic peace.

I trust that your Government will join in the fulfillment of these hopes.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

TAX-FREE CITIES, ETC.—ARTICLE BY LOUIS BARTLETT

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article by Louis Bartlett, appearing in the Nation of May 17, 1933, entitled "Tax-Free Cities—Public Profits from Municipal Power."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Nation, May 17, 1933]

TAX-FREE CITIES—PUBLIC PROFITS FROM MUNICIPAL POWER

By Louis Bartlett

Eighty-four cities in the United States levy no taxes, yet perform all the functions of ordinary cities, and keep out of debt. There is nothing extraordinary in their location or natural advantages; they pay operating expenses, as many efficient factories do, from their by-products, and they keep expenses down by cutting out waste. These cities range in population from a few hundred to over 20,000, and are located in 16 States. Oklahoma has 55; Kansas, 7; Indiana, 3; Michigan, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Nebraska, 2 each; and Georgia, Texas, Vermont, Idaho, Washington, New York, New Jersey, and Wyoming, 1 each. It sounds too good to be true, but the fact is stubborn; these cities levy no taxes, yet they are efficiently run and furnish the services—police and fire protection, streets, sewers, and schools—that well-managed modern towns need.

How is this possible, when most American cities are reducing salaries, cutting down improvements, neglecting upkeep, and at the same time struggling under a load of taxes in many cases too heavy to bear, as the delinquency lists show? The answer is simple. These cities use the profits from the sale of municipal water, gas, and electricity, which would otherwise go to private companies, to carry on police, educational, and other nonrevenue-producing services. In reality what citizens pay for public-utility services is a tax; but we are not used to calling it that, because it is not paid at the city hall twice a year, but is turned over monthly to private companies which make a profit out of the transaction. More people pay for water, gas, and electricity than for the support of city, county, State, and National Governments; and they pay far more for these services than they pay in taxes to any governmental unit. To illustrate: In California the cost of the State government for the current year is $126,000,000; gas and electric bills alone amount to $188,000,000, or nearly 50 percent more. City governments in California cost $145,000,000 and county governments $123,000,000. If the cost of water, telephone, and transportation were added to the $188,000,000, the disproportion would be much greater. No study of taxation, therefore, is complete if it omits consideration of what is paid for essential services which are furnished by a duly licensed monopoly, in other words, by a public-utility company. Necessary services, such as the supplying of bread under a competitive system, are, of course, in a different category.

Do we pay a fair price for our gas and electricity? Are the private utility companies honest and efficient? Ask the stockholder in the Insull holding companies. He knows. So do the stockholders of most utility companies. Their stocks are being put through the wringer, and they are realizing that, with the water squeezed out, little remains. The first issuance of these so-called "securities" was a fraud on the public. But tons of paper and ink are still used to tell the world that the private companies which admittedly were dishonest in their stock dealings are honest and efficient in the management of their properties; that consumers receive from them good service at a fair price.

But the fact that cities owning their own systems get equally good service at lower rates will not down. Sometime ago Senator NORRIS introduced a graph into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD showing that the average rate for domestic electric service in 24 American cities over a period of 16 years was 7.4 cents per kilowatt-hour, while during the same period in Ontario, Canada, the average for 21 cities was 1.6 cents per kilowatt-hour. Since this study was made, prices under both public and private ownership have been reduced, but in about the same ratio.

Ambassador Frederick Sackett told the World Power Conference in Germany 2 years ago that there was something wrong with an industry that sold its product for 15 times its original cost.

Two thousand cities which own and distribute their own electric power have discovered what is wrong—the companies make excessive profits which they hide from the public in a maze of holding companies, fictitious capitalization, and juggled bookkeeping that would make the Cretan labyrinth look like a 4-track highway. And in order to keep people deluded, they employ all the arts of the propagandist and keep in pleasant personal touch with the leaders in every community—at the ratepayers' expense.

An interesting disclosure of how it is done came out recently in a rate hearing before the California Railroad Commission, when the San Joaquin Light & Power Co. was forced to give in detail all the items charged to its "operating expenses." It paid the following club dues and expenses for its employees: 22 in the Commercial Club, 5 in the Exchange Club, 4 in the Rotary Club, 1 in the Round Table, 5 in the Lions Club, 3 in the Bakersfield Club (outside of the territory it serves), 1 in the Optimists Club, 4 in the Engineers Club, 3 in the University-Sequoia Club, 1 in the Business Men's Club, 1 in the Petroleum Club, 1 in the Kiwanis Club, 4 in the Fresno City Farm Center, 7 in the Ad Club, 1 in the American Legion, 1 in the Dairymen's Club, 1 in the Press Club. And besides being a member of many of these clubs, the president of the company which operates in the vicinity of Fresno, 200 miles from San Francisco, had the ratepayers pay his club dues in the California Club, Commercial Club, Family Club, and Bohemian Club of San Francisco, as well as in other clubs lumped together under the title "miscellaneous." One wonders when he found the time to earn his salary of $22,900 a year.

No one is louder in the cause of good government than these club members; in fact, that is why they are members. They must be leaders in their respective communities and see that the towns are run "right." There must be no extravagance in city government; salaries must be kept down to the minimum. Especially in times of depression the pruning shears must be used freely to keep taxes down. They form "economy leagues", "taxpayers' associations", and similar organizations with patriotic titles, and enroll many good citizens who innocently think they are working for the community. Let us look closely at one of these organizations.

California, like other States, must pull in its belt. Since 1931 its government has been operating with the abandon of a flush mining camp and piling up a deficit. There is a legitimate place for organizations to study the cost of government and stimulate the legislature to reduce taxes. It is no wonder that the State Chamber of Commerce and the California Taxpayers Association assumed leadership in this direction. When the legislature met, the senate appointed a "fact-finding" committee on the cost of government which in 3 weeks made a survey of every department of the State government and of many county and city activities, and presented 400 bills to the legislature. It seemed a superhuman task for a small group, but it developed that they had been "assisted" by the California Taxpayers Association. According to the survey, salaries were to be cut to the bone, consolidations and eliminations were to be made, schools were to be curtailed. Among other things, the aggregate salaries of the seven supreme court justices were to be cut from $77,000 to $56,000, or from an average of $11,000 to $8,000 every year.

But who runs the California Taxpayers Association? Among its directors are the heads of the most important public-utility companies of the State. They want governmental taxes reduced. But what about the taxes they themselves collect in gas, electric, telephone, telegraph, and railway rates? Is this clamor for tax reduction a means of diverting attention from their own extravagance? One hesitates to say, but the list of salaries of over $5,000 a year recently reported to the California Legislature by the railroad commission is interesting, to say the least. A. F. Hockenbeamer, president of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co., the largest electric utility in the State, receives $75,000 a year, or enough to pay the seven salaries of the supreme court, at the figure his "California Taxpayers Association" thinks just, for a period of 1 year and 4 months; Paul Shoup, president of the Southern Pacific Railway Co., listed at $100,000, reported by the press to have been kicked upstairs at a salary of $125,000, gets enough to support the entire supreme court for 2 years.

Other presidential salaries reported are: Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co., $60,000; Southern California Gas Co., $50,000; Western Pacific Railroad, $43,500; Southern California Edison Co., $68,500. The total of salaries of over $11,500 paid by the last-named company would pay the reduced salaries of the seven supreme court justices for 7 years.

The presidents of these companies are generous to others as well. The Pacific Gas & Electric Co. pays 1 salary of $40,000; 7 of $21,600, 2 of $18,000, 7 more over $11,000—in all, 94 salaries over $5,000. The Southern California Edison Co. reports 1 of $45,500, 1 of $33,500, 1 of $27,500, 3 more over $15,500, 13 more over $11,500—in all, 82 over $5,000. The Southern Pacific Co., in addition to 1 salary of $125,000, pays 1 of $36,000, 1 of $35,000, 2 of $30,000, 2 of $25,000, 2 of $24,000, 1 of $20,000, 2 of $18,000, 3 of $15,000—in all, 160 over $5,000.

Even small electric utilities are solicitous for the welfare of their presidents. The Vallejo Electric Light & Power Co., generating no power and serving a small community, pays $15,000 a year to its president, not far from a dollar apiece from every man, woman, and child in the town.

These fine salaries should enable the companies to get the very best brains in the community, which should be reflected in good service and lower rates to the consumers. Service, in general, is good, but rates are another story. Exact comparison of rates is difficult to make, because each company has a policy all its own, usually making up its rates by adding to a minimum charge a price per kilowatt-hour which varies according to the quantity used. Such comparisons are not available in all the States, but I recently made such a study for the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco, published in its Transactions for June 1932. It may be said that the private companies' rates in California are lower on the average than those of companies operating elsewhere in the United States, though more than twice as high as the rates in Ontario, Canada, under public ownership. Twenty-one California cities own their own distributing systems, most of them buying power wholesale from the private companies. A comparison of domestic rates in these cities for lighting, heating, and cooking with those of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. shows that three small towns in the group charge slightly higher rates and that all the others charge less.

For instance, for $1 a month the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. gives 13 kilowatt-hours; Los Angeles, Glendale, and Burbank give 21. For $2 the Pacific Gas & Electric sells 37 kilowatt-hours; Palo Alto sells 46, Pasadena 47, Los Angeles 48, and Healdsburg 60; Ottawa, Ontario, sells 128; and Tacoma, Wash., 130. Much the same ratios are found in the amounts of current for domestic use that can be bought for $3, $5, or more per month, and apply also for energy for commercial lighting and industrial use. Los Angeles attributes a large part of its industrial growth to its cheap municipal power rates, which had to be met by private competitors.

These cheaper power rates would hardly justify the cities, however, if they caused a deficit which had to be met from taxes. That side of the picture should be examined also. Do the cities subsidize their electric plants? The report I have cited contains exact data on this subject. It was found that after paying all operating expenses, depreciation on the investment, interest on debt, and so on—all of the items except taxes that the private companies pay—the cities made the following net profits per annum: Pasadena 47 percent, Redding 46 percent, Anaheim 46 percent, Glendale 45 percent, Lodi 38 percent, Healdsburg 37 percent, Alameda 35 percent, Riverside 35 percent, Palo Alto 34 percent, Roseville 32 percent, Santa Clara 28 percent, Los Angeles 28 percent. Moreover, the least net profit was 19 percent, in Burbank, where the city has not a monopoly and must compete with the Southern California Edison Co. In California electric-utility taxes average about 10½ percent of gross receipts. After that item is deducted (for bookkeeping purposes) the cities, operating with low-paid management, make from 8½ percent net to 35½ percent net profit every year, the average being well over 20 percent.

This theoretical tax allowance of 10½ percent has no real significance, however, as all the net profit of the municipal plants is used for city purposes. None goes out as dividends. What the private companies pay is an involuntary contribution to the cost of government, which we call a tax; the profits on operation made by the cities are all voluntary contributions for the same ends, and remove the necessity for a tax to raise the amount of this contribution. These are the sums that make "tax-free cities." In California there are none such, for the cities have adopted the policy of reducing rates and thus giving a wider usefulness to electric energy, but as we have seen, even at the lower rates great profits are made. Some statistics gathered just before the crash by Bird and Ryan in their book, Public Ownership on Trial, show that the net profits of the public electric plants aggregate over 30 percent of the amount raised by taxation in the same cities. The results of later years show substantially the same percentage. The net profits of the public plants have suffered less from the depression than almost any private business, and their net profits are approximately the same as 3 or 4 years ago. Those cities which also distribute gas make a comparable showing, so that if we add to the profits made from the sale of electricity those to be made by selling gas and water and giving telephone service at fair rates, the mystery of the tax-free city is solved.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The VICE PRESIDENT. Reports of committees are in order.

Mr. DILL. From the Committee on the Judiciary I report back favorably for the second time the name of Charles Wyzanski, Jr., of Massachusetts, to be Solicitor of Labor.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the Senator is not going to ask for the confirmation of Mr. Wyzanski at this time?

Mr. DILL. No; I made no request in connection with the report.

Mr. DILL, from the same committee, also reported back favorably the nomination of George E. Hoffman, of Florida, to be United States attorney for the northern district of Florida.

Mr. KENDRICK, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, reported back favorably the nomination of Fred W. Johnson, of Wyoming, to be Commissioner of the General Land Office.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The nominations will be placed on the calendar.

Are there further reports of committees? If not, the calendar is in order.

THE CALENDAR—THE NAVY

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, pending further consideration of the Acheson case, I ask unanimous consent that the routine nominations in the Navy on the calendar may be confirmed en bloc.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

UNDER SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Dean G. Acheson, of Maryland, to be Under Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. COUZENS obtained the floor.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will my colleague yield to me?

Mr. COUZENS. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH in the chair). Ninety-one Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, I dislike very much to have to repeat. I dislike to have to listen to Senators who say the same thing over and over again. On last Friday evening, however, through the insistence of the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], we were required to proceed with the consideration of the nomination of Mr. Dean G. Acheson for Under Secretary of the Treasury. After reviewing the matter for nearly three quarters of an hour, we found that we had only 24 Senators present, and obviously we could not conclude the nomination that evening. Therefore it is apparent that, in all probability, not more than 20 or 25 Senators have read or heard the testimony with respect to the confirmation of Mr. Acheson. The testimony was taken by the Committee on Finance.

I do not intend to repeat all of the arguments I used last Friday evening against the confirmation of Mr. Acheson, but I do desire to draw to the attention of the Senate the testimony that was taken before the Finance Committee. I understand that the testimony has not been printed, and therefore it is not available, except as it appears in the RECORD.

When Mr. Acheson appeared before the Finance Committee, the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] was presiding, and he said:

Mr. Acheson, you have been nominated as Under Secretary of the Treasury, and the committee felt they wanted to look you over and might want to ask you some questions.

Mr. ACHESON. I am delighted to come up, Senator.

Mr. President, I am going to leave out some of the questions and answers that do not seem relevant.

Mr. Acheson said:

I was born in Connecticut and lived there until after the war. Then I came down to Washington as secretary for Mr. Justice Brandeis and intended to stay only a short time with him, and I stayed 2 years, and then went into Judge Covington's law firm and practiced law ever since. I have lived in Georgetown and have a house there. Then I bought this place in Sandy Springs, and we live there a little more than half the year.

Senator COUZENS. What was your practice when you were with Judge Covington?

Mr. ACHESON. I have been almost everything, Senator. I think we have a considerable tax practice. I myself have done most of the international law work. I went with the firm for that purpose in 1922. Our firm was representing the Norwegian Government in an arbitration with the United States that took place under the old Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague, and I prepared that case, which took a little over a year, and went to The Hague and presented it to the court with Mr. Burling, the senior partner.

Senator COUZENS. Have you practiced before the Bureau of Internal Revenue?

Mr. ACHESON. Yes, sir; I have been frequently before the Bureau. Senator COUZENS. Can you name offhand some of your clients?

Mr. ACHESON. It is hard to think of them now. Going backward—I am now representing Mr. James E. Davidson, of Bay City, Mich. That is my most recent thing. I was doing that up to a few days ago. Before that I represented Mr. Polk, publisher of the—

Senator COUZENS. Polk's Directory?

Mr. ACHESON. Polk's Directory. I represented the Bethlehem Steel Corporation in a case which originated—no, that did not originate in the Bureau. That was in the Court of Claims. These things have completely gone out of my mind.

Senator COUZENS. Perhaps you could get a list and give it to us later on, if it is more convenient?

Mr. ACHESON. That will be a very simple thing to do. They are largely individual taxpayers. There are some corporate taxpayers, but not very many.

Senator COUZENS. Are the cases still open or closed?

Mr. ACHESON. I think there are about three that are still open. The CHAIRMAN. Do you recall those cases that are still open?

Mr. ACHESON. Yes; there may be more than three. The ones that are still open are Mr. James Davidson, an estate tax case. There is the case of one of the partners of Price Waterhouse, a comparatively small one, which is still open. There is the case of an individual, Daniel Altland, of Detroit, which is still open.

Senator COUZENS. How did you come to get all of these Detroit cases? Most of everything seems to come from Michigan.

Mr. ACHESON. Mr. Bonchroon, who is a partner of Price Waterhouse, has been a friend of mine for a long time, and almost all the things he has here he sends to me.

The CHAIRMAN. Judge Covington, your law partner, was on the bench of the Supreme Court of the District here, was he not? He was chief justice?

Mr. ACHESON. Chief justice; yes, sir.

Senator BARKLEY. And a former Member of the House?

Mr. ACHESON. Yes.

Senator CONNALLY. Was the case you had in Norway these shipping claims?

Mr. ACHESON. Yes.

Senator BARKLEY. These tax cases—are they for refund or are they protesting against increased assessments?

Mr. ACHESON. I think there is only one case for a refund that I recall now. That is the case of what was the First National Bank of Detroit, in regard to its 1929 and 1930 tax. That has now left the Bureau and there will be suit in the district court of the United States. The Bureau has assessed the tax finally, the tax has been paid, and the next step is a suit for refund.

Senator KING. Are any of these dealings that you had, or your relations, with the tax department of the Government such that they would prove embarrassing to you in the duties of this office?

Mr. ACHESON. I do not think they would in any way, Senator. Senator COUZENS. You would have to pass upon the decisions, I suppose, that the Bureau might render, since I notice the law requires the Treasury to approve those matters, and I suppose the Under Secretary—you, as Under Secretary—would have that responsibility?

Mr. ACHESON. I suppose I would in respect to any of the refunds. Cases of additional taxes would not, as I understand it, come before me at all.

Senator REED. Mr. Acheson, what financial experience have you had?

Mr. ACHESON. I have had practically none, Senator.

Senator REED. Have you made any study of public finances at all?

Mr. ACHESON. None at all.

The CHAIRMAN. Where did you attend school, Mr. Acheson?

Mr. ACHESON. I went to Groton School, in Massachusetts, and I went to Yale University and the Harvard Law School.

Senator BARKLEY. Were you an applicant for this place?

Mr. ACHESON. No, sir; I was not.

Senator COUZENS. Who was your sponsor—Senator Tydings?

Senator TYDINGS, who was present, said:

Of course, of course.

The CHAIRMAN. You said you were not an applicant for it, Mr. Acheson?

Mr. ACHESON. Not at all.

The CHAIRMAN. The suggestion came from without?

Mr. ACHESON. I had absolutely no knowledge of this at all until the Secretary asked me to come over and see him; and when I went over he asked me if I would do this job for him.

Senator COUZENS. Is your firm also a representative of the International Telephone & Telegraph Co.?

Mr. ACHESON. Yes; they are.

Senator COUZENS. And Mr. John Marshall is also a member of your firm?

Mr. ACHESON. He is associated with our firm. He is not a member of our firm.

Senator COUZENS. Do you represent in any way the Radio Corporation of America?

Mr. ACHESON. I believe that we do. Whether we represent them generally or in specific litigation, I don't know. I myself have never had anything to do with those general retainers, and I don't know what goes on exactly.

There is a suit, I believe, in the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, and I understand that our firm is representing the Radio Corporation there.

Senator COUZENS. Do you represent the Van Sweringens in any cases?

Mr. ACHESON. Mr. Marshall does. That is his own retainer. My firm has nothing to do with that and is not connected with it in any way, either sharing in the fees paid or participating in any advice. We have no knowledge at all of what is done in that.

Senator COUZENS. You have quite a lot of corporate affiliations, do you not?

Mr. ACHESON. My firm does.

Senator BARKLEY. Do you represent any New York banks that are known as "international bankers"?

Mr. ACHESON. In these recent hearings Judge Covington represented the National City Bank. Whether that is an international bank or not, I do not know.

Senator COUZENS. I would say it is a very decided international bank, according to the testimony before the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Senator BARKLEY. Does your firm represent J. P. Morgan in any way?

Mr. ACHESON. Mr. John Davis represents J. P. Morgan & Co., and he occasionally asks Judge Covington for his advice on specific questions. We have no general retainer or any specific employment by them.

I want to point out that Mr. Acheson has for many years been a partner of Judge Covington, and Judge Covington has been an adviser of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., the Radio Corporation of America, the American Telegraph & Telephone Co., and a great many other corporations and interests a list of which I have had printed in the RECORD as a result of a list submitted to the committee by Mr. Acheson.

Further on the following occurred:

Senator CONNALLY. In addition to the duties of the Under Secretary, as the first assistant to the Secretary, does he have supervision over any particular departments over there?

Mr. ACHESON. I understand, Senator, the things that are directly under him are those bureaus that have to do with the public debt. I have a very vague idea of what are the duties of an Under Secretary, but I believe the financing of the Government and anything to do with the public debt comes directly under him.

Senator McADOO. The fiscal bureaus come under the Under Secretary, do they not?

Mr. ACHESON. I think there is one Assistant Secretary, Senator McADOO, who has charge of the internal revenue and another who has the customs.

Senator McADOO. I know that; but when I was Secretary of the Treasury the technical division was the fiscal bureau, so-called, and they were particularly in charge of one of the Assistant Secretaries. But since then I think the Department has been reorganized to some extent, and the Under Secretary having been created, I think he is considered as the right arm of the Secretary, and he acts generally with reference to all bureaus on all questions that arise in the Department.

Mr. ACHESON. That is my understanding.

Senator McADOO. And he is practically the Secretary in his absence. Isn't that the jurisdiction you will exercise?

Mr. ACHESON. I think that is about it.

Senator KING. With your understanding of the technique and the modus operandi in and of the Treasury Department, would you say your duties would be similar to those which were performed by Ogden Mills?

Mr. ACHESON. When he was Under Secretary?

Senator KING. Yes.

Mr. ACHESON. I presume they would be.

I want to point out that the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] intimated that Mr. Acheson was familiar, in the language of the Senator from Utah, "with the modus operandi and the technique of the Treasury Department," and yet in answer to a query from the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED], he made the statement that he had no familiarity with finance and no familiarity with the Treasury Department.

I read further from the hearing:

Senator COUZENS. Have you ever represented the Insulls in any case?

Mr. ACHESON. I don't think we have ever had anything to do with the Insulls.

Senator COUZENS. None of your firm has?

Mr. ACHESON. That is my understanding.

Senator COUZENS. Have you ever represented any of the Kruegers' companies?

Mr. ACHESON. Not at all. We have represented the Swedish Government.

Senator COUZENS. As against the Kruegers?

Mr. ACHESON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any other questions? We thank you very much for coming up, Mr. Acheson.

Senator TYDINGS. Apart from the fact that Mr. Acheson comes from Maryland, I believe you gentlemen will find he will be a pleasant surprise in the office.

I have since been encouraged to withdraw my objection to Mr. Acheson on the alleged statement that he is a Socialist, and I assume that is what the Senator from Maryland meant when he said Mr. Acheson would be a pleasant surprise. It was apparently thought that would appeal to me, and the assumption was based on the theory that he had been a former associate of Justice Brandeis, and having, apparently, some of Justice Brandeis' liberal thoughts, it was suggested to some of my friends in the Senate that I ought to withdraw my opposition to Mr. Acheson.

At this point I want to repeat, Mr. President, that nothing I am saying against Mr. Acheson is meant to cast the slightest reflection on him as a man. But, as I said Friday evening, ever since I have been in Congress I have resisted filling the Treasury Department, the very heart of the Government, with men who had either served special interests or would have special-interest connections.

Mr. President, so far as I can remember there has always been a complete coalition in the Treasury Department between Democrats and Republicans. Never during all of the investigations the special Senate committee made of the activities of the Bureau of Internal Revenue were we able to get a rise out of the Democrats, and I do not expect now that I shall get a rise out of the Republicans by pointing out the kind of men who are being placed in the Treasury Department.

Mr. President, when it comes to the management of money there is no partisanship. No two men of wealth, either Republicans or Democrats, ever fought each other seriously. Their interests are against it. They are solidified, and there is the finest working coalition between all parties when it comes to the control of the Treasury Department of the United States.

The Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] said that Mr. Acheson would be a pleasant surprise, and, now that the Senator from Maryland is in the Chamber, I assume he is going to tell us why he is to be a pleasant surprise; and I want to apologize to the Senator for going ahead Friday evening when he was not here, but I did so upon the insistence of the Chairman of the Committee on Finance, who had charge of the nomination.

The Senator from Maryland said:

He has great ability and great industry and holds high conception of any governmental responsibility, and it is a real pleasure for me to endorse him. I am satisfied the committee will have no regrets if they endorse him.

Senator KING. Mr. Woodin, then, did not initiate the movement to bring him into the Treasury; it came from you; is that it?

Senator TYDINGS. Partly, he did. He wanted a man who had not too much financial connections with banks and so on, yet who had enough general background and industry and general understanding to act in that office, so he told me over the telephone.

Senator KING. He didn't know Mr. Acheson?

Senator TYDINGS. He knew him, but not well. But he investigated him, he told me, very thoroughly and he seemed to be the very character of man he wanted.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much.

Mr. President, of course there is no doubt about the fact that Secretary Woodin, who had been long associated with New York interests, had to be satisfied that Mr. Acheson was right before he approved of his nomination, and obviously the Secretary of the Treasury made a very thorough investigation of Mr. Acheson's past connections and his activities; otherwise he would not have approved of his appointment. So I am quite satisfied that the Senator from Maryland told the truth.

Mr. President, as I said Friday evening, I know that the nomination will be confirmed, and I know that I could do no more than make a public record of the kind of men being placed in the Treasury Department, and the associations of these men. I am quite sure that in a short time there will come before us a nomination for Commissioner of Internal Revenue. I think that there will be more to be said about that nominee as a man, and his connections, which will be more appealing to the Senate, perhaps, than mere opposition to Mr. Acheson on the theory of his previous connections.

I assure the Senate and the public that when these gentlemen have been confirmed and have taken office, every act they perform will be closely watched, because I am quite sure, as I said last Friday evening, that the President of the United States, with his multitude of duties, does not know the former connections and all of the activities of the men he is placing in the Treasury Department.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I shall detain the Senate for only a few minutes. I have known Mr. Acheson for a long time. I know something of his political philosophy. I think I know something of his beliefs and something of his integrity of character.

Mr. Acheson comes from Connecticut, but during all the time the Republican Party has been in power here in Washington, during which time he has been practicing law, insofar as I know he has not surrendered his political beliefs for any monetary, partisan, or other advantage. He has remained an active member of the Democratic Party.

It has not been said, but should be said, that Mr. Acheson has represented the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. It might be contended that because he represented modern Russia in a case before the Tariff Commission he is just the opposite of the kind of man who would represent Mr. Morgan, that because the Soviets have been his clients, therefore he is "red" or "radical", or unfitted to hold the office to which he has been nominated.

Mr. Acheson has also represented labor unions. Indeed, very recently in my own State he appeared for one of the typographical unions in Baltimore City.

Mr. Acheson secured this business not because of any connection he had, but because he possessed the one thing which this Government requires; that is, ability backed up with character and integrity. If some financier from Wall Street had been selected, I think that many of the observations made by the Senator from Michigan would have been well grounded. But Mr. Acheson has had no financial connection with Wall Street. He has been employed as an attorney, and employed as an attorney because he had outstanding ability. I am told that in the Supreme Court of the United States he occupies a very enviable position, gained from the very concise and logical way in which he has presented many intricate matters before that august tribunal.

Mr. Acheson is not a reactionary. I think he is a progressively minded man. I do not think he is a mossback in any sense of the word, and I do not think the connections with large financial interests which he has had, together with connections with labor and communistic interests, have in any way altered his viewpoint of life or of government. I know that he has the highest concepts of citizenship. I know that he will give every ounce of his energy, every bit of his ability and integrity to the performance of the duties of his office in such a manner as will, in my judgment, please the Senator from Michigan.

What is an attorney to do? If he has the ability to attract a case he does not have to sleep in bed with the man who hires him, nor to share the political philosophy of the man who employs him, nor to accept ill-gotten gains perchance from the man who wants him to act as a lawyer. All he has to do is to present that side of the case. Mr. Acheson has done that with signal ability, and although comparatively only a young man, has won for himself a place of esteem in the highest courts of the land.

May I say to the Senator from Michigan that I am not out of sympathy with the observations he has made, and I admire his zeal in trying to keep public office removed from sources that might, to some extent, influence it unwisely; but I can assure him that if Mr. Acheson makes mistakes they will not be because of any desire to help one interest or one group at the expense of the country or of the population as a whole. I can assure him, from my contact with Mr. Acheson, that everything of citizenship which he has to give will be given to the furtherance of the duties of his office, in the hope that he may, by reason of his executive ability and industry, win the approval of the country in the discharge of his duties.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield to me?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; I yield.

Mr. COUZENS. May I ask the Senator if it was on his own initiative that Mr. Acheson's name was submitted by the President for nomination for Under Secretary of the Treasury?

Mr. TYDINGS. No; it was not. I had recommended Mr. Acheson for Solicitor General of the United States, and I am glad to state—and it is no breach of confidence to do so—that those in high authority would have liked to give him that position, because of very high recommendations from the bench as to his ability. I believe he was selected because he is an industrious man, with a very good grounding in history and philosophy. He is exceptionally well educated; he has been since he left college a student in a multitude of subjects, and it will not be long before his ability will be shown in the Treasury Department.

I do not believe a man has to work in a bank; I do not believe a man has to be an international banker or even a city banker to be a good Secretary of the Treasury. I will concede such an experience should be valuable, but there is no mystery about that office. It is nothing but a large book-keeping office, with sound principles upon which it should be run. I know that Mr. Acheson has the ability to master the duties of the office of Under Secretary of the Treasury and will be a very valuable official in the conduct of the affairs of the Government.

Mr. Acheson, insofar as I know, was sent for to receive the "plum" at the hands of the administration; he was asked whether he would take it; and I was simply consulted in the matter, because I happened to be the only Democratic Senator from Maryland. I was asked if I would object to him. I said then, as I say now, that I am genuinely glad to see him get the office and am sure he will discharge his duties in a highly creditable manner.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the confirmation of the nomination?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The nomination was confirmed.

CONFIRMATION OF EUGENE R. BLACK—NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I wish to renew the request for unanimous consent that I submitted to the Senate on yesterday that the President be notified of the confirmation of the nomination of Mr. Eugene R. Black to be a member of the Federal Reserve Board. The Senator from Oregon asked that the request go over for the day, but for the same reason stated yesterday I hope there will be no objection today to the request that the President may be notified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, it will only require one further day for the consideration of this matter. The President will then be automatically notified. Inasmuch as a number of Senators desire that that procedure be followed, I think the Senator from Georgia had better not press his request at this time.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator what was the request which was made by the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. McNARY. The request was for the notification of the President of the confirmation of Mr. Eugene R. Black as a member of the Federal Reserve Board, to which I objected yesterday.

Mr. GEORGE. I have asked that the President may be notified of the confirmation of Mr. Black's nomination.

Mr. McNARY. I stated to the Senator from Georgia that I objected yesterday because there are a number of Senators who like the old procedure to be followed rather than taking the short cut. We have had two executive sessions and tomorrow, automatically, the President will be notified of the confirmation; so I think the Senator from Georgia had better withhold his request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I suppose what the Senator from Oregon has just stated applies to other nominations, and I therefore will not make a request similar to that which has been made by the Senator from Georgia.

THE JUDICIARY

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Francis A. Garrecht, of Washington, to be United States circuit judge, ninth circuit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed. That completes the calendar.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I move that the Senate return to legislative business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate resumed the consideration of legislative business.

ARMS EMBARGO AND NEUTRALITY—ARTICLE BY EDWIN M. BORCHARD

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there may be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an article on the Arms Embargo and Neutrality, by Edwin M. Borchard, of the Yale University School of Law.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE ARMS EMBARGO AND NEUTRALITY

In the closing days of the Hoover administration, the United States Senate passed, but then reconsidered, a joint resolution reading, in part, as follows:

"Joint resolution to prohibit the exportation of arms or munitions of war from the United States under certain conditions

"Resolved, etc., That whenever the President finds that in any part of the world conditions exist such that the shipment of arms or munitions of war from countries which produce these commodities may promote or encourage the employment of force in the course of a dispute or conflict between nations, and, after securing the cooperation of such governments as the President deems necessary, he makes proclamation thereof, it shall be unlawful to export, or sell for export, except under such limitations and exceptions as the President prescribes, any arms or munitions of war from any place in the United States to such country or countries as he may designate, until otherwise ordered by the President or by Congress."

The resolution did not reach the floor of the House of Representatives, but in committee was amended to limit its application to the American continent. The new administration has again pressed for the passage of such a resolution, and it was reported out, on a strictly party division, by the Foreign Affairs Committee on March 28, 1933, without amendment. The matter is so important, that John Bassett Moore felt impelled to caution the House and the country against the resolution. Its legal aspects, in the light of the official memorandum on The Arms Embargo and Neutrality submitted to the House committee on February 7 by the Secretary of State, deserve careful consideration.

It will be observed that the resolution in effect authorizes the President, whenever he finds that "dispute", "conflict", or war, de facto or de jure, exists between nations "in any part of the world" or that "conditions exist" anywhere which by the supply of arms might lead to "the employment of force" in their development or solution, to prohibit, "after securing the cooperation of such governments as the President deems necessary", the export of "arms or munitions of war" from the United States "to such country or countries as he may designate."

It is believed that the grant of such power to the President is unconstitutional and dangerous. It gives the President the power (1) to make treaties with foreign governments without the consent of the Senate; (2) to enter into alliances without the consent of the Senate; (3) to violate the neutrality laws of the United States by embargoing the shipment of arms to one of two or more belligerents; and (4) in effect to declare war on the country thus selected without the consent of Congress.

No such power has ever been conferred on any President, and it is believed unwise, as well as illegal, for the House of Representatives and Senate thus to abdicate their constitutional functions.

It will be observed that no restriction of any kind is laid upon the President as to the countries with whom he need "cooperate." He may make a treaty or an alliance with any countries or with as many or as few as he wishes, without consulting any desires but his own.

The export of arms is one of the most important of trades, because it has not only commercial, but political, implications. It can so vitally affect the course of hostilities abroad that it has always impinged upon international law. The free and unrestricted supply of arms to all belligerents by neutral citizens is not illegal and is defended on the ground that it is not the duty of neutral governments by international law to prohibit their citizens from manufacturing and selling arms, so long as the privilege of purchase is open to all belligerents. On the other hand, some countries, realizing the resulting danger of enlarging and prolonging foreign conflicts and the danger to their own and their citizens' neutrality, have, like the Scandinavian countries, Brazil, and Switzerland, on occasion, by statute prohibited the export of arms in time of war.

But in either case, the permission or prohibition must, in order to be defensible in international law, apply to all the countries at war, and not to some of them. Impartiality is the keynote of neutrality (Oppenheim, 4th ed., 563). If some only could be selected either for the permission or prohibition, neutrality would at once be violated and the country discriminated against would have a legitimate casus belli. The discrimination is an unfriendly and hostile act of greatest significance, and against a strong power might very readily be a prelude to war. It is, indeed, a warlike act, if not itself an act of war. It is as dangerous as the boycott which some Americans urged against Japan in the spring of 1932, but which Congress and the country wisely rejected. It is in fact a boycott of a special kind.¹ It can, moreover, hardly be applied by governmental action without breach of the usual commercial treaty, if any, concluded with the country against which it is applied.

The President is thus given the power to make an alliance and a treaty for hostile action against a third state or states, without consultation with, and hence without the consent of, Congress. Such power, even in time of war, was refused to the last Democratic President. Now, in time of peace, without any restrictions or limitations, it is proposed to confer it upon the occupant of the Presidential office.

As already observed, the resolution contemplates a hostile act which empowers the President to breach our commercial treaties, violate and impair the neutrality of the United States—perhaps its most valuable asset and safeguard—and take a step which every self-respecting belligerent would probably regard as a casus belli. It amounts to a declaration of war against the country singled out for the application of the embargo.

It is said, however, in the official memorandum submitted in its support that the existing embargo power, in cases of domestic violence on the American continent and in China, has been employed "with great effect and negligible friction." One may respectfully venture to doubt this conclusion. As in the case of Brazil in 1930, the embargo was employed against the revolutionary party, who the next day took over the seat of government. The unneutral act involved produced serious criticism.² A few days after declaring an embargo against the revolutionists the United States recognized them as the Government of Brazil. Contrary to a common assumption, there is no duty upon the United States to stop a revolution abroad any more than it was the duty of Russia or Spain to stop the American Revolution. To undertake such a function, indeed, is a breach of neutrality, and hence illegal as a matter of international law. It involves intervention in the affairs of a foreign country and has already incurred for the United States distrust on the American Continent. It enables the administration to play favorites abroad, interfere when it should abstain, and thus forfeit that impartiality and neutrality which is the keystone of foreign respect. The interfering partisan often invites and enlists the hatred and contempt of both sides, and experience might indicate that the Government is as likely to be mistaken as it is to be correct in estimating the merits of a foreign controversy, even if such judgments were possible and even if it were deemed an American duty to be a judge.

But in interfering in domestic struggles on the American continent by withholding arms from one side or the other, no great power has as yet been affected. The United States is not likely to get into full war because of its breach of neutrality or other error in choosing sides. But when it comes to dealing with powers "in any part of the world", not in their domestic struggles or civil wars but when engaged in foreign wars, much more responsibility is assumed. It enables the United States to participate in foreign wars by withholding arms from one side or another, as the President sees fit, and perhaps thus to determine the outcome of the war. It is to be doubted whether any single chief of state anywhere in modern times has had, or claimed, such unrestricted power.

It seems strange that Senators who were not willing to have the United States join the League of Nations, where the United States would be but one of many powers and where action under article 16 could be taken only by unanimity, should be willing to permit the President, on his own unreviewable election, to join with one or more powers of the League to do that which article 16 at least safeguards by the requirement of unanimity.

The Senate has declined to pass the Capper resolution. The present resolution would seem to be equally, if not more, dangerous. It, in effect, authorizes the President to make war in the name of peace.

The official memorandum submitted in its support states that in case of a foreign war the embargo would "not, of course, be employed unless there was general cooperation and united opinion among the principal powers who could supply munitions." There is nothing to indicate any such limitation in the resolution. It seems unusual statutory construction to suggest that an unlimited and unrestricted power could or would only be used under limitations and restrictions. To the suggestion that the President would not abuse the power given, the answer may be made that there is no test of "abuse" afforded and that the same argument would sustain the conferring of complete dictatorial powers. It is not readily apparent what beneficial purpose or contemplated exigency the arms embargo is supposed to subserve.

The memorandum indicates in its paragraph marked "Second" that the resolution is to be used against an "aggressor." No more shoddy and shallow, if not mischievous, conception has come out of the League of Nations than the conception of "aggressor." Its origin and purpose are well known, but its effect has been to confuse the world. It awakens in many minds a kind of emotional morality which enables indignation and violence to clothe themselves in the mantle of righteousness. Possibly that is one of the reasons why the world is now twice as heavily armed as it was in 1913, with disorder and chaos extending their domain. The idea that the peace of the world is promoted by combining against an "aggressor" is, it is believed, false and romantic. It threatens and requires war to produce peace. Fortunately, that idea had not developed when the United States was expanding on this continent. To prevent the natural development of strong and responsible states by supporting the chaotic, the weak, and the disintegrating is a sorry service to peace and stability. The "verdict of the League of Nations", for which the memorandum shows so much respect, is a political verdict and must necessarily be so. The embargo resolution may be deemed a temptation to the President to carry out the "verdict" of the League of Nations, provided he agrees with that "verdict." Thus, if the League should determine that Japan has been an "aggressor", the United States, not a member of the League, might be placed in a position to carry into execution the verdict of a League it itself refused to join, against a nation that left the League for one of the very reasons on which the United States declined to enter.

The memorandum suggests that the "old conception of neutrality as a possibility is gone in the modern world if large nations are involved in war." It is respectfully submitted that this is a deplorable and unjustified view, certainly so long as the neutrality laws remain on the statute books and neutrality treaties are concluded. Twenty or more nations, including some fairly large ones, exercising their considered judgment, decided to remain neutral in the late war. Their acumen has been rewarded. The supposition adduced in the memorandum implies that it is not possible to remain sensible when others lose their heads, but that the sense of self-interest and of self-preservation have gone from the world, their places to be taken by vacuity or hysteria. I am not prepared to believe that the entire world has lost its senses and that anarchy has taken the place of law. Washington and Jefferson were able in time of stress to preserve their sense of the fitness of things and of the self-interest of the United States. The very shortness of war which science promises should make neutrality easier, and not more difficult, to preserve. As it is assumed that the life and reputation of the United States will be a matter of importance to the future statesmen of the country, it is likely that the United States will again remain neutral.

The suggestion that it is not possible to remain neutral is negated by the fact that countries much more closely affected by the late struggle than the United States, such as the Scandinavian countries and Holland, were perfectly able to maintain their neutrality. In all the wars fought since 1919, including that between Poland and Russia, Greece and Turkey, Japan and China, and those on this Continent, the nonparticipating members of the League of Nations and the United States remained neutral. Neutrality has been stipulated in innumerable treaties since 1919, including treaties between European powers and those concluded at Habana in 1928. It is interesting to note that immediately upon the publication of the Report of the Committee of Nineteen, denouncing Japan, the British Government declared an embargo on arms, not against Japan but against both belligerents, for the very purpose of preserving British neutrality. When the embargo was lifted neutrality was still the keynote of the policy; and this, doubtless, because the major responsibility of every government is to its own people, a fact which alone is likely to prevent the execution of general schemes for alleged universal peace or security by threat of or actual hostility.

The conception that every war in which a large power is engaged must involve the world and that neutrality is a thing of the past is a view reconcilable only with permanent anarchy in the world. It takes no account of the self-interest of nations in refusing to be dragged into a war in which they have no concern. It is doubted whether the masses of the people in most countries will permit themselves freely to be slaughtered in wars in which they have no interest. Moreover, if neutrality were really a thing of the past, the Disarmament Conference is directly contrary to the interests of all the participating nations, for in that event all nations must, and should, arm to the teeth. If law is dead, then force is the only arbiter. It is to this conclusion that the "peace" advocates who toy with such conceptions as combinations and embargoes against "aggressors", "verdicts of the League of Nations", "any war is an attack on all mankind", and "war to end war" risk misleading the world; and its present state is in part attributable to such unhistorical and unrealistic, yet dangerous, conceptions.

² John Bassett Moore, Candor and Common Sense, address before Bar Association of New York, Dec. 4, 1930, p. 20.

The mere fact that the commerce of the neutral may be "under fire"—an assumption which doubtless presupposes the continued existence of neutrality—is no reason for plunging a nation into war and risking its extermination. If neutral rights are, despite protest, legally violated, there are other sanctions than war available. Many claims conventions in the past have been set up to determine the liability consequent upon a belligerent's violation of the neutral rights of neutral powers and their citizens.

The embargo resolution, it is submitted, should pass only if amended to safeguard the neutrality of the United States under all circumstances; that is, it should be made impossible to employ it against one belligerent alone, but only against both or all the belligerents. In addition, it should reject any implication of the abdication by House and Senate of their constitutional functions, either with respect to the making of treaties or alliances with foreign powers, or, alone or in combination with other powers, entering into hostilities.

THE SILVER RACKET—ARTICLE BY NEIL CAROTHERS

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there may be printed in the RECORD an article entitled "The Silver Racket", by Prof. Neil Carothers, which appeared in last Sunday's New York Herald Tribune.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Herald Tribune, May 14, 1933]

THE SILVER RACKET—WITH INFLATION AUTHORIZED AND WITH BIMETALLISM AND THE PAYMENT OF PART OF THE WAR DEBT IN SILVER UNDER CONSIDERATION, SILVER AGAIN ENTERS THE AMERICAN STAGE, WHERE IT HAS OFTEN PLAYED A TRAGIC ROLE—HERE IS THE FIRST OF TWO ARTICLES ON ITS SINISTER HISTORY

By Neil Carothers, professor of economics and Director of the College of Business Administration at Lehigh University

Imagine, if you will, another people in another age—the French Nation in the time of Louis XV, poverty-stricken and economically illiterate. Watch a clever and designing man, presenting with facile reasoning to a deluded king and an ignorant people a scheme for unlimited wealth for all. See the king and people embrace this scheme, and in the end collapse and ruin. Thus a susceptible ruler and a helpless people and a plausible adventurer, France and Louis XV and John Law and the Mississippi Bubble inflation scheme, in the year 1720.

Turn to your own country in the year 1933, and see a rich and powerful people, sorely stricken, wretched, and rebellious after 4 bitter years of distress. Listen to the economic Babel, a bewildering confusion of theories, proposals, and panaceas, beside which the Biblical "confusion of tongues" was lucidity itself. Note the rival devices, actual and proposed—beer, planting trees, closing 18,000 banks and reopening 15,000, a 6-hour day and a 5-day week, guaranty of business profits, payment of the debts of those who speculated in land, a minimum wage, a "planning board" to mobilize industry, and on indefinitely; but far outnumbering these chimeras, endless proposals for tinkering with the currency.

In all the realm of human affairs there are no problems so complex, no forces so delicate, as those involved in the relationship of money to prices, credit, and international exchanges. It was with an unconscious wisdom that Will Rogers said that there were two kinds of crazy people, the ordinary kind who work jigsaw puzzles and the special kind who think they understand inflation. One false step in managing the intricate mechanism of money and credit and the savings of millions of people are swept away; another kind of mistake and a ruinous orgy of speculation begins; another, and a government goes bankrupt.

Consider finally the body that controls this delicate financial mechanism, the Congress of the United States, in the main without equipment to grasp the fundamental principles of monetary science, not even aware of the major events in the history of the country's currency. Look still further, and find in the Senate a group of men, shrewd and powerful, committed to the interests of a single monetary commodity.

This is the setting for the extraordinary drama in which silver has once again made her reentry on a stage that has repeatedly presented an American tragedy, with silver in the leading role. All through American history there runs a sinister story of silver, from the mistaken adoption of bimetalism by Alexander Hamilton to the raid on the Public Treasury by the Pittman Act of 1918. Always lurking in the wings, silver comes on the scene when the economic lights are dark. President Roosevelt's inflation measure of April 20 contained three essential provisions—one to authorize a vast issue of paper money, another to pare down our standard gold dollar, and a third to permit payment of the war debts in silver bullion.

It is not within the province of this article to discuss the expediency of the first two provisions. They constitute the most extraordinary proposals ever made by a President in time of peace. The critical condition of the country may or may not justify them. We are concerned here only with the provision for payment of the war debts in silver. Even the well-informed student of finance was mystified by this proposal. How can it help the unemployed millions or restore industry? What is it for?

The answer is to be found only in the long and dramatic story of silver. It is an older history than the Bible's, and no page of it lacks color and interest. But we must begin with modern times. A hundred and fifty years ago every important nation of Europe was waging a losing struggle with bimetalism, which is merely a monetary system in which prices are quoted and debts are paid in two metals—gold and silver. In ancient times other metals were used, and Russia tried the plan in modern times with platinum. For any single nation bimetalism is impractical—it will not "work." One metal or the other is always disappearing. For a century England, France, and Spain, with discordant ratios between the two metals, took from one another their small silver change or their valuable gold reserves. England first, then the Latin countries of Europe, and Germany, and Japan abandoned bimetalism. Germany conquered France in 1870 and used a billion-dollar gold indemnity to set up her single gold standard.

Hamilton established American bimetalism in 1792, with the same silver dollar we have now and a gold dollar somewhat larger than the one we use today. The system didn't work. Our gold was drained to England. In 1834 and 1837 Congress reduced the size of the gold dollar, making the ratio 16 to 1. This caused the disappearance of all the silver change in the country, creating chaos in retail trade. In 1853 Congress abolished bimetalism for all the silver coins except the dollar. Since then our small silver coins have been made of silver of reduced weight and sold by the Government at a profit. A dime contains about 3 cents' worth of silver. They could just as well be made of paper or nickel or aluminum. Their silver content has nothing to do with their value.

The silver dollar was left as it was. Legally we were still on the double standard at the ratio of 16 to 1. At this ratio silver dollars could not be coined. The silver dollar had never been in use and was unknown at the time of the Civil War. In 1873 the coinage laws were revised and the silver dollar was dropped. The action was quite deliberate, but Congress was entirely unaware of the importance of the measure. The United States had stumbled into the gold standard.

The silver mines were increasing their output of the metal, and the world-wide adoption of the gold standard reduced the market. The price of silver was falling. When the ratio rose above 16 to 1 it was profitable to take silver bullion to the United States mints and coin it, for the first time since 1834. This situation developed in 1874, but the law of 1873 had abolished silver coinage. From that day to this the silver interests have waged a ruthless, relentless struggle to force the Government to subsidize the silver industry. They have in the past influenced Secretaries of the Treasury and Mint Directors, resorted to propaganda, log-rolling, and political bargains, slipped jokers into financial legislation, and browbeaten administrations.

They have achieved three major measures. One of those was the Pittman Act of 1918, too involved for explanation here. The other two we must glance at briefly. The double standard was abolished just at the beginning of the long "depression of 1873." It was in no way connected with it. A systematic propaganda to make the country believe that the coinage law was responsible for the depression, that it was a "crime" perpetrated by eastern capital, and that restoring bimetalism would end the depression resulted finally in the passage of the infamous Bland-Allison Act of 1878. In brief, it commanded the Treasury to buy the output of the United States silver mines and coin it into dollars. By this time the dollar piece was worth about 80 cents. It was clumsy and unknown. The people would have none of it. Thereupon the Treasury passed them out to the people by a trick. It issued "silver certificates", simply warehouse receipts for the dollars, to the people. The rejected dollars it piled in the vaults. The dollar bill in your pocket is probably a silver certificate. It calls itself a dollar. Actually it is a receipt entitling you to a silver dollar, worth as metal at the present writing about 28 cents. A few weeks ago it was worth about 19 cents. The certificate is worth a dollar to you so long as the Government's credit is good; no longer. The dollar your certificate stands for is one of 500,000,000 that lie in a dead and useless mass in the Treasury, where they have been for 50 years.

The Bland-Allison Act stimulated silver production. In 1890 the silver interests in Congress traded votes and put through the Sherman Act. One of the provisions of this famous measure amended the earlier act so that the Government was forced to buy about twice as much silver. The two laws resulted in the coining of nearly 600,000,000 silver dollars. The country's finances could not digest this mass. Worth only 50 cents, the coin could not be used to pay foreign debts. Our American gold slipped away. The coin could be used to pay taxes, and the Treasury paid out its gold and received silver dollars in tax payments. In the fall of 1893 a desperate panic resulted. It ushered in a depression in many respects as unhappy as the one we now endure.

What is the significance of this curious proposal to permit the payment of war debts in silver, presented by President Roosevelt a few weeks ago and recently adopted by the Congress of the United States? It is merely the Bland-Allison Act of 1878 in new dress. Silver, like all other commodities, has fallen in price during the depression. The decline in price has been much less than that of most of the really important and useful commodities, such as cotton, wheat, or copper. The average price of silver was 58 cents an ounce in 1928. It was 28 cents in 1932. The silver industry, in contrast to all the important industries, has been fortunate. And yet this fall in a commodity of no importance has resulted in constant political turmoil, endless discussion, and international bitterness. During President Hoover's entire administration he was pressed and harried by the silver interests.

The depression is the primary cause of the decline of the value of silver. Overproduction as a result of the subsidy granted by the Pittman Act of 1918 is another. A third is the gradual abandonment of silver as a material of coinage the world over. In all the world only China is on the silver standard, with some Latin-American countries partly involved with silver. Even for debased small-change coinage, silver is in some respects less satisfactory than copper, nickel, and aluminum. Many countries have been melting up their coins and selling the silver as bullion. In 1926 England set up a new currency system in India, accumulating in the process a large mass of silver amounting at one time to more than 400,000,000 ounces. Hard-pressed financially, England has been selling this bullion. Every possible expedient has been tried in an effort to coerce or frighten England into a promise not to sell this reserve. When President Hoover refused to bring pressure, he was publicly accused by a Senator of being a tool of England.

And here we find the explanation of the silver-payment clause. So long as England has silver bullion to sell, the price of silver will be depressed. The original proposal called for a limit of $100,000,000 to be accepted at a price of not more than 50 cents. The silver so received is to be deposited in the vaults, there to join the useless millions lying in the dust for the past half century. Against them silver certificates are to be issued to swell the volume of governmental liability and risk. But the silver never will be allowed to come out of the vaults. It will be taken off the world market forever. And the objective of the whole measure will be achieved, a rise in the price of silver. The mere announcement of the proposal drove the price of silver above 30 cents. When the Senate received the bill, it was amended to authorize the payment of $200,000,000 in silver. When this news was broadcast, the price of silver jumped to 36 cents. One more chapter is to be added to the history of silver legislation.

It is a tragic feature of our financial situation that the general public has neither the time nor the facilities for study of the financial forces at work. In all the vast mass of propaganda for silver, only one reason for Government action has been advanced. That is the contention that a rise in the price of silver will benefit India and China and thereby stimulate world trade. The argument is unsound. The Indian people are not on the silver standard, and have not been for 40 years. The statement that "silver is the money of half the world's population" has become a slogan of the silver interests. It is false.

China, the only important country on the silver standard, holds one fifth of the world's population, the vast majority coolies whose economic significance is zero. China's foreign trade is insignificant, less than that of the Argentine. She has actually benefited from the inflation caused by the decline in silver. A rise in the price of silver probably would damage the country. It would so greatly reduce Chinese exports that the reaction would probably still further reduce her purchases from the rest of the world.

Silver is a byproduct of the mining of more important metals. As such it has no cost of production, employs almost no labor, has no population group or area dependent upon it. The total value of all the silver produced in the United States in 1932 was $8,000,000 less than the value of the Eskimo pies produced in the same year. In the State of Nevada, which dictates the silver legislation of the country, the silver industry is of less economic importance than the hotels and night resorts of Reno.

So much for the provision for payment of the war debts in silver. But at the last moment the Senate adopted as part of the inflation measure a provision authorizing the President to reestablish bimetalism. This extraordinary proposal, pregnant with possibilities of reorganization of American economic life, is another story.

REGULATION OF BANKING

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1631, the so-called "Glass banking bill."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Ohio that the Senate proceed to the consideration of a bill, the title of which will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A bill (S. 1631) to provide for the safer and more effective use of the assets of Federal Reserve banks and of national banking associations, to regulate interbank control, to prevent the undue diversion of funds into speculative operations, and for other purposes.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, earlier in the day I conferred with the Senator from Ohio, at which time I expressed the hope that the motion would not be made today in the absence of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass]. A great many Members of the Senate on the minority side desire a little further time to consider this very important measure. The impeachment trial is now proceeding, and I believe, in the interest of economy of time and expedition we should go forward with the trial, at least during the week, and early next week or the latter part of the present week a motion such as the Senator from Ohio has made may more properly be in order. If the motion be delayed, it will give an opportunity to study this very important measure, and I desire to see the Senator from Virginia before the motion is made. He is absent today and I ask the Senator to withhold the motion until tomorrow.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, of course there is no purpose to proceed to the consideration of the bill this evening.

Mr. McNARY. I appreciate that.

Mr. BULKLEY. The impeachment trial will go on tomorrow until such hour as may be appropriate, in any event.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, may I say to the Senator from Oregon that the motion is made at the request of the Senator from Virginia, as I understand?

Mr. BULKLEY. It is.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. He is anxious to have the bill made the unfinished business. Of course, from time to time there will be occasion when the Senate will be in legislative session, even during the consideration of the impeachment case; and I wish to say now that if the same course of procedure shall be pursued that has been followed since the beginning of the trial now in progress by the Senate as a court it looks like a conclusion of that case may be almost indefinitely deferred. It will be necessary during the trial to proceed from time to time with legislative business, and I hope the Senator from Oregon will concede that fact.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, that hardly answers the purpose of my objection. I wanted to have an opportunity to confer with the Senator from Virginia, in the hope that we may come to some agreement that we can proceed for a few days with the trial and later on take up the measure which is now presented to the Senate. Entertaining that view, I hope the motion will not be made tonight. It can be made tomorrow if it is so desired, but I should like to have the opportunity—

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President—

Mr. McNARY. Just a moment—at least I should like to have the opportunity of conferring with the Senator from Virginia before the status of this bill is fixed as the unfinished business.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, the Senator from Virginia himself yesterday sought to make the motion and was induced to defer it at the suggestion of the Senator from Oregon. He called me this morning and requested that this motion be made, and I am sure he has been in conference with the Senator from Ohio.

There is no disposition to crowd action on the bill. Ample opportunity will be afforded for Senators to familiarize themselves with it. Many of the provisions of the bill have already been fully threshed out by the Senate during the course of prolonged consideration, and, as I understand, there are comparatively few new provisions in the bill. So I think the Senator from Oregon ought not to ask again that the Senate proceed without some unfinished business.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have no doubt that the able Senator from Virginia has made the request, but I should like to have the opportunity of conferring with that Senator concerning this matter before the motion is made, and I simply ask that it go over until tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio withdraw his motion or insist upon it?

Mr. BULKLEY. I still am inclined to insist upon the motion at this time. I can assure the Senator from Oregon—

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. May I make a suggestion to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. BULKLEY. Certainly.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. In view of the statement often repeated by the Senator from Oregon that there is some reason which prompts him to desire a conference with the Senator from Virginia before the motion is voted on, may I suggest to the Senator from Ohio that he let the motion be pending and that we now take a recess.

Mr. McNARY. That will be very satisfactory to me.

Mr. BULKLEY. I am quite satisfied with that.

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I move that the Senate stand in recess until the conclusion of the session of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment on tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arkansas.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 12 minutes p.m.) the Senate took a recess until the conclusion of the proceedings of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment on tomorrow, Wednesday, May 17, 1933, the hour of meeting of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment being 10 o'clock a.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, MAY 16, 1933

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Blessing and honor, glory and power, be unto Him who sitteth upon the throne, and to the Lamb forever and ever. In all things, blessed Lord, inspire us to be faithful and diligent, patient and hopeful, and to know that it is no vain adventure to be directed and held by these virtues. Give glad assurance to us, and cease not to guide us in all our ways. By Thy grace bind together the tissues of our habits. Bless us today with the hand that helps and with the heart that cheers. May we remember those who have been watching and longing for the day dawn through these unrewarding years. We appeal to Thee, Lord; give help, and set their very souls climbing eagerly toward that life that is vastly big and fine, and in which there are no more fears and distrust. Bring to our whole land peace and service, and hail the hour of rejoicing. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H.R. 5040) entitled "An act to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes", disagreed to by the House, agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. HARRISON, Mr. KING, Mr. GEORGE, Mr. REED, and Mr. COUZENS to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from California [Mr. BURKE] be excused today and tomorrow on account of the death of his father.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. GRIFFIN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, Lawrence Sullivan, in the Washington Post today, intimates that there is a growing sentiment in the House in favor of the sales tax. I doubt very much whether that expression of opinion is based on very reliable authority. So far as I am concerned, I have not changed my attitude on the sales tax, and I know of no one else who has.

A sales tax is fundamentally a consumption tax, and a consumption tax falls on the ultimate consumer, not only on those who have regular incomes but upon the 12,000,000 or more who are without any means whatever.

It is said that exemptions can be made, but the moment you make exemptions to a sales tax it ceases to be a sales tax, and you are immediately in a maze of contradictions.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRIFFIN. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. Those who have been advocating the sales tax for years have been doing so for the purpose of trying to take the income and inheritance tax off of large incomes and large fortunes. All they want is to get their noses under the tent. If they can ever establish the policy in this country, their hope is to impose all taxes through a sales tax, and therefore on the people least able to pay.

Mr. GRIFFIN. That is very true. The sentiment for a sales tax comes largely from those who have to pay heavy income and inheritance taxes. While that is true, our experience should teach us that there is an element of justice in their dissatisfaction with the conditions that exist. Heavy taxation leads to evasion and shifting. The idea of having a part of the country pay all the taxes is in my opinion a fallacy. The fundamentals of sound taxation require a tax which is spread over a broad area, and one which falls equitably upon all of the tax-paying public. It is unjust to impose heavy burdens upon a part and allow others to go scotfree, and yet that is what has been done blindly for years.

Mr. FREAR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Let me finish my statement first and then I will yield.

Mr. FREAR. I wanted to find out who was going scot-free.

Mr. GRIFFIN. We are letting them go scotfree of taxation because we have blindly tried to overdo taxation. The old tax rates were fairly reasonable. That is, the reduced tax rates that were put into effect in January 1929. The income derived was encouraging; but in 1932 we raised the income taxes to such an extent that evasions continued as they never did before.

There were 498,000 corporations which filed income-tax returns in 1930. Of that number, 231,287 showed no net income whatever. In other words, they evaded their burden of responsibility for the support of their Government, and yet those corporations which ducked their taxes showed gross incomes of $41,000,000,000 and over.

That is not only true of corporations but it is also true of individuals. In the same year the number of returns for individuals was 3,376,552. The number of returns that showed no net income was 1,429,877. How were they able to escape? Easy enough. First, in the case of corporations, by padding their pay rolls, giving bonuses to their officers, representing that they had taken losses on their investments, selling stock of their holdings to dummies and then purchasing it back after the transaction with the Government on the income tax was completed. One of them is on trial today for doing that very thing which he brazenly admitted before a Senate committee.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRIFFIN. I will yield first to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. FREAR].

Mr. FREAR. I understood the gentleman from New York [Mr. GRIFFIN] to say that there are men who go scotfree on the question of taxation. I wanted to know what class of people go scotfree. In other words, does not every individual pay directly or indirectly some taxes, Federal taxes or local?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Theoretically that is true.

Mr. FREAR. Of course, those who are best able to pay have been paying income taxes.

Mr. GRIFFIN. But many of those best able to pay are the very ones who go scotfree. Their number is so great that it is absolutely menacing the carrying on of our Government. In a democracy every individual ought to bear his burden of taxation.

Mr. FREAR. They all ought to and they do to a certain extent.

Mr. GRIFFIN. What I am fighting for is to have every citizen bear this burden honestly and directly and not have it shifted over upon his shoulders by someone else who may have the cunning to evade it.

Mr. KELLER. May I suggest that the gentleman continue with the thought he has in mind, that he continue to develop his argument?

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. GRIFFIN. I am going to follow the suggestion of the gentleman from Illinois and develop any argument.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. GRIFFIN. I yield.

Mr. RICH. If the gentleman knows these corporations are doing things that are illegal, why does he not see that some action is brought against them? I believe statements made on the floor of the House by Members that they know such things are going on are more detrimental than helpful.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a short question right at this point?

Mr. GRIFFIN. I wish to say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania first that I am merely submitting the facts gathered from the reports, namely, that out of 498,000 corporations 231,287 failed to show any net income whatever although their gross income was $41,000,000,000.

I merely ask you to allow the facts to speak for themselves.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield for a question right at this point?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Yes.

Mr. BRITTEN. I agree with the gentleman in his contention that many officials of big corporations do deceive the Government in their income taxes. There is no question about that. But is not this, after all, the very best argument for a manufacturers' sales tax?

Mr. GRIFFIN. No. The sales tax is too limited as to the groups selected as the targets for attack and in all the bills so far proposed too circumscribed by exemptions. My proposal aims to equitably compel all groups earning incomes to make a reasonable contribution toward paying the expenses of government. I make no exceptions, no qualifications, and would close the door on all evasions.

Here are the facts: Under the present law over 50 percent of those who are required to file income-tax returns fail to pay a single dollar of tax to the Government. This speaks for itself. This shows that the high income-tax rates invite evasion and a shifting of taxes, invite fraud and misrepresentation.

If we adopted a gentler system of imposing taxes, spreading the burden on all, the invitation and the inducement to misrepresentation would disappear because no single group would be called upon to pay such a high proportion of the revenue. When once we adopt the plan of spreading the field of taxation the rate will go down for all.

Let me show you how this can be done. Today I introduced in the House a bill proposing, first of all, to restore the income-tax rates as they were prior to the Revenue Act of 1932; secondly, it imposes a tax of 1 cent per dollar on gross incomes.

The proposal to return to the income-tax rates in effect prior to 1932 was prompted by the report of the Treasury Department for May 11. It shows that the increased rates of the Revenue Act of 1932 have utterly failed. In the fiscal year 1932, up to May 11, the income-tax revenue of the Nation was $879,000,000. Up to May 11 of the present year, under the increased income-tax rates, the revenue was $588,000,000; in other words, $290,000,000 short of what we ought to raise. It is quite evident we can never balance the Budget under the present income-tax system.

I recognize that we cannot change the present income-tax law with one stroke. What I want to do is to abate its nuisance provisions by degrees. The first thing to be done, in my opinion, is to restore income-tax rates as they were prior to the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1932; that is, the rates as reduced to a reasonable basis by the act of December 16, 1929.

Secondly, to offset this reduction I want to have a tax imposed upon everyone who earns a settled, regular income, without exception, without exemption, without regard to brackets. This is easy enough to put into operation, because the general provisions of the income-tax law will not be disturbed by my proposal. The income-tax return is made up showing a gross income of, say, $100,000. You add at the foot of the income-tax return 1 cent per dollar, or $1,000. That is the tax.

Let us consider the great body of Federal and other salaried employees who have steady, regular incomes of from $3,000 to $5,000 or $6,000. Do they pay an income tax under the complicated provisions of the present income-tax law? Not a cent. They are allowed exemptions for their wives, for their children, for their investment losses.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield at this point?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Yes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. In order to reach State and municipal employees a constitutional amendment would be needed. They are exempt by reason of the taxing obligations of the State and the municipalities and subdivisions of the State.

Mr. GRIFFIN. That is true; but all of the employees of the Federal Government and private salaried employees draw settled incomes for which they ought to be grateful, and they ought to be content to pay a modest sum in the way of taxation. The States can follow suit if they like—as, for instance, Mississippi has done. There is a State which has adopted the gross-income tax idea and in a short time wiped out its deficit. Indiana, I understand, is about to adopt a similar law. So this proposal is no wild innovation.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McKOWN). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. GRIFFIN. I yield.

Mr. RICH. If 1-percent income tax were charged on gross incomes, does not the gentleman believe the manufacturers would take that as an item of expense and pass it on to the consumers? Would it not be the same as a sales tax?

Mr. GRIFFIN. They could not do that. I went into this very question very fully in my speech of a year ago when I introduced my original resolution (H.J.Res. 381), on May 7, 1932. I will send the gentleman a copy of it, but I think the following extract answers the gentleman's question:

HOW THE GROSS-INCOME TAX WORKS

Corporations: A corporation selling $1,000,000 worth of goods would pay a $10,000 tax. If the article they manufactured and sold was, for instance, frying pans, and they manufactured and sold 4,000,000 of them at 25 cents each, the tax on each frying pan would figure out about one fourth of 1 cent—too small to be shifted, pyramided, or otherwise burdensome to the consumer.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. The gentleman proposes to change the income-tax brackets to the brackets prior to 1932?

Mr. GRIFFIN. That is the idea; yes.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. And as an argument for that the gentleman states that evasions of income taxes are due to the high and exorbitant rates?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Yes.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. Is it not true that all of the evasions of income taxes took place before the 1932 act?

Mr. GRIFFIN. No.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. Did not the Mitchell evasion and the Mellon evasion, as set out by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McFADDEN], take place before the 1932 act?

Mr. GRIFFIN. There has never been a time since the enactment of the first income tax law that evasions have not taken place. The reason is plain. No tax is effectual which is punitive in its rates to the extent of inviting fraud. Evasions have occurred and always will occur so long as we adhere to the false principle of discriminating against groups instead of spreading a fair tax, like the gentle rain, over all.

Mr. FREAR. If the gentleman will permit just one question in reference to his bill, is this supposed to be a substitute for the regular income tax or in addition to the regular income tax?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Aside from the cent-a-dollar tax on gross incomes, it merely reinstates the income-tax rates for individuals and corporations; and that is done to lighten the burden and make the cent-a-dollar tax more easy to bear.

Mr. FREAR. Instead of the present law?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Instead of the present law; yes.

Mr. FREAR. Then a man who has an income of $1,000,000 annually would only pay $10,000 of taxes?

Mr. GRIFFIN. No; the cent-a-dollar tax on gross incomes does not take the place of the existing income tax law. Under the proposal that I make, the existing brackets of the income tax are not disturbed. The individual or corporation makes his return in the usual way, but uses the rates of the act of 1929. Then at the foot of his return he adds a 1-cent-per-dollar tax.

Under the provisions of the old act, with its exemptions and its brackets, he still has the liberty, it is true, and still has the opportunity, I admit, to resort to evasions. We cannot help this unless we finally come to the conclusion that the best way to tax is to make one broad, general tax at the source and let it filter its way down to the ultimate consumer as best it can.

But with this humble, modest suggestion of 1-cent-a-dollar tax on gross incomes, no one can be hurt.

When I introduced this proposal last year I discussed it with some Federal employees and they began to protest about a cent-a-dollar tax on their income. One fellow, getting $4,000 a year, said, "Well, I would have to pay $40 a year on that"; and I said, "Sure, you will, but if you do not get this tax you will stand a reduction of $400 in your salary"; and this is precisely what happened. He said, "I do not pay any tax; I have these exemptions for my wife and family."

Why should not every man who earns a regular income contribute his share to the support and maintenance of his Government?

I submit this question to you for your consideration.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Yes.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. As the gentleman has stated, the subject of a sales tax is one in which every Member of this body is vitally interested, particularly at this moment. The gentleman started out by stating he was opposed to the sales tax because it was passed on to the consumer. I wish the gentleman would kindly explain to the House the modus operandi by which the sales tax is passed on to the consumer.

Mr. GRIFFIN. It is imposed directly on the consumer like the tax on ice cream and soda water.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Is that the manufacturer's sales tax?

Mr. GRIFFIN. That is another exemption or another way of getting around it, but, inevitably, any sales tax which is proposed will be shifted and will be pyramided and fall upon the ultimate consumer. Another objection to the manufacturer's sales tax is its limited application and its inevitable exemptions in favor of certain groups.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I will say to the gentleman that that is my understanding and that is my objection to it—it is not only added, but pyramided, and a profit made on the taxes.

Mr. GRIFFIN. That is one reason why the gentleman ought to support my bill providing a tax of 1 cent a dollar on gross income.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. As the gentleman has given this particular subject a great deal of study I thought the gentleman could explain the matter so the membership of the House would understand it thoroughly.

Mr. GRIFFIN. The whole subject of the manufacturers' sales tax has been thoroughly canvassed and I dare not venture to believe it is not understood. What I am solicitous about is to make sure that my colleagues will understand my proposal of a cent-a-dollar tax on gross incomes. Permit me to give this summary of its principles and purposes:

First. Imposes the tax at the source, so gently and equitably that it cannot be shifted, evaded, or pyramided.

Second. Taxes those who have the ability to pay.

Third. Reaches all who have regular incomes and who evade taxation through the complicated exemptions of the present law.

Fourth. Spreads a light tax equitably, making citizens tax-conscious.

Fifth. Wipes out the custom of filing fictitious income-tax returns showing "no net incomes."

I hope it will be kept in mind that this proposal is offered as a means of raising money and closing up the deficit. It is a veritable gold mine. Upon the basis of the income-tax returns of 1930, to which I have before alluded, if the cent-a-dollar tax on gross incomes were in effect, it would have put into the Treasury $1,499,572,174 additional. I have not succeeded as yet in breaking down or analyzing the income-tax returns of 1932, but I venture the estimate that instead of the books showing $1,056,756,697 (a drop of nearly $70,000,000 over 1931) it would have raised the total receipts to $1,800,000,000—a gain of $644,000,000.

AMENDMENT OF THE NATIONAL BANKING ACT

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may have until midnight tonight to introduce an amended banking bill.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to ask the gentleman a question about the bill: Is the bill similar to the Glass bill reported to the Senate yesterday?

Mr. STEAGALL. The bill, insofar as amendments to the banking laws are concerned, is practically the same as the Glass bill. The deposit-insurance provision of the bill is substantially the same and entirely in accord with it in principle, but there are some differences in detail relating in part to the method of admitting State banks to participation in the benefits of the guaranty fund, and a slight change as to the time in which the bill is to become effective.

Mr. PATMAN. I presume the chairman contemplates reporting the bill out from the committee tomorrow?

Mr. STEAGALL. The committee has ordered the bill reported and I am asking permission to introduce the bill as amended so as to avoid the necessity of considering committee amendments in the House.

Mr. PATMAN. The reason I ask the question is this: I asked permission to be heard before the committee on this bill. There are two features of it to which I am very much opposed. One is to further farm out the privilege of issuing money to a few powerful bankers in the Nation and giving them all the profits they make out of using the Government credit free of charge. Particularly, I call the gentleman's attention to section 3 of his bill or section 4 of the Glass bill, which amends section 7 of the Federal Reserve Act, which bill formerly required all excess profits to go into the United States Treasury as a franchise tax, which was later amended providing that excess profits may be retained until the surplus amounted to 40 percent of the capital stock of the Federal Reserve banks, and then in 1919, in March, it was further amended so as to permit excess earnings to go into the surplus fund until such surplus fund amounts to 100 percent of the capital stock of the Federal Reserve banks. This bill, if I understand it correctly, will give all the excess earnings to the Federal Reserve banks instead of the excess earnings going into the United States Treasury. The Government does not own one penny of stock in the Federal Reserve banks; it is all owned by private bankers.

This is one of the features of the bill I am very much opposed to, and I sought an opportunity to be heard before the committee, and I am awfully sorry I was not allowed that opportunity.

Mr. STEAGALL. I will say to my friend that the committee would have appreciated the benefit of his views. I am sure the gentleman realizes the desire that exists everywhere to finish the work of this session of Congress. The legislation has been thoroughly considered in the Senate, both in committee and by the entire body. The provision to which the gentleman refers was passed by the Senate in the last Congress. The House committee had the benefit of the Senate hearings. In view of the peculiar conditions that exist and the emergency nature of the measure, and the desire to end the session at an early date, it was decided by the committee that we should proceed to the consideration of the bill in executive session and report it immediately. We called an expert from the Treasury Department to discuss some of the technical provisions of the bill, but the committee decided that it would not hold open hearings at this late day in the session.

Mr. PATMAN. May I ask the gentleman one more question? Will the chairman of the committee request a special rule on the bill or will it come up under the general rules of the House subject to amendment with plenty of time allowed for discussion? As I was not afforded permission to appear before the committee, I should like to discuss the bill at some length on the floor.

Mr. STEAGALL. I hope the gentleman will be permitted to discuss the bill at length on the floor.

Mr. PATMAN. Will it be subject to amendment?

Mr. STEAGALL. The gentleman is asking me to say more than I am permitted to say. Of course, I desire to have plenty of time for discussion.

Mr. PATMAN. I am not in favor of expediting a bill that gives a billion-dollar franchise to a few bankers, although it may contain some desirable provisions.

Mr. STEAGALL. I am sure the gentleman does not care to discuss the merits of the legislation now.

Mr. PATMAN. The guarantee feature, as I understand it, provides that the Government shall put up $150,000,000 from its surplus fund, the Federal Reserve banks will put up $150,000,000, which in fact belongs to the Government of the United States, so that the Government puts up $300,000,000 and then the bankers will put up $150,000,000 more. However, the bankers putting up the last $150,000,000 will be relieved of paying interest on demand deposits, which will save them $259,000,000 annually. So the banks are not only not out anything but will actually make a profit of $114,000,000 the first year with increased profits each year.

Mr. STEAGALL. The gentleman is slightly in error as to the initial subscription to stock of the Deposit Insurance Corporation. The Federal Reserve banks are to subscribe one half of their surplus, which amounts in round numbers to close to $140,000,000. The surplus fund of the Reserve banks is something like $280,000,000. The gentleman is also in error as to the payment of interest on demand deposits. That provision is not in the bill which is to be introduced in the House.

Mr. PATMAN. I understand the provisions will be insisted upon at the other end of the Capitol. I hope the gentleman will bring in a bill accompanied by a rule allowing amendments and liberal debate. This is not an administration measure, so we cannot be charged with disloyalty to the party if we humbly ask for permission to offer and discuss amendments to the bill.

(Cries of "Regular order!")

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I object.

THE CONSENT CALENDAR

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the unanimous-consent order of yesterday, it is in order now to consider bills on the Consent Calendar. The Clerk will call the first bill.

FEDERAL CONFORMITY ACT

The business on the Consent Calendar was the bill (H.R. 5091) to amend section 289 of the Criminal Code.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, was not that bill passed yesterday under suspension of the rules?

Mr. McKEOWN. No.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 289 of the Criminal Code (U.S.C., title 18, sec. 468) be, and it is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 289. Whoever, within the territorial limits of any State, organized Territory, or District, but within or upon any of the places now existing or hereafter reserved or acquired, described in section 272 of the Criminal Code (U.S.C., title 18, sec. 451), shall do or omit the doing of any act or thing which is not made penal by any laws of Congress, but which if committed or omitted within the jurisdiction of the State, Territory, or District in which such place is situated, by the laws thereof in force on January 1, 1933, would be penal, shall be deemed guilty of a like offense and be subject to a like punishment; and every such State, Territorial, or district law shall, for the purposes of this section, continue in force, notwithstanding any subsequent repeal or amendment thereof by any such State, Territory, or District."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

ARREST AND RETURN OF PROBATION VIOLATORS

The next business on the Consent Calendar was the bill (H.R. 5208) to amend the probation law.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the first sentence of the second paragraph of the act of March 4, 1925, entitled "An act to provide for the establishment of a probation system in the United States courts, except in the District of Columbia" (U.S.C., title 18, sec. 725), be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows: "At any time within the probation period the probation officer may arrest the probationer wherever found, without a warrant, or the court which has granted the probation may issue a warrant for his arrest, which warrant may be executed by either the probation officer or the United States marshal of either the district in which the probationer was put upon probation or of any district in which the probationer shall be found and, if the probationer shall be so arrested in a district other than that in which he has been put upon probation, any of said officers may return probationer to the district out of which such warrant shall have been issued."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS LAKE SABINE, PORT ARTHUR, TEX.

The next business on the Consent Calendar was the bill (H.R. 4870) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across Lake Sabine at or near Port Arthur, Tex.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SWANK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

BRIDGE ACROSS NORTHWEST RIVER, VA.

The next business on the Consent Calendar was the bill (H.R. 5152) granting the consent of Congress to the State Highway Commission of Virginia to replace and maintain a bridge across Northwest River in Norfolk County, Va., on State Highway Route No. 27.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Clerk will report the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the State Highway Commission of Virginia, and its successors, to replace and operate a free highway bridge and approaches thereto across the Northwest River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near Norfolk County, Va., on State Highway Route No. 27, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled 'An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters', approved March 23, 1906."

Sec. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The committee amendment was agreed to; and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS STAUNTON AND DAN RIVERS, VA.

The next business on the Consent Calendar was the bill (H.R. 5173) granting the consent of Congress to the State Highway Commission of Virginia to maintain a bridge already constructed to replace a weak structure in the same location, across the Staunton and Dan Rivers, in Mecklenburg County, Va., on United States Route No. 15.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the State Highway Commission of Virginia, and its successors, to maintain and operate, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, a bridge and approaches thereto already constructed to replace an inadequate structure already constructed across the Staunton and Dan Rivers, at their mouths—Clarksville, in Mecklenburg County, which bridge is hereby declared to be a lawful structure to the same extent and in the same manner as if it had been constructed in accordance with the provisions of said act of March 23, 1906.

Sec. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

The next business on the Consent Calendar was the bill (H.R. 5476) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Savannah River at or near Burtons Ferry, near Sylvania, Ga.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge authorized by act of Congress approved May 26, 1928, heretofore revived and reenacted by act of Congress approved April 22, 1932, to be built by the South Carolina and Georgia State Highway Departments across the Savannah River at or near Burtons Ferry, near Sylvania, Ga., are hereby extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from the date of approval hereof.

Sec. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

IDENTITY OF THE DALLES BRIDGE CO.

The next business on the Consent Calendar was the bill (S. 1278) to amend an act (Public, No. 431, 72d Cong.) to identify The Dalles Bridge Co.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Is that meant to indemnify or identify?

Mr. MILLIGAN. It is meant to identify.

Mr. GOSS. Is this the same bridge bill that is before the Committee on Military Affairs?

Mr. KNUTE HILL. It is.

Mr. GOSS. In connection with the building of a bridge across that canal?

Mr. KNUTE HILL. This bill was passed authorizing the Dalles Bridge Co. to build that bridge in the last session of the Congress. There are two Dalles companies. One is a corporation organized in Washington and the other is organized in Oregon. It was not specified in the bill, and this is to identify the Washington corporation and not the Oregon.

Mr. GOSS. The gentleman is aware of the fact that the Committee on Military Affairs has a bill before it about this same bridge, at the present time, and that the subcommittee having it in charge has not reported the bill favorably?

I understand there was some difficulty about the land over the canal and rights of way there.

Mr. MILLIGAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOSS. Yes; I yield.

Mr. MILLIGAN. That is not involved in this bill. The authority to build this bridge was granted in the last session.

Mr. GOSS. I understand that.

Mr. MILLIGAN. There are two corporations—an Oregon corporation and a Washington corporation. This merely designates the corporation as the Washington corporation.

Mr. GOSS. But the Committee on Military Affairs, of which I am a member, has this same bill back again, because they could not build the bridge without certain amendments to the bill as it passed the House last year.

Mr. MILLIGAN. Is that not for authority to construct over certain Government land?

Mr. GOSS. Yes.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOSS. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Is this bridge to be constructed over the Columbia River at Astoria?

Mr. GOSS. No; not at Astoria. It is at The Dalles. The bill that was passed last year would not give authority to build this bridge over a Government canal without additional authority. The Military Affairs Committee has that bill before it. The only reason they have it instead of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce is because it affects the War Department's property. I do not want to see this mixed up with that bill which is before the committee now.

Mr. MILLIGAN. That has nothing to do with it.

Mr. GOSS. I wish the gentleman would let this go over until the Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs is present. I would ask the gentleman to let it go over without prejudice until the Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee is on the floor.

Mr. MILLIGAN. That will be satisfactory.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Goss]?

There was no objection.

TOLL BRIDGE ACROSS MISSOURI RIVER, PLATTE COUNTY, MO., TO KANSAS CITY, KANS.

The Clerk called the next business on the Consent Calendar (H.J.Res. 159) granting the consent of Congress to a compact or agreement between the State of Kansas and the State of Missouri authorizing the acceptance for and on behalf of the States of Kansas and Missouri of title to a toll bridge across the Missouri River from a point in Platte County, Mo., to a point at or near Kansas City, in Wyandotte County, Kans., and specifying the conditions thereof.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the House joint resolution?

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the author of the bill why the suggestion of the Department of Agriculture was not carried out? The letter from the Assistant Secretary of Agriculture suggests an amendment, that some provision should be inserted, conditioning the approval of Congress to said compact or agreement upon the maintenance and operation of the bridge free of tolls after the amortization of its construction costs.

Mr. MILLIGAN. If the gentleman will look on page 5 of the report on the original bill granting the franchise to build this bridge, he will see that provision is contained in the original authority.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. It is in the original authority?

Mr. MILLIGAN. Yes.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Then the Department of Agriculture did not have that information before it?

Mr. MILLIGAN. They were mistaken.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Eventually it is to become a free bridge?

Mr. MILLIGAN. Yes, sir.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas by an act of Congress approved May 22, 1928, a franchise was granted to the Interstate Bridge Co. for the construction of a toll bridge across the Missouri River at or near Kansas City, Kans., which has been extended by the acts of March 2, 1929, and June 30, 1930, and which is now owned by the Regional Bridge Co., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, as assignee of the Interstate Bridge Co.; and

Whereas authority has been granted to the State Highway Commission of Kansas by an act of the Legislature of the State of Kansas, approved March 24, 1933, and published in the official State paper on March 27, 1933, and to the State Highway Commission of Missouri by an identical act, mutatis mutandis, of the General Assembly of the State of Missouri, approved April 17, 1933, to include in the highway systems of the respective States of Kansas and Missouri any toll bridge across any river forming a common boundary between the two States; to join in entering into contracts with the owner of any such toll bridge and with the holders of any bonds issued in connection with the construction of such bridge, by the terms of which the State Highway Commissions of Kansas and Missouri shall maintain, operate, and insure such bridge, and fix and collect and apply tolls thereon, and shall construct, maintain, and operate as free State highways, approaches thereto, and shall make and treat as part of the highway system of their respective States such entire bridge and any part of such approaches lying within their respective States; and to accept conveyance of title to and ownership of any such bridge or part thereof situated within their respective States, subject to any encumbrance against any such bridge and pledge of its tolls previously executed; and

Whereas Regional Bridge Co. has obtained an agreement from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation of the United States to aid in financing the construction of a bridge under the franchise granted by the act of May 22, 1928, and extensions thereof, under authority of the act of Congress known as the "Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932", by purchasing at par the bonds of Regional Bridge Co., secured by mortgage on such bridge, in the amount of $600,000, upon condition that certain requirements be met and agreed to by the States of Kansas and Missouri; and

Whereas the Legislature of the State of Kansas and the General Assembly of the State of Missouri, to make effective the acts of their respective legislative bodies herein cited and to meet the requirements imposed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation have each adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas Regional Bridge Co., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, is the owner and holder of a franchise granted by the Congress of the United States to construct (according to plans approved by the War Department of the United States), maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Missouri River from a point at or near Kansas

City in Wyandotte County, Kans., to a point in Platte County, Mo.; and

"Whereas Regional Bridge Co. desires to commence the construction of such bridge as soon as the same is fully financed; and

"Whereas Reconstruction Finance Corporation of the United States has agreed with Regional Bridge Co. to aid in financing the construction of such bridge, under authority of the act of Congress known as the 'Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932', by purchasing at par the bonds of Regional Bridge Co., secured by mortgage on such bridge, in the amount of $600,000; but

"Whereas Reconstruction Finance Corporation has imposed certain requirements, to be met and agreed to by the States of Missouri and Kansas, as conditions precedent to its purchase of such bonds; and

"Whereas inasmuch as such bridge will form an important link in and improvement to the highway systems of the States of Missouri and Kansas, and will be of benefit and advantage to the citizens of both, and the public, and inasmuch as Regional Bridge Co., by resolution duly passed by the unanimous vote of its stockholders, has agreed to transfer and convey such bridge, free of cost, to the State Highway Commissions of Missouri and of Kansas, on behalf of such States of Missouri and Kansas, jointly, such conveyance to be made as soon as such mortgage shall have been properly recorded in both Missouri and Kansas, subject to the right of and duty upon Regional Bridge Co. fully to complete the construction of such bridge, it is to the interest and benefit of the States of Missouri and Kansas, and the citizens of both, that the States of Missouri and Kansas meet and agree to the requirements of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, as conditions precedent to the purchase of such bonds: Now, therefore

"In consideration of the benefits and advantages accruing to the States of Missouri and Kansas, and the citizens of both, and in consideration of the adoption of this resolution by both the States of Missouri and Kansas, the States of Missouri and Kansas hereby enter into the following compact and agreement: Be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Kansas (the house of representatives agreeing thereto):

"Section 1. Regional Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, shall be, and it is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate such bridge across the Missouri River from a point at or near Kansas City, in Wyandotte County, Kans., to a point in Platte County, Mo., according to plans approved by the War Department of the United States; and the said States hereby authorize Regional Bridge Co. to enter upon and use for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating such bridge all necessary lands under water belonging to said States, and the fee to any lands so used shall upon such use be vested in such Regional Bridge Co.

"Sec. 2. The State Highway Commission of Missouri and the State Highway Commission of Kansas shall be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to accept, when tendered by Regional Bridge Co., conveyance of such bridge and franchise therefor to such State Highway Commission jointly, on behalf of the States of Missouri and Kansas. Such conveyance shall not be in assumption of such mortgage, but shall expressly be subject to such mortgage, and to the right and duty upon Regional Bridge Co. fully to complete the construction of such bridge.

"Sec. 3. The State Highway Commission of Missouri and the State Highway Commission of Kansas shall be, and they, and each of them, hereby are, authorized to maintain, operate, and insure such bridge and to fix and collect tolls thereon and apply such tolls, and to enter into any and all contracts with said Reconstruction Finance Corporation or any other party or parties considered by said highway commissions, or either of them, to be necessary or expedient for or in connection with the proper maintenance, operation, and insurance of such bridge and such fixing, collection, and application of tolls thereon, and to incur joint and several obligations under such contracts; and to construct and maintain, and to enter into any contracts, severally, with said Reconstruction Finance Corporation or any other party or parties, considered by said highway commissions or either of them to be necessary or expedient, for or in connection with the construction and maintenance of approaches to such bridge and roadways leading thereto, lying within their respective States. And said highway commissions, and each of them, are further authorized to make and treat as a part of the State highway system of their respective States the entire such bridge and that portion of the approaches thereto lying within their respective States, and to enter into contracts with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or any other party or parties in respect thereto.

"Sec. 4. Neither the State of Kansas nor the State of Missouri, nor any department or political subdivision thereof, shall construct or cause to be constructed, or grant any right, privilege, or franchise for the construction of, any bridge, ferry, tunnel, or other competing facility across or under the Missouri River within a distance of 5 miles from said bridge, measured along the meanderings of the thread of the stream of the Missouri River, until the construction costs of said bridge, with interest thereon, shall have been fully paid.

"Sec. 5. To the faithful observance of this compact and agreement the States of Missouri and Kansas, by the adoption of this resolution, each pledges its good faith.

"Sec. 6. This compact and agreement shall be in force and take effect from and after its adoption by the General Assembly of the State of Missouri, and approval by the Governor of Missouri, and its adoption by the Legislature of the State of Kansas, and approval by the Governor of Kansas, and publication in the official State paper of the State of Kansas, and upon its receiving the consent and approval of the Congress of the United States": Therefore be it—

Resolved, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to the aforesaid compact or agreement and to each and every term and provision thereof, and to all agreements to be made pursuant thereto by and between the said States or any agencies, commissions, or public or municipal bodies thereof: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect, impair, or diminish any right, power, or jurisdiction of the United States or of any court, department, board, bureau, officer, or official of the United States, over or in regard to any navigable waters, or any commerce between the State or with foreign countries, or any bridge, railroad highway, pier, wharf, or other facility or improvement, or any other person, matter, or thing, forming the subject matter of the aforesaid compact or agreement or otherwise affected by the terms thereof: And provided further, That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this resolution or any part thereof is hereby expressly reserved.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 7, line —, after the word "public", insert the words "or municipal."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The House joint resolution as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ST. LAWRENCE BRIDGE COMMISSION

The Clerk called the next business on the Consent Calendar, H.R. 5329, creating the St. Lawrence Bridge Commission and authorizing said commission and its successors to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the St. Lawrence River at or near Ogdensburg, N.Y.

There being no objection, the Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to facilitate international commerce, the St. Lawrence Bridge Commission (hereinafter created, and hereinafter referred to as the "Commission") and its successors and assigns, be, and are hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the St. Lawrence River at or near the city of Ogdensburg, N.Y., at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act, and subject to the approval of the proper authorities in the Dominion of Canada. For like purposes said Commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to purchase, maintain, and operate all or any ferries across the St. Lawrence River within 5 miles of the location which shall be selected for said bridge, subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act, and subject to the approval of the proper authorities in the Dominion of Canada.

SEC. 2. There is hereby conferred upon the Commission and its successors and assigns all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use such real estate and other property in the State of New York as may be needed for the location, construction, operation, and maintenance of such bridge and its approaches as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State of New York, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation of private property for public purposes in such State; and the Commission and its successors and assigns may exercise in the Dominion of Canada all rights, powers, and authority which shall be granted or permitted to the Commission by the proper authorities of the Dominion of Canada or of the Province of Ontario, including the entering upon lands and acquiring, condemning, occupying, possessing, and using such real estate and other property in the Dominion of Canada as may be needed for such location, construction, operation, and maintenance of such bridge.

SEC. 3. The Commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge and such ferry or ferries in accordance with the provisions of this act.

SEC. 4. The Commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to provide for the payment of the cost of the bridge and its approaches and the ferry or ferries and the necessary lands, easements, and appurtenances thereto by an issue or issues of negotiable bonds of the Commission, bearing interest at not more than 6 percent per annum, the principal and interest of which bonds and any premium to be paid for retirement thereof before maturity shall be payable solely from the sinking fund provided in accordance with this act. Such bonds may be registerable as to principal alone or both principal and interest, shall be in such form not inconsistent with this act, shall mature at such time or times not exceeding 30 years from their respective dates, shall be in such denominations, shall be executed in such manner and be payable in such medium and at such place or places as the Commission may determine. The Commission may repurchase and may reserve the right to redeem all or any of said bonds before maturity in such manner and at such price or prices, not exceeding 105 and accrued interest, as may be fixed by the Commission prior to the issuance of the bonds. The Commission may enter into an agreement with any bank or trust company in the United States as trustee having the power to make such agreement, setting forth the duties of the Commission in respect of the construction, maintenance, operation, repair, and insurance of the bridge and/or the ferry or ferries, the conservation and application of all funds, the safeguarding of moneys on hand or on deposit, and the rights and remedies of said trustee and the holders of the bonds, restricting the individual right of action of the bondholders as is customary in trust agreements respecting bonds of corporations. Such trust agreements may contain such provisions for protecting and enforcing the rights and remedies of the trustee and the bondholders as may be reasonable and proper and not inconsistent with the law and also provisions for approval by the original purchasers of the bonds of the employment of consulting engineers and of the security given by the bridge contractors and by any bank or trust company in which the proceeds of bonds or of bridge or ferry tolls or other moneys of the Commission shall be deposited, and may provide that no contract for construction shall be made without the approval of the consulting engineers. The bridge constructed under the authority of this act shall be deemed to be an instrumentality for international commerce authorized by the Government of the United States, and said bridge and ferry or ferries and the bonds issued in connection therewith and the income derived therefrom shall be exempt from all Federal, State, municipal, and local taxation. Said bonds shall be sold in such manner and at such time or times and at such price as the Commission may determine, but no such sale shall be made at a price so low as to require the payment of more than 6 percent interest on the money received therefor, computed with relation to the absolute maturity of the bonds in accordance with standard tables of bond values, and the face amount thereof shall be so calculated as to produce, at the price of their sale, the cost of the bridge and its approaches, and the land, easements, and appurtenances used in connection therewith and, in the event the ferry or ferries are to be acquired, also the cost of such ferry or ferries and the lands, easements, and appurtenances used in connection therewith. The cost of the bridge and ferry or ferries shall be deemed to include interest during construction of the bridge, and for 12 months thereafter, and all engineering, legal, architectural, traffic surveying, and other expenses incident to the construction of the bridge or the acquisition of the ferry or ferries, and the acquisition of the necessary property, and incident to the financing thereof, including the cost of acquiring existing franchises, rights, plans, and works of and relating to the bridge, now owned by any person, firm, or corporation, and the cost of purchasing all or any part of the shares of stock of any such corporate owner if, in the judgment of the Commission, such purchases should be found expedient. If the proceeds of the bonds issued shall exceed the cost as finally determined, the excess shall be placed in the sinking fund hereinafter provided. Prior to the preparation of definitive bonds the Commission may, under like restrictions, issue temporary bonds or interim certificates with or without coupons of any denomination whatsoever, exchangeable for definitive bonds when such bonds have been executed and are available for delivery.

SEC. 5. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of depreciating, maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to pay the principal and interest of such bonds as the same shall fall due and the redemption or repurchase price of all or any thereof redeemed or repurchased before maturity as herein provided. All tolls and other revenues from said bridge are hereby pledged to such uses and to the application thereof hereinafter in this section required. After payment or provision for payment therefrom of all such cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating and the reservation of an amount of money estimated to be sufficient for the same purpose during an ensuing period of not more than 6 months, the remainder of tolls collected shall be placed in the sinking fund, at intervals to be determined by the Commission prior to the issuance of the bonds. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected, shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested. The Commission shall classify in a reasonable way all traffic over the bridge, so that the tolls shall be so fixed and adjusted by it as to be uniform in the application thereof to all traffic falling within any such reasonable class, regardless of the status or character of any person, firm, or corporation participating in such traffic, and shall prevent all use of such bridge for traffic except upon payment of the tolls so fixed and adjusted. No toll shall be charged officials or employees of the Commission or of the Governments of the United States or Canada while in the discharge of their duties.

SEC. 6. Nothing herein contained shall require the Commission or its successors to maintain or operate any ferry or ferries purchased hereunder, but in the discretion of the Commission or its successors any ferry or ferries so purchased, with the appurtenances and property thereto connected and belonging, may be sold or otherwise disposed of or may be abandoned and/or dismantled whenever in the judgment of the Commission or its successors it may seem expedient so to do. The Commission and its successors may fix such rates of toll for the use of such ferry or ferries as it may deem proper, subject to the same conditions as are hereinabove required as to tolls for traffic over the bridge. All tolls collected for the use of the ferry or ferries and the proceeds of any sale or disposition of any ferry or ferries shall be used, so far as may be necessary, to pay the cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and any residue thereof shall be paid into the sinking fund hereinabove provided for bonds. An accurate record of the cost of purchasing the ferry or ferries, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

Sec. 7. After payment of the bonds and interest, or after a sinking fund sufficient for such payment shall have been provided and shall be held for that purpose, the Commission shall deliver deeds or other suitable instruments of conveyance of the interest of the Commission in and to the bridge, that part within the United States to the State of New York or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereinafter referred to as the "United States interests") and that part within Canada to the Dominion of Canada or to such Province, municipality, or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereinafter referred to as the "Canadian interests"), under the condition that the bridge shall thereafter be free of tolls and be properly maintained, operated, and repaired by the United States interests and the Canadian interests, as may be agreed upon; but if either the United States interests or the Canadian interests shall not be authorized to accept or shall not accept the same under such conditions, then the bridge shall continue to be owned, maintained, operated, and repaired by the Commission, and the rates of tolls shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management, until such time as both the United States interests and the Canadian interests shall be authorized to accept and shall accept such conveyance under such conditions. If at the time of such conveyance the Commission or its successors shall not have disposed of such ferry or ferries, the same shall be disposed of by sale as soon as practicable, at such price and upon such terms as the Commission or its successors may determine, but in making any such sale preference shall be given to the Canadian interests and thereafter to the United States interests before any sale except to such respective interests.

Sec. 8. For the purpose of carrying into effect the objects stated in this act there is hereby created the St. Lawrence Bridge Commission, and by that name, style, and title said body shall have perpetual succession; may contract and be contracted with, sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded, complain and defend in all courts of law and equity; may make and have a common seal; may purchase or otherwise acquire and hold or dispose of real estate and other property; may accept and receive donations or gifts of money or other property and apply same to the purposes of this act; and shall have and possess all powers necessary, convenient, or proper for carrying into effect the objects stated in this act.

The Commission shall consist of Walter Willson, George W. Sisson, Jr., John Bird, James C. Dolan, Albert P. Newell, Charles Steger, Franklin R. Little, Felix Hulser, Arthur Belgard, Robert H. McEwen, and Julius Frank. Such Commission shall be a body corporate and politic constituting a public-benefit corporation. Any vacancy occurring in said Commission shall be filled by a majority vote of the remaining members of the Commission, and notices of elections to fill vacancies and of acceptances thereof shall be filed with the county clerk of St. Lawrence County, N.Y. Each member of the Commission and their respective successors shall qualify by giving such bond as may be fixed by the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture, conditioned for the faithful performance of all duties required by this act. The Commission shall elect a chairman and a vice chairman from its members, and may establish rules and regulations for the government of its own business. Five members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business: Provided, however, That if there be less than five members of said Commission on account of vacancies, the remaining member or members may fill such vacancies.

Sec. 9. The Commission shall have no capital stock or shares of interest or participation, and all revenues and receipts thereof shall be applied to the purposes specified in this act. The members of the Commission shall be entitled to a per diem compensation for their services of $10 for each day actually spent in the business of the Commission, but the maximum compensation of the chairman in any year shall not exceed $2,500 and of each other member shall not exceed $500. The members of the Commission shall also be entitled to receive traveling expense allowance of 10 cents a mile for each mile actually traveled on the business of the Commission. The Commission may employ a secretary, treasurer, engineers, attorneys, and such other experts, assistants, and employees as they may deem necessary, who shall be entitled to receive such compensation as the Commission may determine. All salaries and expenses shall be paid solely from the funds provided under the authority of this act. After all bonds and interest thereon shall have been paid and all other obligations of the Commission paid or discharged, or provision for all such payment shall have been made as hereinbefore provided, and after the bridge shall have been conveyed to the United States interests and the Canadian interests as herein provided, and any ferry or ferries shall have been sold, the Commission shall be dissolved and shall cease to have further existence by an order of the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads made upon his own initiative or upon application of the Commission or any member or members thereof, but only after a public hearing in the city of Ogdensburg, notice of the time and place of which hearing and the purpose thereof shall have been published once, at least 30 days before the date thereof, in a newspaper published in the city of Ogdensburg, N.Y., and a newspaper published in Prescott, Ontario. At the time of such dissolution all moneys in the hands of or to the credit of the Commission shall be divided into two equal parts, one of which shall be paid to said United States interests and the other to said Canadian interests.

Sec. 10. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize or permit the Commission or any member thereof to create any obligation or incur any liability other than such obligations and liabilities as are dischargeable solely from funds provided by this act. No obligation created or liability incurred pursuant to this act shall be an obligation or liability of any member or members of the Commission, but shall be chargeable solely to the funds herein provided, nor shall any indebtedness created pursuant to this act be an indebtedness of the United States.

Sec. 11. All provisions of this act may be enforced, or the violation thereof prevented by mandamus, injunction, or other appropriate remedy brought by the attorney general for the State of New York, the United States district attorney for the district in which the bridge may be located in part, or by the Solicitor General of the Dominion of Canada in any court having competent jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the parties.

Sec. 12. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS EAST RIVER BETWEEN BRONX AND WHITESTONE LANDING

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 5394, authorizing Charles V. Bossert, his heirs and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the East River between Bronx and Whitestone Landing.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Speaker, I object.

CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that business in order on Calendar Wednesday, tomorrow, be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

RECEIVERS, TRUSTEES, REFEREES IN BANKRUPTCY, AND RECEIVERS IN EQUITY CAUSES

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 110 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That, when in its judgment such investigations are justified, the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives be, and it is hereby, authorized to inquire into and investigate the matter of appointments, conduct, proceedings, and acts of receivers, trustees, referees in bankruptcy, and receivers in equity causes for the conservation of assets within the jurisdiction of the United States district courts.

Sec. 2. The said committee, or subcommittees thereof, to be appointed by the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, shall specifically inquire into and investigate the selection of receivers and trustees, and the selection and appointment of counsel and assistants to such receivers and trustees, referees, custodians, auctioneers, appraisers, accountants, and other aides to the court in the administration of bankruptcy estates and equity receiverships; and shall inquire into and investigate all other questions in relation thereto that would aid Congress in any necessary remedial legislation.

Sec. 3. The said committee, or any subcommittee thereof, to be appointed by the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, shall inquire into and investigate the action of any district judge or judges in the setting up and promulgating of any rule or rules of practice of the court appointing the same person or corporation as receiver in all cases or in any class of cases, and to inquire into and investigate the action of any district judge or judges in setting up and promulgating any rule or rules of practice of the court which in effect, directly or indirectly, interferes with or prevents the control of bankruptcy estates by creditors according to the spirit and letter of the bankruptcy statutes; and to inquire into and investigate all other questions in relation thereto that would aid the Congress in any necessary remedial legislation.

Sec. 4. The committee shall report to the House of Representatives not later than the 31st day of January 1934 the result of its investigation, together with such recommendations as it deems advisable.

SEC. 5. The said committee, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized to sit and act at such times and places within the United States, whether or not the House is sitting, has recessed, or has adjourned, to hold such hearings, to employ suitable counsel, assistants, and investigators in aid of its investigation, as well as such experts, and such clerical, stenographic, and other assistants, to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, by subpoena or otherwise, to take such testimony, to have such printing and binding done, and to make such expenditures as it deems necessary; and all such expenses thereof shall be paid on vouchers ordered by said committee and approved by the Chairman thereof. Subpoenas shall be issued under the signature of the chairman of the Judiciary Committee or of the chairman of any subcommittee and shall be served by any person designated by any of them. The chairman of the committee or any member thereof may administer oaths to witnesses. Every person who, having been summoned as a witness by authority of said committee or any subcommittee thereof, willfully makes default, or who, having appeared, refuses to answer any question pertinent to the investigation heretofore authorized, shall be held to the penalties provided by section 102 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Is this bill being considered under unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. This is a privileged resolution from the Committee on Rules.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. This is an innocent-looking proposition on its face, but before we go into it—

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I prefer not to yield at this time. I will discuss the matter fully.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve a point of order on the resolution before it is discussed.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANSLEY] and I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, this is a resolution for a broad and general investigation of the practice in Federal courts in the matter of the appointment of receivers and trustees in bankruptcy cases and of receivers in equity cases.

The resolution came to the Rules Committee from the Judiciary Committee with a request for a rule. I am informed that the Judiciary Committee unanimously asked for the investigation and asked for the rule upon which the matter now comes before the House.

This resolution in its original form, as first introduced by the gentleman from New York, called for an investigation primarily of the situation in the city of New York with respect to the Irving Trust Co. There is a rule of court in that city under which the Irving Trust Co., and the Irving Trust Co. alone, can be appointed receiver or trustee in any bankruptcy case; and I am informed that they have been appointed in something like 5,000 cases.

When that resolution came before the Rules Committee there was some discussion about it, and it attracted some attention. There came a demand from numerous quarters of the country for a general investigation of this subject because of alleged abuses, both in the matter of the appointment of receivers and trustees, in the matter of favoritism, and in the matter of the allowance of most excessive fees in many of these bankruptcy estates.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. SNELL. I did not understand the necessity for the consideration of this resolution at the present time. Will the gentleman tell the House the necessity of it?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. It is necessary because of alleged abuses, if I may so term it, with respect to favoritism in the appointment of receivers, and the allowance of large fees which are regarded as excessive by the bar associations of numerous parts of the country.

Now, I do not know how general it is, but since this resolution has been up there has come to my attention complaint from a number of different cities, complaint from bar associations in several places. The gentlemen who will follow me will go more into detail than I can, but the bar associations of several large cities, I am told, have asked this investigation and have passed resolutions.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for another question?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. SNELL. Is it not a fact that these judges appointed the Irving Trust Co. because they wanted someone who would preserve some of the funds of the creditors? Was not that the original intent?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I understand that there was some difficulty in New York with respect to those matters and that as a solution of it the courts thought that the appointment of one trustee in all cases would solve the difficulty, but it is charged that this has led to other conditions that are far from satisfactory.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, the discussion has gone along far enough now that I shall make the point of order. The Speaker may as well rule now as at any other time.

I call the Speaker's attention to section 5 of the resolution, page 3, reading as follows:

The said committee, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized to sit and act at such times and places within the United States, whether or not the House is sitting, has recessed, or has adjourned—

This shows they can sit any time and anywhere in the United States, from Alaska to the Gulf of Mexico. It is further provided that they may—

Hold such hearings, employ suitable counsel, assistants, and investigators in aid of its investigation, as well as such experts, and such clerical, stenographic, and other assistants, to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, by subpoena or otherwise, to take such testimony, to have such printing and binding done, and to make such expenditures as it deems necessary; and all such expenses thereof shall be paid on vouchers ordered by said committee and approved by the chairman thereof.

Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the Committee on Rules has no jurisdiction whatever to report to this House a resolution of this kind, because the resolution shows on its face that it is a charge on the Treasury.

Such a resolution as this could cost the Government $200,000, or even twice that sum. The 25 members of this Committee on the Judiciary, or any subcommittee thereof, between now and the 1st of next January could sit in every big city in the United States from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Their railroad fare, traveling expenses, hotel bills, would be paid by Congress. They could employ as many lawyers as they wished, and pay them any salaries they wished, wholly without limitation. They could employ high-priced experts, clerks, stenographers, wholly without limit. We know how much the Joe Walsh committee cost. We know how much the Graham, of Illinois, committee cost. We know that the coal investigating committee cost, first, $400,000, and then another $400,000. We know that the initial cost of the Wickersham Committee was $500,000. I am going to try to stop all such resolutions that do not provide for a limitation of expenses. This resolution is clearly subject to a point of order, because the Committee on Rules does not have any authority or jurisdiction to report such a measure that carries such a charge on the Treasury.

While the Rules Committee would have the right to bring in a rule to make such a matter in order, it has no right, in the first instance, to favorably report such a resolution. I insist that my point of order is good and should be sustained.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, this matter was considered by the Rules Committee, and it was the general opinion of the members that where the resolution carried no appropriation there could be no charge on the Treasury, and that before any money would be available to pay the vouchers mentioned in the resolution, a resolution would have to be introduced and considered by the Accounts Committee and reported by that committee and passed by the House. As a further check on the expenditure of the funds of the Government there is, of course, the Appropriations Committee.

This language is the usual language carried of late in such resolutions. Of course, the privilege would be destroyed if there were a specific amount appropriated to meet these expenses.

I know there has been some question of this kind raised every time one of these resolutions has come up. I raised the question myself, and the matter was discussed in the Rules Committee. It was brought to the attention of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. LEHLBACH], whom we consider a very good parliamentarian, and the gentleman from New Jersey felt that the provision as it exists in this resolution, without any appropriation being made, did not take away from the resolution its privilege under the rules of the House.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. I appreciate that what the gentleman has said is partly correct, and at times we have reported out of the Rules Committee similar resolutions. But, as a matter of fact, when there was really anything at stake or when any question was raised about it, we never reported such resolutions, because there is absolutely no doubt in my mind but what the section to which the gentleman from Texas has made a point of order is subject to the point of order.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Now, to be practical, what is the efficacy of such vouchers if you have not provided the money? How can anybody enforce a charge on the Government under the language of this resolution?

Mr. SNELL. That is partly true, but in the final analysis the language does authorize something the Rules Committee has not the right to authorize at the present time. I thought the gentleman had brought in a resolution making this in order, the same as was done with respect to the resolution the other day.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The resolution which was made in order by a rule the other day carried some appropriation, as I recall it.

Mr. SNELL. The language was practically the same as the language of this section. It did not specify any particular amount of money.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. If the gentleman will permit, there was no specific amount named in the Sirovich resolution. It was my purpose as a member of the Committee on Accounts to bring up the very question that the gentleman from Texas has now raised. When the House passes a resolution of this character, we are asked to bring in a resolution from the Committee on Accounts providing for the money. The committee that is to act always holds when the House passes a resolution it is a mandate and we are called upon to provide money. It seems to me there should be some limitation placed in resolutions of this character. There is no limitation here whatever. The whole thing is wide open. That is not good business. Lawyers, accountants, clerks, and so forth, cost money. How far do you want to go?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I raised the question myself, I may say, in the Rules Committee as to whether or not this language was in order, and that committee finally felt that it did not strictly violate the rules, because the veto power is in the gentleman's Committee on Accounts. There is no mandate on the Accounts Committee to either report a resolution or to provide one dollar of money.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. But the gentleman will find the members of the Judiciary Committee will come before the Accounts Committee saying that this is a mandate and that it is our duty as an agency of the House to carry out the will of the House. Give us plenty of money, they will say. This is a large proposition and will extend from coast to coast.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. As he is a good lawyer, I want to ask the gentleman from New York if it is not a fact that if we pass this resolution, and the Judiciary Committee enters into a contract tomorrow with lawyers to pay them $10,000 each, or with certain experts to pay them $5,000 each, does not the gentleman know that that is a moral obligation on the Congress which we must fulfill and that we would not break such a contract as that?

Mr. O'CONNOR. What the gentleman says may be true, but that is the very most it is—"a moral obligation"—and I do not believe the gentleman feels that the Judiciary Committee, headed by the distinguished gentleman from his own State [Mr. SUMNERS], is going to do any such thing as to obligate the Government, even morally, until he presents the facts to the Committee on Accounts.

Mr. BLANTON. I am in favor of stopping these outrageous trustee and receivership fees, but this kind of spending resolution is not going to stop it. It will take proper legislation to do that, and instead of passing resolutions like this to ascertain what most of us already know, we ought to bring in some legislation to stop it. The paying of outrageous fees to receivers and trustees, as has been done in certain cases, is outrageous, and we ought to stop it.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The only purpose the gentleman's point of order would serve would be to delay an investigation which the gentleman admits should be made.

Mr. BLANTON. No; not an investigation. I am not in favor of investigations. I want to stop these junkets. My purpose in making this point of order is to stop a useless junket that will cost a great sum of money and accomplish nothing.

Mr. O'CONNOR. We were advised in the Rules Committee unanimously by the Judiciary Committee that this matter should be gone into. Of course, in every instance when a point of order is made, such as has been made in this case, if the point of order lies, the Rules Committee is confronted with the necessity of bringing in a rule to make it in order.

Mr. SNELL. It has always been the custom to take care of such matters in some other way. I am quite sure that whenever the question has been raised, a point of order has lain against it.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I do not recall the point having been raised in the past 10 years.

Mr. SNELL. Oh, I recall that it has been raised a dozen times, and I have tried sometimes to argue against it.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I think whenever the point was raised, in every instance there was an appropriation.

Mr. SNELL. You do not necessarily have to provide an appropriation of $5,000, for instance, to make it subject to a point of order. You authorize an appropriation in this resolution.

Mr. BLANTON. This resolution clearly is subject to a point of order. It authorizes this big committee to sit all over the United States, wherever and whenever it wants to sit, between now and next January 1. Who says that will not cost a lot of money? It authorizes this committee to employ high-priced lawyers and fix their salaries, wholly without limit. That could cost a large sum of money. It authorizes this committee to employ experts and clerks and stenographers and to have printing done, and the expenses are to be paid by vouchers approved by the chairman. Certainly that is a charge on the Treasury, and the Committee on Rules does not have authority to report such a measure.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is ready to rule.

The Chair thinks that the provision incorporated in section 5 of the resolution authorizing the committee to employ suitable counsel, assistants, and investigators in the aid of its investigation, and also the provision authorizing all necessary expenses of the investigation to be paid on vouchers approved by the chairman of the committee, is a matter properly within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Accounts. It has been held that where the Committee on Rules reports a resolution of this kind and there is incorporated therein matter which is within the jurisdiction of another committee the matter so included destroys the privilege of the resolution insofar as it prevents consideration at any time by the mere calling up of the report by the Committee on Rules. For this reason the Chair thinks that the point of order is well taken, and the Chair therefore sustains the point of order.

RECESS

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House stand in recess, at the call of the Speaker, to receive a message from the President of the United States.

Mr. BRITTEN. Reserving the right to object, can the gentleman give us some idea as to the time the message may be expected?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will answer that. The message is expected at any minute.

Mr. BLANTON. The Speaker will give us the 3-bell call.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will have the bells rung 5 minutes before the reconvening of the House. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 25 minutes p.m.) the House stood in recess, at the call of the Speaker.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at 1 o'clock and 33 minutes p.m.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that on May 12, 1933, the President approved and signed bills of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 3835. An act to relieve the existing national economic emergency by increasing agricultural purchasing power, to raise revenue for extraordinary expenses incurred by reason of such emergency, to provide emergency relief with respect to agricultural indebtedness, to provide for the orderly liquidation of joint-stock land banks, and for other purposes;

H.R. 48. An act to extend the time for completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Kansas City, Kans.;

H.R. 1596. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Pee Dee River and a bridge across the Waccamaw River, both at or near Georgetown, S.C.;

H.R. 4127. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Waccamaw River near Conway, S.C.;

H.R. 4491. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of an overhead viaduct across the Mahoning River at Struthers, Mahoning County, Ohio; and

H.R. 4606. An act to provide for cooperation by the Federal Government with the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia in relieving the hardship and suffering caused by unemployment, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read by the Clerk, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and ordered printed:

WORLD POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC PEACE (H.DOC. NO. 36)

To the Congress:

For the information of the Congress I am sending herewith a message that I have addressed this morning to the sovereigns and presidents of those nations participating in the disarmament conference and the world monetary and economic conference.

I was impelled to this action because it has become increasingly evident that the assurance of world political and economic peace and stability is threatened by selfish and short-sighted policies, actions, and threats of actions.

The sincere wish for this assurance by an overwhelming majority of the nations faces the danger of recalcitrant obstruction by a very small minority, just as in the domestic field the good purposes of a majority in business, labor, or in other cooperative efforts are often frustrated by a selfish few.

The deep-rooted desire of Americans for better living conditions and for the avoidance of war is shared by mass humanity in every country. As a means to this end I have, in the message to the various nations, stressed the practical necessity of reducing armaments. It is high time for us and for every other nation to understand the simple fact that the invasion of any nation, or the destruction of a national sovereignty, can be prevented only by the complete elimination of the weapons that make such a course possible today.

Such an elimination will make the little nation relatively more secure against the great nation.

Furthermore, permanent defenses are a nonrecurring charge against governmental budgets while large armies, continually rearmed with improved offensive weapons, constitute a recurring charge. This, more than any other factor today, is responsible for governmental deficits and threatened bankruptcy.

The way to disarm is to disarm. The way to prevent invasion is to make it impossible.

I have asked for an agreement among nations on four practical and simultaneous steps:

First. That through a series of steps the weapons of offensive warfare be eliminated.

Second. That the first definite step be taken now.

Third. That while these steps are being taken no nation shall increase existing armaments over and above the limitations of treaty obligations.

Fourth. That subject to existing treaty rights no nation during the disarmament period shall send any armed force of whatsoever nature across its own borders.

Our people realize that weapons of offense are needed only if other nations have them, and they will freely give them up if all the nations of the world will do likewise.

In the domestic field the Congress has labored in sympathetic understanding with me for the improvement of social conditions, for the preservation of individual human rights, and for the furtherance of social justice.

In the message to the nations which I herewith transmit I have named the same objectives. It is in order to assure these great human values that we seek peace by ridding the world of the weapons of aggression and attack.

THE MESSAGE

A profound hope of the people of my country impels me, as the head of their Government, to address you, and through you the people of your nation. This hope is that peace may be assured through practical measures of disarmament and that all of us may carry to victory our common struggle against economic chaos.

To these ends the nations have called two great world conferences. The happiness, the prosperity, and the very lives of the men, women, and children who inhabit the whole world are bound up in the decisions which their governments will make in the near future. The improvement of social conditions, the preservation of individual human rights, and the furtherance of social justice are dependent upon these decisions.

The World Economic Conference will meet soon and must come to its conclusions quickly. The world cannot await deliberations long drawn out. The conference must establish order in place of the present chaos by a stabilization of currencies, by freeing the flow of world trade, and by international action to raise price levels. It must, in short, supplement individual domestic programs for economic recovery, by wise and considered international action.

The Disarmament Conference has labored for more than a year and, as yet, has been unable to reach satisfactory conclusions. Confused purposes still clash dangerously. Our duty lies in the direction of bringing practical results through concerted action based upon the greatest good to the greatest number. Before the imperative call of this great duty, petty obstacles must be swept away and petty aims forgotten. A selfish victory is always destined to be an ultimate defeat. The furtherance of durable peace for our generation in every part of the world is the only goal worthy of our best efforts.

If we ask what are the reasons for armaments, which, in spite of the lessons and tragedies of the World War, are today a greater burden on the peoples of the earth than ever before, it becomes clear that they are twofold: First, the desire, disclosed or hidden, on the part of governments to enlarge their territories at the expense of a sister nation. I believe that only a small minority of governments or of peoples harbor such a purpose. Second, the fear of nations that they will be invaded. I believe that the overwhelming majority of peoples feel obliged to retain excessive armaments because they fear some act of aggression against them and not because they themselves seek to be aggressors.

There is justification for this fear. Modern weapons of offense are vastly stronger than modern weapons of defense. Frontier forts, trenches, wire entanglements, coast defenses—in a word, fixed fortifications—are no longer impregnable to the attack of war planes, heavy mobile artillery, land battleships called tanks, and poison gas.

If all nations will agree wholly to eliminate from possession and use the weapons which make possible a successful attack, defenses automatically will become impregnable, and the frontiers and independence of every nation will become secure.

The ultimate objective of the Disarmament Conference must be the complete elimination of all offensive weapons. The immediate objective is a substantial reduction of some of these weapons and the elimination of many others.

This Government believes that the program for immediate reduction of aggressive weapons, now under discussion at Geneva, is but a first step toward our ultimate goal. We do not believe that the proposed immediate steps go far enough. Nevertheless, this Government welcomes the measures now proposed and will exert its influence toward the attainment of further successive steps of disarmament.

Stated in the clearest way, there are three steps to be agreed upon in the present discussions:

First. To take, at once, the first definite step toward this objective, as broadly outlined in the MacDonald plan.

Second. To agree upon time and procedure for taking the following steps.

Third. To agree that while the first and the following steps are being taken, no nation shall increase its existing armaments over and above the limitations of treaty obligations.

But the peace of the world must be assured during the whole period of disarmament, and I therefore propose a fourth step concurrent with and wholly dependent on the faithful fulfillment of these three proposals and subject to existing treaty rights:

That all the nations of the world should enter into a solemn and definite pact of nonaggression; that they should solemnly reaffirm the obligations they have assumed to limit and reduce their armaments; and, provided these obligations are faithfully executed by all signatory powers, individually agree that they will send no armed force of whatsoever nature across their frontiers.

Common sense points out that if any strong nation refuses to join with genuine sincerity in these concerted efforts for political and economic peace, the one at Geneva and the other at London, progress can be obstructed and ultimately blocked. In such event the civilized world, seeking both forms of peace, will know where the responsibility for failure lies. I urge that no nation assume such a responsibility, and that all the nations joined in these great conferences translate their professed policies into action. This is the way to political and economic peace.

I trust that your Government will join in the fulfillment of these hopes.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

[Applause.]

MOTHER'S DAY

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend in the RECORD my own remarks at the Arlington Cemetery on the occasion of the celebration in honor of Mother's Day.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address delivered by myself at Arlington National Cemetery on the occasion of the celebration in honor of Mother's Day, May 14, 1933:

If I were asked to name the most important career to which any woman might aspire I would without hesitation or qualification name that of motherhood.

A devoted mother gives to her country that which is more necessary than any other contribution—men and women to carry on our glorious traditions, without which there would not be a successful and happy Nation like ours.

Today I am thinking of two mothers of whom it can be said they have lived to see the fulfillment of the fondest wish of any mother's heart—the realization of their dreams for their children. One is the mother of our great President, the other the mother of a beloved priest in my State of New Jersey who is soon to be a bishop, consecrating his life to the service of God. Both are making a great contribution to God and country and achieving results that must have been inspired by the devotion and courage of a wonderful mother. God bless them both.

And I am thinking of another mother, though we know not whether she is here or has passed on to rejoin the son who lies before us—the Unknown Soldier, symbol of courage, sacrifice, and devotion to a great country.

Nothing is truer than that we are what we are today because of our mothers. We owe them a debt that cannot be even approximated, so far as payment in a material sense is concerned. They gave to us life. They suffered that we might enjoy the blessings of God on earth. Their unselfish devotion, their tender care, their unceasing vigilance, their spiritual influence have transported us from the cradle, over the pitfalls of impressionable youth, to whatever measure of success it has been our good fortune to achieve. And what do they ask in return for the sacrifices, the sufferings, and perhaps the tears that we have brought to them? Very little. Surely nothing that is beyond reach of even the humblest of mortals. A little love, a tender embrace, a letter if we are far away to show that we have not forgotten. How many of you good people listening in today have remembered on this day that is set aside for reverence to the mothers of the world? How many of you are so fortunate as to have your mothers with you, find time to pause occasionally, in your life's work, and renew pledges of love and filial gratitude?

Mother's Day is an occasion when the whole world is kin; when all races and all creeds kneel and worship at the common shrine of motherhood. It transcends even the great holidays; holidays set apart for glorification of heroes and heroic deeds. There never was an act of heroism; there never was a valorous deed that could match or even compare with the life's work of the humblest little mother. Mothers are the unsung heroes of the world, the valiant ones in life's battle. No man of arms, no immortal conqueror, though he subdue the entire world, can compare in the eyes of God with a mother. Mothers' battles are waged in the silences, removed from the glitter of popular acclaim. They fight not to kill, to take life, but to give and to perpetuate it.

Their life's work comes nearest to that of the Man of Galilee than any other on the face of the earth. The road they travel is not unlike the road He traveled to Calvary. They, too, have their crosses to bear; crosses that can be lightened by love and devotion from those they bring into the world. They have their Gethsemane too—when children forget; when the little ones they have nourished and reared fly away from the nest like the fledglings, never more to return.

What a world of sentiment is expressed in the word "mother." What tender emotions it stirs in those whose mothers are among the living. What a flood of sweet memories it brings to those whose mothers have passed on. Memories of tender caresses that softened the pain of some childhood hurt; of reassuring embraces that dissipated clouds of disappointment and brought the sunshine again; of soft lullabies at twilight that soothed the aches in tired little bodies. It is the last word of the hardened criminal as he goes to meet his Maker; of the soldier as he breathes his last amid the shambles of the battlefield; of king, commoner, and humble peasant as they start off on the journey to eternity. It is the first word we learn to lip when we start life; the last we gasp as we depart from life.

Mother love is deathless, eternal. It knows no bounds, no limitations. It reaches all the way from earth to heaven. It is the finest and most inspiring of all emotions that influence the mind of man. It is the golden bridge that makes the passage between life and eternity the easier. A man may be an outcast in the eyes of society; the lowest, meanest criminal amid underworld scum; a lonely, harassed fugitive, pursued from pillar to post, hunted like a wild beast; a social and moral leper. He may be all of that, and even more, but not in the eyes of his mother. To her he is still the lovely babe at her breast; the happy boy whose tears she kissed away; the youth about whom she wove such glorious dreams. She is his sanctuary, his haven, when the buffetings of life are beyond human endurance; his last and final refuge in extremity.

Mother love is the greatest of all loves because it is tempered with sympathy. It forgives the error of the wayward child before it has been committed. Through the ages it has been the symbol of mercy and devotion, of self-effacement, of sacrifice, of patience, and fortitude.

God bless the mothers of the world—the builders of future generations. May the golden flame of their deathless love for mankind burn eternally. And may we on this holy day when we meet to pay them reverence and on every day every year prove to them that their devotion and their sacrifices have not been in vain. And sometime when tired and weary of a none-too-easy existence your thoughts turn to your mother for guidance and comfort, say with the poet:

"God make me the man of her vision
And purge me of selfishness.
God keep me true to her standards
And help me to live, to bless.
God hallow the holy impress of the days that used to be
And keep me a pilgrim forever,
To the shrine of my mother's knee."

TESTIMONY OF W. S. LEAKE

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, we desire at this time to offer the testimony of W. S. Leake as given before the committee last September and about which a stipulation was made. Our purpose in renewing the application is for the sake of orderly presentation of the case and saving of time. We think it is very necessary that this testimony be read at this time, subject to any additional testimony he may want to give or the respondent may want to offer from him when he appears, if he does appear.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection on the part of counsel for the respondent?

Mr. HANLEY. Yes, Mr. President. The testimony given by Mr. Leake at the hearing had in San Francisco will not be necessary if he is here as a witness. Why read it? He may be here. If the managers on the part of the House will agree to take the deposition of Leake, as we offered, in San Francisco, we can do it on next Saturday and have it returned on next Tuesday. We are agreeable to that. But to piecemeal it and to comment on it and put other witnesses on the stand before the witness actually gives all his testimony is not fair on behalf of the managers, from our point of view.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair see the stipulation which was entered into. The clerk will read the stipulation.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

It is further stipulated that the testimony of W. S. Leake and Miriam McKenzie, hotel maid, taken at the hearing above referred to, may be read upon said trial by either party hereto with the same force and effect as if said witness were present and testified in person. This stipulation, however, insofar as the said W. S. Leake is concerned, is without waiver by either party hereto to insist upon the attendance of said Leake before the court above referred to, and shall become operative only in the event of the nonappearance of the said Leake at Washington before the said Court of Impeachment.

Dated May 3, 1933.

GORDON BROWNING,
RANDOLPH PERKINS,
For the House Managers.
WALTER H. LINFORTH,
JAMES M. HANLEY,
Attorneys for Respondent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair overrules the objection. It seems to the Chair that reading the testimony, in view of the fact that Mr. Leake may be present in the Chamber, will not injure the cause of the respondent in any way.

The testimony of Mr. Leake was read by Mr. Manager BROWNING and Mr. Manager PERKINS, as follows:

Mr. W. S. Leake, being first duly sworn by the chairman, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. LA GUARDIA:

Q. What is your name?—A. W. S. Leake.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Leake?—A. San Francisco, Fairmont Hotel.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am in no business, sir.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Do you want to adjourn at this time?

Mr. HANLEY. We have had a long day.

Mr. SUMNERS. I understand counsel is tired. May I announce that tomorrow morning when we convene, which I believe it is agreed shall be at 10 o'clock, we shall convene—

Mr. HANLEY (interrupting). Whatever place and time you state is agreeable to us.

Mr. SUMNERS (continuing). We will convene in this chamber. We are now in recess until tomorrow at 10 o'clock.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,

MORNING SESSION

The hearing reconvened at 10 a.m. in room 214, Federal Building, the place of the previous session, Hon. HATTON SUMNERS presiding.

Mr. W. S. Leake, having previously been sworn, testified on further direct examination, as follows:

By Mr. LA GUARDIA:

Q. Mr. Leake, the last question last night when we adjourned I asked you what was your business. Your reply was, "I am in no business, sir." Is that correct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you do for a living?—A. I help humanity.

Q. Is that lucrative?—A. It is not.

Q. I can't hear you.—A. I will speak louder, sir.

Q. Please.—A. All right, sir.

Q. Now, just how do you earn a living?—A. I am a metaphysical student.

Q. Do you earn a living by being a student?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, will you explain that, please? Just what do you do? What is your source of income, if any?—A. People come to me for metaphysical treatment.

Q. Yes?—A. I treat them.

Q. Do they pay you?—A. Sir?

Q. Do they pay you?—A. No, sir; I have no fees.

Q. I take it that you are licensed to practice medicine under the authority of the State of California?—A. I am not a medical practitioner.

Q. Oh, I understood you treated people—do you?—A. What is that?

Q. Do you treat sick people?—A. Yes, sir—no, I don't treat sick people, because there is no such thing as a sick person.

Q. No such thing as a sick person?—A. No, sir.

Q. Well, then, just what do you do to these people who come to you?—A. I give them metaphysical treatment.

Q. Explain that. I don't quite understand what it is.—A. It keeps people right thinking.

Q. Right thinking?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is Judge Louderback one of your patients?—A. He is not.

Q. Oh. Now, you say you have no fee when you teach these people how to think.—A. I never charge or have any fees at all. People who wish to make donations are welcome to do so.

Q. Therefore your source of income and your livelihood depend on what people want to give you; is that right?—A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And you have been in that habit all your life, have you, Mr. Leake?—A. No, sir.

Q. Now, how much do you average a month in these contributions?

Mr. HANLEY. Gentlemen, is that so material for this record?

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Very, I can assure you, and you, Mr. Chairman. If it is not, I will move to strike it out myself.

Mr. SUMNERS. The chairman will establish the materiality. On that understanding the testimony is admissible; otherwise it will be stricken out.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Of course.

Q. Is Mr. Hunter one of your subjects?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is Mr. Gilbert one of your subjects?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long has he been one of your subjects?—A. Oh, several years.

Q. Does he contribute to you?—A. I think he made one contribution some time ago, 2 or 3 years ago. His wife has been a patient a long time.

Q. Does he pay you for advice to his wife?—A. Does he pay? No; the wife pays her own contribution.

Q. So that you have a source of income from the Gilbert family, have you not?—A. To that extent; yes.

Q. You knew that I examined Mr. Gilbert this morning; did you know that?—A. No, sir.

Q. I will let you have his testimony at noon, if I can, to refresh your memory on that. You realize you are testifying under oath, do you not?

Mr. HANLEY. Oh now, I submit that is a gratuitous insult to a member of one of the oldest families in California. You should be more familiar with our people than that, Mr. LaGuardia.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. I have been here only a few days, and I know him.

Mr. HANLEY. Back in New York you know some people, but you don't know Sam Leake.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. You will be surprised how well I know some people, before this is over.

Mr. HANLEY. Maybe you knew a lot of people when you ran for mayor in New York.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Why bring that up?

Mr. SUMNERS. Gentlemen, you will not engage in altercation.

Mr. HANLEY. We have heard that bunk before, Brother LaGuardia.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. You did not treat Judge Louderback, did you?

Mr. HANLEY. Object to that on the ground it is a gratuitous insult. I submit that it is incumbent upon a man, who ought to come here simply as a judge advocate to bring out facts, not to criticize, because he may be in the position of a judge in this matter, if anything would go the committee finally to determine, and, therefore, he ought to keep within the bounds of what we consider out in the West as decent.

Mr. SUMNERS. The Chair will endeavor as best he can to properly hear this examination, and if counsel are to engage in private conversation we will not be able to examine in the time that is reasonable for this hearing.

By Mr. LA GUARDIA:

Q. Now, Leake, is Mr. Shortridge, Jr., one of your subjects or patients?—A. He has been; also his mother.

Q. Does the Shortridge family also make contributions for this advice or treatment?—A. They have.

Q. Now, what is your income; how much do you make a year?—A. Oh, probably $2,400 or $2,500.

Q. No more than that?—A. I don't know—at times—just now I am not making anything. I treat 20 to 30 people a day and never take anything, because they haven't got it. They tell me in advance they haven't got it.

Q. Is any one of the Hunter family your patients?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you received any contributions from the Hunter family?—A. I have not.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Hunter?—A. Well, I have known him around the hotel there for several years, but not intimately.

Q. For how many years have you known him?—A. Well, I would say 5 or 6 years.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Leake?—A. Fairmont Hotel.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. I believe about 20 or 25 years.

Q. How long has Mr. Hunter been living there?—A. Well, I am not sure about that; I could not tell you the date. The little baby was born there. If I knew how old the baby was, I might be able to tell you.

Q. Now, you say that you have known Mr. Hunter all of the time that he is living at the Hotel Fairmont?—A. Oh, as long as I remember I know him to be there, and finally we got to speaking to each other, but I have never known him intimately.

Q. How long have you known Judge Louderback?—A. Well, I have known him all his life, mostly; when he was away to school; I have known him quite well since the World War—when he came back from the World War.

Q. You have been very intimate with Judge Louderback, haven't you?—A. Yes; recently.

Q. You have seen him very often, have you not?—A. Quite often.

Q. In fact, you are around his office quite a bit; isn't that true?—A. What is that?

Q. You visit him in his chambers, do you not?—A. I have never been in his chambers since the time he was sworn in.

Q. You knew him when he was a superior court judge here in California, did you not?—A. I did.

Q. Did you know him very intimately then?—A. No more than I did most of the other judges.

Q. Would you say that you knew the other judges as well as you knew Judge Louderback?—A. Well, I did not see him as often. I did not know Judge Louderback as well as I knew Judge Gilbert.

Q. Where is Judge Gilbert now?—A. Judge Gilbert is dead.

Q. Now, did you inform Mr. Hunter that he had been selected as receiver in the Russell-Colvin case?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Hunter that Judge Louderback wanted to know whether or not he could serve as receiver in that case?—A. I did.

Q. What did you say to Mr. Hunter?—A. I was sitting in the lobby of the Fairmont Hotel. I could not tell you the day of the week nor the month nor the year, but I know about the time of day, because that is my usual habit, to sit in a certain chair there. Judge Louderback came in and seemed to be somewhat disturbed. He sat down and told me of something that he had transacted over in his court or chambers, I don't know which, in reference to the Russell-Colvin case. He told me of the conversation and misunderstanding that he had had with some man by the name of Strong, and he asked me if I knew of anybody who was an expert in stocks and bonds and banking matters of that kind, and I told him that I could not recall anybody at that moment. I said, "How soon must you know?" He said, "I would like to know by tomorrow morning." "Well", I said, "give me time to think, because I don't want to recommend anybody or speak of anybody that I don't know is competent, because I can realize that it must be a man that understands that business."

While we were talking Mr. Hunter walked through the lobby over near the clerk's desk. I said, "There is the man that you should have, if you can get him." He said, "who is he?" I said, "Mr. Hunter", and I said, "He has just been selected by, I think, Cavalier & Co., as their manager or something, and I don't know whether you could get him, but he is a man that would fill the bill if you can get him." He said, "Ask him if he can take it, if he can be spared from his company." I went over and asked Mr. Hunter, after stating briefly what had taken place, I said, "Are you in a position to take the receivership if it is offered to you?" He said, "I don't know; I can't tell until I see the boss." I said, "Who is the boss?" and he told me, "Cavalier." I said, "When can you see him?" He said, "I can see him tomorrow morning." I said, "Will you see him and let me know whether they will permit you to come or not?" I did add this, however, I said, "It looks like a matter that concerns the stock exchange" and I said, "I think your boss would be very glad to loan you if he could."

Some time the next day, I don't know whether it was in the morning or in the afternoon, but some time the next day he called me up and told me that his boss had given him permission, that they would loan him to Judge Louderback, or words to that effect, and I told the man to go and see Judge Louderback, and there my transaction ceased.

Q. That was the only conversation that you had with Judge Louderback concerning Mr. Hunter?—A. That is all, sir.

Q. And that is the only conversation that Judge Louderback had with you concerning Mr. Hunter?—A. I don't recall whether he told me that he had appointed Mr. Hunter or whether I read it in the paper or what, now, sir. It was a matter that did not concern me and I did not tax my memory with it.

Q. Now, Mr. Leake, have you testified everything that you have told Judge Louderback concerning Mr. Hunter?—A. Yes; everything that I can recall. There is nothing else for me to say. Oh, I did say this—I want to be as near correct as I can—he asked if Hunter was the man that had participated in a receivership, I think, across the bay somewhere, and I told him that I had read in the papers something about it or heard about it some way, and he said, "I know about this case", he said, "I know he handled that case well, and he would fill the bill." I told him that he was connected with John Drum's bank—that is the way I put it, because I had heard Hunter tell the audience there many times about buying branch banks, and I heard him talking stocks and bonds until I got dizzy.

Q. It made you dizzy?—A. Well, I don't know anything about stocks and bonds, but I heard so much about it it made me dizzy.

Q. You were not thinking right. Perhaps you needed some of your own treatment.

Mr. HANLEY (interrupting). Don't let's get that nasty way of insulting the witness.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. I heard that last night from you.

Mr. HANLEY. I know, but he is a venerable old man, whom we greatly respect in this town.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. What do you want me to do, hug him?

Mr. HANLEY. No; I don't want you to hug him, I want you to treat him decently.

The WITNESS (interrupting). I have written four volumes on right thinking, Mr. LaGuardia, and I will be very glad to present you with a set of them.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Well, present a set to the judge, too.

A. What?

Q. Will you give the judge a copy, too?

Mr. SUMNERS (interrupting). Gentlemen, you must cease this.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Now, prior to that conversation, Judge Louderback had never spoken to you about Mr. Hunter, is that correct?—

A. Never. I don't know that he ever mentioned his name to me.

Q. And you never mentioned his name to Judge Louderback?—
A. No occasion for it.

Q. And Judge Louderback did not know Mr. Hunter up to that time?—A. I didn't know that.

Q. Didn't he say, "Who is that?" when you said, "There is a man passing, there is the man you want?"—A. I don't know. You asked me if he knew him. I don't know if he knew him or not.

Question. Didn't he ask you who Hunter was?—A. He said, "Who is it?" and I said, "Mr. Hunter."

Q. But he did ask you to recommend a man to him?—A. He asked me if I knew a man. I made no recommendation to anybody.

Q. Let's get right to the point. He asked you if you knew a man that would fit the requirements, did he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you stated to him, "I don't know for a moment; let me think it over for a day or so", didn't you?—A. No; that was the next morning.

Q. And just as you were thinking it over Mr. Hunter walked through the hotel lobby?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said, "There is your man"; is that correct?—A. That is about correct, and if Mr. Hunter had not walked through there I doubt whether I would ever have thought of him in trying to find a man.

Q. But the fact is, Judge Louderback did appoint Mr. Hunter?—
A. As I understand it; yes, sir.

Q. Now, you informed Judge Louderback that Mr. Hunter was in the employ of Cavalier & Co., did you not?—A. I did.

Q. And you told the judge that Cavalier & Co. were members of the stock exchange, didn't you—didn't you so testify?—A. I don't think I told him that.

Q. Well, I am sorry to—didn't you so testify a moment ago?—
A. No; I testified that I said before Mr. Hunter that I thought that they would be interested in getting the right kind of a man to help this matter out on account of being on the stock exchange.

Q. Exactly.—A. That is what I meant to say, and I think I did say it.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. I think you are right.

The WITNESS (continuing). But I did not say it to Judge Louderback.

Q. But, of course, you would not recommend to Judge Louderback any person you did not think was fit, would you?—A. I certainly would not.

Q. Now, after that time— A. (interrupting). And I wish to state that I did not do it in the capacity of recommending anyone. I told him of his qualifications.

Q. After he requested it?—A. Yes.

Q. He asked you if you had someone in mind?—A. He asked me if I could think of anybody that would fill the bill.

Q. Exactly. Now, did Judge Louderback ask you on any other occasion if you knew of anyone who would fill the bill when he needed receivers?—A. No; I have no recollection of him ever asking me any question about receivers.

Q. But you had known Mr. Gilbert for several years, hadn't you?—A. I had known Mr. Gilbert for some years; yes.

Q. And Mr. Gilbert had been appointed on four occasions receiver by Judge Louderback; you knew that, didn't you?—A. I do not know how many.

Q. You know he had been appointed receiver?—A. Yes.

Q. And you have known Mr. Samuel Shortridge, Jr., for a long time?—A. Since he was born.

Q. And you know that he has been appointed receiver by Judge Louderback?—A. I so understand.

Q. Now, did you ever discuss details of the receivership with Mr. Hunter?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Hunter advise you as to investments from time to time?—A. I never had anything to invest. Nobody ever advised me.

Q. I didn't get that.—A. I said I have never been advised about any investments, because I have nothing to invest.

Q. Well, hadn't you had some stock dealings?—A. No, sir.

Q. At no time?—A. I never owned a share of stock in my life, except when I was a telegraph operator. That is when I had bought some Ophir mining stock. That has been a great many years ago. I was nothing but a boy.

Q. So you had no business dealings with Mr. Hunter at all?—
A. None whatever.

Q. Have you a bank account?—A. No, sir.

Q. No bank account at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. Savings or checking, or otherwise?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you a safe-deposit vault?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where does Judge Louderback live?—A. Where does he live?

Q. Yes.—A. I understand that he lives in—I forget the street—in Contra Costa County, with Prof. George Louderback. I know that he votes there; registers there. He told me he voted there, although I have never been with him.

Q. Well, he doesn't actually live there when court is in session, does he?—A. I don't know where he lives; I don't know what his habits are.

Q. Where does Sam Shortridge, Jr., live?—A. I could not tell you that.

Q. Where does Mr. Gilbert live?—A. Let's see; I forget the name of the apartment house, but I think it used to be called the "Bradbury." It is on California Street somewhere. I have never been in his house.

Q. You have never been there?—A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you visit your patients?—A. When they require it; but it is not necessary for me to even see a patient to treat them. The most successful healings I have ever performed—and, by the way, when I say "healing" I don't mean I am a healer, but that is a term which is used which is not correct. There is but one health. God is the only healer. But the most successful healing, if you want to call it that—

Mr. SUMNERS (interrupting). You need not go into that.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. I wish he would.

The WITNESS (continuing). Are people that I have never seen. Mr. LA GUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask the question. I think the witness, in all fairness to him, ought to be given every opportunity to describe his means of livelihood. I hope—

Mr. SUMNERS (interrupting). I don't think the method of treatment belongs in this case.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. I know, but it is very important, Mr. Chairman. I will ask that the witness be allowed to state, and to be given all the latitude he needs, to explain his method of treatment, which is his only livelihood, and Mr. Hanley has told us he is a venerable old gentleman of the community—

Mr. SUMNERS (interrupting). If you want to make your statements you can, but you don't have to.

The WITNESS. I don't want to do it, then. I don't want to tell anything I don't have to tell. I am here to answer any questions that are asked me.

By Mr. LA GUARDIA:

Q. Well, Mr. Leake, I have repeatedly referred to healing or treatments. Now, I want to use the right word. Now, what is it that you do; is it healing, or treating, or what, so that I may question you properly?—A. I treat, and treating is to bring people to the state of right thinking.

Q. And that is what you advise when you advise your patients, how to think?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know John Douglas Short?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. Not very long.

Q. How did you happen to meet him?—A. I think his father-in-law, Mr. Hathaway, introduced me to him. I think I met him through his little children.

Q. Where do his little children live?—A. At his home, but they visit the grandfather at the hotel quite often.

Q. Oh, Mr. Hathaway?—A. Mr. Hathaway; yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Hathaway is with the Mutual Insurance Co.?—A. Mutual Life Insurance, of New York.

Q. And how long have you known Mr. Hathaway?—A. I would say some time in the eighties in Sacramento.

Q. And Mr. Short is Mr. Hathaway's son-in-law, is he?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you know Mrs. Short, then, of course, if you have known Mr. Hathaway since the eighties?—A. Yes, sir; I met her occasionally in the lobby.

Q. Does Mr. Hathaway live at the Fairmont?—A. Mr. Hathaway; yes.

Q. How long has he lived at the Fairmont?—A. Quite a few years, but I would not like to say the length of time.

Q. Now, did you recommend Mr. Short to Judge Louderback?—
A. No, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, you know that Mr. Short is Mr. Hunter's counsel in this receivership we are talking about?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do know that?—A. Yes, sir; I read the papers, and I have known it.

Q. Is Mr. Short one of your—what shall I say—subjects?—A. Say whatever you like, I will know what you mean.

Q. Is he one of your patients?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is Mr. Short one of your patients?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is Mr. Hathaway one of your patients?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long has he been one of your patients?—A. Over a period of a good many years.

Q. Does he contribute from time to time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, do you know Marshall Woodworth?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. I knew him since he was messenger for Judge Hoffman.

Q. Is he one of your patients?—A. No, sir.

Q. A good friend of yours?—A. He gives me credit for having him appointed United States district attorney. I have never claimed that honor, but he gives me credit for it. I have known him that long and that well.

Q. Oh, at any time were you engaged in politics?—A. Sir?

Q. Were you engaged at any time, or interested, in politics?—A. I have been interested in politics all my life, and I believe the time will come when I never will be disinterested in it.

Q. So he gave you credit for having him appointed, then, United States attorney?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was he United States attorney?—A. I forget the year. I was then manager of the San Francisco Call.

Q. That is some time ago?—A. Yes, sir; a long time ago.

Q. Now, he has also been the recipient of Judge Louderback's appointment, hasn't he?—A. I understand so.

Q. Now, do you know the Dinkelspiel boys, of Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel?—A. I do not.

Q. You don't know them?—A. I don't remember of ever seeing them.

Q. Does Judge Louderback live at the Hotel Fairmont?—A. Does he live there?

Q. Yes.—A. Well, he sleeps there at times. In order to explain that matter, I have got to remember a little bit of my sorrow, which I regret, but I will have to do it. My wife was ill for over 3 years, deathly ill, and it had been my habit for a long time to take a cat nap at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and on account of her illness and the nurse being present, she advised me to get a room in the bachelors' quarters of the Fairmont Hotel, with a couch in it, where I could have my rest, and I got the room. Some time after that—I don't know just how long—Judge Louderback came to me and told me that he had had some difficulty with his wife, Mrs. Louderback, and that he had left home, and that he wished to get in a hotel somewhere where there would be no publicity, because he did not know what the final result might be. I asked him if he could not fix the thing up some way, and he said that he did not know; that he wanted to get somewhere where there would be no publicity. I told him about this room. I said, "I am willing you should keep this room if you like; it is a cheap room, with nothing but a couch in it", and he said, "All right; I will take that room", and he did take it, and he has had it ever since.

My wife's illness got so bad that she would not permit me to leave the room, and I took a couch into the room every night and slept in there with her and the nurse. Since she passed away—(pause)—I have not been in that room, but every month Judge Louderback has given me a check for the price of that room and for his meals, if he took any, or his tailor work, or anything of the kind, and that check I endorsed and turned it into the hotel. I have never paid one nickel for Judge Louderback's staying at the hotel.

Q. That room is room 26, isn't it?—A. Twenty-six; yes, sir.

Q. You took that room in September 1929?—A. I don't recall the date.

Q. The hotel records indicate that?—A. I had been sleeping in other rooms before I took that. For instance, the room next to us. But I could not always get that room, because that would be occupied, so I slept in a number of rooms there.

Q. We are just talking about room 26 now. You took that about September 1929?—A. I could not tell you the date, sir.

Q. Well, it was in 1929, wasn't it?—A. I could not tell you that.

Q. Well, the room is in your name?—A. Yes, sir; it was my room—to my knowledge.

Q. What is the charge on that room?—A. $75 a month.

Q. And it is charged to you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, so you were not exactly accurate when you told us a few moments ago that Judge Louderback lives at Contra Costa?—A. I said that was his residence.

Q. But he actually lives at the Hotel Fairmont?—A. He would have to answer that question himself. I don't keep track of him. There are times that I don't see him for a week at a time.

Q. Now, you say that you paid the hotel with Judge Louderback's checks?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is no mistake about that?—A. No, sir, Mr. LaGuardia; now there might be 1 or 2 times when Louderback was away on a vacation, or holding court or something, when there might be 1 or 2 cases. I won't be so positive about every time, but that is the general rule. I don't know that there is a single instance, but it could be that way now. I did not tax my memory with it.

Q. But you are quite certain that as Judge Louderback would turn a check over to you, you in turn would endorse it over to the hotel?—A. The minute I came to the hotel.

Q. So that the checks would show that?—A. Yes, sir—should show it.

Q. Exactly. Now, how much is your room?—A. $100 a month. It has not always been that. When I first went there I paid $75 a month for it. Prices have been raised on some rooms, but not in mine.

Q. You are in the habit of paying the Hotel Fairmont in cash?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. With the exception of Judge Louderback's checks?—A. Yes. Q. And there is no question about that—you are sure of that, Mr. Leake?—A. Except, I say, there might be one or two instances when he was away on a vacation.

Q. What do your bills run to a month at the Hotel Fairmont?—A. Well, probably, with my paper bill, which is $2.30, and telephone, and a few things like that, something over $100 a month.

Q. In addition to your room?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Leake, do you keep books of account?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you keep any memorandum of your income and disbursements?—A. No, sir.

Q. You have an office, have you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much rent do you pay there?—A. $72.

Q. Have you any employees?—A. No, sir.

Q. And you keep no rough memorandum of disbursements and expenditures?—A. No, sir. I keep the vouchers, the office rent; they give a receipt for it.

Q. Can you tell me just how much Mr. Hathaway has contributed to you in the last few years?—A. Well, I could not tell you with any degree of accuracy. He has been quite liberal with me. I would say 500 or 600, maybe 700 or 800 dollars, covering quite a period.

Q. Can you tell me approximately how much you got from the Gilbert family?—A. Well, I don't know; probably—Mrs. Gilbert came to me for quite a very long time. I would say, roughly, $200 or $300, maybe.

Q. Do your patients or subjects pay you in checks?—A. Sometimes they do and sometimes they do not.

Q. Could you tell which patients paid you in checks and which patients paid you in cash?—A. No; I could not tell you that.

Q. Did Mr. Hathaway pay you in cash or in checks?—A. Well, I don't know; maybe both—I don't know.

Q. Did Gilbert pay you in cash?—A. I think Gilbert gave me a check once, I am quite sure he gave me a check, but I think Mrs. Gilbert always paid in cash.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I want to reserve the right to recall this witness at a later date.

Mr. SUMNERS. Very well.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Then I am finished with him at this time.

Mr. HANLEY. We won't ask any questions at this time. We will wait until he is recalled.

The WITNESS. Will I have time to go back and see about some matters?

Mr. SUMNERS. Yes; you are excused, Mr. Leake.

The WITNESS. If you phoned me, I can get over here very quickly.

Mr. SUMNERS. Yes; we will telephone you.

The WITNESS. I thank you.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. At this point a recess was taken for 20 minutes.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President—

Mr. HANLEY. Will it be stipulated at this time, so that the Senate will not be asked if there was anything else, that this witness was never recalled at that hearing?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. It will be stipulated that the witness was not recalled by the examiners or recalled in favor of the respondent.

Mr. HANLEY. You know that we introduced no testimony at the hearing out in San Francisco, Mr. Manager, do you not? You understand that, do you not, Mr. Manager?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Counsel for the respondent will address the Chair with reference to statements to be made to the Senate.

Mr. HANLEY. Pardon me, Mr. President.

TESTIMONY OF MIRIAM MCKENZIE

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, we desire now, under the stipulation, to read the testimony of Miriam McKenzie, the hotel maid.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Proceed.

The testimony of Miriam McKenzie was read by Mr. Manager Perkins, as follows:

Miriam McKenzie, being first duly sworn by the chairman, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. LA GUARDIA:

Q. What is your name?—A. Miriam McKenzie.

Q. And where do you live, Miss McKenzie?—A. 1272 Waller Street.

Q. Where do you work, Miss McKenzie?—A. I am chambermaid at the Fairmont Hotel.

Q. You are chambermaid at the Fairmont Hotel?—A. Yes.

Q. And what floor have you?—A. The upper California floor.

Q. Is room 26 in that division?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You take care of room 26?—A. I take care of room 26.

Q. How long have you been a maid in the Fairmont Hotel?—A. Two years past in May of this year.

Q. You were there all of 1930 and all of 1931; is that it?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you had charge of room 26 all of this time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who occupies room 26?—A. Judge Louderback.

Q. The gentleman sitting at the table?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he lives in that room?—A. Yes.

Q. And he lived in that room all of the time that you have been there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you make his bed every day and fix the room every day, and it has been occupied every day?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. That is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. HANLEY:

Q. You don't mean to say, Miss McKenzie, that the judge has occupied that room every day, do you?—A. Not every day. He has been away some days. Not every day; but that is his permanent room.

Q. I don't get that.—A. He is permanent at the Fairmont Hotel.

Q. He is permanent at the hotel?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, he occupies that room when he is there?—A. Yes.

Q. And how often he occupies it during the week you don't know, do you?—A. Yes, sir; I take a list of that every morning.

Q. And he was in the hotel during all the time—A. (interrupting). Two years past in May, I think.

Q. Were you there when he was over in Japan?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, he didn't occupy it then, did he?—A. No; he didn't occupy it then.

Q. Do you know when he was away then?—A. Sometime in the summer.

Q. What year?—A. Last year.

Q. And do you know that he is away at Eureka and Sacramento?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, do you know what month he was away in any of the times in these 2 years?—A. I take a list of it every morning.

Q. I didn't get that.—A. Every morning I took a note of it.

Mr. SUMNERS. She makes a note every morning?

The WITNESS. I take a note of the rooms every morning.

By Mr. HANLEY:

Q. When he was away?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell offhand any time he was away during the last 6 months?—A. Well, I cannot be certain, but I used to take a list of it, you know.

Q. Don't you know that during the last month he was away for about 2 weeks?—A. Yes, sir; and I marked on the list "Away."

Q. What you mean to say is that the judge occupies room 26 when he is there; is that the idea?—A. When he is there; that's the idea.

Mr. HANLEY. That is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. LAGUARDIA:

Q. And nobody else occupies that room?—A. No, sir.

Q. It is Judge Louderback's room?—A. Yes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. That is all. Thank you.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, unfortunately the hotel auditor of the Fairmont Hotel was operated on this morning at 2 o'clock for appendicitis, and I understand is in a very serious condition. He was subpoenaed here with certain records of the Hotel Fairmont, those of Mr. Leake, from about 1928 up to the present for his personal room, and those of Judge Louderback's room, no. 26, from about the same period; and also the telephone sheets, the originals, from the hotel for the days of March 11, 1930, and March 13, 1930. We should like to inquire if we will not be permitted at this time to produce those records and have them inserted at this point, regardless of the absence of the witness who was to make identification and who brought them along.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does counsel for the respondent agree to the request made by the managers on the part of the House?

Mr. LINFORTH. We should like to add this, Mr. President, that if counsel will, during the recess, take up with us the question of what they have and let us see just what it is, we no doubt may be able to come to some agreement, but we should not like to say, one way or the other, without first seeing what the managers have in the way of records.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We shall be very glad to submit them at the first recess.

Call Lloyd W. Dinkelspiel.

EXAMINATION OF LLOYD W. DINKELSPIEL

Lloyd W. Dinkelspiel, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. You are Lloyd W. Dinkelspiel?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you live?—A. San Francisco, Calif.

Q. What is your profession?—A. Attorney at law.

Q. With what firm are you connected?—A. Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe.

Q. In the early part of March 1930, were you interested in the receivership of the Russell-Colvin Co., in that city?—A. Yes, sir; I was called in by the San Francisco Stock Exchange. In the week preceding March 10, at a meeting of the board of governors, at which the affairs of the Russell-Colvin Co. were discussed, the board of governors stated that they had advised the members of the firm of the necessity of raising capital. They called the members of the firm before the board of governors and told them they had to raise additional capital before a certain date or be suspended.

Q. Were they actually suspended?—A. They were suspended, I believe, on the morning of Monday, March 10, at about 8 or 8:30 o'clock, at the opening of the exchange.

Q. Did you attend court at the time the petition for receivership was presented to Judge Louderback?—A. I did, sir.

Q. What date was that?—A. That was on March 11.

Q. What day of the week?—A. Tuesday.

Q. Why was the suspension made of the firm?—A. The suspension of the firm was because of the insolvency of the firm, insolvency in the sense of being unable to meet obligations which they had, obligations to clients, and for failure to raise the necessary cash capital demanded to meet these requirements.

Q. For whose protection was that action intended?—A. The action was intended, and so stated, for the protection of the creditors of the firm in requiring the Russell-Colvin Co. to have enough liquid capital to meet the demands of customers.

Q. What interest did the stock exchange have in procuring this receivership?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a minute. We object to that as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness and as hearsay, not binding upon the respondent.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. This witness is counsel for the stock exchange, and we think he is in a position to know the facts as to what we ask him.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let him state the facts, and the Senate, sitting as a court, can draw its own conclusions. The witness should not go too far afield.

The WITNESS. The facts are that the stock exchange requested me to attend to the filing of the petition in the interest of the creditors.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Did the stock exchange have any other interest in it?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment. We object to that as calling for his opinion or conclusion, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks that the question is not admissible.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Very well. I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. BROWNING:

Q. On the morning of the 11th of March 1930, what was the first conference that you had with the judge—about what time of day?—A. The first conference I had with the judge was the conference attended by the other attorneys and representatives of the firm shortly after 11 o'clock. Before that time, however, I had been with the attorneys for the plaintiff and the attorneys for the defendant when they had called at the judge's chambers when they had first filed the petition, and thereafter called at the judge's chambers and been advised that the judge could not see them until after the court adjourned, which would be early that day, because they were adjourning early out of respect for the late justice of the Supreme Court, Judge Sanford.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Just a moment. The Chair appoints the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS] to preside for the day.

Thereupon Mr. HASTINGS took the chair.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. What was done at this conference in the way of procuring the appointment of a receiver?—A. At the first conference attended by Mr. Marrin, attorney for the plaintiff; Mr. Brown, attorney for the defendant; Mr. Strong; myself; and, in behalf of the stock exchange, Mr. Max Thelen, partner of Mr. Marrin; and two partners of the firm of Russell-Colvin & Co.

Mr. Marrin presented briefly the situation to the judge, the request that a receiver be appointed, and requested that Mr. Strong be appointed receiver, stating to the judge that Mr. Strong had been in the firm as an accountant in behalf of the stock exchange to look over the firm's affairs and was familiar with it. Mr. Brown took up the thread of the discussion in behalf of the defendant and stated to the judge that Mr. Strong's appointment was acceptable to the defendants, that they would consent to the appointment of a receiver if Mr. Strong was that receiver, and that they felt that Mr. Strong was a desirable man for that position.

I followed with a brief statement to the judge that I was there at the request of the San Francisco Stock Exchange, which was interested in an orderly and inexpensive liquidation of the affairs of the Russell-Colvin Co.

The judge, as I recall, turned to Mr. Strong and mentioned the fact that he did not know him. He asked Mr. Strong if he had engaged counsel, and Mr. Strong said he had not. The judge stated, I believe, at that time, that there were two petitions that had been filed, and it was necessary to dismiss the petition filed and assigned to Judge St. Sure's court before he could act on the petition assigned to his court. He said to Mr. Strong, "If I appoint you, I will expect you to consult me with respect to the appointment of your counsel." Then he said that he would require a $50,000 bond of Mr. Strong and a $50,000 bond from the petitioning creditor.

We left the judge's chambers, after a brief conversation, as I recall, between Mr. Max Thelen and the judge and myself about the Harvard Law School, and as we got in the hall the attorneys started to figure how to get the $50,000 bond for the petitioning creditor, which seemed somewhat unusual. We went back to see the judge, and the judge said that it was a bond that he required at all times in the interest of the other creditors, and reduced the bond, however, to $10,000.

Q. In whose favor did this bond run—this petitioner's bond?—A. The bond, as stated by the judge, was to run in favor of the other creditors, anybody who might be injured through the filing of the petition for the appointment of a receiver, and that is the way the bond approved by the judge ultimately did run, as I recall. We returned—do you want me to continue, Mr. Browning?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Yes.

The WITNESS. We returned in the afternoon, I believe the same group that had been there in the morning, and meanwhile made arrangements for the receiver's bond. We inquired of the judge's secretary and of the clerk of the court as to some form of bond for this petitioner's or plaintiff's bond, and we found no such form there, and were given none and referred to none by either the clerk or the judge's secretary. We were told that the judge was then sitting or in conference with the judges of the circuit court of appeals on that day, but would be in later in the afternoon. Mr. Brown and Mr. Marrin and I took a shot at trying to prepare the type of bond that we thought the judge wanted for the plaintiff. That bond was actually type-written, in the parts thereof that were not printed, by Mr. Brown in the clerk's office as the result of some notes and dictation given by Mr. Marrin and myself. We still did not know what to put in as the condition of the bond, and so we dictated that on a separate sheet of paper. We wrote it out and did not put it in the bond until we went in the judge's chambers. We went back into the judge's chambers at about, I should say, 4:30 or thereabouts, possibly a little later, and presented the bonds in the form of an order and discussed with the judge the question as to the petitioner's bond. We showed him this condition clause written on a piece of paper, and he said that that was satisfactory, as I recall. I believe that I wrote that in in longhand in the bond which was actually executed at that time by the representative of the surety company. The judge approved the bond and signed the order.

I do not believe we had any further conversation until the judge said to Mr. Strong as we were coming out, "After you have qualified I want to see you", or "Come back to see me." We then went to the clerk's office, and I departed almost within a few minutes thereafter, not waiting for the gentlemen to complete their copies and to get certified copies and to insert the ink corrections that the judge had added to the order or suggested our putting in there. I did not wait for the completion of those copies. I did speak to Mr. Strong, however, in the afternoon after his appointment as to the attorneyship.

Q. Who brought up the question?—A. I do not recall whether Mr. Strong or I brought up the question.

Q. Who was discussed in that conversation as his attorney?—A. Mr. Strong said to me in that discussion, which was in the afternoon, as I recall—late in the afternoon, after the appointment—that he had spoken to Mr. Ackerman, Mr. Lloyd Ackerman, with reference to his acting as attorney. He said he was uncertain as to whether to appoint Mr. Ackerman or Mr. McAuliffe one of my partners. He said that he wondered whether there was any interest of the San Francisco Stock Exchange which would preclude appointing Mr. McAuliffe, whom he desired to appoint. I discussed the matter with him and showed him that there could be no conflict of interest between the San Francisco Stock Exchange and the creditors of the firm.

Mr. Strong, as I recall, made no commitment to me as to the appointment of attorneys, nor did I of course press him for any commitment. I went back to the office. I may or may not have spoken to Mr. McAuliffe on the subject. I could not be positive at this time. But I was not present at any discussion in the evening, if any took place.

Q. Did you know whether Mr. Strong would come to the office or not?—A. I did not know positively. I do not recall whether I got the impression he was coming or the statement he was coming. I had to get back to the office. I had been out almost all day and I wanted to get back to the office, and did.

Q. Before the talk you testified to as having occurred after his qualification, was there any discussion to your knowledge with regard to who would be his counsel in that case?—A. Before what time?

Q. Before the time he qualified as receiver.—A. To my knowledge we had no such discussion. I had none with him, I know, and none was had with anybody in my presence or within my hearing.

Q. On the morning of the 11th when you were out there at the court did you see H. B. Hunter?—A. Yes; I saw Mr. Hunter, whom I had known since his previous connection with the San Francisco Stock Exchange. I saw him before we went into the judge's chambers to have this conference with reference to the appointment of receiver. In fact, I saw him just about the time court was adjourning. I saw him in the lobby of the post office building where the court is located. As nearly as I can recall the conversation, he came up to me—

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment. I submit the question could have been answered with one word and that the witness is now proceeding to give a conversation that was not asked for by the question. May I have the question read?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will be read. The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. On the morning of the 11th, when you were out there at the court, did you see H. B. Hunter?

Q. (By Mr. Manager BROWNING.) Did you have a conversation with him at that time?—A. I saw him and had a conversation with him at that time.

Q. In that conversation was the Russell-Colvin receivership discussed?—A. Yes.

Q. In the second conference that the attorneys and Mr. Strong had with the judge in the afternoon of the 11th, when you were leaving the room did Judge Louderback tell Mr. Strong, in words or substance, when he qualified to come back that evening?—A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. What connection has Mr. Hunter had with the stock exchange that you have mentioned?—A. He was, I believe, assistant to the president of the exchange or executive secretary of the exchange. The exact title I am not certain of.

Q. Was William Cavalier & Co. a member of the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. It was at that time, and I believe still is.

Q. Was he a partner in that concern?—A. I so understood.

Q. At that time was a member of the Cavalier & Co. a member of the board of governors of the stock exchange of San Francisco?—A. Yes; there was a member of the firm of William Cavalier & Co. a member of the board of governors of the San Francisco Stock Exchange at that time, to the best of my recollection.

Q. What is the relation between any member house in the stock exchange with relation to the obligation of the members to each other or to the exchange?—A. You mean particularly upon a suspension?

Q. Yes.—A. The rules of the San Francisco Stock Exchange provide for the closing of contracts when a member is suspended, notice going out through the secretary that each member must close the contract with any other member. If a balance is owing as a result of the closing of that contract, that constitutes a claim which must be presented to the secretary and for which the seat or membership is security.

Q. If you know, please state how much Russell-Colvin Co. owed to other members of the stock exchange at that time.—A. You are referring particularly to claims for which the seat would be security?

Q. Yes.—A. I do know the total of the claims of members and of the stock exchange and curb exchange themselves arising out of the dues chargeable to members for which the seat or membership was also security, inasmuch as I ultimately prepared those claims, which were allowed. I believe the total claims prepared and allowed were $1,254 and some odd cents, which, however, were subsequently augmented to a total of about $3,300, or slightly in excess of $3,300, on account of accruing charges, I believe, such as charges for clearing certificates that were being sold out through the membership, and membership dues, and things of that kind. The claims were $1,254 and a few odd cents, ultimately increased and allowed to about $3,300.

Q. What was the value of a seat on the stock exchange at that time?—A. The value of a seat on the stock exchange at that time was considered to be in excess of $100,000, or in the neighborhood possibly of $125,000.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Dinkelspiel, have you or the firm with which you are connected taken a very decided interest in this impeachment matter?—A. What do you mean by decided interest, Mr. Linforth? I can explain my answer.

Q. In answer to your suggestion, let me ask you this: Are you the only member of your firm here as a witness?—A. No, sir.

Q. How many members of your firm are here as witnesses in this proceeding?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LONG. I have just entered the Chamber. What is the firm with which this witness is connected?

Mr. LINFORTH. The firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe.

The WITNESS. Mr. Ehrmann, Mr. White, and myself have all been subpoenaed as witnesses.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Has Mr. McAuliffe been subpoenaed also?—A. I do not believe so. He was in Washington and was asked to remain over, but on account of depletion of our office ranks was permitted to be excused.

Q. The seat which was owned by the Russell-Colvin people in the stock exchange was security for any claim of any member of the exchange against the Russell-Colvin people, was it not?—A. Not for any claim of any member. A personal obligation from Russell-Colvin & Co. to a member not arising out of a stock-exchange transaction was not secured by the seat.

Q. Did not article XX, sections 1 and 2, of the stock-exchange constitution provide that the seat of a member could not be sold until the claims of all other members against the defaulting member were paid in full?—A. There was an article and is an article of the constitution stating that in substance, I do not believe in the exact language, and construed within the power of the governing board to mean member claims or claims arising out of ordinary contracts and not personal obligations.

Q. In order to try to end the matter with one question, through your connection with the stock exchange, are you not aware that at the time of this transaction, article XX, sections 1 and 2, provided that no sale of any seat would be complete until the stock exchange gave its consent, and the stock exchange would not give its consent until the proceeds from the seat were used for the payment of 100 cents on the dollar of any claimant who happened to be a member of the stock exchange?—A. I do not believe that is so. There is, if you will permit me to explain my answer, a provision of the constitution of the stock exchange making the seat security for the contracts and obligations of members, and providing that the proceeds of the sale of a seat shall be applied in payment of those claims.

Q. Have you with you a copy of the rules of the San Francisco Stock Exchange that were in force at the time of this transaction?—A. I have not.

Q. I understood you to say that you were positive Mr. Strong did not talk with you on the question of the employment of counsel until after he qualified. Is that right?—A. I did so answer, but in thinking the matter over, I am positive that he did not talk to me about the employment of counsel until after he had come out of the judge's chambers that second time in the afternoon. Whether he had actually taken the oath or not I am not certain.

Q. Will your memory permit you to say positively that there was no discussion between you and Mr. Strong on the question of appointment of counsel before the order had been made appointing him?—A. My memory is positive to this extent, that there was no discussion with Mr. Strong as to the employment of counsel that I heard or participated in until the afternoon of the 11th of March, and the best of my recollection is not until after the order of the court.

Q. Has your memory been refreshed on that subject since you were a witness before the investigating body in San Francisco in September of last year?—A. Generally by reference to files of correspondence and general office diaries and matters.

Q. Is it a fact that when you were a witness before the investigating committee in San Francisco in September 1932 you were then not positive as to whether you had had any talk with the receiver about the appointment of counsel before the order was made?—A. I wish you would permit me to see my testimony, counsel.

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I believe I can recall what I testified, that I was not—that I could not be positive there was no discussion until after the morning conference with Judge Louderback until some time in the afternoon, and that I believed there was no discussion until after the actual order was made.

Q. At the time and place that I have referred to were these questions asked you, and did you give these answers [reading from page 76 of the record]?

Q. Now, you did not suggest to Strong that afternoon, your firm to be employed, did you?—A. I discussed with Mr. Strong, after his appointment, the question of the appointment of attorneys.

Q. All right.—A. And Mr. Strong mentioned to me that he was uncertain whether to employ Mr. Ackerman or to employ our firm.

Q. When was that?—A. I believe it was after the appointment. I am not positive, but I think it was that afternoon.

Did you give that testimony at that time?—A. I gave that testimony, and I still give it, Mr. Linforth.

Q. And is it the fact that at the time you gave that testimony you were then not positive as to whether or not Strong had talked to you about the appointment of attorneys before he was appointed receiver?—A. No, sir. May I have that question again?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question will be read.

The Official Reporter read the question, as follows:

And is it the fact that at the time you gave that testimony you were then not positive as to whether or not Strong had talked to you about the appointment of attorneys before he was appointed receiver?

The WITNESS. At the time I gave that testimony, and now, I was positive and am positive that Mr. Strong did not discuss the matter of the employment of counsel with me until subsequent to the morning conference when the judge announced his intention of appointing Mr. Strong as receiver. I did not discuss that matter until the afternoon of March 11; and the best of my recollection at that time, the time of the prior hearing, and now, was and is that Mr. Strong did not discuss the matter with me until he came out of the judge's chambers for the second time.

Q. About what time was it that the judge signed the order appointing Mr. Strong receiver?—A. I could not be positive. I think it was around 4:30 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. Are you positive that up to that time Mr. Strong had not discussed with you the question of attorneyship?—A. I have already answered that question, Mr. Linforth—that to the best of my recollection Mr. Strong did not discuss the matter with me until after that time, and I am positive that he did not discuss the matter with me until the afternoon of March 11.

Q. Did you hear Judge Louderback state to Mr. Strong, at or before the time of his appointment, that he would consider him an officer of the court?—A. I cannot state positively. I believe, however, that such a statement was made.

Q. And did he also state to Mr. Strong that he must confer with the judge on the appointment of his attorneys?—A. I do not think he used those words. As I have already testified, he stated that he should expect him to consult with him with reference to the appointment of his attorneys or his counsel.

Q. And in substance the judge told him that, did he not?—A. I believe that my last answer is the best I can give you on that, Mr. Linforth.

Q. Did not the judge at that time, with you persons present, ask Mr. Strong whether he had selected any attorneys?—A. I do not know whether the word "selected" was used. I think he asked him—I am sure he asked him—a question as to whether he was represented by counsel.

Q. Did he not at that time, and before he made the order of appointment, ask him whether or not any of the lawyers present, and including you by name, had been talked to by Mr. Strong as possible attorneys for the receiver?—A. To that question in its present form I can give a positive answer of "no", because I am quite certain the judge did not even know my name.

Q. Did you tell the judge at that time who you were?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. And that you were there representing the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Did the judge, before he made the order of appointment, say to Mr. Strong, "You are not going to arrange with any of the counsel present as your counsel, are you?"—A. No, sir; he did not say that.

Q. And Mr. Strong did not answer that he was not?—A. Well, the question was not asked, so the answer could not have been given, Mr. Linforth.

Q. Now I call your attention to this book, Constitution and Rules of the San Francisco Stock Exchange, and I call your attention to article XX, under the title of "Transfer of Membership", and to subdivisions (1) and (2) of section 2, and also section 1, and ask you if those were the rules in force at the time of these transactions.—A. What particular sections, Mr. Linforth, are you referring to?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Read the question.

The Official Reporter read the question, as follows:

Now I call your attention to this book, Constitution and Rules of the San Francisco Stock Exchange, and I call your attention to article XX, under the title of "Transfer of Membership", and to subdivisions (1) and (2) of section 2, and also section 1, and ask you if those were the rules in force at the time of these transactions.

The WITNESS. I believe those rules were in effect.

Mr. LINFORTH. We offer these rules as part of the testimony of the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They will be admitted.

Mr. LINFORTH. And I should like to read this rule into the RECORD, Mr. President:

ARTICLE XX. TRANSFER OF MEMBERSHIP

SECTION 1. The transfer of membership by any member of the exchange shall be made, except as otherwise herein provided, in the following manner:

(a) The application, together with the initial fee of the transferee, shall be filed with the secretary as provided in article III hereof, and the membership committee shall pass upon such application as in said article provided.

(b) The name of the transferee shall be submitted to all members of the exchange at least 10 days prior to the date of election.

The member proposing to transfer his membership shall not after the 9th day after transmittal of such notice make any contracts unless the contract is expressly made on behalf of another member of the exchange.

On the 9th day after the transmitting of notice of a proposed transfer of membership all exchange contracts of the member proposing to make such transfer or of his firm shall mature, and if not settled shall be closed out as in the case of insolvency unless the same are assumed and taken over by another member of the exchange.

(c) The member proposing to transfer his membership shall, at the time such application is filed, deposit with the Secretary a transfer fee of $1,000.

SEC. 2. Upon any transfer of membership, whether made by a member voluntarily or by the governing board in pursuance of the provisions of the Constitution, the proceeds thereof shall be applied to the following purposes and in the following order of priority, viz:

(1) The payment of all dues, fines, contributions, and charges payable to the exchange by the member whose membership is transferred, and all indebtedness of such member thereto.

(2) The payment to creditors who are members of the exchange, or the firms which they represent.

If a claim based on a contract, the amount that will ultimately be due thereon, cannot for any reason be immediately ascertained and determined, the governing board may, out of the proceeds of the membership, reserve and retain such an amount as it may deem appropriate, pending the determination of the amount due on such claim.

And then jumping to subdivision (4):

(4) The surplus, if any, of said proceeds shall be paid to the person whose membership is transferred or to his legal representative upon the execution by him or them, of releases satisfactory to the governing board.

SEC. 3. A member of the exchange or the firm whom he represents shall forfeit all right, under section 2 of this article, to share in the proceeds of a membership which has been transferred, unless such member or firm files a statement of his or its claim with the governing board, prior to the transfer.

The WITNESS. May I see that, Mr. President?

(The book was exhibited to the witness.)

The WITNESS. May I make a statement in connection with an answer previously given as to this rule that Mr. Linforth has been referring to?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

The WITNESS. There is elsewhere in this constitution and rules, I believe—I am quite certain—a provision as to what member claims are; and the governing board of the San Francisco Stock Exchange has construed claims that are charges against a seat as being only claims made in the ordinary course of dealing between members, and has in fact within comparatively a recent time refused to allow a personal claim of members as a claim against the membership.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. At the time of this receivership, do you know whether or not Russell-Colvin & Co. was indebted to various other members of the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. I know only this, that we prepared the secured claim—

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, the rule was announced yesterday that if the witness was not answering a question directly, we waived our right to strike it out if we permitted him to continue. Therefore, at this time most respectfully I urge that the witness is not answering the question, and that his attention should be directed to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will you answer the question?

The Official Reporter read the question, as follows:

At the time of this receivership, do you know whether or not Russell-Colvin & Co. was indebted to various other members of the San Francisco Stock Exchange?

The WITNESS. Yes; to a limited extent. May I explain the answer?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks that answers the question.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Was Pierce & Co. at that time a member of the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. I do not think so.

Q. Are you positive of that?—A. I am not positive; no, sir.

Q. Were Barneson & Co. members of the San Francisco Stock Exchange at that time?—A. I am not certain. They are not now, and I am not sure whether they were then or not.

Q. Were Miller & Co. members of the San Francisco Stock Exchange at that time?—A. I am not certain.

Q. Do you know how much Russell-Colvin & Co. owed to those three persons whom you are not certain were members of the exchange?—A. I know something about the E. A. Pierce & Co. indebtedness; not the others—the secured indebtedness.

Q. You do not know, do you, how many hundreds of thousands of dollars Russell-Colvin & Co. owed to members of the stock exchange at the time of the appointment of the receiver?—A. Not in dollars and cents; no.

Q. Do you know approximately how much in the hundreds of thousands?—A. I could only hazard a guess. I know it was a very substantial amount of money, secured by a great volume of stocks.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether or not the amount of indebtedness from Russell-Colvin & Co. to various members of the stock exchange at the time receivership was appointed—do you know of your own knowledge whether or not the security they held in every instance was enough to pay those brokers who were members of the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. Only to this extent, that I was asked to prepare in behalf of the members and of the exchange the claim secured by the membership, which claim, as I stated before, was $1,254, subsequently increased to about $3,300.

Q. Have you that paper with you?—A. I have seen it—yes, I have it, but not here—at the hotel.

Q. Can you produce it?—A. I think you will find it in the record of the receivership proceedings accounted for in Mr. Hunter's report. I was reading it in the transcript last evening.

Q. Mr. Dinkelspiel, if you could produce it, I would be willing to suspend, and then ask you the one question in regard to it, and the examination would be completed.—A. I have only copies of it. If you have the original file of the Russell-Colvin proceedings, it will be in the original file.

Q. The value of the seat in the exchange you have referred to is about $100,000?—A. Yes.

Q. Considerably less today?—A. Considerably less today.

Q. What?—A. I do not know.

Q. Do you recall what the price was for the last seat sold?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Mr. President, we object to the question as being immaterial.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the materiality of that?

Mr. LINFORTH. The reason, Mr. President, is this: Inasmuch as the receivership is attacked, I wanted to show by the witness upon the stand, if I could, the value of the seat today, and then if he knows what the receiver sold it for.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness may answer the question.

The WITNESS. I do not know the value today. It is less than what the receiver sold it for.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. The value today is considerably less than Mr. Hunter, the receiver, sold the seat for?—A. Taking value as the marketable price of the seat.

Mr. LINFORTH. I think that is all, Mr. President.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Call the next witness.

EXAMINATION OF JEROME B. WHITE

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Call Jerome White.

Jerome B. White, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Mr. White, are you a member of the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe, in San Francisco?—A. I am.

Q. Do you recall a controversy that arose over the receivership matter of Russell-Colvin in March 1930?—A. I do.

Q. When was it first brought to your attention?—A. It was first brought to my attention the day after that upon which Mr. Addison Strong had been appointed receiver.

Q. Do you remember the day of the month?—A. He was appointed, I take it, on the 11th, and this was on the 12th that it came to my attention.

Q. Did you have a conference with Judge Louderback that day?—A. I did have a conference with the judge. I went out to see him along toward the middle of the afternoon, and saw him in his chambers.

Q. Was that the first conference you had had with Judge Louderback with regard to this matter?—A. It was.

Q. At that time what transpired between you and Judge Louderback in connection with this case?—A. I told the judge the purpose of my call, that Mr. Strong, whom I had been with at noontime—I had been with Mr. Strong, Mr. Hood, and Mr. McAuliffe for lunch during the noon hour—that Mr. Strong told me what had transpired up to that time, noontime of that same day, and that Mr. Strong desired that our firm should represent him, and I called to see if I could obtain the judge's approval to the appointment. I told the judge that I had with me in my pocket, or my brief case, I will not be sure, but I had with me—I did not take it out and present it to him, however—the regular formal form of order appointing or confirming the appointment of attorneys for the receiver, the attorneys, of course, being designated in the form as Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe.

The judge immediately expressed in anger his feelings in the matter, saying that it was very embarrassing to him, that this was a very, very embarrassing situation, and he regretted it very much, that he could not understand the kind of man that Strong—what kind of man he was. He bitterly criticized Strong for not having come back to see him on the afternoon of the day on which he was appointed, no matter how late it was.

I pointed out Mr. Strong's excuse that he had given to me. The judge said that did not matter, he was there, and had Strong come back to his chambers, as he expected he would, he would have found him there, and had he come back this thing would not have happened. I argued with the judge a bit. First he said he was thinking very much that Strong was not the proper kind of man for him to have as receiver in this case, that he did not like his attitude at all, that he thought he was insubordinate in that he had not come back as he had promised. I argued to the judge a bit that that was an oversight and that it was not intentional, that Strong was not that type of man who would willfully disobey a suggestion of the judge. I also argued to the judge a bit about Strong's qualifications for this position. I asked the judge if he had any objection to our firm, if there was any ground why we were not a proper firm to handle the legal affairs, to represent the receiver as counsel.

The judge said that that was not the point, that he had wanted to name the attorney in this matter, that it was his practice, he told me, where the interested parties come before him and make a suggestion, or practically select their own receiver, make a suggestion as to who the receiver should be, and he adopted that suggestion, it had been his practice, he said, in those cases, to make selection himself of the attorneys, and that he expected to do it in this case, and had insisted upon Mr. Strong accepting Mr. John Douglas Short. Mr. Strong apparently had refused to do so, and was refusing to do so, and he considered him insubordinate.

I said to the judge that his refusal—that the refusal to accept our firm under the circumstances would, at least among the parties who knew the facts—because the plaintiff's attorneys and the defendant's attorneys, and the parties on the inside, did know the facts up to that moment—would be a reflection upon the standing of our firm, and I asked the judge if he had any reason for adopting that position. He said, "No." He said, "I have no objection to the firm whatever, and I have known you a great many years; but", he said, "it is Strong that I take exception to—his conduct—and I have asked for his resignation."

I said, "Your Honor, if his attitude in the matter of the selection of an attorney has put him in that position, Mr. Strong has told you, and he has told us, that he would accept Mr. Lloyd Ackerman, and that it would be better for Your Honor, if you prefer him to us, it is perfectly agreeable to us, we would retire rather than have you accept Mr. Strong's resignation."

"No", he said, "that is all the same, the same situation with reference to Mr. Ackerman." He said, "I am not going to decide this matter now." He said, "I will think it over and you might come back tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock and I will talk with you further about it."

Q. In that conversation, did he say anything to you about not conferring with you about it until he had seen Strong again?—A. No; he did not say that I was not to confer with Strong or with anybody.

Q. That is not the question. My question is, Did the judge decline to discuss it with you until he could see Strong himself?—A. Well, he had discussed it with me at considerable length that afternoon, and said at the end of the interview that there was not any use to talk further about it, that he was going to give it some thought, and I could come back the first thing in the morning, I think he said 9 o'clock, and he would make up his mind and would tell us about it.

Q. Did you go out to the judge's chambers and have a conference with him, or call on him, on the morning of the 12th, the next morning after Mr. Strong had been appointed receiver, and before Mr. Strong saw Judge Louderback?—A. The morning of the 12th? I am talking now about the afternoon of the 12th. I did not go at any time to the judge prior to this visit of mine in the afternoon, after I had had lunch with Mr. Hood, who is Mr. Strong's partner, Mr. Strong, and Mr. McAuliffe.

Q. In that conversation did Judge Louderback object to your firm on the ground that you represented the stock exchange?—A. No; he did not give that as his objection. It was as I have indicated, and I cannot give the exact language, but I do know the judge put considerable emphasis upon the circumstance that he did not know Mr. Strong. He said he came to him as a stranger, vouched for by these gentlemen, and he did not question that he was a man of good reputation, but it was a matter of policy which he had followed where the parties make a suggestion as to the receiver, it was his practice to make the suggestion as to attorneys.

Q. Did you have any conference with Judge Louderback the next morning, on the 13th?—A. I did. I went there at 9 o'clock.

Q. What transpired in that conference?—A. In that conference the judge said that he was not going to give me a final answer about this, that he was going to send for Mr. Marrin, Mr. Thelen, and I think Brown, and have a talk with them; that it might be that there would not be any receiver appointed, or that the appointment would be vacated, that there would not be any receivership in this matter. "But", he said, "if I retain Mr. Strong, I do give my consent to you people acting as his attorney." He said, "If he continues as the receiver, I will sign the order appointing your firm attorneys for the receiver."

Q. Was that the last conference you had with him about it?—A. It was.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. White, how long had you known Judge Louderback at the time of these conversations?—A. I knew Judge Louderback before he went on the bench of the superior court. I would say less than 15 years and not more than 27, since I have been practicing.

Q. And your relations had always been pleasant and agreeable with him up to the time of the happening of these matters?—A. Yes; they had been. I never had any difficulty of any kind with the judge. I had not appeared in his court since he was a Federal judge to any extent.

Q. But your acquaintanceship had run back the years you have stated?—A. Exactly.

Q. The judge told you, did he not, that where he had appointed a person receiver who was unknown to him, at the recommendation of the parties, his rule was to have a check on him by suggesting the attorney who ought to be appointed?—A. That was, in substance, the position which he took.

Q. When you talked with the judge, he frankly told you that he was considering the advisability of removing him?—A. Yes; he said he had asked for his resignation.

Q. And he told you that if after talking with the other attorneys interested in the matter, he should conclude to let him remain, he would then consent to the appointment of your firm?—A. In substance, he said if Mr. Strong was the receiver, we could be his counsel, but he did not. I went away firmly of the impression that he was going to let Strong remain if there was a receivership at all. That was my conclusion in the matter, and I so notified my partner.

Q. But the judge notified you that he was thinking seriously of removing Mr. Strong?—A. He was dissatisfied with Mr. Strong.

Q. Did you tell the judge on your first visit, the day after the appointment of the receiver, that you had with you a petition for the appointment of the firm of Heller, Ehrmann, White & McAuliffe as attorneys for the receiver Strong?—A. I did.

Q. You told him that petition was for the appointment of the firm?—A. Yes; it was.

Q. And it was for the appointment of the firm, was it not?—A. It was.

Mr. LINFORTH. I have no further questions.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

(The witness retired from the stand.)

EXAMINATION OF SIDNEY SCHWARTZ

Sidney Schwartz, having been duly sworn, was examined, and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Is this Mr. Sidney Schwartz?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Schwartz?—A. In the city and county of San Francisco, Calif.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. I am a stockbroker.

Q. With what firm are you connected now?—A. With the firm of Sutro & Co.

Q. In what capacity?—A. I am the senior partner.

Q. Have you ever been president of the San Francisco Stock Exchange?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At what time?—A. From October 1923 until January 8, 1932, inclusive.

Q. In the year 1929, as president of the stock exchange, were you made acquainted with the situation with regard to the Russell-Colvin Co.?—A. Their general condition, yes; and the inadequacy of their capital.

Q. What steps were taken by the exchange with regard to it?—A. In November 1929 the San Francisco Stock Exchange, immediately following the market break, sent out a questionnaire to different members in order to determine the adequacy of capital of all member firms, and the firm of Russell-Colvin was among those firms that then at that time showed a weak capital structure.

Q. Did you have any supervision over the company at the time you went out as president of the exchange?—A. Do you mean me personally, sir?

Q. I mean the exchange itself.—A. The exchange did through its auditor, and as president of the exchange I then, at that time, issued an order to closely watch the developments in the firm of Russell-Colvin, as well as several other firms; and at that time Russell-Colvin became aware that it would be desirable, and almost imperative, to furnish themselves with additional working capital.

Q. Do you know what later steps were taken by the exchange with regard to this concern?—A. It is my recollection that Russell-Colvin did furnish themselves with some amount of additional working capital, and at least I am positive that their working capital was sufficient to permit them to remain as active members of the San Francisco Stock Exchange, at least for the time during which I was president of the exchange.

Q. But later, on March 10 of that year, you were notified or were made aware of the fact that they were suspended?—A. I had retired as president of the exchange on January 8, 1930. Consequently at that time I had no definite knowledge as to their condition or no reason to have any definite knowledge.

Q. Is there any other action except suspension that the stock exchange may take with regard to its members?—A. Yes, sir; there is.

Q. What is it?—A. The stock exchange has the power either to suspend or expel. In the event of insolvency, the exchange suspends a member; in the event of violations or infractions of the rules, bylaws, and constitution of the exchange, the exchange uses the power of expulsion.

Q. What claims of members of the exchange are secured by the seat of a member?—A. All claims of the members of the stock exchange arising from member contracts, and from member contracts alone, are secured by the membership in the exchange of the individual member; and the governing board of the San Francisco Stock Exchange defines member contracts. In the constitution will be found a clause touching on this, article 20, that I heard quoted recently or a few moments ago, defining the powers given to the governing board to define member contracts. I know that rule to my own sorrow, because the attorney for the exchange decided a case against my own firm, ruling that certain transactions for individual partners of the exchange did not come under the rule of constituting a member contract; and consequently in this particular matter, did not furnish my own firm with the security normally given by the value of a seat on the exchange.

Q. Is there any other financial interest that the exchange has with regard to membership except the security of other members for their claims, as you have described?

The WITNESS. May I have that question repeated?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Will the reporter please read the question?

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. Is there any other financial interest that the exchange has with regard to membership except the security of other members for their claims, as you have described?

The WITNESS. There is no other financial interest; there is an ethical interest, but no other financial interest.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Do you know H. B. Hunter?—A. I do, sir.

Q. What connection have you had with him, if any?—A. I met Mr. Hunter for the first time—and I must give you this date out of my memory—in November 1928, when the resignation of the assistant to the president of the stock exchange, which is an appointive office, was accepted, vacating the office; and when I requested applications for that position, among the applications was an application from Mr. H. B. Hunter. That was the time that I first became acquainted with him. He held that position, if my memory serves me correctly, until approximately May or June 1929. I give you those dates out of memory and they may not be correct.

Q. Do you know with whom he was connected in March 1930?—A. In March 1930 and from the time of his resignation he was a partner in the firm of William Cavalier & Co., members of the San Francisco Stock Exchange.

Q. Did they have a member of that firm on the board of governors of the exchange?—A. They did—will you give me the date?

Q. In March 1930.—A. They did—Mr. Robert Willis, and I believe he is still a governor of that exchange; he is.

Q. Do you recall the occasion when the receivership was applied for in the Russell-Colvin case?—A. Pardon me.

Q. Do you recall the occasion when the receivership was instituted in the Russell-Colvin case?—A. My knowledge of that, Mr. BROWNING, comes from the newspapers. I had been East and subsequently South and arrived back in San Francisco, I would say, approximately a week before reading in the newspaper of the insolvency of the Russell-Colvin Co. and of the appointment of a receiver, Mr. Addison Strong.

Q. Did you get any information from anyone about the selection of the receiver in that case?—A. I should like to have that question repeated.

Q. Did you get any information from anyone about who would be the receiver in that case or who was the receiver?—A. From the newspapers I read that Mr. Addison Strong had been appointed receiver. Subsequently I had a phone call from Mr. Hunter.

Q. What time of the day was that?—A. To the best of my recollection, it was sometime prior to 2:30 o'clock on that day. I fix that time for the reason that I had a rather lengthy conversation with Mr. Hunter, who stated to me that he thought he was to be appointed receiver in the Russell-Colvin matter. I said to Mr. Hunter, in surprise, that I had read in the paper that Mr. Strong had been appointed the receiver, and he told me, "Well, there is some understanding there, and I am inclined to believe that I am going to be the receiver; and if I require your recommendation, may I have it?" I said to him that I did not want to get into any controversy between Mr. Strong and Mr. Hunter for the receivership, which he could appreciate, but also told him at the time that my connections with Mr. Strong through his having been auditor of the San Francisco Stock Exchange for a great many years were of the most friendly character and such that I certainly felt that Mr. Strong was better qualified as a receiver; but, in the event of Mr. Strong being the receiver and in the event of my recommendation not doing any damage to Mr. Strong, that I should be very glad to recommend Mr. Hunter.

Q. When did you next hear from him?—A. It is my recollection it was the following day—and if not on the following day, then on the day after—that Mr. Hunter called at my office and told me that he had been appointed receiver. We had a very brief conversation. I congratulated him, but I went into none of the details beyond that, because it was at an hour and a time when I was quite busy.

Q. Did you recommend him to Judge Louderback for receiver?—A. I did not.

Q. Did the judge ever speak to you about him?—A. He did not.

Q. Did you send him any word directly or indirectly concerning it?—A. I sent him no word directly, Mr. BROWNING, and indirectly only if Mr. Hunter had conveyed my conversation to the judge.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Take the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do counsel for the respondent desire to cross-examine the witness?

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, the respondent does not deem it necessary to cross-examine this witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Call the next witness.

OFFER OF SUPERIOR COURT RECORDS

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Mr. President, we offer in evidence a certified copy of an order made by Judge Harold Louderback appointing W. S. Leake, Fairmont Hotel, and G. H. Gilbert, 16 California Street, appraisers in the matter of the estate of Howard Brickell, dated April 5, 1927.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 4.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any objection on the part of counsel for the respondent?

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. President, we object to it; first, on the ground of lack of jurisdiction of this body to go into any matter that occurred prior to Judge Louderback being appointed a Federal judge, because the cases hold—and the full set-up of the whole matter is expressed in volume 9, and the authorities are there collated by Mr. Hughes in his Federal Practice—that the moment the Senate of the United States confirm a Federal judge apparently it is like absolution and wipes out his former transgressions; and in any matter that has to do with his conduct and acts prior to being appointed a Federal judge, that the Senate of the United States would be impeaching their own integrity, so the cases say, if they attempted to go back of that. So we say to you, Mr. President, and to the Senate sitting as judges and jurors, that the conduct of Superior Judge Louderback, if it be misconduct, has nothing to do in any way, shape, manner, or form with the impeachment articles.

Very frankly I say to you, Mr. President, that upon the hearing had in this Chamber upon the 18th day of April, Mr. Manager SUMNERS then said, "We do not rely upon it as an impeaching matter, and you could not impeach," said he on that occasion—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will counsel suspend for a moment until we ascertain the purpose for which the offer is made?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. It is the intention of the managers on the part of the House, with your permission, to introduce evidence in the nature of certified copies of court records for the purpose of showing the close and intimate relationship that existed between Judge Louderback and Mr. Leake and Mr. Gilbert.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do counsel for the respondent deny that that is material? Do they deny that this is material evidence for the purpose stated by the House manager?

Mr. HANLEY. Yes; we do, for this reason: The mere fact that a court appoints a member of the bar or a citizen of his community an appraiser does not show an intimate relationship.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair is very clear that it is admissible for whatever it may be worth for the purpose stated by the manager on the part of the House.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We also offer a certified copy of an order signed by Judge Harold Louderback on May 24, 1927, appointing W. S. Leake receiver in the case of Heath against Heath, with the requirement of a bond of $25,000.

Mr. HANLEY. For all the reasons heretofore urged, we make similar objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands the managers of the House have offered this for the same purpose, and the offer is being made for that sole purpose?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. For the sole purpose of showing the relationship between the respondent and W. S. Leake and Mr. Gilbert, and the course of conduct which culminated in the conspiracy charged and other charges made in the impeachment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let them be admitted. (See U.S.S. Exhibit 5.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer a certified copy of an affidavit or verification made by W. S. Leake in the case of Heath against Heath, dated May 24, 1927.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 6.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer a certified copy of the oath of appraisers and the bill for services rendered by W. S. Leake and G. H. Gilbert in the sum of $1,750 in the matter of the estate of Howard Brickell, dated December 20, 1927.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 7.)

Mr. HANLEY. Is not the name of Mr. R. F. Mogan on that bill? The manager has not read it all.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. I merely identified the paper so far as it relates to this proceeding. There is another name of another appraiser named Mogan, but the managers on the part of the House did not conceive it necessary to mention that name in order to identify the paper offered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. May the Chair inquire whether the House managers desire these papers printed as a part of the record or that just that which counsel states shall be made a part of the record?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. May I confer with the other managers?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Certainly.

Mr. Manager PERKINS (after conference). The opinion of the managers on the part of the House is that they ought to go in the record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do you mean the entire paper?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. With the permission of the President and of the Senate we could delete some of them, perhaps, but the substance of them ought to appear in the record.

Mr. HANLEY. I understand that they are in for one purpose, to show familiarity of Leake with the judge, and not for the purpose of commenting upon their text, because the managers may not, under the guise of getting them in for one purpose, then use them for another purpose. The purpose is evident to the Chair that they ought to be limited to the purpose for which they were offered, namely, to show the relationship of the parties which in the answer has not been denied. The object of the managers is not, from our viewpoint, to limit it to that purpose, but to use in argument, viciously as we claim, the contents of the documents spoken of and to then charge that because it was introduced for one purpose it was introduced for all.

I make this statement at this time because we do not want to be misunderstood. If we had to try that issue we could try it, but it is not an issue before the Senate. Therefore I say to the President of this body, sitting as the presiding officer of the court, that he should limit its introduction with the understanding that it is for the purpose for which it is introduced and not for some secret purpose at the end of the trial, when our mouths are closed, to say this and that when we have no chance to reply.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. May the Chair inquire of the managers on the part of the House whether it would not be satisfactory to state from the documents and whether it would not be satisfactory to counsel for the respondent to state from the documents briefly what they show that would be material under the ruling of the present occupant of the chair?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. On behalf of the managers on the part of the House, we deem it important to have sufficient of these records in to apprise the trial body of the nature of the course of conduct between the respondent in this case and Mr. Leake and Mr. Gilbert. It would be quite impossible for us merely to state briefly the nature of the paper, because it is important for all the trial body to be able to see what the papers are insofar as they are admissible in evidence, in order to set out the course of conduct in which the respondent month by month appointed Mr. Gilbert receiver and appointed Mr. Leake receiver, and paid them fees, and to show that the fees were exorbitant fees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. How do you propose to show they were exorbitant fees?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. I might take one case. We will show that in a certain case the respondent allowed a fee of $500 to one of these receivers for appraising a piece of property that he never looked at, but all he did was to sign the affidavit of value.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do you propose to call witnesses to show that fact?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We will show it by the witnesses already subpoenaed here. We will show it by Mr. Leake when he appears, if he does appear. We will show it by Mr. Gilbert, who will appear and I understand is in town.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair does not think we ought to go into collateral issues involved in any of the cases in which the respondent was acting as judge of some State court. He thinks it might be material to show the various appointments of the men who are involved in the present complaint, and that is the extent to which the papers are pertinent to this issue. It is always difficult, of course, to admit a paper for one purpose and prevent it being used for another purpose. If a paper is admissible at all and counsel insist upon it being considered in evidence, the Chair does not quite know how it can be excluded if it is admissible for any purpose.

Mr. HANLEY. The point I make is this. Very often, for instance, an affidavit reciting a lot of facts is put forth in a paper introduced for one purpose for identification. We cannot argue the truthfulness of that affidavit when it was limited to the purpose to which it was directed. The point we make is that we are not trying any State court cases. If we were, we would meet them. The point is that these papers are not being introduced for the purpose stated, but for the purpose of hammering us at the close when we are concluded in our defense with relation to this matter. I want to warn the Senate right now that that is the purpose, and I predict that is the purpose, and therefore it is irrelevant and incompetent. It is not jurisdictional to this body and therefore, if the paper is admitted at all, it ought to be for the purpose of showing the intimacy and none other.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will counsel for the respondent agree that there may be read into the record the various times these men were appointed and the amount of fees paid them, and then have the papers excluded?

Mr. HANLEY. For that purpose we have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is that satisfactory to the managers?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. That is not satisfactory to the managers on the part of the House. The papers are not very long. If this were a trial before a jury it would be a different thing, but we must take into consideration that all the members of the trial body are not here all the time and this record must be perused by them before decision can be had. It is of prime importance on the part of the managers to show the course of dealing between Judge Louderback and Gilbert and Leake that runs through the years in which he constantly appointed these men receivers.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has stated two or three times that the paper is admissible and has suggested that there be read into the record the date, the name of the case, and the amount. The Chair inquires whether that is not all that is in these records that is pertinent to this issue? If you can later by subsequent witnesses show that in some particular case there was paid an excessive fee, that is an entirely different matter, but that can be done without introducing the records.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may I make an inquiry of the Presiding Officer? Have these records or documents been offered in evidence? Has there been a motion to offer them in evidence?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The understanding of the Chair is that they are now being offered in evidence.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does the Chair hold they cannot be admitted in evidence except for a specific purpose?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is the holding of the Chair?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That they may be offered for a specific purpose.

Mr. McKELLAR. What recourse have those of us who are members of the court who believe that these records ought to go in for whatever they are worth?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The statement by the managers will be a part of the record and it will be admitted by counsel for the respondent that it constitutes a part of the record.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona will state the point of order.

Mr. ASHURST. Rule VII, at page 89, prescribes particularly and definitely just how a ruling may be appealed from. I ask that the clerk may read rule VII.

Mr. McKELLAR. I hope the clerk will do so, because I want some information about it.

Mr. ASHURST. The point of order is not debatable.

Mr. McKELLAR. A point of order is always in order and I think members of the court ought to know something about it when these questions arise. We ought to know what the facts are and what the rule is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the rule. The Chief Clerk read as follows:

VII. The Presiding Officer of the Senate shall direct all necessary preparations in the Senate Chamber, and the Presiding Officer on the trial shall direct all the forms of proceedings while the Senate is sitting for the purpose of trying an impeachment and all forms during the trial not otherwise specially provided for. And the Presiding Officer on the trial may rule all questions of evidence and incidental questions, which ruling shall stand as the judgment of the Senate, unless some Member of the Senate shall ask that a formal vote be taken thereon, in which case it shall be submitted to the Senate for decision; or he may, at his option, in the first instance, submit any such question to a vote of the Members of the Senate. Upon all such questions the vote shall be without a division, unless the yeas and nays be demanded by one fifth of the Members present, when the same shall be taken.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I desire, if it is now in order, to have a vote by the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, on the admissibility of these papers.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BRATTON. Do I understand that the managers on the part of the House have requested that these documents be printed in the Record?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the Chair's understanding.

Mr. BRATTON. That is the question about to be submitted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has reached a very definite conclusion about the question so far as the admissibility of these papers is concerned. They are admissible for one purpose. The Chair was seeking to have counsel on each side agree by suggesting to the counsel for the respondent whether they would consent that there might be read into the record from these papers the names of the cases, the names of the persons appointed, and the amount of fees paid them, the thought of the Chair being that if that were done it would not then be necessary to admit the papers themselves.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, a further parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BRATTON. The precise question pending is whether the documents shall be printed in the Record?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the offer made by the managers on the part of the House.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I think we should have the yeas and nays on that subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks this question is of considerable importance and ought to be submitted to the Senate. Is there a second to the demand for the yeas and nays?

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ASHURST. Let the question be stated.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the Chair state the question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is—

Mr. TOWNSEND. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Costigan	Kean	Reed
Ashurst	Couzens	Kendrick	Robinson, Ark.
Austin	Cutting	Keyes	Robinson, Ind.
Bachman	Dickinson	King	Russell
Bailey	Dill	La Follette	Schall
Barkley	Duffy	Logan	Sheppard
Black	Erickson	Long	Shipstead
Bratton	Fess	McAdoo	Smith
Brown	Fletcher	McCarran	Steiner
Bulkley	Frazier	McGill	Stephens
Bulow	George	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Byrd	Glass	McNary	Townsend
Byrnes	Gore	Metcalf	Tydings
Capper	Hale	Murphy	Vandenberg
Carey	Harrison	Neely	Van Nuys
Clark	Hastings	Norris	Wagner
Connally	Hatfield	Nye	Walcott
Coolidge	Hayden	Patterson	Wheeler
Copeland	Hebert	Pope	White

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The question to be submitted to the Senate is whether the certified copies of certain records offered by the managers on the part of the House shall be printed in the Record.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. As I understand, the papers were offered in evidence and a request was made that they be printed in the Record. Am I correct about that?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the question.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Chair stated it as simply a question of their being printed in the Record. The question is whether they shall be received in evidence and printed in the Record, as I look at it.

Mr. BRATTON. I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky will state it.

Mr. LOGAN. As I understand, these records have been offered, and it was suggested that they showed the relationship between the respondent and Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Leake; and the Chair ruled that so far as they showed that either of these parties had been appointed receiver, and the amount of fee, they should go in the record as evidence, but that the remainder of the records should not be admitted in evidence. Are we voting on whether the remainder of the records shall be admitted as evidence or whether they shall simply be printed in the Record?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The managers on the part of the House offered these papers for the RECORD. Objection was made, and, after argument, the Chair held that these records were pertinent for one purpose, namely, to show the connection between the persons named in the papers and the respondent. The Chair sought to have the counsel on both sides agree that the material parts should be read into the record; but that was not satisfactory to the managers on the part of the House, who insisted that the whole records should be admitted. Counsel for the respondent objects to that because there are many things in the records themselves that are not in any sense material; and the question is whether or not the papers offered for the RECORD shall be admitted.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, a further parliamentary inquiry. Is not the question before the court whether the ruling of the Chair shall be sustained?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; the Chair has not ruled upon it. The Chair is submitting the question, being unable to have counsel on both sides agree with respect to it, and it being a matter of some importance.

Mr. LOGAN. Just one further question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LOGAN. I understood that the Chair did rule, and that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar], under rule VII, questioned the ruling and asked that the vote of the Senate be taken on it. Am I wrong about that?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair did not make any definite ruling. The Senator from Arizona [Mr. Ashurst] called attention to the rule, which is to the effect that the question may be submitted to the Senate.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President—

Mr. McKellar. Mr. President, I think the Chair should state that the Senator from Tennessee did understand that the Chair had made a ruling, and under rule VII he asked for a vote of the Senate on that ruling.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair did not understand the Senator from Tennessee to make any such statement.

Mr. McKellar. The RECORD will show for itself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair did not make any definite ruling upon the question. If the Senator from Tennessee made that statement with respect to the ruling of the Chair, the Chair will correct his statement.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a point of order.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, a point of order. Is this matter debatable?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Not at all.

Mr. LONG. A point of order. I desire to propound a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LONG. Is it not permissible for a member of the court to move now that we disregard all rules of evidence and just let them put in what they want to? That will be better, and will save time.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I submit that that is not a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAILEY (when Mr. REYNOLDS' name was called). I desire to announce that my colleague the junior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] is detained by illness. The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HEBERT. I desire to announce that the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR], and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE] are detained on official business, and that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] is detained on account of illness.

The result was—yeas 67, nays 4, as follows:

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Mr. President, earlier in this morning's session it was stated by the managers on the part of the House that the witness Dittmore, subpoenaed duces tecum to produce the records of the Hotel Fairmont, in San Francisco, was present in this city, was suddenly attacked by illness, was taken to the hospital, and that an operation was performed upon him. We now ask counsel for the respondent whether they will admit, without the presence of Mr. Dittmore to identify them, the records produced by Mr. Dittmore under the subpoena duces tecum.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, we announced this morning that if we were afforded an opportunity of examining the papers to which counsel refers, no doubt we could come to some satisfactory arrangement; but we have not been able as yet to examine the papers to which he refers, and do not know what they are.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the papers referred to be submitted to counsel for the respondent for their examination?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. In response to the inquiry of the President, we are now submitting the papers in question to the counsel for the respondent.

Mr. President, we desire to call Mr. J. A. Wainwright as a witness.

RECESS

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, if it may be in order, may we have a recess for about 10 minutes? We have been here for 3 hours without interruption.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I take the liberty of moving that the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, order a recess for 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Utah.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 57 minutes p.m.) the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, took a recess. On the expiration of the recess the Senate, sitting as a court, reassembled.

Q. Was your bank the largest claimant?—A. The largest unsecured claimant.

Q. Did you have a conference with various attorneys with reference to putting the Fageol Motors Co. into the hands of receivers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. As the result of that conference, please state what took place.—A. We had, 4 or 5 days prior to the filing of the petition for a receiver, conferences with representatives of the creditors and the attorneys for the company.

Q. Did you attend at the office of Judge Louderback with any attorneys in reference to the filing of a bill of complaint and answer just admitted in evidence a moment ago?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?—A. On the morning of February 17, 1932.

Q. How large a corporation was Fageol Motors?—A. The Fageol Motor Corporation—there are two corporations involved. One is the Fageol Motors Co., the assembly corporation, or the corporation doing the manufacturing and assembly work. Then there was the Fageol Motor Sales Co., which was the sales organization, both California corporations.

Q. Were they both put in the hands of receivers?—A. They were both put in the hands of receivers.

Q. How large corporations were they?—A. The Fageol Motor Sales Co. was of a nominal capitalization, I believe $10,000. The Fageol Motors Co. was of $3,000,000 capitalization, about eight hundred and some odd thousand of which had been paid in in cash.

Q. Can you tell us approximately the amount of the assets of the Fageol Motors Co.?—A. I should like to refer to the auditor's report. If my memory serves me right, $2,500,000 was the book value of the assets as of the date of the appointment of the receiver. (After referring to papers.) The total assets of the Fageol Motors Co. and the Fageol Motor Sales Co. as of February 17, 1932, was $2,538,581.87.

Q. When you appeared at Judge Louderback's office, did the group see the judge then?—A. No, sir.

Q. What was done?—A. We made three trips to the judge's office.

Q. Tell us about the first trip.—A. The first trip, if my memory serves me right, was timed to reach him as he came off the bench at 12 o'clock. We went to his secretary, who informed us that the judge would sit through to 1 o'clock, and to come back a few minutes before 1, when we could see the judge.

Q. Were the papers left there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the name of the secretary to Judge Louderback?—A. I think it is Miss Berger.

Q. Was she informed of the purpose of the visit?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And of the name of this person who was suitable as receiver?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What previous connection did Mr. Tuller have with the automotive industry?—A. He was an official of the Durant Motor Car Co.; a man of wide business acquaintance and ability, considerable ability; a man who was pretty well fixed financially.

Q. Did this group return at 1 o'clock, or later?—A. We returned about 5 minutes to 1.

Q. Did you see Judge Louderback then?—A. No, sir.

Q. What were you informed then?—A. The secretary said the judge got through a little early, and to come back at 2:30.

Q. Did the group return at 2:30?—A. About 2:20.

Q. Did you see Judge Louderback then?—A. I saw Judge Louderback pass us in the hall a short way from the entrance to the secretary's office.

Q. You saw him pass you on the way in or out?—A. As we were going in the judge was leaving.

Q. What did you find, upon arriving at the clerk's office, with reference to the appointment of a receiver?—A. The secretary said, "What is it you want?" Mr. Bronson said, "We called with reference to the Fageol case." She said, "The judge has already appointed a receiver." Mr. Bronson said, "Who is it?" She said, "Mr. Gilbert." "What are Mr. Gilbert's initials?" "I do not know." "What is his address?" "I do not know." "What is his phone number?" "I do not know, but I will let you know later on."

Q. Did you know, or later ascertain, what Mr. Gilbert's business was?—A. Not until the following morning at 10 o'clock.

Q. Well, did you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was his business?—A. I really did not finally determine what his business was until—

Q. Never mind when. What was his business?—A. He was working for the Western Union Telegraph Co.

Q. In what capacity?—A. Night superintendent, I believe.

Q. What was done to ascertain Mr. Gilbert's place of business or telephone number in addition to what you have stated?—A. When we left the Federal Building at 2:30, on being advised that Mr. Gilbert had been appointed, we then walked to Mr. Bronson's office. We proceeded to look through the phone book and the city directory to try and ascertain where Mr. Gilbert lived, or who he was; and, while we were making inquiry as to Mr. Gilbert, a phone call came from Mr. Dinkelspiel stating that he was the attorney for Mr. Gilbert.

Q. Is that the Mr. Dinkelspiel that appeared on the witness stand today?—A. No; no relation at all. This is Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel, attorneys in the Pacific National Bank Building, San Francisco.

Q. Did the group that attended at Judge Louderback's office at any time have an opportunity to see him and present the papers to him?

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment, Mr. President. We want to object to that question as calling for the witness's opinion or conclusion as to whether they had an opportunity. He can state the facts, but we maintain that his conclusions should not be given.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reporter will read the question.

The Official Reporter read the question, as follows:

Did the group that attended at Judge Louderback's office at any time have an opportunity to see him and present the papers to him?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks the witness may answer the question if he knows—if he can answer it.

The WITNESS. We thought we were given the opportunity when we came back on two different occasions, but we did not have the opportunity of talking to him.

By Mr. Manager PERKINS:

Q. How did you ascertain who Mr. Gilbert was?—A. When Mr. Dinkelspiel phoned Mr. Bronson, the suggestion was made to Mr. Dinkelspiel that he have Mr. Gilbert meet with the creditors' committee the following morning in Mr. Bronson's office. At that meeting I was delegated by the creditors to question Mr. Gilbert as to his experience and his qualifications.

Q. Did you interrogate him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Gilbert know anything about the automotive business?

Mr. LINFORTH. Wait a minute. We object to that, Mr. President, as calling for the opinion or conclusion of the witness. He can state the facts, and the Senators, as jurors, will draw their conclusions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is an inquiry about a fact which the witness may or may not be able to answer.

The WITNESS. I will tell you what I said to Mr. Gilbert. I told Mr. Gilbert that I was representing the largest creditor of the Fageol Motors Co., and as such I was particularly interested as to his qualifications to carry on that work; that we creditors had been 4 or 5 days debating and determining upon a proper man. I questioned him at length; and as a result of that questioning I learned that he had been connected with the Sonora receivership, the Prudential, and he did state some connection with an apartment house. His remarks did not satisfy us. We did not get a great deal of information from him.

I then asked him if he would cooperate with the creditors in the operation of the company.

Q. Did Mr. Gilbert state that he ever had any connection with the automotive business at any time in his life?—A. On a direct question from me, he answered "No."

Q. Did you ask him whether he knew anything about the business?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say?—A. "No."

Q. Had he ever been in business for himself in any industry?—A. I do not believe he had. I do not recall his stating that he had.

Q. As a matter of fact, he had been a telegrapher for thirty-odd years; had he not?—A. We did not learn that until later.

Q. Did you learn it later?—A. About 4 or 5 days later one of the other large creditors communicated to me that they had learned that he was associated with the Western Union Telegraph Co.

Q. As a result of your talk with Mr. Gilbert, was anything said about putting the Fageol Motors Co. into bankruptcy to get away from his being a receiver?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was stated?—A. We stated to Mr. Gilbert very frankly that unless we got cooperation from him we would proceed to put the company in bankruptcy, because in bankruptcy we could control the election of a trustee. When I say "we", I am speaking as the chairman of the creditors' committee.

Q. Did he agree to cooperate with you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did Mr. Gilbert do, so far as you know, in operating this Fageol Motors Co.?—A. He gave us the utmost cooperation, but he possessed no ability to carry on the work.

Q. What do you mean by "cooperation"?—A. Everything that was suggested to him by the creditors' committee he willingly and cheerfully did.

Q. Did he do anything else?—A. Well, I know of no original ideas of his.

Q. Did the Fageol Motors Co. have a large amount of insurance on its plant and property at the time of the appointment of the receiver?—A. Considerable insurance.

Q. What did Mr. Gilbert do with reference to that?—A. I do not know whether it was Mr. Gilbert or Mr. Dinkelspiel that arranged the insurance. I did not at that particular time pay a great deal of attention to the insurance.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Gilbert employed certain accountants to go over the books of the company?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were the accountants?—A. Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery.

Q. Why did he employ these accountants?—A. He employed the accountants at my suggestion, or the suggestion of a member of the creditors' committee.

Q. What was the nature of the work that was suggested to be done?—A. An audit of the affairs of the Fageol Motors Co.

Q. Embracing what period?—A. I do not believe that we put any particular stress as to operations. It was more to determine the value of the assets.

Q. How much was the bill for these accountants' services?—A. Fifteen thousand dollars, and another $2,000 in the ancillary proceedings in Portland, Oreg.; or a total of seventeen thousand and some odd dollars.

Q. What was the final disposition of the Fageol Motors case?—A. It was put in bankruptcy on July 19 or 20, 1932.

Q. Why?—A. It was shown that the company could not operate successfully in receivership, because it was difficult to sell a motor car with a company in receivership.

Q. Did the company operate, manufacture, under the receivership?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. For how long a period?—A. From February 17 to the date of bankruptcy.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. You may cross-examine.

Cross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Wainwright, you have stated that the Central National Bank, with which you were connected, was the largest unsecured creditor.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the next largest unsecured creditor?—A. The Waukesha Motor Co.

Q. Do you recall the amount of its claim?—A. Approximately $92,000.

Q. Is it the fact that its claim and the claim of your bank embraced about 25 percent of the unsecured debts of the Fageol Motors Co.?—A. I believe you are right.

Q. At the meeting which you had in Mr. Bronson's office at which Mr. Dinkelspiel and Mr. Gilbert were present, I understood you to say that you, representing the meeting of the creditors or the committee of the creditors, desired to know of him and his counsel whether they would cooperate with you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Cooperate with you to what extent? Did you advise them?—A. Follow the advice and counsel of the creditors in the operation of the company.

Q. And you have stated that it was a going concern under the receivership down to the time of the bankruptcy proceeding?—A. Correct.

Q. Did you, from that time down to the time of the termination of the receivership, come in daily contact with Mr. Gilbert and his attorneys, Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And during that period of time was there any matter of policy suggested by you as the head of the committee of creditors that the receiver and his counsel did not act upon?—A. Not one single matter.

Q. So that so far as cooperation is concerned, you received in the running of this business under the receiver and his attorney 100-percent cooperation all the time, did you not?—A. Correct.

Q. You had no complaint whatever to make in regard to Mr. Gilbert or in regard to his counsel during any part of that time?—A. No, sir.

Q. Who was the president of that company at the time Mr. Gilbert went in as receiver?—A. Mr. L. H. Bill.

Q. And did he have some relative also connected with the company?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall what the salary was that Mr. Bill and his relative were drawing from the company at the time the receiver was appointed?—A. I do not recall. I did have something to do with cutting their salaries prior to the receivership.

Q. You had cut them, had you not, down to the time of the appointment of the receiver, to the point of a thousand dollars a month for the two?—A. I do not know the exact amount. I think that is approximately what it was.

Q. You think a thousand dollars, approximately, was the amount at the time of the receivership?—A. I think so.

Q. Did the receiver discharge Mr. Bill and his relative?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How soon after his appointment did he discharge both of them?—A. There was a considerable lapse of time.

Q. Within a month?—A. I think it was a little bit longer than a month.

Q. What is your best recollection?—A. I would say it was about some time in the early part of April. I may be wrong.

Q. And that effected a saving of a thousand dollars a month for the company?—A. Well, it eliminated an accumulation of salaries, of course.

Q. Did Mr. Gilbert, soon after his appointment, appoint a Mr. Lundstrom as assistant to him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you recommend the appointment of Mr. Lundstrom?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he was appointed by Mr. Gilbert?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At a salary of what?—A. I believe he put him in at $200 a month and shortly thereafter raised him to $400 a month.

Q. Was anyone else appointed in the place of Bill and his relative except Mr. Lundstrom?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who else?—A. Mr. Solatchi.

Q. And he was an accountant?—A. He was connected with Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery.

Q. If Mr. Tuller, the gentleman whom you had recommended, had been appointed receiver, could you have gotten any better cooperation from him than you obtained from Mr. Gilbert and his attorneys?—A. I do not believe so, because Mr. Gilbert cooperated with us in everything we asked him to do.

Q. Upon the severance of Mr. Gilbert's relations with the company as receiver, did you give to him or his attorneys, Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel, any letters?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to a photostat of a letter of date May 4, 1932. Is that the letter which you gave him at that time?—A. (Examining.) Yes, sir.

Mr. LINFORTH. We offer the letter as part of the cross-examination of the witness.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. The managers on the part of the House object to that. It is not evidence in this case, but is merely corroborative of what the witness has said, that this Mr. Gilbert gave them cooperation. The fact that he wrote a letter cannot be evidence in this matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the purpose of it?

Mr. LINFORTH. The purpose is to show this: It is claimed and maintained here by the gentlemen representing the House that Mr. Gilbert was an incompetent person to act as receiver. It appears from the testimony of the witness now upon the stand that he was the head or chairman of the creditors' committee, who came in constant and daily touch with Mr. Gilbert and his attorneys during the entire time of their activity. We propose to show how the witness upon the stand regarded both the attorneys and the receiver at the end of the receivership, and for that purpose we offer the letter, which may be submitted to the President, if he desires to see it.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. The letter offered is only the product of the witness, and the witness is on the stand. Certainly something he wrote a year or two ago cannot be evidence in this case, when he is here himself to testify.

Mr. LINFORTH. It is a letter written at the time of the completion of the service.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Has it been identified by the witness?

Mr. LINFORTH. Yes; it has been identified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let it be admitted.

Mr. LINFORTH. The letter is upon the letterhead of the Central National Bank, of Oakland, dated May 4, 1932, and is as follows:

U.S.S. EXHIBIT No. 22

Mr. JOHN WALTON DINKELSPIEL,
Attorney at Law, San Francisco, Calif.

DEAR SIR: In view of the recent publicity in connection with the Fageol Motors Co. receivership, I feel it is only fair that you receive this expression of our feelings as to the attitude of your office and Mr. G. H. Gilbert thus far in this receivership.

You both have shown a desire to cooperate and have cooperated with the creditors to the fullest extent, and I feel that as a result of this mutual cooperation a businesslike administration will obtain.

Yours truly,

JAS. A. WAINWRIGHT.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Wainwright, following that did you give a letter to Mr. Gilbert?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I have not the original of that letter, but I call your attention—A. (Interrupting.) I have a copy of it.

Q. Have you a copy of it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will thank you if I may take it. This letter is of date July 28, 1932, and is addressed to G. H. Gilbert, Esq. Is that a true copy of the letter which you gave Mr. Gilbert at that time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your signature being attached to the original?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LINFORTH. We offer this letter as part of the cross-examination of the witness, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The same objection will be made, I assume?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Assuming the same ruling will be made, there is no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let it be admitted.

Mr. LINFORTH. I will read it. It is as follows:

U.S.S. EXHIBIT No. 23

JULY 28, 1932.

G. H. GILBERT, Esq.,
Fageol Motors Co., Oakland, Calif.

DEAR SIR: It is my pleasure at this time to acknowledge my appreciation for the cooperation extended me as a representative of this bank in the matter of the Fageol receivership.

You at all times were willing and did listen to and heed the advice and counsel of the writer and other representatives of the large creditors.

I wish you success in any future undertaking and trust that, though your connection with the Fageol Co. is at an end, I may have the pleasure of seeing you in the future whenever you have occasion to be in Oakland.

With my kindest well wishes, I am, yours sincerely,

JAS. A. WAINWRIGHT.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. In your talk with Mr. Gilbert, he advised you that he was the night superintendent, I think you said, of the Western Union Telegraph Co.?—A. No; Mr. Gilbert did not at that time. At the first meeting with Mr. Gilbert, the morning after, that would be on the 18th of February, we did not hear from him that he had any connection with the Western Union Telegraph.

Q. Did you subsequently ascertain that his connection with that company was as you have stated?—A. I believe that was night superintendent.

Q. Did you also ascertain that he had been with that company for 35 years continuously?—A. He told me that he had been with them a great number of years. I figured that it was 22, as I remember.

Q. Your recollection is 22?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he also tell you that in the capacity in which he was then employed by that company he had under him more than 100 employees?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask him the number of employees who were under him during the time he occupied that position with the Western Union Telegraph Co.?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ascertain that, in order to enable him to act as receiver, the Western Union Telegraph Co. had given him a furlough or a leave of absence of 6 months?—A. No; we did not at that time. In fact, it was sometime later I heard that he had been working for a week or so for the Western Union after he had taken the position as receiver of the Fageol.

Q. During the time he was acting as receiver of the Fageol Motors Co., do you know what hours he was devoting to those duties?—A. He spent considerable time at the plant.

Q. The entire day?—A. I did not spend the entire day there myself, but every day that I went out Gilbert was there.

Q. Do you recall an application being made for his compensation and for the compensation of his attorneys in that case?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember what was the amount each desired, according to their application?—A. We creditors agreed that a fee of $10,000 for Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel as attorneys would not be contested by the creditors, and a fee of $6,000 for Gilbert would not be contested by the creditors.

Q. That is, you and the other creditors agreed that such amounts would be reasonable, did you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. For the services the attorneys and the receiver had rendered?—A. We felt that was a pretty good deal for us.

Q. When the matter came on for hearing before Judge Wyman, holding court in Oakland, were you present?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were various other creditors present?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you announce, representing the creditors, that you were agreeable to the allowance to the attorneys and to the receiver in the amounts I have stated?—A. I did not personally express any idea, but the attorneys for the trustee, or the receiver in bankruptcy, at the suggestion of the creditors, stated to the court that we, the creditors, had agreed upon those fees.

Q. And you were present in court when that was stated?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you voiced no objection to it?—A. None at all.

Q. Was the representative of the Waukesha Motor Co., the next largest creditor, Mr. Ross, in court at that time also?—A. I am not certain whether Mr. Ross was there or not.

Q. After you gentlemen had announced, representing the creditors, that $6,000 would be reasonable to the receiver and $10,000 to the attorneys, what did the court award?—A. The court awarded $6,000 to Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel and $4,500 to the receiver.

Mr. LINFORTH. I have no further questions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is it the desire to ask the witness any further questions?

Redirect examination by Mr. Manager PERKINS:

Q. Mr. Wainwright, the letters which have been read in evidence were written by you at the request of the recipients of the letters?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they ask you for better and stronger letters?—A. Not directly. There was the inference, that is all.

Q. What did they ask you for?—A. Well, as I recall it, inasmuch as they had agreed to cooperate with us and had cooperated, that an expression from me that they had done so would be appreciated, and I was glad to do it.

Q. In other words, the word "cooperation" meant they did what the creditors' committee told them to do?

Mr. LINFORTH. I object to that as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness, not a statement of anything that took place.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair sustains the objection.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. I withdraw the question.

Q. What did you mean by "cooperation"?—A. That the receiver did everything that we ordered him to do.

Q. By reason of fact that a man who knew nothing about the automotive industry was appointed receiver it was necessary to employ somebody who did know how to operate this plant?—A. I thought so and so acted.

Q. Who was employed?—A. Mr. Lundstrom.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. That is all.

Recross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Wainwright, was there any meeting between Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Lundstrom before he was employed at your suggestion?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you know if in addition to the meeting between Gilbert and Mr. Lundstrom that Mr. Gilbert made investigation as to who Mr. Lundstrom was and as to his ability?—A. He told me he had later on.

Mr. LINFORTH. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (to the witness). That will do. The managers may call the next witness.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Call Mr. Roy Bronson.

EXAMINATION OF ROY A. BRONSON

Roy A. Bronson, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. State your full name, your place of residence, and your occupation.—A. My name is Roy A. Bronson. I reside at Piedmont, Calif.; my office is in San Francisco, and I am an attorney-at-law.

Q. Did you represent the Fageol Motors Co. in 1932?—A. Yes; I did.

Q. About what time of the year was it that they got into difficulties?—A. They were in financial difficulties along in the fall of 1931, and they became critical in the early part of 1932—in January or February.

Q. What steps were taken with regard to it?—A. There was a bond house, Grant, Knowlton & Co., that had been out picking up, under contract with Fageol, some bonds for the purpose of retiring $75,000 that had to be retired on the 1st of February 1932, but Fageol was unable to pick them up, and the result was that they levied an assessment for some forty-odd thousand dollars of bonds that they had purchased and which Fageol was unable to pick up. The result was that something had to be done very quickly with the affairs of the company in order to protect the interests of all creditors.

Prior to this time, I might state, that all during January there had been a number of meetings with the officers of that company in my office, and the situation was anticipated, and we tried to negotiate with both the Pacific National Bank and Grant & Knowlton, who were the two parties who had picked up the bonds, to have them give us an extension of time, but they refused to do it, and the result was that we decided upon an equity receivership.

Q. At the time the decision was made, did you select someone whom you wanted to recommend to the court for receiver?—A. When that was determined upon, a meeting of the board of directors was held, and the board of directors decided that in the protection of the interests of both the creditors and stockholders it would be necessary to conserve the assets by a Federal equity receivership, and, of course, in order to do that, it was necessary, first, to have some creditor act in order to invoke the jurisdiction of the Federal court. The matter was discussed by me with the counsel of the Waukesha Motor Co., a large creditor, and they authorized their attorneys in Oakland to institute the proceeding, and the attorney, Mr. Licking, came over to my office, and together we prepared the petition.

Prior to that time, or at least after the petition was drawn, or at least a rough draft of it, a number of principal creditors had been gotten hold of, amongst whom were the Central National Bank and the Timken Roller Bearing Co., and also the C.I.T. Corporation, a large creditor—not a particularly large creditor, but upon a contingent liability mostly—and then Mr. Harvey Frame, of the firm of Frame & Blackstone, of Waukesha, Mich., came out to California prior to the time that this receivership was filed, and we had a number of conferences in my office in reference to who the receiver should be who would be recommended to the court. We believed at that time that any of the court would take a recommended receiver; that is, it might be that they might want to name a counsel; but in any event, if we were all agreed upon who was to be the receiver, that the chances were that such receiver would be appointed. Do you want me to continue with the story of the matter?

Q. Who was it that you agreed on?—A. We finally agreed upon a man by the name of Edward Tuller, of Oakland, a man who had been an official or connected in a managerial capacity with the Chevrolet Motor Car Co., and also a successful business man in other lines of endeavor. In these particular conversations occurring in my office the discussions centered around the nature of this particular problem.

Q. What kind of business was the Fageol Motor Co.?—A. I was just going to get to that. We were all agreed upon this fact, that it was an executive and financial undertaking, also requiring a knowledge of the automotive industry; at least, we felt that, and so we decided that in this particular case the important thing would be the kind of receiver, because at that particular time it was believed by all that the Fageol Motor Co. could be rehabilitated. What they were suffering from was an unbalanced inventory, and they did not have enough liquid capital. As a matter of fact, we had been discussing that for some time previous in getting rid of the branches which were scattered over several States; and so a large amount of money was tied up. So, of course, there were conflicting interests there. The C.I.T. Corporation at one time, the interests of the open-account creditors at another time, and the company, on the other hand, did not want to let the thing get too far out of their hands, so there was quite a squabble for a period of a couple of days before we finally arrived at an agreement among ourselves as to whom we could all join in recommending to the court. There were a great number of names discussed during these few days, and all the creditors and the company were not always agreed, but finally the result was that we did agree upon Mr. Edward Tuller.

Q. What was the nature of the business of the Fageol Motor Co.?—A. It was a manufacturing company, engaged in manufacturing motor trucks and motor busses, and is quite well known throughout the West.

Q. What size concern was it?—A. Their book resources, I think, were at that time something over $3,000,000; the capital was $3,000,000, but I remember that about only half of the preferred stock was covered and then the equity behind the common stock was about $1,000,000. The net worth of the company on the books at that time was around $2,000,000.

Q. Over what territory did this extend—how extensive was it?—A. They had branches in the States of Washington, Oregon, Utah, and California, of course, and then they had a manufacturing contract with the Fageol Motor Co., of Kent, Ohio, which was absorbed by the American Car & Foundry Motors Co.

Q. What different kinds of enterprises did they carry on besides manufacturing, if any?—A. They had their own distribution system. They had a subsidiary corporation known as the "Fageol Motors Sales Co.", which was the distributing concern, with a low capitalization in order to qualify in the various States; and the distributing organization sold at retail these various units, so that they were both a manufacturing and distributing concern.

Q. At the time the petition was drafted and was presented to Judge Louderback, were you present?—A. Yes; I was—that is, I was not present in front of the judge, no; but I was present at the time of the filing of the subsequent presentation.

Q. Who went with you to present the petition?—A. We left my office, and there were present Mr. Wainwright, of the Central Bank; Mr. Flannigan, and I think Mr. Bill, of the factory; Mr. Licking; Mr. Frame; and myself.

Q. Did you go to the judge's chambers with it after it was filed?—A. We went to the court in order to get there about 12 o'clock when the judge or the judges had come off the bench. We filed our petition, and in the northern district of California they have a system of selecting the judge to whom you go by having a group of envelopes and you do not know which particular judge it is to be assigned to.

Q. Did you see the drawing for this case?—A. Yes; there was a young lady clerk who opened the drawer and pulled out the envelope. She pulled out an envelope and the envelope was opened—these little envelopes are sealed ordinarily—and she asked one of the men over at the other end of the room if this was to be used. He apparently said, "yes", because she pulled out the number and affixed the number upon the document, and it was assigned to Judge Louderback. We then were permitted by the clerk, as a matter of courtesy, to take the petition and order appointing the receiver.

Q. Had this application received any publicity before the filing?—A. No; not to my knowledge, at least.

Q. All right; go ahead.—A. We then took the documents in to Judge Louderback's secretary, whose office is just a couple of doors down from the clerk's office, and stated that we had a petition we desired to present to Judge Louderback.

Q. Did you have any other papers except the petition?—A. We had the petition and the blank order appointing the receiver.

Q. Was any answer presented at that time?—A. Yes; the answer was also prepared, admitting the allegations of the petition and consenting to the appointment of a receiver.

Q. What occurred between you and the judge's secretary on that occasion?—A. I think that I was the one that presented the papers to her, and I advised her that we had here a petition for the appointment of a receiver for the Fageol Motor Co. and the Fageol Motor Sales Co., and that we would like to speak to Judge Louderback. I also stated that there were present representatives of the largest creditors and the representative of the plaintiff; that we had all agreed upon a person to be named as a receiver, and described briefly the nature of the business, and that we would very much like to see the judge at the earliest opportunity. She stated that the judge was not going to be off the bench at 12 o'clock, and my recollection is not perfectly clear as to whether or not he was to get off the bench at 12:30 or that he had some type of appointment, but, in any event, the upshot of it was that we could not see the judge until 1:30. I gave her the name of the man whom we had agreed upon, and she wrote it down on a piece of paper. When she took it down on the paper somebody said that we would like to discuss the matter and this man's qualifications with the judge.

Q. Did you discuss his qualifications with her at that time?—A. Yes; in a brief way we advised her that this man was an experienced man in the industry and a capable business executive. I do not remember the exact conversation, but I know that we did give her in a general way the importance which we felt the matter had—that is, the receiver—that it was a complicated business enterprise.

Q. When you left the judge's chambers on that occasion, did you have the promise of a hearing before the judge when you returned?

Mr. LINFORTH. We object to that question as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness instead of a statement of any fact.

The WITNESS. I can give the balance of the conversation.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Did I understand the Presiding Officer to rule?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is overruled.

The WITNESS. I will give you the balance of the conversation which I had, or we had. I do not know whether I did all the talking. The secretary told us that the judge would be back somewhere along 1:30, is my recollection of it, and that he would be able to take the matter up at that time with us, and that we could not see him before this second appointment. Then we left the office.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. What time was the second appointment fixed?—A. My recollection is 1:30.

Q. Did you go back at 1:30?—A. We came back at that time, yes; and we were informed by the secretary at that time that Judge Louderback had changed his plans suddenly and that he would not be back until 2:30 in the afternoon, at which time he would see us; and she advised us that she had mentioned the matter to him, and that he had set the time to return at 2:30.

Q. State whether or not you had an appointment to meet him at 2:30 when you left.—A. We had this conversation and we left at that time and came back at 2:30.

Q. In either of these conversations was there anything said by any of you to indicate that you wanted the judge to appoint a receiver or to indicate whether you wanted a hearing?

Mr. LINFORTH. We object to that question as asking for an opinion and conclusion of the witness, and not a statement of any fact.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will you reframe the question? The Chair thinks it is somewhat objectionable in its present form.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. What, if anything, was said by you or any of those in your group to Miss Berger indicating that you expected the judge to act on this petition?—A. I do not think that we would have given her the name of the receiver or, at least, the party whom we desired to have backed as receiver unless she had requested it. The whole purpose of all of our visits, which were three in number at noon time, was for the purpose of having an audience with the judge in order to inform the judge of the nature and character of this particular problem because the mere legal allegations of the petition itself would not disclose that.

Q. After you left at 1:30 and were told that you could not see the judge until 2:30, when did you come back next?—A. We came back a little prior to 2:30, probably 5 or 10 minutes beforehand.

Q. Did you see the judge?—A. The judge passed us in the hallway as we were going to his office.

Q. How far from his office?—A. It is about the width of this Chamber, I would say.

Q. Were you at that time acquainted with Judge Louderback?—A. I was.

Q. Did you recognize him?—A. I did.

Q. Did he speak to you?—A. No.

Q. State what you found when you got to his chambers on that occasion.—A. When we got in there to the secretary's office we asked Miss Berger whether or not we would be able to see the judge. She stated that the judge had already appointed a receiver in this case. We asked her whom he had appointed and she said a Mr. Gilbert. We asked her who he was, and she did not know anything about it. We asked her for his initials, and my recollection is that she did not know the initials. We asked for his address, and she did not know his address. We asked her if she had his telephone number and she said no, but that she would get his telephone number from the judge and phone it to us as soon as she had obtained it. She then took down my office telephone number and said as soon as she could get hold of it she would phone me.

Q. Where did you go from there?—A. We went directly to my office and we walked down there, I imagine quite a little distance. We walked rather leisurely, discussing the matter, and I should say it was probably a little after 3 o'clock by the time we got to my office.

Q. What did you do when you got to the office in regard to telephoning, if anything?—A. I got the telephone directory and looked for Mr. Gilbert's name. I recall now that he did give us his initials. I asked for his name, and she gave us the initials. I believe that is true. It may be that she phoned them; I do not know; but in any event, as soon as we had his initials, we looked it up in the telephone book and could not find it listed. I then got the city directory and looked for it, and I could not find it in the city directory.

Shortly after that—it could only have been a few minutes—Mr. Dinkelspiel called me on the phone and stated that they had been appointed attorneys for the receiver in the Fageol Motors case. I asked him whether or not the receiver had qualified, and he said "yes." I said, "You do not mean to say that the bond is up already?" He said, "Yes; the bond is up and approved and of record." I said that we would like very much to have a talk with Mr. Gilbert and with himself that afternoon if possible.

Q. What was your idea of asking whether he had qualified?

Mr. LINFORTH. We object to that as being incompetent, not binding upon the respondent, calling for an opinion or conclusion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question might be asked in a little different form. What is the question? Let it be read.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. What was your idea in asking whether he had qualified?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair does not think that is objectionable. The objection is overruled.

The WITNESS. Prior to the time Mr. Dinkelspiel had phoned and during our walk down to my office and while we were in my office, we had been discussing the possibility of dismissing the receivership or putting the company into bankruptcy. There was considerable discussion between the lawyers as to whether or not we could make a dismissal after the qualification of the receiver on the theory that the action was brought for the benefit of a great number of people. Consequently we had come to the conclusion that we would dismiss the petition in the event the receiver did not measure up to what we felt was necessary for the handling of this problem.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. What further was said between you and Mr. Dinkelspiel?—A. Mr. Dinkelspiel stated he would be unable to see us that afternoon.

Q. Had you requested to see him?—A. Yes. We asked if we could see him and Mr. Gilbert, and he said not that afternoon, but that he could see us in the morning, and we fixed the time, which I think was 9 o'clock in the morning.

Q. When did Mr. Gilbert take possession of the Fageol Motors Co.?—A. He did not go over to the Fageol Motors plant until after the conversation the following morning in my office, so far as I know.

Q. Did they appear the next morning for the conference?—A. Yes.

Q. Who was present?—A. There were present Mr. Dietz, of the C. I. T. Corporation; Mr. Flannigan and Mr. Bill, of the Fageol Motors Co.; Mr. Wainwright, Mr. Licking, Mr. Frame, and myself, and the two Dinkelspiels, and Mr. Gilbert.

Q. What are the names of the two different members of the Dinkelspiel firm?—A. John is the only one I know. I do not know the other one's name.

Q. What took place at this conference?—A. At that time the conversation related in the first place to the business experience of Mr. Gilbert; and while almost every one of the creditors and company representatives at one time or another asked questions, most of the examination or conversation was conducted by Mr. Wainwright.

Q. What did you find out about his experience?—A. As nearly as I can recall it, about all that we could find out was that he had managed an apartment house or two and had dealt in real estate at one time or another, and most of his experience related to a couple of receiverships that he had had, as I recall it. One of them was a phonograph company, and I do not recall the nature of the other one.

Q. Had he had any experience with the automotive industry or any branch of it?—A. None at all, and he admitted that.

Q. Was this conference friendly or otherwise?—A. It was rather spirited from the standpoint of the creditors, I would say; that is to say, the questions which were asked at that conversation were very pointed in character. By the time that they were through with the questions on his business experience the conversation then turned to what fees were expected by the receiver and his attorney. The creditors prior to the time of this meeting had all been in conference and decided upon a course of conduct, and then questions were asked to see whether or not this arrangement which we had would be agreeable and would be followed out.

Q. What course of conduct had you agreed upon?—A. That in the event the receiver and his attorneys were willing to permit the creditors' committee to control the management during receivership and would abide by their decision as to fees, that we would permit the receivership to stay; otherwise we had decided that we would put it in bankruptcy.

Q. Was any agreement made by them with regard to it?—A. Yes. At that meeting both Mr. John Dinkelspiel, speaking for the two Dinkelspiels, said that any arrangement that the creditors would agree to would be agreeable to him; that he felt they were fair and that he was fair, and that he would have no objection to coming to an amicable arrangement in reference to amount; and Mr. Gilbert said that he would likewise be willing. The matter was then to be discussed with the creditors' committee later as to the exact amount of the rate of remuneration.

Q. Did you ascertain at that time what Mr. Gilbert was doing?—A. At that time?

Q. Yes.—A. No. I found that out later. Mr. Dietz, of the C.I.T. Corporation, when we could not find him in the directories, volunteered to have an investigator look into the situation, and that he would give the creditors' committee a full report.

Q. I understand you were the regular counsel for the Fageol Motors Co.—A. Yes; I was their counsel, and also a member of their board of directors.

Q. Did you continue to represent them throughout this receivership?—A. I did.

Q. What arrangement was made with regard to the conduct of the business under the receivership? Was it turned over to Mr. Gilbert?—A. Mr. Gilbert went into possession; but the active managing head was to be selected by the creditors' committee—that is, the man who would attend to the detail of operation—and the only thing that I know of that was left to Mr. Gilbert was the matter of insurance.

Q. What happened in that?—A. All of the existing insurance policies were canceled and new policies taken out in the name of the receiver. There was a contract between the Fageol Motors Co. and the Fageol Motors Securities Co., which is an independent organization and not a wholly owned subsidiary and did not go into receivership, by which they had the right under contract to place all of the insurance upon trucks sold where the paper was discounted with the securities company. All of those contracts were canceled, and there was some settlement of that matter at a later date.

Q. Did it involve any loss to the estate, or any extra expense to it?—A. Well, it resulted in a greater amount of claims among the creditor group.

Q. Were they claims that were allowed?—A. In connection with the Fageol Securities claim; yes. That claim was lumped in with another matter, my recollection of it is.

Q. He could have had this insurance that was in force transferred to him?—A. Why, I presume that he could. It is customary; and, of course, so far as the expense of administration is concerned, it did increase the expense of administration, because the new policies were taken out on the full rate, whereas the old policies would have continued along.

Q. Do you know what the amount of insurance was?—A. No; I do not. I am not familiar with that.

Q. Throughout the conduct of the receivership under the nominal head, at least, of Mr. Gilbert, were you acquainted with the proceedings that went on afterward?—A. Well, only in a general way, and as reported to me by the officers of the company.

Q. Did you come in contact with Mr. Gilbert when he was in that capacity very much?—A. No; I did not. I did come in contact with Mr. John Dinkelspiel on a number of occasions; but I never saw Mr. Gilbert from the time that he was in the office that morning until, I think, last September.

Q. Who was put there to have active charge of the business during the receivership?—A. A man by the name of—

Mr. LINFORTH. Just one moment, Mr. President. We object to that question on the ground that it has affirmatively appeared that the witness never saw Mr. Gilbert from the time of his appointment down to the time he left; and this question, therefore, as to who was put in active charge of the business must be based upon hearsay so far as the witness is concerned.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, the witness has heretofore testified that such a thing was done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the question?

The Official Reporter read the question, as follows:

Q. Who was put there to have active charge of the business during the receivership?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If he knows, he may answer the question.

The WITNESS. I must say that I only know that by hearsay.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Bronson, the office and the plant of the company were located in Oakland?—A. Yes.

Q. And the receivership lasted about how long?—A. About 6 months.

Q. Were you at the plant or the office of the company at any time during that period?—A. I was not.

Q. Then is it the fact that the only information you had as to what Mr. Gilbert did or did not do is information obtained by you from others?—A. Well, the only thing that I have testified to, Mr. Linforth, is the matter of the insurance; and that I have personal knowledge of, because the claim was placed in my hands by the Fageol Securities Co.

Q. Do you know what Mr. Gilbert was doing at the plant and at the office during those 6 months, of your own knowledge?—A. I do not.

Q. Now with reference to this insurance, is it the fact that a good deal of the insurance had been permitted to lapse before Mr. Gilbert became receiver, and had been canceled for nonpayment of premiums?—A. I cannot answer that.

Q. You have no personal knowledge what Mr. Gilbert did in regard to that situation?—A. I do not know that the situation exists, so I could not answer that.

Q. You prepared the order for the appointment of this receiver, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I have that, please? I think it was one of the four papers offered.

(The paper was handed to Mr. Linforth.)

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. I am handing you a document endorsed "Filed February 17, 1932", in this case of Waukesha Motor Co. against The Fageol Motors Co., and ask you if that is the order that you prepared for the appointment of the receiver.—A. Yes; as nearly as I can recall.

Q. And with the order before you, does it appoint the receiver temporarily, for a period of 30 days only?—A. For a period of 90 days.

Q. Thirty days, does it not—not 90?—A. Well, he has corrected it here to "within 30 days" to cause to be mailed notice of the appointment. I do not find the portion that you have in mind. Perhaps you could expedite it.

Mr. LINFORTH. I will try to.

Mr. HANLEY. Will you go on to something else, Mr. Linforth? I will look it up.

Mr. LINFORTH. I am trying to avoid putting the long order in the record, Mr. President.

By Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Do you recall that the order which you prepared provided that within 30 days the receiver should, if he saw fit, apply for an order appointing him permanently?—A. My recollection of the 30 days—I would say now that it was more than that. It may be; but in conformity with our equity practice, of course, he was made temporary receiver, with the idea of making it permanent at a later date.

Q. Calling your attention to this language in the order:

Decreed, That the receiver be, and he hereby is, directed, within 30 days from the date of this decree, to cause to be mailed to each and every creditor of the defendants known to said receiver a copy of this order and a notice of a motion to make the receivership herein permanent, such mailing to be in a securely sealed envelope, postage prepaid, and to be addressed to said creditor at his last post-office address known to the said receiver, and such service by mail is hereby decreed to be—

And so forth.

Do you recall that language in the order as you prepared it, Mr. Bronson?—A. Yes; I recall that; but that is not an appointment for 30 days. That is simply that he must make his motion within a period of 30 days.

Q. To make the appointment permanent?—A. That is correct.

Q. Did you receive a copy of a motion to make his appointment permanent?—A. I did.

Q. And was a copy of that notice, to your knowledge, sent to each of the creditors of the company as shown upon the books?—A. I have no knowledge of that.

Q. Did the notice that you received specify the time and place of the hearing of the application to make the appointment of the receiver permanent?—A. Yes; it did.

Q. Did you oppose it?—A. I did not.

Q. Did anyone oppose it, so far as you know?—A. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. LINFORTH. I think that is all, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further questions?

Redirect examination by Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Just a moment. Why did you not oppose the motion?

Mr. HANLEY. We object to that, Mr. President, on the ground that there is nothing in the evidence that calls for his opinion as to why he did not do it. It would not be binding on what was in his head that he did not put out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is overruled.

The WITNESS. The reason that I did not oppose it was that my clients were satisfied with the arrangement that had been effected between the creditors' committee and Mr. Gilbert for the administration of the estate.

Q. And that agreement was what?—A. That agreement was, as agreed to in my office that next morning when Mr. Gilbert and the two Dinkelspiels came in, that the creditors' committee was to have the control of the policies to be followed and to appoint the particular man who was to administer the affairs, and that the fees of the receiver and the attorney would be agreed to between them and the creditors' committee.

Q. Mr. Bronson, do you know anything about the later development with regard to the accountants that were employed by Mr. Gilbert in this matter?—A. I had a conversation with Mr. John Dinkelspiel in my office sometime along the first of March, I would say—it may have been the latter part of February—in which he came in with a—

Q. What year?—A. Of 1932, shortly after the order appointing a receiver was made; and he presented a stipulation for me to sign authorizing an audit of the books of the company, a complete audit. In this conversation I objected very strenuously to a complete audit on the ground that it would be very expensive, and deplete the assets of the estate, and would not help anybody, and that an inventory could be taken under proper supervision, and a sort of a revision of the books, a verification of the books, as to accounts payable and receivable, and I thought that that was sufficient for the purposes, my position being at that conversation that all the receiver had to do was to make his inventory as of the date of his appointment, and that it was not necessary to do anything further. Mr. Dinkelspiel stated to me that the creditors' committee wanted it. I said I would take it up with the creditors' committee and see whether or not I could modify their views, and he agreed with me at that time that the fees would not exceed $1,500, and if they were going to go any more than that, he would advise me, so that I could make proper application to the court. I think that is about all that was said on that.

Q. Was an audit made?—A. Yes.

Q. How much did it cost?—A. I only know that by hearsay, Mr. BROWNING.

Q. You have not seen the record?—A. My recollection is that the bill—

Mr. LINFORTH. The witness has answered already that he only knows by hearsay, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Unless you know of your own knowledge, do not answer.

The WITNESS. I do not know of my own knowledge.

Q. (By Mr. Manager BROWNING.) Were you present when there was a hearing on it of any kind, or an allowance on it?—A. I was in bankruptcy court one day on which the matter of the auditor's bill came up, but it was put over until a later date, and there was nothing disclosed there that gave me particular knowledge of the amount. That I only know by hearsay.

Q. You did not learn the amount of the bill rendered at that time by the auditor?—A. No; it has been given to me by somebody. The bill was not presented to me, so I only know by hearsay.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

Recross examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Did you ascertain that Mr. Dinkelspiel had made an arrangement with Lybrand, Ross & Montgomery for the doing of the audit for $4,000?—A. No. As a matter of fact, Mr. Dinkelspiel told me that any auditors that I might suggest would be agreeable to him, and I said, "I am not interested in that. I am interested only in saving the expense."

Q. Mr. Bronson, I do not think you are answering my question, if you will permit the interruption. Did you know, or have you ascertained, that Mr. Dinkelspiel did make an arrangement with Lybrand, Ross & Montgomery for $4,000 as the outside figure for the audit?—A. I know of no such arrangement, and at this conversation he had with me he stated that he had made no arrangements with anybody.

Q. And do you not know that the bill of that company has not been paid, but is in dispute?—A. That I do not know. I know that it was disputed.

Mr. LINFORTH. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Call the next witness.

EXAMINATION OF WILLIAM C. CROOK

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Call Mr. W. C. Crook. William C. Crook was sworn as a witness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the following communication, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the order will be entered. The Chair hears no objection. Proceed with the witness.

By Mr. Manager PERKINS:

Q. State your full name, your business, and place of residence.—A. William C. Crook; I am a public accountant, with office in San Francisco.

(Mr. HASTINGS took the chair.)

By Mr. Manager PERKINS:

Q. Did you have any connection with the Fageol Motors?—A. I was the auditor for the Fageol Motors Co. from 1917 until the receiver was appointed in 1932.

Q. Do you know the respondent, Harold Louderback?—A. Yes; I have known Judge Louderback for a good many years.

Q. Previous to the appointment of a receiver, did you ascertain that a receiver was about to be appointed?—A. Yes; I understood that a receiver was asked for, and I was given the assurance that my name would be proposed.

Q. Did you have a conversation with Judge Louderback previous to the appointment of a receiver with reference to the appointment, and if so, state it.—A. I called at Judge Louderback's office—

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Mr. President, may I ask the President to direct the witness to speak a little louder?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness will please speak loud enough so as to be heard in the Chamber by all the Senators.

The WITNESS. I called at Judge Louderback's chambers the day before a receiver was appointed.

By Mr. Manager PERKINS:

Q. What conversation did you have with the judge?—A. I told the judge—

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I regret to make this observation, but we are unable to hear at this point in the Chamber.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let us have order in the Chamber, and the witness is requested to speak loud enough so that all Members of the Senate may be able to hear.

The WITNESS. I called at the chamber of the judge on the day before a receiver was appointed, and knowing the judge very well, I asked him if it were possible for him to appoint me as receiver, advising him that I was fully conversant with all of the affairs of the company from the time it started business; that the company was at present—at that time—in difficulty, through the recent depression, and the fact that a subsidiary company of the American Car & Foundry Co. failed to pay a $75,000 payment upon a contract which the company had bonded, and that one of the bondholders, holding about $40,000 in bonds, had attached the Fageol Motors Co. because of the nonpayment; that the president of the Fageol Motors Co., Mr. L. H. Bill, thought it advisable to have a receiver appointed, so that the party bringing the action against the company would not have a first claim on the affairs of the company, and for that matter that a receiver was to be asked.

The judge told me at that time, when I first spoke, that he would make no promises, but he questioned me as to the company, how much the indebtedness of the company was and what the assets were, and I told him. He also asked me if there was anything unusual about the company. I told him no; that as far as I knew—and I thought that I knew very well—everything was as straight as a string.

By Mr. Manager PERKINS:

Q. What did you state the assets were?—A. That the company had a capitalization of $3,000,000, one million in preferred stock and two million in common stock; that the current assets would run over $1,000,000, and that the liabilities would be in the neighborhood of four or five hundred thousand.

Q. Were you a stockholder in the company?—A. I was.

Q. When did you next receive any information, if at any time, from Judge Louderback, about the appointment of a receiver?—A. The next day I called up Mr. Bronson, the attorney for the company, and asked him if a receiver had been appointed, and he told me that there was, giving me the name of Mr.—

Q. Gilbert?—A. Gilbert.

Q. Did you see the judge thereafter?—A. I called on the judge the next morning.

Q. What conversation did you have with him with reference to the matter?—A. I waited out in the hall until the judge came, and I met him before he entered his chambers, and I said, "Judge, what happened?" He said, "The attorneys double crossed you, and I double crossed them."

Q. What matter were you speaking about when he said that?—A. That was the receivership of the Fageol Motors.

Q. Had you offered the receiver to make an accounting or audit of the company?—A. I do not understand the question.

Q. Did you afterwards make an offer to the receiver appointed by Judge Louderback to make an audit of the affairs of the company?—A. I would say "yes" but I should like to explain that when the receiver took over the affairs of the Fageol Motor Co. I was then completing the annual audit, and he told me to go ahead and submit him a statement, which I did. During that period, which was only a few days, he asked me what it would cost to bring the audit up to date and supply him with a certified statement as to the affairs of the company, on the 17th day of February, up to that date. I gave him a figure of $800 speaking of the Fageol Motors Co., but not of the subsidiary companies.

Q. Were you engaged to make such an audit?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether an audit was made by some other concern?—A. I drew that from hearsay. I have heard that one was.

Q. Did you have a conversation with the judge previous to the appointment of the receiver as to the reason for your desiring to be receiver?—A. Yes; when I was told that my services were not longer required as they wished to cut down expenses, Mr. Gilbert told me that he went over to see the judge and asked him if he would ask the receiver to appoint me the auditor, as I could do that at much less cost than anybody else, for the reason that I was so familiar with all the affairs of the company, and he told me that he could not interfere with the receiver or that he could not interfere with the receiver's appointment of an auditor, as he would want somebody who was independent of the affairs of the company.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. HANLEY:

Q. Mr. Crook, who told you that you were to be proposed as the receiver?—A. Mr. L. H. Bill.

Q. Anybody else?—A. And a Mr. Flannigan.

Q. Anyone else?—A. They were the only two.

Q. Did you have any talk with Roy Bronson or with Mr. Wainwright about it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Bill and Mr. Flannigan tell you that you had been selected; that you were the one to be proposed to the judge in the event that a receiver was to be appointed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had that absolute assurance, did you?—A. Well, Mr. Bill told me I was the first choice.

Q. Did they tell you they also had a second choice?—A. No, sir.

Q. Well, was there not a man who had business in what is known as the San Leandro country, who was suggested at that time as being the second choice?—A. Mr. Bill told me that afterward—it was Mr. Chichester.

Q. Did you know that at the time you visited the judge?—A. Not at the time when I went to the judge first.

Q. When you went to the judge the receivership had not yet been applied for; it was about to be applied for, was it?—A. Yes.

Q. Did the judge tell you at that time that he did not know whether the matter would come before him or not?—A. Certainly.

Q. He told you that there were three judges of that court and that he might not be the judge who was drawn in this?—A. That is quite correct.

Q. I was going to say lottery, but in this drawing of the numbers?—A. That is quite correct.

Q. And you told the judge that the parties to the action, or the ones you thought would be the parties to the action, had firmly agreed upon you as a first choice for receiver, did you not?—A. I told him that I thought that they had.

Q. Mr. Flannigan was occupying what position then?—A. Mr. Flannigan was the president of the Fageol Securities Co., and he was also in the Fageol Motors Sales Co.; he was the internal auditor for the Fageol Motors Co.

Q. You knew at that time that Roy Bronson was the attorney for Bill & Co., did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had received this information from Bill and from Flannigan the day before you went to the judge's chamber, had you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that as late as the day before the appointment, Mr. Flannigan and Bill had told you you were no. 1 choice?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then they told you on the next day that you were the no. 2 choice?—A. No; I learned that after the receiver had been appointed.

Q. The next day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you went to see the judge the next day after the receiver had been appointed you met him in the corridor, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said to the judge, "I see you have appointed a receiver?"—A. No, sir.

Q. What did you say?—A. I said, "Judge, what happened?"

Q. Did you open up the conversation?—A. With those words.

Q. Did you say that you had been "double crossed"?—A. No, sir.

Q. What did you say?—A. I said, "Judge, what happened?" That is all.

Q. Is that all?—A. Yes.

Q. And was the next word the judge's?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are sure that you did not say that you had been "double crossed"?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. You felt that the understanding that you had with Bill and with Flannigan did not go through? Is not that true?—A. I was amazed that I had not been appointed.

Q. And you were amazed because of the promises of the parties representing the Fageol Motors Co.?—A. I was amazed, because the judge had definitely promised to appoint me.

Q. If they had suggested you—is that right?—A. No; he did not. The fact of the matter is that I was cut off before I narrated my full conversation with the judge.

Q. Who cut you off—the counsel?—A. Yes.

Q. You say now that the judge told you that you would be appointed; is that it?—A. When I first entered the chambers the judge told me that he would not—when I asked him if he would appoint me the receiver he said that he would not definitely tell me that. Then, later on—I was with him for probably two hours or two hours and a half—discussing this matter with him, and he told me then that if he appointed me the receiver that he would insist upon appointing the attorneys, and I told him that was all right if I got good sound advice.

Q. In other words, if he appointed you he would reserve the right to suggest to you the appointment of an attorney?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the beginning and end, except that you went into the details of the particular transaction with him?—A. Yes, and he went a little further than that; he told me, he says, "I am going to appoint you for two reasons; first, that I like you; the next is that I have got confidence in you", and he told me what I would have to do when I was appointed, and he went on and spoke of other cases that he had had and why they were unsatisfactory because of certain things. One thing was, he said, "If I allow you a commission of ten to fifteen thousand dollars, I do not want you to split that", he says, "because I have no use for anybody that will split a commission."

Q. In other words, he said if he appointed you receiver he wanted no one to interfere with the amount that you would be awarded in the event you were awarded a fee?—A. Yes, sir. He told me further that if I had any difficulty with the attorney he wanted me to come straight to him and he was going to give the same instructions to the attorney. I told him that was quite all right.

Q. The point is that you were not appointed; is not that true?—A. That is very true.

Q. And you were quite disappointed over it, were you?—A. I was.

Q. And you were quite disappointed over the fact that you had been taken away from completing the audit, were you not?—A. No; I completed my audit up to the first of the year.

Q. But you said that Mr. Gilbert did not allow you to continue in the place, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was because of that fact that you went to the judge again complaining of the matter; is that right?—A. That is correct.

Q. And the judge told you at that time that as the receiver was appointed he did not want to interfere with the internal work of the receiver, did he not?—A. Yes; something to that effect.

Q. Did you not testify at the opening, in answer to a question of one of the managers, and say actually this:

The judge said that he would make no promises whom he would appoint?

A. I said, and I repeated it afterwards, that the judge told me that he would not make any promises right then. Since that he made two other promises very definitely, but they cut me off before I finished the full interview.

Q. So that the reason you did not tell it in the start was that the managers cut you off?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were your relations pleasant with Flannigan and Bill and Roy Bronson?—A. I had nothing to do with Mr. Bronson; I did not interview him at all.

Q. When is the first time, Mr. Crook, that you told anybody of this?—A. What do you mean, "told anybody"?

Q. What you are now telling us after it occurred.—A. After it occurred I went to Mr. Bill the next morning and asked him why my name had not been given in to the judge, and he said, "I thought it had." "Well", I said, "no; and furthermore", I said, "the judge might have thought that I was trying to slip something fast over on him, and I want a letter from you stating that I did not make a misstatement to the judge." I brought that letter and I showed it to the judge and he read it carefully. It was in that letter that there was the first intimation I had that there was a second choice. That letter I have in the hotel; unfortunately I did not bring it with me, not knowing I was going on this afternoon.

Q. Mr. Crook, this matter was under investigation last September in San Francisco when Mr. LaGuardia and Mr. Browning and also Mr. Summers were there. Were you present at that meeting?—A. No, sir; I purposely avoided it. I did not want to appear in this case at all.

Q. You did not want to do so?—A. No, sir.

Q. Outside of last September, when did you first tell anybody about it?—A. I beg pardon.

Q. When did you next mention it?—A. When the gentlemen called on me, around the first part of the month.

Q. In other words, when they came to San Francisco in the latter part of April or the first of this month, they called upon you, did they?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you related to them for the first time there in September what took place, did you?—A. You mean to whom?

Q. To anyone?—A. I cannot say that.

Q. Well, can you tell me another soul that you mentioned it to from September 1932, outside of Bill, until you mentioned it to Mr. Perkins and to Mr. Browning—can you tell me one person?—A. Yes; I told it to Mr. Alex Bill.

Q. I say, outside of Mr. Bill, tell me one that you mentioned it to?—A. Yes; I told it to Mr. Flannigan.

Q. These are the two that promised you. Was there anyone else?—A. I do not recall it.

Mr. HANLEY. I think that is all.

Redirect examination by Mr. Manager PERKINS:

Q. Mr. Crook, how many conversations did you have with Judge Louderback with reference to the appointment of a receiver?—A. One, the day before he appointed the receiver.

Q. In what conversation did he agree to appoint you receiver?—A. In the conversation when I first talked to him he said that he would not make a promise. Later he did definitely make a promise.

Q. Did you at any time say to Judge Louderback, "We are very anxious not to allow anybody to get in on that company except someone of our own organization"?—A. No, sir.

Q. You had a later conversation with Judge Louderback—is that right—with reference to the appointment of a receiver after the receiver was appointed?—A. The very next morning.

Q. What did he say to you?

Mr. HANLEY. That question has been asked and already been answered and the witness has been fully interrogated regarding it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks the witness may answer the question.

The WITNESS. Will you read that question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Official Reporter will read the question.

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. You had a later conversation with Judge Louderback—is that right—with reference to the appointment of a receiver after the receiver was appointed?

The WITNESS. The very next morning.

Q. What did he say to you?

The WITNESS. "The attorneys double-crossed you and I double-crossed them."

Mr. Manager PERKINS. That is all.

Mr. HANLEY. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness is excused.

EXAMINATION OF FRED C. PETERSON

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Call the next witness.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We will call Mr. Peterson.

Fred C. Peterson, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. State your name, place of residence, and occupation.—

A. Fred C. Peterson, Oakland, Calif., attorney at law.

Q. Have you been in any way connected with the proceedings in the Fageol Motor Co. trouble?—A. I have.

Q. In what way?—A. I was attorney for the petitioning creditors who filed the involuntary petition of bankruptcy, and I am also one of the attorneys for the receiver and trustee in bankruptcy who are now administering the assets of the estate.

Q. Do you know anything about the claim filed by the auditors in that case for the work they had done for the receiver in the equity receivership?—A. I do, sir. I partially tried the hearing before the bankruptcy court on those fees.

Q. Do you know what the original agreement was as to the charge for fees?—A. I do not know.

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment. If the agreement is in writing, it ought to be produced. If it is not in writing, we have no objection to secondary testimony.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Was it in writing?

The WITNESS. I think it is partially in writing and partially by parol. The entire agreement was not in writing. I believe I have a letter in my pocket—no, I have a letter in my brief case outside which covers a part of the agreement. It was not all oral and not all in writing.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Please state what the agreement was.—A. The agreement was that the auditors should be employed on a per-diem basis, and there was a discussion as to the maximum fee not to exceed $5,000.

Q. With what firm was that contract made?—A. Ross Bros., Lybrand & Montgomery.

Q. Was that agreement for the entire auditing work that was done for the concern?—A. I personally did not sit in on that agreement. I came in at the time of the trial, and I believe that the actual details of that agreement can best be obtained from the gentlemen who were present in Mr. Dinkelspiel's office at that time.

Q. What was the size of the bill submitted by this auditing concern?—A. If you will permit me to refer to a note which I took from the bill, I can give the exact figure. The auditing bill for California and Washington was $15,083.10. The auditing bill for the ancillary receivership in Oregon was $2,207.03, making a total of $17,290.13.

Q. What amount was allowed?—A. We contested on behalf of the trustee in bankruptcy the entire claim. We tried the matter for about a day before the bankruptcy court and a compromise was reached under which they were paid $2,207.03 in the Oregon proceeding and $9,000 in the California proceeding, making a total of $11,207.03 allowed, or a difference of $6,083.10. That was reached by compromise in the bankruptcy court after a day's trial.

Q. Who authorized this work to be done for which this bill was submitted and for which the allowance was made?—A. There is an order in the file for the employment of the auditors, signed by Judge Louderback, in the equity matter. There is an order on file.

Q. Was this service rendered in the equity matter, or was part of it in the bankruptcy case?—A. Entirely in the equity matter; none of it in the bankruptcy matter.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. I believe you may take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Peterson, did you succeed Messrs. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel when the company went into bankruptcy?—A. No; I did not succeed them. The bankruptcy proceeding superseded the equity proceeding, and my client, Mr. E. C. Street, became first the bankruptcy receiver and then the bankruptcy trustee.

Q. The hearing to which you have referred was before the referee in bankruptcy in Oakland?—A. It was.

Q. That was Judge Wymore?—A. No; Wyman—W-y-m-a-n—W. J. Wyman.

Q. At the time the order was made to which you have referred in the equity proceeding, do you know whether or not it specified what particular work was to be done?—A. I would say that the order simply specified that auditors should be employed to make an accounting, and that the fees were to be fixed by the court.

Q. In other words, it was subject to adjustment by the court?—A. It was subject to adjustment by the court.

Q. Did you understand from Mr. Dinkelspiel that the firm of Lybrand, Ross & Montgomery had been employed under an agreed arrangement?—A. In investigating the facts—I have the letter of confirmation in my possession now, in which there were daily rates specified according to the type of auditor employed.

Q. Did that memorandum fix an outside limit at which the fee should be?—A. The written memorandum did not.

Q. Were you informed and advised that there was such an arrangement and that an outside limit was fixed?—A. I was, by several people.

Q. Did you have the cooperation of Messrs. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel and Mr. Gilbert in resisting that bill?—A. Yes; I would say that there was no lack of cooperation in the resistance.

Q. Both on the part of Mr. Gilbert, the former receiver and Messrs. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel, his attorneys?—A. Mr. Gilbert was present in court and was not called as a witness. My contacts were practically all with Mr. John Dinkelspiel.

Q. The matter was adjusted by saving the amount of six thousand and odd dollars?—A. It was.

Q. That matter you knew of prior to the 31st day of August 1932, did you not?—A. I did not know much about the auditing bill until I got ready to try the case. My petition was filed on the 6th of June. I do not think the adjudication was taken until some time in July, and the actual trial of this case involving these facts did not take place until, I believe—my recollection is—it was around the first of this current year that it was tried.

Q. Mr. Peterson, you knew on and prior to the 31st of August 1932, did you not, that this controversy had arisen over the amount of the bill of Lybrand, Ross & Montgomery?—A. Oh, I knew there was a controversy; yes, sir.

Q. You were in the court, were you not, on that day, August 31, 1932, in the court of Judge Wyman, at the time the application for compensation of Mr. Gilbert, as receiver in that matter, and Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel came on for hearing?—A. No; you are mistaken. I was not in court at that time. I was in New York City taking care of some Fageol matters. I did not appear at the time the compensation hearing took place.

Q. I did not get your initials.—A. Fred C. Peterson. You may have been confused with a Mr. Patterson who was also attorney for the trustee.

Q. I have before me the record certified to by the official reporter and Judge Wyman, which recites that Fred C. Peterson appeared as attorney for the trustee. Is that an error?—A. I think that is an error. Let me get this straight. May I see which hearing that is?

Q. Yes; I would be glad to show it to you. If there is an error of name, I would like to know the fact. [Handing the witness a paper.]—A. I can tell you the exact date I was in the East. I think that is an error—yes; that is an error. I did not appear. I did not return from New York City until September 3. That is an error. I was not in the court room.

Q. The Fred C. Peterson referred to in this record is not yourself?—A. There is no other Fred C. Peterson that I know of connected with the case; but the record itself is incorrect, because I left New York City on September 3.

Q. Did you at any time prior to this hearing at which the fees of Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Dinkelspiel were fixed by the referee in bankruptcy—did you, after you became the attorney for the referee, take up the question of those fees?—A. I did not personally. That you may get the picture, there was a bond issue in default in this matter, and I was in New York on that bond-issue question during the entire time that Mr. Dinkelspiel's account and that matter was taken up. That was adjusted before I returned to the West.

Q. I may be able to sum the matter up with one question, Mr. Peterson. Were you in court before Burton J. Wyman as referee in bankruptcy at the time that Mr. Wainright and the committee of creditors were there, when the application for compensation of the attorneys for the receiver was on hearing?—A. I was not. I was in New York City.

Mr. LINFORTH. That is all.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness is excused.

OFFERS OF DOCUMENTS

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Mr. President, we offer in evidence the original order appointing G. H. Gilbert receiver, dated January 25, 1929, signed by the respondent, Harold Louderback, in the matter of Stempel & Cooley.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any objection?

Mr. HANLEY. Upon the same ground and for the limited purpose that we urged this morning, upon which the Senate took the vote, if it is for the one purpose, all right. If the purpose is to go into detail, we object to it. If it is limited to the purpose that the President then designated, all right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the purpose of this offer?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. The purpose is to show the course of conduct of the judge with respect to the appointment of receivers, particularly Gilbert, and as evidence on the charge of a conspiracy between them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do the managers propose to go into a detailed hearing upon this particular appointment?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. No; I think not.

Mr. HANLEY. I withdraw the objection. I thought it was the State court. This is the Federal court?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. This is the Federal court.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let it be admitted without objection.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 24.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Mr. President, we offer in evidence an original order signed by the respondent, Harold Louderback, in the matter of Stempel & Cooley, dated January 28, 1929, authorizing the receiver, G. H. Gilbert, to appoint the firm of Keyes & Erskine as attorneys.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any objection?

Mr. HANLEY. No objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is admitted.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 25.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer an order dated September 1, 1928, signed by the respondent, Harold Louderback, in the matter of H. G. Lane & Co., appointing Samuel Shortridge, Jr., receiver.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any objection?

Mr. HANLEY. It is not one of the articles charged. There is nothing charged, either by way of reference in article V or otherwise, with relation to it. We object, and I will state the reason.

We are prepared to meet that which they alleged in the articles, and we are also prepared to meet that which they alleged in their amended article V. If there is any evidence to be introduced with reference to the Lane case, it is not stated in the article. It was stated by Mr. Manager SUMNERS upon the hearing here in this Chamber on the 18th day of April that the only matters intended to be referred to were those in the amended article and the stipulation; and the understanding was explicit in the Senate upon that day that he referred only to those matters set forth in the four articles of impeachment and the three in article V. So that we say it is not competent, not relevant, not material, and not within the issues as framed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What do the managers on the part of the House say in reply to that?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Mr. President, it is not the intention of the managers on the part of the House to go into the detail of the Lane case; but we deem it relevant and important to show the continued appointment of various receivers and their attorneys by Judge Louderback under article V of the impeachment.

Mr. HANLEY. There is no claim of continued appointment of Shortridge. He was appointed only in two matters during the entire 5 years, and they know that; and both of them were upon the request of both parties. They cannot do it for that reason. There is some ulterior motive that the managers have in putting in something that is not in the record, if that is the issue we have to face, because they cannot claim in fairness that there was any great appointment of Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the managers on the part of the House call the Chair's attention to the particular article that makes this particular paper admissible?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Mr. President, at the present moment I do not think I can refer to a specific allegation in the articles of impeachment referring to the Lane matter; but the broad general allegations of article V certainly would, in my judgment, permit us to introduce in evidence any act of the judge bearing upon his conduct as a judge, and the result it has upon the administration of justice in his district, and the general reputation he has acquired in the conduct of his judgeship.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. But you would not contend, would you, that the order appointing a receiver in every case would be admissible here?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. No; I would not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will you point out how this particular paper differs from the general class that the Chair has mentioned?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. In article V, appearing on page 7 of Senate Document No. 38, there is a reference to the appointment by the respondent of Samuel Shortridge, Jr., as receiver.

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. President, that is in the Lumbermen's Reciprocal case. I have before me, if the President of the Senate desires it, the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the Senate at page 1883, and the statement that I then made upon the 18th day of April. I will read it to the President if he desires. I will state that which Mr. Manager SUMNERS said was the intent of it, if you wish to hear it.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. In order that we may proceed we will for the moment withdraw the offer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The offer is withdrawn. You may proceed.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Mr. President, we offer in evidence an order appointing ancillary receivers, signed by Judge Louderback December 20, 1929, in the matter of Sonora Phonograph Co., Inc., in which it is ordered that G. H. Gilbert be appointed ancillary receiver, and furnish a bond in the sum of $75,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any objection?

Mr. HANLEY. No. That is admitted in the pleadings.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 26.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer an order made by the respondent in the same matter, dated December 20, 1929, authorizing the receiver, Guy H. Gilbert, to employ Messrs. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel as attorneys.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is admitted.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 27.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer an order made in the matter of Sonora Phonograph Co., Inc., by the respondent, Harold Louderback, dated February 24, 1930, approving the first report and account of G. H. Gilbert, ancillary receiver.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is admitted.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 28.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer an order signed by the respondent, dated the 17th of May, 1930, in the matter of Sonora Phonograph Co., allowing compensation on account to attorneys for ancillary receiver, which provides that the court allows the firm of attorneys the sum of $15,000 on account of services.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is admitted.
(See U.S.S. Exhibit 29.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer an order made by the respondent, dated May 12, 1930, in the matter of the Sonora Phonograph Co., approving the second report and account of the ancillary receiver, and ordering that Guy H. Gilbert, receiver, receive the sum of $2,502.83 commissions on account of services.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is admitted.
(See U.S.S. Exhibit 30.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer an order made by the respondent on the 30th day of July 1930 in the matter of Sonora Phonograph Co., Inc., allowing the third and final account of the ancillary receiver, and allowing final compensation to attorneys for ancillary receiver, which provides that the sum of $5,000 is a reasonable, proper, and final allowance for Messrs. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel, attorneys.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is admitted.
(See U.S.S. Exhibit 31.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer an order dated August 18, 1931, made by the respondent in the matter of Character Finance Co. of Santa Monica against Prudential Holding Co., authorizing the receiver, Guy H. Gilbert, to employ Messrs. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel as attorneys.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is admitted.
(See U.S.S. Exhibit 32.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer, but not to be printed, the bill of complaint in the case of Character Finance Co. of Santa Monica, plaintiff, against Prudential Holding Co. of Los Angeles, received and filed in the United States District Court for the Northern District of California August 15, 1931.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What does the manager mean when he says "not to be printed"?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We do not ask to have the entire bill of complaint printed, but we have no objection to having it printed. I thought we might save some expense.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is what the Chair had in mind this morning with respect to those matters. It seems to the Chair that if documents are admitted in evidence, they must become a part of the record and be printed as a part of the record.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We recognize that that is true, Mr. President.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 33.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer an order signed by the respondent, Harold Louderback, dated August 15, 1931, in the matter of Character Finance Co. against Prudential Holding Co., appointing G. H. Gilbert receiver, and requiring of the receiver a bond in the sum of $50,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is admitted without objection.
(See U.S.S. Exhibit 34.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer the petition in involuntary bankruptcy in the matter of Prudential Holding Co. of Los Angeles, filed in the same court September 5, 1931.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is that?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. This is the petition that throws the concern into bankruptcy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. How does that become material?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Mr. President, that is material, because in this case we propose to show that there was pending before Judge Louderback's court the equity receivership. Then there was a petition filed in bankruptcy, and there was a motion to dismiss the equity receivership. The petition filed in bankruptcy was assigned to Judge St. Sure, who was absent. Judge Louderback, in Judge St. Sure's absence, made the appointment of Gilbert as receiver in bankruptcy, and Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel as his attorneys in bankruptcy, and the sole ground of bankruptcy alleged was the existence of the equity receivership, and then 2 days after that dismissed the equity receivership for lack of jurisdiction.

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. President, these matters are all admitted in the pleadings. It seems to me that we have fully answered and admitted these matters, and explained them, so that the mere formal putting of them in the record seems to us not to be proper.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I add a word? So far as the filing of these complaints is concerned, so far as the making of the orders appointing receivers is concerned, so far as the making of the orders approving the appointment of attorneys is concerned—those matters are all admitted by the pleadings; and unless there is some special or particular purpose in asking for the offer in the record of some one of these papers, it seems to me that it is a useless encumbering of the record here.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Mr. President, there is no desire on the part of the managers to encumber the record, but it is of prime importance to show the contents of some of these papers. As was stated a moment ago, the Prudential Holding Co. had an equity receiver appointed by Judge Louderback. A motion was made to dismiss that receivership. Before that motion was determined, a petition in bankruptcy was filed, and the respondent, on the sole ground that the receiver in equity had been appointed, threw the concern into bankruptcy, and 2 days later dismissed the very basis of the bankruptcy, namely, the equity receivership.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The paper will be admitted.
(See U.S.S. Exhibit 35.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer order signed by the respondent, Harold Louderback, September 30, 1931, in the matter of the Prudential Holding Co., ordering that G. H. Gilbert, of San Francisco, Calif., be appointed receiver.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The paper will be admitted.
(See U.S.S. Exhibit 36.)

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, may I ask the manager please to identify in what case that was?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. It is identifiable by No. 21022-S in Bankruptcy.

Mr. President, we offer petition for receiver and order appointing receiver made by Judge Louderback October 10, 1931, appointing Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel, and others, attorneys of Gilbert, receiver in bankruptcy, in the Prudential Holding Co. matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be admitted.
(See U.S.S. Exhibit 37.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer order signed by Judge St. Sure, United States district judge in the southern division of the United States District Court, Northern District of California, dismissing the bankruptcy matter of the Prudential Holding Co.

Mr. HANLEY. What is the date, Mr. President?

Mr. Manager PERKINS. Filed November 4, 1931, dated the same date.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is admitted.
(See U.S.S. Exhibit 38.)

Mr. Manager PERKINS. We offer an order made in the District Court of the United States, Northern District of California, dated the 2d of October 1931 by Judge Louderback, granting defendant's motion to dismiss the bill of complaint.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is admitted.

(See U.S.S. Exhibit 39.)

EXAMINATION OF HENRY H. McPIKE

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Call Mr. H. H. McPike.

Mr. H. H. McPike, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. State your full name, place of residence, and profession.—A. Henry H. McPike; I reside in the city of Oakland, Calif., and I am an attorney at law.

Q. Do you hold any official position under the United States Government?—A. Well, I expect to in a few days. I expect to be the United States district attorney for the northern district of California, having received the appointment but not having yet qualified.

Q. Have you been confirmed?—A. I have.

Q. Were you, in 1931, the attorney for the Prudential Holding Co.?—A. In that year I was the attorney for the company in two specific matters, one the case of Character Finance Co. against Prudential Holding Co., and another in the matter of the bankruptcy, an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against the Prudential Holding Co., both pending in the Northern District of California.

Q. What judge had the cases pending before him?—A. The Character Finance Co. against Prudential Holding Co. was before Judge Louderback.

Q. What is the nature of the Prudential Holding Co.; what kind of a business was it, or is it?—A. It was a financial company.

Q. What do they finance?—A. They were dealing in real properties, buildings, and borrowing and lending money. I was not connected with its business affairs at all.

Q. Do you know what the size of the concern was, what the financial size of it was?—A. The complaint in the case, I think, alleged that it was a corporation having an authorized capital of $5,000,000, and assets of about a million dollars.

Q. What was the first information you had, as attorney for this company, of the beginning of this suit of the Character Finance Corporation?—A. The suit of the Character Finance Co. against Prudential Holding Co. was commenced on Saturday, the 15th day of August, 1931, and I was employed on the following Monday—that would be the 17th day of August 1931—to defend that case, or make any motions I thought advisable.

Q. What course did you take in regard to defending the company in that suit?—A. A glance at the complaint showed me that the court had no jurisdiction, and I filed a motion to dismiss the action on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction.

Q. On what ground did you allege lack of jurisdiction?—A. The complaint in the first two paragraphs showed that the Prudential Holding Co. was a foreign corporation, organized under the laws of the State of Nevada, and that the plaintiff, the Character Finance Co., had its residence in the southern district of California, in Los Angeles County.

Q. What motion did you make?—A. I made a motion to dismiss the action on the ground of lack of jurisdiction.

Q. How soon did you file that motion?—A. If I may look at a memorandum, I could give you the date of it.

Q. Please refer to it.—A. (Referring to paper.) The complaint was filed on Saturday, August 15, 1931, and on the 20th day of August 1931 we filed a motion to dismiss the action.

Q. How soon did you have a hearing on that motion, or how soon did you ask for a hearing?—A. We asked for a hearing on the 24th day of August 1931.

Q. When were you granted a hearing?—A. The matter was heard on the 29th day of August 1931.

Q. What action, if any, was taken by the court at that hearing?—A. The matter was taken under submission by the court after argument, after oral argument.

Q. Were any briefs filed, or was there any request for briefs to be filed?—A. The counsel for the plaintiffs asked for a brief time, a day or two, to file additional points and authorities. My recollection is that they did not file any.

Q. Was there any time set in which they could file them?—A. It was expected—I do not remember that it was stated specifically, but it was expected—that it would be done within a day or two.

Q. Who was appointed receiver in the case?—A. Guy Gilbert.

Q. Do you know who were appointed his attorneys?—A. A firm of lawyers called Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel.

Q. When did they take charge?—A. They took charge on the same day that the receiver was appointed, Saturday, the 15th day of August.

Q. Did they continue to have charge of it throughout this period you have described that the matter was being heard by the court?—A. They did.

Q. What other steps did you take, if any, after the matter was submitted to the court on the last date you mentioned?—A. I telephoned to the secretary of the judge and asked if any disposition had been made of the matter, and I was told that it would be necessary for me to go into court and make a formal motion that it be submitted, which I did.

Q. When was that made?—A. Sometime, I could not say, but approximately a week or 10 days after the 29th of August.

Q. How soon after you received the notice of the necessity for doing it?—A. On the 2d day of October a motion was granted to dismiss.

Q. How long was it after it was submitted to the court before the motion was granted?—A. My memorandum here says, submitted August 29 and motion granted October 2.

Q. In the meantime, was there a bankruptcy petition filed against the Prudential Holding Co.?—A. A petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed on the 5th day of September, 1931.

Q. What attorneys filed the original equity petition?—A. Messrs. Gold, Quittner & Kearsley, a firm of Los Angeles attorneys.

Q. What firm of attorneys filed the petition in bankruptcy?—A. Messrs. Janeway, Beach & Hankey.

Q. State whether or not there was any connection between the petitioners in each of these two cases.—A. Of my own knowledge, I could not say. I could say from information obtained from others that there was some relationship, but just what it was I do not know.

Q. When the petition in bankruptcy was filed, in whose court was it filed?—A. It was assigned to Judge St. Sure's court in the same district.

Q. Who acted on the petition?—A. Judge Louderback.

Q. What action did he take?—A. He appointed Guy Gilbert as receiver of the property.

Q. Whom did he appoint as his attorneys?—A. Messrs. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel.

Q. What was the ground of bankruptcy alleged in the petition?—A. Only one ground of bankruptcy was alleged, and that was the appointment of the receiver in the equity case of Character Finance Corporation against Prudential Holding Co.

Q. When were the appointments made of the receiver in bankruptcy and his attorney—what date, if you know?—A. The date of the appointment of the receiver in bankruptcy?

Q. Yes.—A. I have not a memorandum of that, but I believe it was the same day.

Q. Was it before or after the dismissal of the equity petition?—A. It was before the dismissal of the equity petition.

Q. How long before?—A. Two or three days.

Q. Then, who acted on the equity petition to dismiss?—A. Judge Louderback made the order dismissing the equity suit.

Q. After the appointment of the receiver and his attorneys in the bankruptcy matter, what court then acted on it to the termination of the suit?—A. Judge St. Sure.

Q. What action did he take?—A. On behalf of the Prudential Holding Co. we made a motion to dismiss the bankruptcy proceeding on the ground that the only act of bankruptcy set forth was the appointment of a receiver in the Character Finance Co. case against the Prudential Holding Co., and that as the court in that matter had no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver, the proceedings being null and void, there was no act of bankruptcy.

Q. What action did the court take?—A. Judge St. Sure granted our motion to dismiss the bankruptcy.

Q. Did he make a statement about it at the time he granted your motion?

Mr. LINFORTH. I submit that any such statement, Mr. President, would be hearsay and not binding on the respondent here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the reporter please read the question?

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. Did he make a statement about it at the time he granted your motion?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. How is that material?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. This matter was pending in Judge St. Sure's court. Judge Louderback, in Judge St. Sure's absence, under the agreement which they had, appointed the receiver and his attorney in Judge St. Sure's court. After he returned, Judge St. Sure, in acting upon the matter and dismissing the bankruptcy proceeding, made a statement in open court in connection with his action, and that is the statement which we submit should go into the record.

Mr. LINFORTH. May I add this word: Whatever order Judge St. Sure made upon the hearing of that application, of course, is competent evidence here; whatever he may have said which did not form the basis of his order, which did not enter into the making of his order, surely cannot be binding evidence against the respondent here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. May I inquire of the witness whether that statement was made from the bench?

The WITNESS. It was.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Then the question is admissible.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. State what it was.—A. It was upon the motion of the petitioners in bankruptcy to set aside the order of Judge St. Sure dismissing the bankruptcy, and the ground of that motion was that the court had not sufficiently considered certain authorities filed by the petitioners in bankruptcy, and the judge said that he did examine the authorities and he found the authorities against them and that he found a bad smell about the case.

Q. After that time what has been the status of the Prudential Holding Co.?—A. After that time I ceased to be connected with the company.

Q. Do you know whether or not it is in receivership now?—A. That is my information. There is an equity receivership in the State of Nevada.

Q. Do you know what brought on the equity receivership in Nevada?—A. I could only say that I have been informed that it was the result of these proceedings in San Francisco that I have mentioned.

Q. I will ask if you know whether suit has been brought against the parties who instituted this suit in California?

Mr. LINFORTH. One minute. May it please you, Mr. President, we maintain that such a question as that cannot be binding evidence against this respondent.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. We withdraw it, Mr. President, if there is any objection to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is withdrawn.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. You may take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. McPike, when Judge St. Sure made the remark that you have just referred to, to whom did you understand he was referring—to Judge Louderback?—A. I only know what he said, and I cannot say whether he referred to the judge or the counsel and party. My own impression, if I were to give that, would be that he was referring to the parties and their attorneys.

Q. In the proceedings that you took, the motion to dismiss, the receiver and his attorneys took part, did they?—A. Not in open court.

Q. And when you made the motion to dismiss in the bankruptcy proceedings they did not appear in opposition to your motion?—A. No.

Q. Were the counsel who appeared and offered resistance to your motion the counsel for the plaintiff in the action?—A. There were a number of attorneys who came in in that matter besides the attorneys for—no; not the attorneys for the plaintiff. Excuse me; I missed your question.

Q. Afterward were there certain interventions that were filed in that matter?—A. There were two.

Q. And other counsel appeared in those intervention matters?—A. In the intervention matters, and I think representing the petitioners in bankruptcy.

Q. I understood you to say that the motion to dismiss the matter before Judge Louderback came on to be heard on the 29th of August.—A. Excuse me; I will look at the memorandum again. [A pause.] My memorandum shows motion to dismiss filed August 20; August 24 the date of hearing; August 29 submitted.

Q. At that time were some applications granted to file briefs and authorities?—A. At the time of the hearing, the oral argument, an application was granted for that purpose.

Q. To refresh your memory, Mr. McPike, merely, do you recall whether or not after you made the motion to have the case submitted or your motion submitted, it was submitted as of the 19th of September?—A. I do not recall the date.

Q. Calling your attention to page 311 of the record, you were a witness upon the preliminary hearing out in San Francisco?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to this language found at page 311 of the record of the hearing:

The bankruptcy receiver was appointed on September 30 and qualified October 2. The motion to dismiss the equity proceedings was submitted September 19 and granted by the judge on October 2, so that the bankruptcy receiver was appointed 2 days before the dismissal of the equity suit.

Does the reading of that refresh your memory as to when the motion to dismiss the equity matter was submitted?—A. It does not, because at that time I testified as to the date from a memorandum handed to me by my associate counsel in the matter, Mr. Hawkins, and I am now testifying from a memorandum submitted by him to me in the last few days as to the date, and it says August 29. So it is not a matter of recollection with me.

Q. When was it, Mr. McPike, if you recall, that you made the motion to have the matter stand submitted—after your telephone message to the secretary of the judge?—A. After telephoning to the judge, or telephoning to his secretary, rather, I think I went out promptly the next morning.

Q. Are you prepared to say, then, with any degree of certainty, when the motion itself was submitted?—A. No; I am not—not from recollection.

Redirect examination by Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Was this equity receivership ex parte or was your company present at the hearing?

Mr. HANLEY. Just a moment. The question calls for hearsay testimony. It calls for the opinion of the witness as to what was done. It is a matter of record, if there is a record of it. It is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the reporter please read the question?

The Official Reporter read as follows:

Q. Was this equity receivership ex parte or was your company present at the hearing?

Mr. LINFORTH. May I add to what has been said, Mr. President, that the witness has already declared that he did not become associated with the company or employed in the matter until 2 days after the appointment of the receiver.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the witness knows of his own knowledge, he may answer the question.

The WITNESS. I do not know of my own knowledge.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. That is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Call the next witness.

EXAMINATION OF C. M. HAWKINS

C. M. Hawkins, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Please state your name and place of residence and your profession.—A. My name is C. M. Hawkins, I live in Oakland, Calif., and I am a lawyer.

Q. In 1931 did you represent, in association with other attorneys, the Prudential Holding Co. of Oakland, Calif.?—A. I represented the Prudential Holding Co. of Los Angeles at Oakland.

Q. Were you their retained counsel or did you just represent them in the one case?—A. I was their retained counsel.

Q. When did you first hear of the suit of the Character Finance Co. against the Prudential Holding Co.?—A. About 2 o'clock on Saturday, the 15th of August 1931—2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. Where were you when you heard of it?—A. I was in Los Angeles.

Q. How did you get the message?—A. By a telephone call from the secretary of the company.

Q. What was the information you received?—A. The information was that there was a padlock on the door. I asked what it was, and was told the Character Finance Corporation. I said, "Well, I will be home tonight and see you tomorrow."

Q. Did you get back that evening?—A. I got back the next morning; I came through that night.

Q. What did you find the condition to be when you got back?—A. I found a padlock on the front door and the company supposedly in the hands of a receiver.

Q. Who was the receiver?—A. Mr. G. H. Gilbert.

Q. Did the company have any notice before Saturday afternoon, when Mr. Gilbert took charge, of the suit of the Character Finance Co. against it?

Mr. HANLEY. We object on the ground that the question calls for his opinion with reference to that matter and it does not call for any testimony of his own knowledge. It only calls for something that had been told him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do you know of your own knowledge? Can you answer the question from your own knowledge?

The WITNESS. I know what the facts are; yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. State what the facts are.

The WITNESS. The company did not have any notice.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Was the company represented at the hearing when the petition was granted?

Mr. HANLEY. We object to that because it calls for his opinion again.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. He is attorney for the company. He ought to know.

Mr. HANLEY. If he was not present in San Francisco when the receiver was appointed, it necessarily calls for hearsay testimony.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is all subject to cross-examination. If the witness says he knows, he may answer the question. Do you know and can you answer the question of your own knowledge?

The WITNESS. I should like to have it read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Official Reporter will read the question.

The Official Reporter read the question as follows:

Q. Was the company represented at the hearing when the petition was granted?

The WITNESS. Not legally.

Mr. HANLEY. That calls for a legal conclusion and opinion which this very Senate is to determine.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is subject to cross-examination.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. What steps were taken by the company, if you know?—A. Do you mean following the appointment?

Q. Following this situation.—A. On the 20th of August we filed a motion to dismiss the case in the department in which the case was in the United States court in San Francisco.

Q. What was the ground of your motion?—A. That the court was without jurisdiction of the case.

Q. Before that let me ask you what was the nature of the business of the Prudential Holding Co. which it carried on?—A. The Prudential Holding Co. owned stock in other corporations. It owned real estate. It owned some notes, some unsecured accounts, and was a general trading or brokerage company.

Q. What were the capital and the assets of the company?—A. The authorized capital was $5,000,000. The assets at that time had a book value of something like $1,150,000 to $1,250,000, as I recall the figures.

Q. What were the liabilities, if you know?—A. On the books something less than $1,000,000—around $600,000.

Q. Was the company solvent or insolvent at that time?—A. The company was at that time like most other companies were at the same time. It was pressed for money, but it was going on and running its business and operating its business.

Q. What action was taken on the motion which you filed on the 20th of August?—A. The final action was that the motion was granted.

Q. When?—A. October 2.

Q. How many questions were involved in the motion?—A. Two.

Q. What were they?—A. One was as to whether or not under code section 51 the court had jurisdiction. The other question was whether or not, under equity rule 25, the complaint was verified properly.

Q. What was the nature of the verification of the petition?—A. The verification was made by the attorney for the company on information and belief.

Q. The attorney for what company?—A. For the Character Finance Corporation.

Q. That is the plaintiff?—A. The plaintiff.

Q. Did the person who made the verification pretend to know the facts of his own knowledge?—A. He did not.

Q. Did you contact Mr. Gilbert as receiver of the company at any time near the appointment?—A. Yes; I met Mr. Gilbert on the morning of August 17, Monday morning following the appointment.

Q. What transpired between you?—A. Mr. Gilbert came into the office with Mr. John Walton Dinkelspiel and asked what we were going to do with reference to turning over all records and business to him. We talked about that and I finally directed that the company turn the matters over to him under protest and have him sign a receipt showing that we had turned the records and files to him under protest.

Q. Was that done on Monday the 17th?—A. That was Monday morning the 17th.

Q. What did he do as a receiver, if you know?—A. He just sat around there and he collected the moneys that came in. He opened the mail that came in, and he had charge of the affairs there until the 2d of October.

Q. After the motion to dismiss petition was made, what happened in court with regard to it?—A. I was not in court. I could not answer of my own knowledge.

Q. You did not go into court on the motion?—A. No. That was handled by Mr. McPike entirely.

Q. Do you know whether or not the petition for bankruptcy was filed?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you have anything to do with that in court?—A. No; not in court.

Q. What time was this petition filed?—A. The bankruptcy?

Q. Yes.—A. I think September 5, 1931.

Q. In whose court was that?—A. That fell in Judge St. Sure's court.

Q. Who acted on that, if you know?—A. Judge St. Sure acted on it and Judge Louderback acted on it.

Q. Who appointed the receiver and his attorney in bankruptcy?—A. Judge Louderback.

Q. Whom did he appoint?—A. He appointed Mr. Gilbert, the same Mr. G. H. Gilbert.

Q. Did he appoint any counsel for him?—A. Dinkelspiel & Dinkelspiel.

Q. You stated that the motion to dismiss the petition in equity was acted on October 2 by Judge Louderback?—A. Yes.

Q. What was his action?—A. He granted the motion to dismiss.

Q. When did he appoint Gilbert and Dinkelspiel as receiver and attorney, respectively, in the bankruptcy proceeding?—A. September 30, 1931.

Q. And they qualified on October 2?—A. That is what I understand.

Q. What kind of bond was given by the receiver when he took charge of this business?—A. You mean in the equity case?

Q. Yes.—A. The receiver gave a bond conditioned to obey the orders of the court and perform his duties as receiver, and running to the United States of America.

Q. Was there any indemnity bond given to the company itself?—A. There was not.

Q. Any to the creditors of the company?—A. There was not.

Q. What was the nature of the complainant company, the Character Finance Corporation?—A. I really do not know.

Q. Was the complainant company a creditor of the corporation?—A. The complainant company claimed to be a creditor, which was denied by the Prudential Holding Co., and in my judgment was not a creditor.

Q. Were they a stockholder in the Prudential Holding Co.?—A. Yes; it was a stockholder.

Q. After the dismissal of the equity receivership by Judge Louderback, what action, if you know, did Judge St. Sure take in the bankruptcy matter?

Mr. HANLEY. He said he was not present in court and did not know except from hearsay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do you know of your own knowledge?

The WITNESS. The only way I know is based on court records. I know of my own knowledge what they show.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Do you know from the court records what actually transpired with regard to the bankruptcy matter?—A. Do you mean in the St. Sure department?

Q. Yes.—A. Yes; I have read the court records on that.

Q. What was the action taken?—A. The action was that it was dismissed.

Q. After dismissal of the bankruptcy matter and of the equity receivership, what has been the legal status of the Prudential Holding Co. since that time?—A. The Prudential Holding Co. then operated uninterruptedly until the 14th of March 1932, when it was placed in an equity receivership in the district court of Nevada.

Q. What precipitated that receivership, if you know?—A. It was the claims of creditors who filed the suit, and the general reason for it was the interference of these various receiverships.

Q. Receiverships in California?—A. Yes.

Q. You refer to the receiverships in which Mr. Gilbert was appointed receiver by Judge Louderback?—A. I do; yes.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Take the witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. LINFORTH:

Q. Mr. Hawkins, how long have you been attorney for the Prudential Holding Co.?—A. From August 1930.

Q. Did you have personal knowledge as to its financial condition at the time of the filing of the application for the appointment of a receiver in the equity suit?—A. To some extent I did, and to some extent, no.

Q. At that particular time was not the company hopelessly insolvent?—A. I do not think so.

Q. How much did it owe at that time?—A. Oh, somewhere between $500,000 and $600,000, I would say.

Q. Did it not at that time owe in excess of $1,000,000?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did it have any assets of any kind at the time of the making of the application for the appointment of a receiver that were not encumbered by mortgages and trust deeds and pledged?—A. Yes; it had some.

Q. Did it have any that had any value?—A. Yes.

Q. Any cash value?—A. Yes.

Q. What property did it have at that time that was unencumbered that had any value?—A. It had some cash in the bank.

Q. How much did it have in the bank at that time?—A. I do not know.

Q. Was it a few hundred dollars?—A. Yes.

Q. No more?—A. No.

Q. In no one of its bank accounts?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did it have a bank account in Oakland, even, its headquarters?—A. I do not know as to that.

Q. Is it not a fact that the only bank account it had at the time of the application for the appointment of a receiver in the equity proceeding was a bank account of about $80 in the city of Reno, in the State of Nevada?—A. No. It had a bank account in the city of Reno and had more money than $80 in the bank account. Whether it had any other bank account or not I am not certain at that time.

Q. Do you say at the time of the filing of the petition that it had more than $80 to its credit in the bank in the city of Reno?—A. I think so; yes.

Q. Do you know or are you stating from what someone has said to you?—A. No; I am giving what is my present recollection of the fact at that time.

Q. How much did it have in the account in the bank of Reno at that time?—A. My recollection is something over $300.

Q. How many pieces of real estate did it own?—A. Four that I know about, and I am not certain as to others.

Q. Three were in the city of Oakland?—A. Yes.

Q. Apartment houses?—A. Yes.

Q. And second mortgages on each?—A. Yes; I think they were.

Q. And under foreclosure at that particular time?—A. I do not think so.

Q. Were any of them under foreclosure at that particular time?—A. That depends on what you mean by "foreclosure", Mr. Linforth. I do not know what you mean.

Q. Under notice of sale under trust deeds, or under notice in foreclosure suits?—A. I think in one of them, at San Jose, a notice of intention to foreclose had been filed before this time; in the others, I think not.

Q. How about the three in the city of Oakland? Was not each one under foreclosure sale or suit at that time?—A. No; I do not think so.

Q. Was there any equity in either piece of property?—A. Well, I am not qualified as a real-estate expert, and I cannot answer that.

Q. Did it have any other property except stocks in companies that it had taken in exchange?—A. It had some real estate in Los Angeles County. It had some notes and accounts. I guess all of those had been taken in for exchange with stock except a property in Stanislaus County, for which an apartment house had been traded.

Q. It is a fact, is it not, that during the time that you knew of this company it was a company that was operating in taking in properties of other encumbered companies and giving in part payment therefor stock in its own company?—A. Yes, sir; to some extent that is its business, or was its business.

Q. It held stock, did it not, in the Character Finance Co.?—A. I do not think so; no.

Q. The stock of the Character Finance Co. was of no value, was it?—A. I could not say. I do not know.

Q. Do you know of any assets that were of any value at all that this company owned or possessed at the time of the equity receiver except the real estate that you have referred to, encumbered as you say it was?—A. Yes; I think they had some value—not very much.

Q. What property did it have that had any value, to your knowledge?—A. Well, it had some causes of action against the bank in Bakersfield that we figured had some value.

Q. That is, it had some lawsuits? Is that it?—A. Yes.

Q. But did it have any tangible property of any value at the time of the filing of this equity receivership except these three apartment houses in Oakland and the one in San Jose?—A. It had a ranch in Stanislaus County which, I think, had some tangible value.

Q. Do you remember talking with Mr. John Dinkelspiel and Mr. Gilbert in Oakland on the 17th of August 1931?—A. Yes; I recall talking to them.

Q. Did you tell those gentlemen at that time that there were no less than six lawsuits against the Prudential Holding Co. pending in Los Angeles County?—A. I told them the number. I do not recall what the number was.

Q. Did you tell them also at that time that the assets taken over at Bakersfield were given at a highly fictitious value, and were not worth as much as $250?—A. I do not recall that I did.

Q. You do not recall that you did?—A. No.

Q. Did you also tell them at that time that the Prudential Holding Co. had made a failure of liquidating any of the assets that it had received from the Character Finance Co., and so far as that branch of its business was concerned that it was totally of no value?—A. I do not recall that we discussed that at all, Mr. Linforth.

Q. Is it not a fact that you told Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Dinkelspiel, at the time to which I have called your attention, that there were no tangible assets of any kind except the 3 apartment houses and the 1 apartment house in San Jose?—A. No.

Q. And did you not tell them at that time that each one of the four was in process of foreclosure, and there was no equity in either one?—A. No.

Q. You were not present at the time the application for the receiver was made?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know, at that time, Mr. J. H. Stephens?—A. Yes; I knew him.

Q. Was he vice president of this company at that time?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you know that he appeared before Judge Louderback at the time the application for receiver was made, and announced that he was the vice president of the company?—A. I never knew that until you took his deposition in San Francisco last week, or week before.

Q. How long had he been vice president of the company prior to that?—A. Probably 6 or 7 months.

Mr. LINFORTH. I think that is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there further questions?

Redirect examination by Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. Just one question. Did any of the rest of the firm, or the attorneys for the firm, know that James H. Stephens was appearing there in court?

Mr. LINFORTH. One moment, Mr. President. We object to that as calling for hearsay. How can this witness state what anyone else knew or did not know?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The witness may answer the question if he knows of his own knowledge.

The WITNESS. I cannot answer that.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. As counsel for it, was he authorized by you to do so?—A. He was not.

Q. After the dismissal of these equity and bankruptcy receiverships, state whether or not that company has taken any legal steps against those who brought these receiverships.

Mr. LINFORTH. Just a moment, Mr. President. We object to that as being utterly immaterial and not binding on this respondent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. How would that be material?

Mr. Manager BROWNING. It would show, of course, the inexcusableness of the matter, and the fact that these people resented these actions that were brought against them, and thought they had legal redress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Manager BROWNING:

Q. What part did Mr. Stephens have in the direction of this concern?—A. None.

Mr. Manager BROWNING. Stand aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Call the next witness.

Mr. LINFORTH. Mr. President, if it is in order, may I suggest that we have a recess or an adjournment? This matter has been on since 10 o'clock this morning.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I desire to propound a question to the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST]. Does the Senator contemplate night sessions this week for the impeachment trial?

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, so far as I know at this time, night sessions are not contemplated, although it is earnestly hoped that the trial will be finished by Saturday night. It may be necessary on Friday and Saturday nights to hold night sessions in order to finish the trial at that time. No night sessions are contemplated at this time.

Mr. McNARY. I have asked the Senator the question because a number of inquiries have come to me, and I had hoped that if the Senator desired to have a night session tomorrow night he would give the customary 1 day's notice.

Mr. ASHURST. Senators are entitled to that courtesy. As soon as I can find out tomorrow, I will advise the able Senator from Oregon.
